SACHEM CLUB TO BUILD HOME

Large Percent of Bonds Have Been Subscribed For

THE PLAN

An enthusiastic meeting of the directors and bondholders of the new Sachem club was held in Brasee hall, Monday evening.

Eugene F. DeNormandie called the meeting to order and Eugene H. Sprague was elected chairman of the evening. N. Gorham Nickerson Jr., the secretary read the minutes.

A discussion was called for, as to the future policy of the club and the method of procedure. Nearly all present gave their opinion.

Reports were heard on the condition of the club and it was announced that $6,000 of the $12,000 bond subscription had been sold.

Believing the success of the club is assured those present voted to admit at once the 200 or more applicants upon payment of the initiation fee.

It was the sense of the meeting that the admission of additional members be delayed until the clubhouse was in material form and there was something visible to offer.

It is understood that there is enough financial backing to raise nearly the entire bond issue at once but the incorporators of the club do not want a preponderance of financial or other interest centered in one or a group of persons.

The proposed clubhouse will contain card and recreation rooms, billiard and bowling facilities, committee and other rooms including a large hall in the rear seating 600.

The site is to be on Beale street, between Hancock street and the Wollaston railroad station, and an option upon the land has been secured. The building will cost $20,000.

Plans have not been prepared but upon completion of the bond issue those in charge are prepared to rush work.

That it was a matter of weeks for the starting of operations was the opinion of an influential member who declared the club would be in its quarters on January first.

Club members feel assured that as soon as operations are started the club will fill up at once to its limit of 300 members. All that is necessary to start the ball rolling is the sale of the remainder of the bonds and with the admission of the present applicants to membership it is expected this will be accomplished.

PROGRESS CLUB CONCERT

Enjoyable Program Rendered at Y. M. C. A.

WOLLASTON CADET BAND

The concert given Monday evening under the auspices of the Progress Club of the Y. M. C. A. by the Wollaston Cadet Band was a great success. The people of Quincy were given an opportunity to see how good a band we have right in our own midst. There were those who were of the opinion the concert was as good as that given by Victor's Band last winter.

The evening was delightfully cool which added greatly to the enjoyment of those present. This is no small measure enhanced the success of the concert.

The program was as follows:—

Stars and Stripes Forever,	Sousa
William Tell,	Rossinni
Venus Reigen,	Gungl
Tromebone solo (selected)
Remmick's Hits No. 13.
Recollections o fthe War	Beyer
Intermezzo	Offenbach
Tales from Hoffmann.
Popular Melange	Berlin
Bright Eyes	Hoschna
March Patriotic	Rosey
Star Spangled Banner
Conductor	H. W. Sprague

It is to be hoped that the club can give another concert in the fall.

The club is planning to join with the Cambridge Association Club on a oat ride down Boston Harbor Wednesday evening the 11tth.

A GENUINE SURPRISE.

A surprise party was tendered Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Nelson Monday evening in honor of their 20th anniversary which was a complete surprise as they had planned a little party for their son Andrew, as it was also his 19th birthday. Mr. and Mrs. Kgellberg were in charge. . Rev. Mr. Hokinson presented the gift of a handsome diningt able and also many pieces of cut glass and a china set. A bouquet of roses was presented to Mrs. Nelson from those present, after which there were solos by Mr. Swanson and Mr. Bergwall, and piano solos by Miss Yirda Pilkrants of Roxbury, and Miss Agnes Oison of Waltham, two very good entertainers. Refreshments were served. During the excitement their son Andrew was presented with a beautiful bouquet of nineteen pinks, one for each year. He was then raised in the arms of his friends who lifted him nineteen times to the ceiling. There were people present from Roxbury, Waltham, Newton and Quincy, about 75 in all.

QUINCY A. A. TEAMS GOING TO CHICAGO

Will Compete For National Championship at American Olympic Events

Commission Finally Gives Quincy Teams Due Honor

After two months hard work on the part of William H. Flynn, manager of the first and second Quincy A. A. team champions of New England, the National basket ball commission has reversed its decision concerning the national championships and has decided to send both the local teams to Chicago to compete for national honors against the crack southern, northern western and Canadian teams. The Quincy A. A. boys wil leave Wednesday at one o'clock and will arrive at Chicago at five Thursday.

WILLIAM H. FLYNN

The games are held in connection with the monster amateur athletic carnival which is now on in Chicago, and although several weeks have elapsed since the Quincy's disbanded after annexing the New England title for the second time they are nevertheless enthusiastic and feel that they can do justice to the reputation they have attained in these states.

The fulfillment or not of this promise to send the "champs" to the American Olympics league commenced its second season practically meant the life or death of organized amateur basketball since nothing but words were forthcoming at the finish of the first season although both Quincy teams won the title against the pick of New England teams. A few medals were distributed the first year in recognition of the valiant work and a handsome shield, appropriately engraved, was tendered the club, but the promise of the national championships, the goal toward which their ambitions strived, was worth only the paper it was written on. The N. E. A. A. U. droped 50 per cent in the estimation of good, clean sports when they neglected to fulfill their promise and this season they would have dropped to rock bottom if they did not hold to their original guarantee. For, the fans argue, what's the use of battling and keeping in condition if nothing but an empty promise is the reward of a should be every man's first choice, but we realize that many men prefer to shop around before finally deciding on the purchase of their garments.

¶ By now, however, most men have had an opportunity to carefully inspect the offerings of others. Let us, therefore, again call your attention to the appeal of Kuppenheimer Clothes to your better judgment.

¶ First of all, they are authoritatively correct in point of style.

¶ Again, the purity of the woolens from which they are made, and the quality of the workmanship in the making, insures the service they will give; the wear you get out of them.

Finally, the price is practically whatever you care to pay.

At $18.00 the choice of styles, patterns and shades is in every sense as varied as at $20, $25 or $27. Of course you realize that the better the price, the better the clothes, but this one point is worth remembering. Whatever the price—Satisfaction is guaranteed.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

The Fourth of July will be observed as a holiday by the aily Ledger and Quincy Patriot, the offices being closed all day Friday. It is important that large advertisements for Saturday's Ledger should reach the office on Thursday.

Fourth of July weather is here as usual a few days in advance of the holiday. It would not be an ideal Fourth without hot weather.

Married people are to get added exemptions from the income tax on account of their children, but the bachelor with the expense of a best girl gets no relief.

Meredith Nicholson declines the Portuguese ambassadorship. Probably he would rather sell fiction to the publishers than talk it to the diplomats.

Fashionable Chicago women now carry canes to match their dresses, but they have not yet required their husbands to wear the same material.

THE GLORIOUS FOURTH.

Some one has remarked that July 4 differs from Christmas, in that on the latter holiday you get up early because you want to, but on July 4 because you have to. Certainly July 4 has been a holiday of incongruities. The Small Boy rule which it brings has somehow appealed to the American feeling for grotesque and exaggerated humor.

It is perhaps not mere noise that endears July 4 to the boys. If transported to some remote spot, all their desire to set off fire-crackers seems to disappear. The persons who suffer most are those who write letters of protest to the newspapers. There is little fun in exploding a cannon cracker in front of your place if you sit out on the piazza with a broad grin on your face.

A few years ago the Boston Transcript remarked that the Boston observance had been a quiet one, with no serious accidents, only 200 having been hurt. There were only 56 alarms of fire, with losses of but $20,000. As the insurance companies paid, together with other losses all over, it cost nobody anything.

The American people dearly love a joke. They have more sympathy with boy life than any other people, so much so that the American boy fails to learn some needed lessons of law and obedience. But even the tolerant, laughter loving Americans may finally feel a joke has gone too far. When in 1903, 466 people had been killed and 3983 injured, it began to strike them that perhaps the humor was a shade exaggerated.

Laws and regulations are ineffective. Picnics and parades are partly useful as a diversion. But already there is much less noise in large cities than in small towns. Some day the Small Boy will find that the July 4 firecracker is regarded as unfashionable and rustic in his own clan.

PATRIOTIC SACRIFICES.

An event of historical interest occurred a few days ago, when Miss Eleanor Wilson unveiled the monument at Valley Forge commemorating the sufferings of Washington's half naked and ill fed army in the winter of 1778. To many people an occasion like this suggests the thought that modern times are on a much lower plane. There seems little counterpart for all this patriotic devotion today.

Yet during that same episode, Gen. Washington ordered that fair levies be made on the farmers for his impoverished troops. Many of them defended their grain from this order with their rifles, and burnt the barns rather than give up. Meanwhile Congress was quarreling over the division of army promotions. There was so little patriotic feeling that often it would have an attendance of but 10 or 12.

If the present age does not reach some of the old hights of historic splendor, it never descends to the more of that coarser period.

That the capacity for self sacrifice still exists will be believed by any one who in 1898 saw the soldier boys come home from Santiago. The pitiable yellow of their jaundiced skin, their tottering steps and fevered faces, would make a perfect companion piece even to Valley Forge.

Teaching patriotic devotion is a very subtile thing. Flags on the school house, patriotic songs, respect to the national anthem—all are excellent as far as they go. But these are matters of good manners, while love and devotion are different. No country can command the most loyal patriotism unless it dispenses justice, opens free opportunities, and embodies human sympathy. The modern patriot has no Valley Forge of physical suffering. But he at least must get out on some very weary nights to vote at the caucus for men of high civic ideals.

TOP OF THE CONTINENT.

Archdeacon Stuck and party, having reached the highest point of Mt. McKinley, seem to have varied the usual mountaineering proceeding. Having completed the necessary scientific observations, they stopped and said the Te Deum on the highest point of North America. Usually a climbing party having risked their necks to get to the top, are in such a hurry to get down that they could not spare five minutes to repeat the old Latin hymn.

Mountain climbing is declared the most hazardous and the most thrilling sport in existence. Its rewards can hardly consist in the view from the summit. The few moments on the top are commonly spent in worrying about the return.

So the satisfactions of the more dangerous climbs seem to be about the same as those of the average tourist who goes to Stratford-on-Avon or the picture galleries, not because he enjoys the experience, but in order to tell his friends that he has been there.

But as an achievement of muscular and nervous self control, hardihood and physical efficiency, the final story of Archdeacon Stuck will no doubt remain a classic. It has been supposed that there is no access to this summit but over a vertical wall 1000 feet high. No possible path is known that is free from avalanches. With the noise of a thousand cannons and the hiss of a volcano, these are constantly sweeping over the fangs of the monster with their tons on tons of ice and rock.

Let not timid souls condemn these stout hearts as fool-hardy. The human race would be living in dugouts today, had not its more adventurous souls been willing to gamble with death as others would with a broken ankle.

SHIPYARD CONTRACT.

The Fore River Shipbuilding Company is to be congratulated because of its very generous gift from the City of Quincy. In on other light can the new water contract be considered. At the rate of $10 per million gallons, the city will not obtain a net revenue of $1 yearly for water supplied from the Braintree reservoir.

The Mayor anticipates a gross revenue of only $1,500 per year, which is less than $4.11 per day. All that will be necessary to pay extra labor in Water department, for maintenance of reservoir and main, for meters, and meter readings, travel, etc.

The minimum household rate is now $7 for 3,000 cubic feet or 400 gallons. This is equivalent to $17.50 for 1000 gallons, or $1,750 for 100,000 gallons, or $17,500 for a million gallons. Some difference between $10 for million gallons supplied the shipyard, and $17,500 for millions gallons supplied to houses.

Possibly there may be a reduction in Quincy's Metropolitan water assessment because the shipyard will get its supply from another source, but experience in recent years shows a larger assessment although the per capita consumption is on the decrease. The reduction in assessment will not equal the city's loss in revenue from the shipyard.

How did the city and the shipyard come to an agreement on such a low rate as $10 per million gallons? Why not $50 per million gallons, which would be five cents per thousand gallons?

RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

This morning Mayor Stone appointed the following additional members on the reception committee to entertain the officers of the battleship: Miss Georgianna C. Lane, Admiral and Mrs. Francis T. Bowles, Mr. and Mrs. H. Gerirsh Smith and Miss Harriett W. Pierce.

HOUSE IS GOING AFTER BIG GAME

MULHALL SPRINGS A SENSATION

Field Agent Declares High Men In Washington Have Been Reached and Influenced—Even Congressional Committees Are Alleged to Have Been Manipulated

Washington, July 1.—The senate will be asked to grant more power to the Overman lobby committee, to enable it to investigate charges of improper methods used to influence legislation prior to the present session of congress.

The broadside of Martin M. Mulhall, former field agent of the National Association of Manufacturers, in which Mulhall names dozens of senators and representatives as men whom he "had no difficulty in reaching and influencing" will cause most of the men named to demand investigation on their own account.

Moreover, since it is evident that a more or less systematic campaign is afoot to discredit the influence upon public opinion of all business men and bankers who may be adversely affected by the tariff and currency bills, a demand is growing that the labor unions and their representatives in Washington shall be Overmaned with equal impartiality.

The committee will hold its next meeting July 8. Its plan has been to clean up the Lovett charges and hear the remainder of the sugar witnesses but it may be forced to abandon its program and give its attention to the National Asscciation of Manufacturers.

The house probably will conduct a separate investigation of its own, as Mulhall charges not only that many members were subservient to the association in their votes, but that committees were manipulated and even that Speaker Clark was oposed for re-elected by the association in 1909 and 1910. The Mulhall charges are so broad and inclusive that congress now apparently has thrust upon it the hot-weather task of investigating itself.

It is no news to anyone familiar with conditions in Washington that the National Association of Manufacturers for many years has done all in its power to head off legislation adverse to the interests of manufacturers.

Bills affecting the hours of labor child labor, workmen's compensation for injuries, the tariff, corporations anti injunction and the exemption of labor unions from prosecution under the Sherman act have been before congress for years, and all have been made the subject of sharp scrutiny by the association, through its own officers and through agents in the field like Mulhall.

Work of this character for the most part has been public. The late President Van Cleave was a familiar figure in Washington and he never hesitated to come here to oppose or promote legislation affecting the manufacturing interests. Van Cleave and his associates were especially instrumental during the last days of the Roosevelt administration in killing the anti-trust bill favored by the American Civic federation, with its joker exempting labor unions from prosecution under the Sherman law. The bill had high standing here until some of its hidden features were pointed out by the aggressive Van Cleave.

MUST ARBITRATE TROUBLE

Boston Elevated Railway and Its Employes Come to Deadlock

Boston, July 1.—Arbitration is now declared to be necessary to bring about an adjustment of wages and working conditions satisfactory to the Boston Elevated and its employes.

Another conference was held yesterday between committees representing the Street Carmen's union and the Elevated officials relative to the wage increase and other requests made by the union two or three months ago.

It was declared, however, that a point has now been reached where arbitration must be resorted to.

TAFT IS LOSING FLESH

Professor Never Felt Better and Was Never Happier Than Now

"Since leaving the White House," Taft said, "I have lost forty-one pounds, and I hope to lose an additional twenty-nine pounds while on my Canadian trip. That will bring me down to 270 pounds. I now tip the scales at 299 pounds. I never felt better and was never happier in my life."

The funeral of Annie E. Thompson was held this morning from her home 22 Ridgeway street, Wollaston. The body was sent to Tewkesbury for burial. She was the widow of James Thompson and formerly resided in Somerville.

NEW PLUMBING ORDINANCE

The much discussed new plumbing ordinance which was passed by the City Council June 23, was signed by the Mayor this morning. The main point of difference between the present and the new ordinance is that under the new ordinance heavier pipe is called for. There has been much discussion as to what additional cost the new ordinance would entail. The Board of Health and Inspector of Plumbing claimed that the extra cost on a two tenement of two family house would not exceed $10. This was also testified to by W. A. Bradford, the City Square plumber. Others however have claimed the cost would be $40 extra by the use of the heavy pipe.

It was for this reason that the Mayor held up the order until he could have an opportunity to investigate. Becoming convinced that the statement of the Inspector of plumbing was correct he signed the order. The ordiance however does not go into effect until Jan. 1, 1914.

TODAY HOTTEST OF THE SEASON

Today up to noon was the hottest day of the season. At that hour the temperature had reached 91 degrees and it seemed likely to go even higher before the day is out unless the wind should change. In addition to being a high temperature there is considerable humidity in the air and it is almost suffocating to be out, especially if the hot sun strikes the head. There was a slight breeze this morning but not enough to cool the air.

FELINE FAMILY HISTORY.

Here Are the Facts, Although You May Not Believe Them.

Why shouldn't a respectable cat sit on the fence and howl when extracts from its family history read like this:

"Throughout the tertiary formations, from the upper eocene onward, there appears a remarkable family of cats, with a dentition still more specialized than that of the felinae, the true felines, retaining other skeletal features of a more primitive type of cats. These were the machaerodontinae, which survived until the pleistocene, both in Europe and in America."

The information was found in a geology student's paper. "The Evolution of the Domesticated Cat." Perhaps you are a little rusty on cat history and you find it difficult to remember. This illuminating bit of information will freshen it in your memory:

"The pliocene period was the period of the carnivora. The felids included the macherodonts, machaerodus and aelur opsis, besides varieties analagous to the leopard and lynx. In this epoch appeared the servals (Felis christoli). At the time of the Felis christoli there appeared also the European wild cat, Felis catus. The earliest feline in America was Felis hillianus. It appeared in the middle pliocene."—Kansas Industrialist.

AN ENGINEERING FEAT.

Along the Copper river valley lies a standard gauge railroad, 191 miles in length, the building of which was filled with romance. Its construction is regarded as a distinct feat in world's engineering. The road crosses the river between two glaciers (Childs and Miles).

The false work of the bridge was laid on the ice in winter. Men were hired to work night and day. M. J. Heney, the contractor, the man who built another "impossible" road across the mountains from Skagway, and his chief engineer, E. C. Hawkins, conceived the idea of using the river ice for the bridge scaffolding.

As the spring approached hundreds of men were kept busy every minute of the day and night, for if not completed by the time the ice burst all the work and material would have been lost.

The ice went out, carrying the false work with it, less than an hour after the spike was driven in the connecting span and the work was completed. The bridge cost $1,400,000. —"Alaska, an Empire In the Making," by John J Underwood.

At Sea In a Coffin.

It was the French assassin Lupi who escaped to sea from Cayenne in a coffin. He managed to get some nails, tar and cotton, and one dark night he got into the coffin shed. He selected a fine, stanch and seaworthy coffin and fastened the lid in order to turn it into a deck, leaving a cockpit sufficient to enable him to crawl in. He calked all the joints as well as he could, and when this work was finished he made a pair of paddles out of two planks. Then he brought out his craft with great precaution. Without much difficulty he reached the water's edge. Silently and slowly he proceeded in the hope of reaching either Venezuela or British Guiana, 150 nautical miles distant. Fortunately or unfortunately for Lupi, the steamer Abeille, returning from the Antilles, off Paramaribo picked him up half drowned and almost in a fainting condition, and a few hours later he was in irons in his cell.

Licorice Root.

Very few people, says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, have any idea where the familiar licorice root comes from. As a matter of fact, the bulk of it hails from Syria. Here it is gathered and piled into great stacks, where it remains until it is thoroughly dry. It is then taken to the factory to undergo certain processes. The finished product is used for flavoring confectionery and beer, as well as entering into the makeup of many brands of tobacco. Some idea of the extent of the industry may be gathered when it is stated that on the average 8,000 tons of dry licorice root is shipped from Aleppo annually, while Bagdad yields another 6,000 tons, Antioch 4,000 and Damascus 500 tons.

A Close Resemblance.

Professor Barry once amused Judge Ball by an application on behalf of a man who was a dealer in horses and sugar sticks. The incongruity of his avocation struck the judge, who remarked, "What a strange combination of trades!"

"I see a close resemblance between horses and sugar sticks," said the witty barrister.

"In what way?" inquired his lordship.

"The more you lick them the faster they go," was the reply.—London Tit-Bits.

Knew Just What to Do.

She—George, dear, here's a scientist who says the earth is wabbling on its axis. What do you suppose they can do about it? George (absently)—Open up the muffler, reverse the lever, shut off the power, lubricate the bearings and tighten the wheel cap.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

His Only Chance.

Teller—I see that Hennepeck has developed into a free thinker of late. Grimshaw—Yes; his wife has been away from home for a week.—Puck.

The world turns aside to let a man pass who knows whither he is going.—David Starr Jordan.

WOLLASTON UNITARIAN CHURCH.

The last service of the season was held Sunday morning at the Wollaston Unitarian church. The scripture lesson was from the first epistle of Peter and was most appropriate to the spirit and thought of the hour consecrated to worship. Rev. Carl G. Horst preached a helpful and suggestive sermon from the text. "I have rolled up like a weaver my life he will cut me off from the loom"—Isaiah 38, 12.

He said "We are all weavers. Human life is set on the loom of time. In order to make the web one of beauty and worth, we must carefully avoid those strands that would mar the beauty of the pattern and weaken the strength of the web. We must use only material that will give strength and dignity among the strands that we must weave into the fabric of life are work, intellectual culture, ideals, hope, faith. Good material is abundant. It is for us to weave it into the web and study with care the pattern of all true and noble living which is Jesus of Nazareth, the Prince of life. And fastening our eyes upon the Christ we, beholding in that saintly face the highest manifestation of God in man, are transformed into the same image from glory to glory by the spirit of the Lord.

"Let us make the most of the life that now is. To be prepared for this life is the best preparation for the life to come. Let us carefully select the material that will give strength and beauty to the web of life. And when our life is cut off from the loom and rolled up God grant that we may receive his 'well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord.' "

Rev. Mr. Horst, who reads every Sunday morning some choice poem as part of the devotional service read "The Tapestry Weavers," which was most appropriate to the thought of the sermon.

The church will be closed during July and August and the minister with his family will spend their vacation on his farm "The Nestledown" in Ossipee, N. H. Mr. Horst will gladly return at any time and render any ministerial service within his power if notified by telegram. Address: Rev. Carl G. Horst, Ossipee, N. H. The church will reopen the Sunday after Labor Day.

QUINCY A. A. TEAMS

season's meritorious work.

As it was, the point seemed true this year for while. A few weeks after the national championships were decided upon and awarded to the Central A. C. at Chicago, George Hepbron, dropped a bomb into the local camp by writing Manager Flynn and the other members of the basket ball commission that they had decided not to hold them. It was the signal for war. Associates of Manager Flynn took up and dropped his cause and finally he alone battled in the interests of the team he had mothered through two successful seasons.

Hepbron accepted the challenge and volumnious correspondence, newspaper talk and the like followed. Even charges that Hepbron was unfit to handle the national commission was made by the local man and apparently afraid of having them substantiated Hepbron took this black eye in silent agony. And then, others on the board commenced to realize that they had an ingrown spark of fair play in their makeup and then asked for the national championships, and the result of Manager Flynn's efforts, practically alone and unaided except for the sentiment expressed by a good sport, is the starting of the team for Chicago.

Arrangements were completed Monday as to transportation etc., and Monday evening telephone wires, messenger boys and friends scouted high and low for the basket ball players who were only waiting the word to pack their things. For two long months they have anticipated their going to Chicago because it was promised by "Billy" Flynn and their confidence in their skilled manager was sufficient to know that they would go eventually.

The only absentee will be "Nedso" Bennett, who through his entering of the professional prize ring renounces his claim to being a simon pure amateur. The members of the first team on hand when the whistle blows will be Bernard Boyle, Joseph O'Rourke, Frank O'Rourke, Daniel Duggan, Charles Hebert, Peter "Sid" Duggan and "Put" Kelley.

The second team which consist of boys who hold every possible basket ball record in New England, individual and team, will be Harold Chapman: Millard Chapman, Frank Harmon, William Manning and Clinton Scollard.

Manager Flynn will pilot his party of trained basket ball players to the American Olympics and places no superstition on the figure 13 which represents the total.

A rousing send off will be given be given them at the station by the boys who have followed their career of these youths and if they do as well nationally as they have here their return will be like that of a conquering army, and they will be given the City of Quincy outright and unconditionally.

It is needless to mention that a generous expression of "good luck" has been pronounced throughout the width and breath of the city since the sole and most absorbing topic has been these Olympics. From now out the scores will be eagerly watched for throughout New England.

HOUSING LAW.

Among the chief items of social legislation this years is the city housing law, Chapter 786. It is comprehensive and based upon the most effective American models. Its passage, with the town housing law, Chapter 635 of 1912, puts Massachusetts in a unique position. Every city and town has now available a comprehensive and effective law.

The policy pursued is different from that elsewhere in that here the laws go into effect only when adopted by the people in towns and by the city government is cities. Thirteen towns have adopted the town law and the Massachusetts Civic League, which drafted and supported both measures, expects a number of cities and towns to consider them during the coming year. An early step will be to form local committees or housing associations to aid in the adoption and enforcement of the laws. In a number of cities action will doubtelss be taken.

There is a tendency towards the adoption of local ordinances but unless these are as comprehensive as the state laws they will lack essential points of value.

The past year has been interesting but with the passage of the new law the year to come will be more so. The need for laws is very generally recognized. People are now seeing their constructive values. Their operation will prevent many forms of sickness, particularly tuberculosis, and have a constructive value in every community. Their adoption will decide the drift in communities, whether growth shall be along permanent and constructive lines or towards careless construction, the development of slums and of inefficiency.

NOVICE EVENTS FOR BIG MEET

Will Furnish Most Entertainment and Excitement

RECORD ENTRY LIST

Entries for the athletic meet on the Fourth of July are coming in rapidly and from all indications a record breaking entry list will be registered. The entries close on Wednesday night at the Y. M. C. A., and no entry will be accepted after that date.

The novice events seem to be the most popular up to the present time and these races ought to furnish the most entertainment and excitement of the entire meet.

The big event of the boys races is the "Banana" race and this feature will undoubtedly be the "thriller" of the day. The boys all start from a given point and then try to collect the largest number of bags of bananas. These bags are placed at irregular intervals around the track and the boys are not aware of the number of bananas in each bag so that the fellow who collects the largest bags is not necessarily the winner of the race, for some other boy may have a bag containing twice the number of bananas. The boy getting the greatest number of bananas will be declared the winner of the race.

There ought to be a large number of the Grammar school boys enter these boys events for the athletic meets held early in June should give an idea of the best runners. Wallace of Willard school is not satisfied that Higgins of Wollaston school is the best man, and he hopes that "Higgy" will enter the one lap race. "Wally" claims that he slipped while starting in the recent meet and that the distance wast oo short for him to overcome this handicap.

The order of events will be published in tomorrow nights paper.

TO BE HOUSE PHYSICIAN

Quincy Boy Appointed to Malden City Hospital

JUNE GRADUATE

Harold E. Marsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Marsh of Irving place, who recently completed his course at Tufts Medical school, cannot because he is only twenty years of age, receive his degree. However, he today assumes the post of junior house physician at the Malden City Hospital. Next fall he attains his majority and the reward of his scholastic labors will be tendered him.

Virtually, Harold Marsh is a full fledged M. D. and it is perfecity proper to address him as such and add it to his name. Last night he was the proudest boy in the city because he had received his appointment and his parents were filled with a just pride because of the accomplishments of their son.

Dr. Marsh is a graduate of the Quincy High School, 1909. That year he captained the basket ball team and participated in general athletics. At Tufts he has devoted most of his time to his studies.

He is the ninth generation of Marshs in Quincy. Captain Elex Marsh, the pioneer of the family settled here in the early 1600's and conducted the first iron works in America at West Quincy. Since then the family has lived practically within the confines of the city.

He will be assistant to Dr. Stanley Duncan, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Duncan of Gilmore street, who is the senior house physician.

HAVE SKIPPED.

Clerk McDonald called in vain for Emma S. Johnson and Nellie Cole, at the district court this morning and they were defaulted. Both were arrested a week ago on the complaint of complaint of George A. Taylor of Merrymount road who alleges that they destroyed his flower garden after he had discharged them from his domestic service. Both are colored and appeared in court the morning following their arrest, when their cases were continued and they were allowed to go on their personal recognizance.

SCOTTISH CASTLE ALMOST DESTROYED

Militants Are Suspected of $500,000 Fire Outrage

Glasgow, July 1.—Ballikinrain castle, near here, costing about $500,000, was almost entirely destroyed by fire yesterday. The blaze apparently was of incendiary origin and the militant suffragettes are suspected of the outrage.

The Leuchars railway station near St. Andrews was also burned and suffragettes are blamed for that fire too.

Investigation by the police showed that the castle's fire hose had been cut to ribbons before the blaze was set. It was equipped with first-class fire-fighting apparatus, and whoever started the fire was familiar with the premises.

Ballikinrain castle for years has been one of the show places of Glasgow. It was one of the costliest residences in Scotland, and was palatial in furnishings and appointments.

NEW MESSAGE FROM JAPAN

Further Argument In Relation to the Alien Land Law

Washington, July 1.—Viscount Chinda, the Japanese ambassador, informed Secretary Bryan that the Japanese foreign office had dispatched to him for delivery to the United States a note additional to the last Japanese rejoinder in the matter of the California alien land law negotiations.

The communication is expected to arrive in the course of a day or so by cable and the ambassador himself does not know its nature beyond the fact that it is supplementary to the exhaustive argument contained in the rejoinder submitted to the state department.

CHURCH WILL CELEBRATE

Bethany Congregational Takes Stand for the Flag

Bethany Congregational church is to take part in the observance of the Fourth. Previous to his address Sunday evening, Rev. B. A. Willmott, the pastor, said it was important that the church and church people should take a stand for the flag. This country has but one flag. Some of those who would trample it under foot, talk the loudest and think because we remain quiet that we acquiesce, but we do not.

On the morning of the Fourth during the parades, the church grounds will be reserved for the people of the church. The women and girls are requested to wear white dresses and to carry flags. A raised platform will be erected for the children.

FORMER RANCOR IS FORGOTTEN

Blue and Gray United In Sentiment and In Fact

40,000 MEET AT GETTYSBURG

Picturesque Scenes Mark First Day of Reunion—Survivors of Buford's and Wheeler's Divisions Hold Receptions—Six Girls of Half a Century Ago Sing Battle Song to Veterans of North and South

Gettysburg, Pa., July 1.—Over the field of Gettysburg where 150,000 men in blue and gray fought with the weapons of war fifty years ago, the soldiers of peace from the north and south, the east and west, trooped to the tented city of brown where they will live in the four days of semi-centennial celebration.

It was an army united in sentiment and unified in fact, for the blue linked arms with the gray. They marched the dusty roads together from the village; they sat down at the same mess tables, and they talked over the war before the same campfires last night.

If there was any rancor in any heart, any feeling of bitterness, it did not come to the surface, and over the broad expanse of the "City" reunions of those who won and those who tried, went on hour after hour.

Officials of the regular army in charge of the camp estimated that nearly 15,000 veterans came in during yesterday, bringing the total close to 40,000, probably the greatest army that ever assembled on Gettysburg field after Lee and Meade left it to glory and to history.

There was a reception by the survivors of Buford's division of Meade's army and Wheeler's division of Lee's.

The meeting was held in the big tent set aside for the speechmaking of the celebration and began fifty years to the hour from the time when the first shot preceding the battle was fired. The gray cavalrymen who fought the skirmishes that led up to the three days' fight pledged themselves in the shadows of the Stars and Stripes to "forget," and their brothers in blue swore by the Stars and Bars that the fight was over for all time.

Major Edwards announced that he wished first to welcome the six women who represented there that regiment of little girls and young women who touched his heart and those of his comrades on their arrival in Gettysburg a half century before. He called them by name, Mrs. Steward, Mrs. Hearns, Mrs. Young, Mrs. Steads, Mrs. Rupp and Mrs. Tawney.

"If absence makes the heart grow fonder," he said, "our hearts go out to you as we look into your dear faces after an absence of fifty years. We left you sorrowfully and regretfully, and now we come from all parts of the country to tender our regrets that our stay was so brief and our absence so long."

The six one-time schoolgirls, gray-haired and aged now, sang "Rally 'Round the Flag Boys," while the veterans wept like boys, but with pride.

The six women who sang the battle song were among those who thronged the streets of Gettysburg after the advance guard of the southern army left it fifty years ago. On that night when Buford's men came riding into the village on the heels of Wheeler's men in gray, maidens strewed flowers along the streets and bells in the churches pealed out the news of the coming of the blue and the town went wild.

Of all the scores of girls who welcomed the vanguard of Meade, only a half-dozen could be found and they stood, white-haired, with tears in their eyes, on a platform in the big tent and sang to the weeping soldiers in the seats below.

"I'm afraid we can't sing like we sang fifty years ago," said the matronly woman who acted as leader, as she led the way up the steps to the platform.

"We don't care; just sing again," shouted the veterans. As the first notes of the war-time melody came from them in quavering tones, the veterans both of the north and of south sat quiet with eyes fixed upon the singers.

General Daniel E. Sickles, the only corps commander of the union army on the field, was the centre of attraction of hundreds of men in gray. He sat on the porch of the Rogers House on the field near the spot where he was shot, and there stood handshaking with all those present. Before the southerners left the Rogers House, they shouldered the general, carried him out into the battlefield and stood him up before the camera fire and moving picture machines.

A picturesque feature of the afternoon was the arrival of the Stonewall brigade of Virginia veterans headed by Colonel Chew, who was General Stonewall Jackson's chief aide. They carried their original battle flag, tattered and torn and showing bullet holes. Less than 100 survivors of this famous fighting band were in line, but their appearance in the streets of Gettysburg aroused unbounded enthusiasm.

Bulgarians Engage In Battle With Servians and Greeks

Vienna, July 1.—Severe fighting has broken out between the main armies of the Servian and Bulgarian troops near Uskub. A dispatch from Uskub says the Bulgarians attacked the Servians at Wallandona, where a bridge was blown up with dynamite.

The fighting then became general all along the line. Each side was supported with artillery. The casualities, according to military dispatches, are heavy on both sides.

Dispatches from Athens report a wireless message from Greek military headquarters, Salonica, stating that Bulgarians yesterday attacked the entire Greek line. Over 10,000 Greek and Bulgarian soldiers are engaged in battle near Ishtib. These troops include infantry and cavalry.

MELLEN GOES AWAY FOR A WEEK'S REST

Will Not Appear In Railroad Wreck Inquiry at Present

Bridgeport, Conn., July 1.—President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad will not appear at the inquest into the Stamford wreck here today, according to an announcement by Coroner Phelan. The coroner said attorneys for the road had notified him that Mellen was indisposed, and was going away for a week's rest. Mellen will probably appear later.

Phelan last week requested the presence of Mellen at the inquest, after he had vainly tried to ascertain the duties of high officials of the road. Several officials declined to answer the coroner's questions, claiming that their testimony might be used against them as they were all under indictment for the Westport wreck. The coroner resumed his inquiry today.

COLLAPSE OF SMALL BRIDGE

ELEVEN KILLED BY DROWNING

Half a Hundred Youngsters Were Enjoying Themselves on Structure Leading to Bathhouse Where They Were Going In Swimming—Inquiry to Place Blame For Disaster

Lawrence, Mass., July 1.—Eleven boys, from 8 to 15 years old, were drowned when a wooden bridge connecting the municipal bathhouse with the bank of the Merrimac river collapsed.

Following is the list of dead:

William Balster, 10 years; Joseph Hennessey, 15; Michael Woitena, 15; Joseph McCann, 15; Joseph Cote, 8; William Thornton, 10; Flower Pinta, 11; Roland Jones, 9; Joseph Boulanger, 8; Secunda Algabro, 15; Annaldo Gaudette, 10 years old.

Medical Examiner Dow examined each of the bodies as it was removed from the water, and gave a simple report on each of eleven autopsies as "death caused by drowning."

In hundreds of Lawrence homes mothers hugged to their breasts little fellows who knew not why they fell upon their knees.

But in others—those others—the mothers stared dry-eyed from the windows, while fathers attempted futile encouragement as the reluctant bluecoat appeared at the door, even as the mother was praying God that he had passed her door.

There are those who say that the platform planks were watersoaked and rotten, that the railings were loose from their fastenings, that someone should have been on hand early to throw open doors or keep the lads on the shore, that there were but two puny lifeboats on the wharves and not a score of life preservers. Their charge is one of criminal negligence.

Again, there are prominent people, who, though they are not bereaved parents, affirm that it was an unavoidable accident.

There were about fifty boys on the bridge when it collapsed. Three dead were found almost at once, and the other bodies were recovered when the river below the scene of the accident was dragged.

Five boys, unconscious when rescued, were revived by first-aid methods.

The city owns the bathhouse and the bridge that leads to it. Medical Examiner Dow will immediately begin an inquiry to place the blame for the tragedy—to discover whether the supports of the bridge were rotted, or whether the boys overcrowded.

If the boys did overcrowd, the city will still be blamed for not having seen to it that too great a crowd did not jam onto the narrow board way.

The crash of the bridge broke through the shouts of the boys. They were down for an afternoon swim—playing tag, climbing about the structure, daring each other to walk the railing—just being boys. They were going in swimming as soon as William Blythe, keeper of the bathhouse, should return from his lunch.

The bathhouse was one of two—one for older boys and one for younger. The tragedy occurred at the bathhouse for younger boys—6 to 15 years old. It is 200 yards above the Merrimac dam. The current is swift, though there is only about four feet of water.

Twenty feet away is the back of the grandstand of the Lawrence baseball park. John Noonan, manager of the Lawrence team, led his men out to the river to help the work of resuscitation.

The bridge collapsed fifteen feet from the shore, and six feet from the bathhouse. The boys slid into the river. Heavy timbers dropping on the struggling mass, crushed under them. The bigger boys, scrambling for shore, trampled down the smaller ones.

TWO AVIATORS KILLED

One of Them In Falling Causes Death of a Youthful Spectator

Liege, Belgium, July 1.—While Aviator Parisot was giving an exhibition flight at a village fete near here the wing of the aeroplane struck and killed a youthful spectator. The machine capsized, burying Parisot in the wreckage. The aviator died a few minutes later.

London, July 1.—Aviator Wight was killed by a fall near Brighton. His machine suddenly burst into flames and dropped to the ground Wight was pinned beneath it.

JUDGE EJECTS A JUDGE

Baldwin's Appointee Assumes Charge and "Cracks" Court Safe

Greenwich, Conn., July 1.—The controversy over the borough court judgeship assumed an acute stage when Judge Tierney, appointed last week by Governor Baldwin, had Judge Burnes forcibly ejected from the courtroom. The latter came into the room while Tierney was temporarily absent, and started to conduct a civil case.

In the meantime Tierney and other officials were in an adjoining room cracking a safe, containing the court records, which Burnes had refused to deliver. When Tierney found Burnes on the bench, he ordered him out of the room and finally had to have Constable Jones eject him forcibly. Burnes continued to conduct his case in another room.

Governor Baldwin appointed Tierney judge last week, after the legislature had failed to act upon the judgeships. There are a number of other judgeship contests in the state, it being claimed that the governor had not the power to appoint.

CUSTOMS REORGANIZED

Government Plans to Save From $400,000 to $500,000 a Year

Washington, July 1.—The machinery by which the government collects $300,000,000 annually in tariff duties was revolutionized today by the most drastic reorganization of the customs service ever attempted.

By a sweeping consolidation, the number of customs districts, grown to 162 during the nation's history, has been reduced to forty-nine and 113 collectors of customs lose their positions.

Officials estimate that the reorganization will result in an annual saving of between $400,000 and $500,000 in the cost of collecting the duties.

Collectors of customs on the Canadian border who for years have enjoyed the perquisites from the sale of manifests and other customs blanks to importers, aggregating, it is said, at least $200,000 annually, will be deprived of this gratuity by the reorganization.

RESPONSIBLE FOR PASSENGERS' LIVES

Condition on White Star Line Ticket Held to Be Illegal

London, July 1.—The condition printed on the steamship tickets issued by the White Star line exempting that company from liability for loss by a passenger even through negligence of the company's servants is illegal, according to a judgment pronounced by Clement M. Ballache, justice of the king's bench division of the English court of justice.

The point has been held over for decision from the test case decided last week in which an Irish farmer, Thomas Ryan, was awarded $500 and costs against the White Star company for the loss of his son in the Titanic disaster.

CHARGES OF GRAFTING

Providence Aldermen Uphold Complaint Against Milk Inspectors

Providence, July 1.—As a result of accusations of irregularity made against members of the city milk department by the newly formed Housewives' league, the milk committee of the board of aldermen asked that charges of graft be formulated against the accused officials by the law department.

The charges were supported, the committee declared, by evidence brought out at their hearing. It was alleged during the investigation that certain inspectors received money for warning milk dealers when samples were to be taken.

GERMAN ARMY INCREASE

Permanent Fighting Force Brought Up to About 870,000 Men

Berlin, July 1.—The reichstag finally passed on third reading the entire army increase bill, as introduced by the government. This provides for 170,000 additional privates, 15,000 non-commissioned officers and 400 officers, bringing the German permanent fighting force up to about 870,000.

The bill as adopted included the six cavalry regiments, which had been eliminated from the measure in committee and on the first and second reading.

Manager of Gas Company Held In Connection With Girl's Death

Salisbury, Md., July 1.—Harold Smith, manager of the Home Gas company, was held by the verdict of the coroner's jury as an accessory before the fact in the death of Florence Wainwright. Smith was arrested.

Miss Wainwright, who was head bookkeeper for the gas company, was found lifeless at her desk one night a week ago. Investigation showed she had died from the effects of unprofessional and illegal surgery.

WORK VALUED AT $179,595

That section of the new building ordinance which provides that permits shall be paid for goes into effect today, and hereafter persons taking out a building permit will have to pay from $1 to $5 according to the class of building. This fact may account for the large increase in the number of building permits issued during the month of June for it is noted that 46 permits were issued for dwellings alone in June as against 28 for the corresponding month last year. The total amount involved by the permits issued in June was $179,595 as against $106,320 for June last year. The following tables will be read with interest.

HOMEWARD BOUND.

A letter received in Quincy from Colonel Henry L. Kincaide, dated Valpariso, Chile, June 4, tells of the trip through the mountainous parts of Peru and Bolivia. During the two weeks of travel through these countries, the party experienced considerable discomfort. They all suffered from mountain sickness. The thermometer often registered 2 degrees above zero at 6 A. M. and by noon climbed to 100 degrees. The chill came again early in the afternoon. The lower altitude of Valpariso had restored them all to their normal condition.

The letter tells of the high cost of living in these countries. The water supply is scanty and rains are infrequent. It describes the barren stretch of over a thousand miles from Panama to Chile where there is not a tree, a shrub nor a blade of grass to be seen, just a continuous range of gray sandy hills and mountains with occasional sea ports where merchandise and passengers are sent ashore. The population is about 75 per cent Indians, who still hold to their primitive customs of dress and live in mud houses. The progress of civilization there is slow and immigration must come to relieve conditions.

At LaPlaz, Bolivia, coal sells at $50. per ton, and few families use it. The trip over Lake Titicaca was full of interest for the party. The primitive boats of straw made by the natives, were very curious. There were many wonderful Indian relics observed at Tiahuanacu.

Valpariso they found to be a busy little city, bustling with commerse. The business there is carried on by Germans and English.

The banquet given by the Chilions was a most elaborate affair.

The party was due in Buenos Aires, Argentine Republic on June 11, one of the pleasant features of the trip to hear of later.

If all connections are made the party should leave Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, July 3. There will be one more stop in Brazil and then about July 8 they should be headed for Bridgetown, Barbardoes, British West Indies, from which port they sail for Boston, arriving July 23.

Charles M. Faulkener of Wollaston overcome by heat falls down elevator well

Taken to Relief Hospital in serious condition

The medical staff of the Haymarket Square Relief Hospital are heroically working to save the life of Charles M. Faulkener of 1 Woodbine street, Wollaston who sustained a fractured skull at 384 Atlantic avenue this morning. Faulkener was overcome by the heat as he was standing on the third floor near the edge of the freight elevator well and as he collapsed his body plunged down the entire depth.

Fellow employees who saw him go over the edge, looking down and in the dim light perceived his unconscious form at the bottom. They rushed down but were powerless to lend any assistance.

An emergency call brought the ambulance of the Haymarket Square Relief Hospital. He was placed on the stretcher in an unconscious condition. The race for life commenced and he was soon on the operating table. At noon he was hovering between life and death.

Faulkener is 16 years of age and is the son of Charles N. Faulkener. He lives with his parents at 1 Woodbine avenue. He is popular among his Wollaston associates.

July and August are sure to be hot and sultry. The last Friday of June indicated this. To be comfortable men should visit Remick's in Music hall block, for a straw hat, a nobby cap, silk shirts, hosiery and light underwear.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

There is no let up in the attendance at this house, despite the exceedingly warm weather, and last night the "Kincaide Players" in "The wedding at Bangor" played to a large and demonstrative audience. And no wonder, for all of the past successes "The wedding at Bangor" was equally as successful as any of the comedies previously presented, and adds to the laurels already attained by this splendid company.

Some of the song and dance hits of the "Wedding at Bangor" were "Love, honor and obey" by George T. Davis and laughingly interpreted by Lucy Gover; "By the Old Oaken Bucket Marie" by Jack Wyatt; "Rose time in June" by George Lewis; "—Aint it Awful" by Rose Maurer; "That old girl of mine" by Jarvin Jocelyn; "Nance" by Franklyne Wood; "Essense" dance by Kelley, Gillraine and Murphy; finale, "Tale of Wedding Bell" by Jocelyn Wood and Co.

The sensational hoop rolling, baton and stick jugglers; the Zara Carmen Trio were spellbinders and kept the audience filled with astonishment by their wonderful and clever acts.

The political satire of Alderman Van Anderson consisted of songs and jokes of a humerous character and kept his auditors in laughing good humor during his entire act.

DEATH DUE TO OTHER CAUSES

Street Railway Conductor Loses Life at Nantasket

HOME IN DORCHESTER

It was reported at the street railway office Monday afternoon that Albert E. Trask aged 21 of 87 Adams street, Dorchester, who started work last week breaking in as a conductor had been drowned at Nantasket. Trask was in bathing in the surf off Kenberma, and quite a number who were watching the bathers from the shore saw him sink but supposed that he was simply sporting in the water. When he did not rise it was realized that he was drowning and willing hands soon brought the body to the shore. Physicians worked over the body but without avail.

Medical Examiner Patterson who later viewed the body reports that there was no water in the lungs and that the death was due to a shock or natural causes.

Trask was a member of the Catholic club of Meeting House Hill and had been spending the week end at the clubhouse.

Prosperity For One Is Prosperity For All

By HOLLAND.

If you are a farmer the value of your farm depends on the value of the adjoining farm, and the value of both depends on the value of property in the nearest village or town. Farms near prosperous towns are always more valuable than those near dead or dying settlements. And this is true without regard to the fertility of the soil.

The farmer depends on the town just as the town depends for prosperity on the farmer. Their destinies are interlinked; their interests are common. What hurts one hurts the other. Poor crops will affect the city resident who does not even raise radishes, and depressed business affairs affect the farmer who depends on soil, weather and muscle for his living.

Money sent to mail order houses helps to turn thriving towns into dead hamlets. It thereby depreciates the value of farm land. It decreases the population of the towns that most directly use the products of the farm. It lowers the price for butter and eggs, for chickens and for fruits and vegetables.

So, Mr. Farmer, if you deal with a mail order house in a distant city you are taking a course that takes from the value of your farm, that renders it less desirable as a place of residence and less productive of profit. You can't follow a system that injures your neighbors without being compelled to shoulder some of the expense yourself. Take the safer course and

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

Over $500 More Needed For the Celebration

Finances was the main subject under discussion at the meeting of the Quincy Fourth of July celebration committee Tuesday evening. Reports were received from all of the wards, with the exception of Ward Six where no effort was made to make collections.

After figuring up it was found that the amounts collected to date amounted to $931.20. This sum added to the $999 appropriated by the City Council brings the total up to $1,930.20. As the general committee desires fully $2,500 to carry out the program as now arranged it will be seen that the collectors will have to hustle during the next two days.

Several of these collectors announced that there were sums they knew were to be contributed and all promised to start bright and early in the morning and hustle for funds. Another meeting of the general committee, the last before the celebration will be held Thursday evening and complete reports must be received at that time from all of the collectors.

It was announced that on the morning of the Fourth three rounds would be struck on the fire alarm bells at 8 o'clock which would be a signal for the feature parade to start. It was also announced that immediately after the parade that one of the bands would give a concert on a band stand near City Hall, and that another band would proceed to Merrymount park and give a concert on the new Oval.

Chairman Hanscom of the refreshment committee announced that he had completed all arrangements to furnish the paraders with orangeade on the grounds of the Adams Academy immediately after the parade. Orangeade will also be on tap at the rooms of the Board of Trade for the committees.

Five thousand more buttons have been ordered and will arrive Wednesday. Thursday morning the Boy Scouts will take the buttons and canvass the city. Buttons will not be sold for less than ten cents, and it is expected that everybody will encourage the boys and buy a button. Not to have a button is not to be in style.

Chairman Wardwell of the parade committee announced that entries for the parade were coming in well and that indications pointed to the best parade the city has ever seen.

In the military division aside from the jackies of the battleship Michigan, there will be Battery I from Brockton, Co. E of the Naval Brigade from Boston, and the St. Mary's Cardinal Cadets from Charletsown. It is also possible that Co. K. of the State militia from Hingham may enter the parade.

In the societies it was announced that the Eagles would parade with their battleship float, and they have been assigned the right of the line of the second division, directly back of the military division.

Another feature in the society division will be the Syrian society from Ward Two. They will turn out over one hundred strong and will be accompanied by a drum corps from Lawrence.

The judges of the parade and the staff of the several division marshals, Chief Marshal Adams reported would be announced Thursday. It is proposed this year not to award the prizes as the line passes the grand stand as this causes some confusion and detracts from the genearl appearance of the line. The prizes however will be awarded at the grand stand shortly after the parade has been dismissed.

The executive Committee will meet tonight in the Mayor's office at City Hall and as stated above the general committee will meet Thursday evening at headquarters.

A telegram from the fort at Hull to Mayor Stone this morning stated that the battleship Michigan had been sighted and that a pilot was on hand waiting to take the ship to Nantasket Roads where she will seek an anchorage. It is expected that a mesenger from Capt. Capehart will wait on Mayor Stone early this afternoon and inform His Honor of the battleships arrival.

Immediately, Mayor Stone and the following committee will pay an official visit to the battleship. Maj. Fred E. Jones, Capt. George E. Adams, Capt. George A. Wardwell, Timothy J. Collins, and George T. Magee of the Daily Ledger.

The wives of two of the officers of the battleship arrived in the city this morning and will remain in Quincy until the battleship leaves. It is probable that Mayor Stone will invite these two ladies to accompany the city party on its official visit to the battleship this afternoon.

HOLIDAY NOTICE.

The Fourth of July will be observed as a holiday by the aily Ledger and Quincy Patriot, the offices being closed all day Friday. It is important that large advertisements for Saturday's Ledger should reach the office on Thursday.

If the President does not get down to business and work up some of those 25,000 word messages that nobody reads, the people may get on to what he is saying.

Much is being said as to whether the public shall be allowed to sit on the grass in the parks, but if they keep on doing it the occasion for the discussion will soon be removed.

It is thought that it would promote morality to arrest all women seen loitering on the streets. In front of the millinery stores would seem like a good place to begin.

The bleachers feel that the way to back up the team is to yell for the home players to be taken out of the game.

Some of the people think colleges have too olng vacations but many of the students are keeping up their work on the base ball diamond.

A "booster" is a man who does all the good he can for all the people he can, as well as he can and then trusts the rest to God. A "knocker" is a "thing that hangs on the outside of a door." Which are you?

The popular verdict on the Federal Reserve Board is that it will be a mighty good thing if any one who is hard up can appear before it and get a loan.

The President's exclamation of "Tut. tut" may make a golf ball feel ashamed, but it won't affect Congress any.

The Blue and the Gray at Gettysburg have faded down to about the same color under the suns of 50 summers.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS.

About 2000 American delegates are attending the world's Sunday school convention at Zurich, Switzland early in July. The last convention, held at Washington, reported an enrolment of 28,000,000. It is still a very lively movement.

The modern Sunday school faces obstacles formerly non-existent Lax family government affects discipline. You can make a boy behave in a public school because the parents use extreme measures rather than see him expelled. The Sunday schol teacher relies on his own wits and diplomacy.

The child feels he is doing a favor to all concerned by giving a half hour unwilling and fragmentary attention weekly, to be paid for in a currency of picnics, Chirstmas trees and parties.

Intellectual persons, most of whom plead nervous prostration is asked to teach in Sunday school, deplore the superficial methods used. Occasionally they recommend scientific and pedagogic courses, which if industriously pursued, would do the youngsters a world of good. Meanwhile the teacher feels very well satisfied if she gets through a session without Billys giving Johnny more than three upper cuts undr the ear.

Most of the teachings of Sunday schools is unintelligent. But can't you recall some dear, prim old lady in faded black bombazine, who used to stumble through the lessons after much wiping of spectacles and mispronouncing of hard names? Her view of the Bible may have been deplorably crude. But there was a sweetness of face, a gentleness of voice, a serenity of faith that showed she dwelt about as near the house of the Lord as more learned philosophers.

The world's Sunday school workers will exchange useful information about courses, methods, text books, but all these are subordinate to the personality of the teacher.

MOURNED AS DEAD RETURN

Thomas and John Allman Among Missing Many Years

The Quincy correspondent of the Globe writes interestingly of the return of two former residents of Quincy. Like two men returning from the dead, Thomas and John Allman came back to this city Monday night and surprised their friends. In fact both had been mourned as dead and public prayers had been offered for one in a local church more than a year ago.

The two men are sons of the late Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Allman, who lived for many years at the corner of South and Sumner streets. Thomas left home to accept a job as carriage painter in New Jersey about 10 years ago. When his mother died eight years ago members of the family advertised and wrote to his place of employment in New Jersey, but could get no trace of him. Five months after the mother's death the father died. Up to yesterday it was generally understood that Thomas Allman was dead. In an effort to settle up the property the other brothers, John and Timothy searched the country with newspaper advertisements for Thomas but no word ever came to give the brothers any hope that the missing one was alive.

With the death of the parents the home was broken up. John secured work in a shoe factory away from Quincy and Timothy went to work as a painter in the Fore River shipyards and later at the shipyards at Sparrows Point, near Baltimore, Md., where he is at present.

Last summer word was received in this city that John Allman had been found dead in a field, a sufferer from the heat, in New Hampshire. Quincy people on a vacation in New Hampshire claimed to have read of the finding of his body in a New Hampshire paper. On the strength of this report prayers were offered in a local church for the repose of the soul of John. No attempt was made to bring the body here as the only other brother had moved away.

People in general had come to consider both Thomas and John Allman as dead and some of these same people were visibly surprised last night to meet both brothers, alive and well. Many would hardly believe their eyes at first, but it did not take long to convince people who knew them that the brothers were really living. Both visited the old homestead and later returned to Boston.

The brothers met quite by accident in Chicago on Saturday. Both were surprised, John a little the more so for he had come to regard his brother Thomas as dead several years ago. Thomas said he had been in Pensacola Fla., at the time of his mother's death and knew nothing of the passing away of his parents until he learned of the fact from John on Saturday. Both agreed to come back to Quincy and the other brother, Timothy is expected here from Sparrows Point for the holidays.

INVITED GUESTS.

Patrick Connely who claims to hail from Watertown, and Patrick J. Dowling who claims his home as Allston had a taste Tuesday at Milton of how it seems to be a millionaire and quench their thirst on expensive wine of old vintage. The two men approached the residence of Arthur Merritt on Blue Hill avenue in the afternoon and not finding the man in charge during the abseice of the family they entered the house, and finding that the lock on the wine closet was not a very complicated one, they had little difficulty in breaking it off. Opening the door their eyes feasted on a long row of bottles of sparkling wine. Selecting four that bore a label reading "Hospice De Beaune 1904" they proceeded to enjoy themselves. An hour later the caretaker reported their presence to the police, and when Officers Chamberlin and Donovan arrived they found the two men dead to the world. They were locked up for the night and in court they told their story to the judge, saying that they had been invited in by the caretaker and their eyes sparkled and they smacked their lips as they told of quaffing the fine old wine. The court assessed them $15 each and as their funds were low they will go to Dedham.

GILRAINE ASKS WARRANT

Charges Officer Avery with Assault with Intent to Kill

A warant for the arrest of J. Joseph Avery, the officer who shot Frank Gilraine in the hip on the evening of June 25 was requested this morning by James E. O'Connell who has been retained by Gilraine. The request was made on the charges of assault and battery, assault with a dangerous weapon and assault with intent to kill. Judge Avery, to whom the request was made, suggested the outcome of the hearing which wil be held by Mayor Stone, and Attorney O'Connell agreed.

Gilraine is at the Qiuncy City Hospital. Four surgeons held a consultation this morning regarding the removal of about four inches of the hip bone and the jointing of the ends by a silver plate. Gilraine was later operated on and is doing well.

Attorney O'Connell stated that this morning he had written Mayor Stone regarding an immediate hearing so that prompt action could be taken in behalf of his client.

COUNTER PROTESTS.

The Marie L., owned by A. W. Findlay, won the second of the $500 match off Marblehead on Tuesday, but the award was reserved as counter protests were allowed.

The trouble occurred at the end of the first leg of a 12-mile course as the boats were getting in close quarters with the Southeast Breaker buoy, Mr. Finlay, learning that the Nutmeg had protested, claims the Nutmeg did not give way when his boat had established an overlap, forcing him either to touch the can or ram the Nutmeg.

LARCENY ALLEGED.

Officer Thorne arested Joseph Karam at his boarding house on Sumner street for the alleged larceny of $127 from Peter Hazzar his room mate. According to the police the two men occupied the same room and while Hazzar was hard at work Karam remained at home and going through the trunk of Hazzar abstracted his savings and was about to depart and celebrate the Fourth when the money was missed and the arrest followed. Karam was arraigned in court.

DISTRICT COURT.

Patrick Connely and Patrick J. Dowling were fined $15 each for drunkenness at Milton and Michael Flanagan $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Joseph Karam was arraigned for the larceny of $127 from Peter Hazzar, a fellow Syrian at Quincy Point. Case continued until next Wednesday.

By HOLLAND.

MONEY that is kept in the community helps every one in that community. It is a part of the common fund on which any one with anything to sell—merchandise, labor, farm products—can draw. Money that is sent away from home is withdrawn from this common fund. It helps to impoverish the entire community. Send all the money away and all the people in the community would be "broke."

The dollar that you spend with the local merchant will continue to circulate in the neighborhood, paying lawyer, doctor, blacksmith, carpenter, teacher. Ultimately it may return to you to be again started on its journey of purchase and payment. The dollar sent to the mail order house goes to swell the bank account of a concern in Chicago or New York. It is lost to your community forever. Your neighbor can't get it, and you will never see it again.

Can't you see that self interest tells you to do your buying at home? Can't you see that it is the part of wisdom to spend your dollar where you are likely to get it again?

The advertisements in this paper will aid you in deciding where to make your purchases. Only the more reliable merchants can afford to advertise continuously, and only the better grade of goods can stand such publicity.

Today is another record breaking day for heat. While the temperature at noon Tuesday was 91 degrees and hottest day of the year, the temperature at noon today was even higher for at the same hour today the mercury registered 95 degrees. There is not much more air than on Tuesday and as the saying goes it is hot.

A. W. Finlay's 18-foot knockabout Dorchen II will be shipped West next Monday to compete in the Perry Centennial events says the Herald. Mr. Finlay and his son George are to sail on the boat during the races, in which some of the fastest craft in the country will participate. The Dorchen II. sails regularly in the open regrattas given in Boston waters and has given splendid account of herself in team matches between knockabouts representing Massachusetts and Narragansett bays. It is Mr. Finlay's present intention to have the yacht back at Marblehead in time for races in connection with the midsummer series of the Corinthian Yacht Club, early next August. The Dorchen II is in better trim than ever before, according to her owner. She will be hoisted to a flat car at the wharf of the Fore River plant.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. BASKET BALL TEAM OFF TODAY FOR CHICAGO

The Quincy A. A. Senior Team

Standing—Boyle, Flynn (Mgr.) and J. O'Rourke.
Seated—P. Duggan, D. Duggan, C. Hebert and "Put" Kelly.

With four of their players missing, the Quincy A. A. first and second teams left Boston at 1.30 today for Chicago where they are representing New England in the American Olympic basket ball events. Both won the championship of organized basket ball two successive years.

Captain Harold Chapman of the second team, beyond all doubt the fastest amateur forward playing junior basket ball, and who is recognized as all that can be expected in the forward line is at Stellarton, Nova Scotia, playing base ball. "Put" Kelly, another strong player is there also.

This morning both telegraphed that their contract would not permit them to accompany the team to Chicago. Their absence affects both teams materially. ""Nedzo" Bennett because he has entered professional boxing cannot play because of his amateur rating has been forfeited.

If the N. E. A. A. A. U. has acted promptly in the matter of making good their promise to send the champions, these three men would not have been absent when the team boarded the train, but their pickerings and correspondence showed a tendency to hedge as far as appearances go, and the boys made other arrangements when Geo. Hepbron, the national basketbal lo f Manager Flynn's fight for the fullfilment of the promise resulted in the local boys being awarded the honor due.

Peter Chapman who has been at Williston Academy all year where he has participated in all athletic events will be in the lineup in place of his brother Harold. He played two seasons ago with the second team and has the speed and stamina required to keep the pace set by the other boys.

Clinton Scollard of Braintree, nephew of William T. Shea, was unable to accompany the team. He made good last season although it was his first outside of High school circles. Parental objection is the chief reason for his not going.

Mrs. Herbert Ross Hein and Mrs. Robert Stevenson Haggart, wives of two of the officers of the battleship Michigan arrived in town this morning from Virginia to meet their husbands They are registered at the Greenleaf.

WISE WORDS.
A Physician on Food.

A physician of Portland, Oregon, has views about food. He says:

"I have always believed that the duty of the physician does not cease with treating the sick, but that we owe it to humanity to teach them how to protect their health especially by hygienic and dietetic laws.

"With such a feeling as to my duty I take great pleasure in saying to the public that in my own experience and also from personal observation I have found no food to equal Grape-Nuts and that I find there is almost no limit to the great benefits this food will bring when used in all cases of sickness and convalescence.

"It is my experience that no physical condition forbids the use of Grape-Nuts. To persons in health there is nothing so nourishing and acceptable to the stomach especially at breakfast to start the machinery of the human system on the day's work. In cases of indigestion I know that a complete breakfast can be made of Grape-Nuts and cream and I think it is necessary not to overload the stomach at the morning meal. I also know the great value of Grape-Nuts when the stomach is too weak to digest other food.

"This is written after an experience of more than 20 years treating all manner of chronic and acute diseases, and the letter is written voluntarily on my part without any request for it." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

GREECE TAKES OFFENSIVE

Unmasks Bulgaria and Orders War Without Formal Declaration

London, July 2.—Following the surrender of the Bulgarian garrison at Salonica, the Greek government has ordered a general advance on the entire Bulgarian line, according to a special dispatch from Athens.

Fighting between the Greeks and Servians on the one side and the Bulgarians on the other is still proceeding all along the line from Istip to Eluthera, according to a dispatch from Sofia.

Greece's purpose to at once begin war against Bulgaria without any formal declaration is set forth in the following statement of the Greek foreign minister:

"After Bulgaria has answered all the conciliatory steps of Greece by repeated breaches of treaty and by crossing the provisional boundary fixed a short time ago, the Greek government feels forced to give the Macedonian divisions of its army the order to assume its offensive. War will in this way commence without a formal declaration. Greece declines to accept the responsibility for this war, which unquestionably will have grave consequences."

SUES FOR LOST LOVE

Governor Sulzer Defendant In Action Brought by Woman

Philadelphia, July 2.—William Sulzer, governor of New York state, was made defendant in a breach of promise suit brought by Miss Mignon Hopkins of this city. In her affidavit setting forth her case Miss Hopkins declares that until November, 1907, Sulzer introduced her as his wife and that for a time she lived with him.

To clear all doubts that the "William Sulzer" mentioned as defendant in the suit and Governor Sulzer of New York are one and the same person, when asked regarding that matter, Miss Hopkins said:

"Why, of course, there is no doubt about the matter. He was my sweetheart. He is the man mentioned in the suit. He is the man who broke my heart and forgot all about me when he arose to the heights politically."

WOMAN CONFESSES MURDER PLOT

Admirer Killed Her Husband to Get Him Out of the Way

Bristol, Conn., July 2.—Mrs. Bessie Wakefield if this city and James Plew of Middlebury were arrested at the instance of Coroner Mix of New Haven county, charged with having caused the death of William Wakefield, the woman's husband, whose body was found in the Cheshire woods.

This action followed the establishing of the identity of the dead man by the local police and a confession by Mrs. Wakefield that she and Plew had plotted to get Wakefield out of the way that they might live together. An examination of the body showed that Wakefield had been shot in the back of the head twice and stabbed in the heart.

DOHERTY AGAIN UPHELD

Driver of Wrecked Train Declared to Have Used Good Judgment

Bridgeport, Conn., July 2.—Coroner Phelan has resumed his inquest into the Stamford wreck. Foster Worthington, an engineer employed by the New Haven road for the last twelve years, was called. He was in the cab of the engine of the first section of the Springfield express which was wrecked. The engine had been cut off and was on a siding.

He described the collision, telling how he heard one whistle from the engine on the second section, signifying "brakes." A moment later he "saw the dust fly."

Asked as to what he thought of Engineer Doherty's judgment, provided he applied his brakes as he claims he did at the time of the wreck, Worthington said he thought it would be good judgment.

Cambridge, Mass., July 2.—Still further shortages were reported to the Middlesex county commissioners by the American Audit company, whose employes have been at work since June 7 on the books of the late Fred Smith, formerly clerk and bookkeeper at the jail and the house of correction.

Fairbairn first became sheriff. The latest report, covering the period of Smith's incumbency prior to 1896, shows a shortage of $1922.98.

WOMEN KILL SELVES TO ESCAPE REBELS

Appalling Condition of Affairs Reported In Durango

Mexico City, July 2.—Forty women residents have committed suicide in the city of Durango since its occupation last week by the rebels after a long siege, according to a private letter received here and given out from government sources. The women, it says, became desperate as the result of their treatment by the victorious rebels.

Consular advices say the rebels who entered Durango conducted themselves like bandits, burning a large part of the business section of the city after looting it and joining in the wildest excesses.

The report says foreign flags were not respected. A few American citizens were wounded during the fighting and one Englishman was killed, according to these reports.

Private advices from other sources say that a group of German women in Durango were subjected to to gross indignities by the rebel adherents.

Washington, July 2.—The department of agriculture launched a crusade against the gypsy and brown-tail moths. In the states of Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island the moths have worked havoc to vegetation, especially to vines and trees.

To prevent a spread of this pest the department prohibits the shipping of plants, shrubs, trees or the products of trees from the infested territory.

Shipments will be permitted of stock which is inspected by the state board of agriculture and given a clean bill.

It was reported that over 2000 men are on strike in the Cabin and Paine Creek fields, but the coal operators deny that so many miners have quit work.

CHEERS FOR A UNITED NATION

OLD WAR DAYS TALKED OVER

50,000 Men Quartered In Camp Intended to Shelter but 40,000—But Few Heat Prostrations—Visitors From North and South Decorate the Graves of Dead Heroes

Gettysburg, Pa., July 2.—In the pitiless glare of a sun that sent the mercury bubbling over the 100 mark and made clothes a burden and a bath only a delusion, the armies of the north and south began the formal exercises set to mark the semi-centennial of Gettysburg.

Veterans to the number of 15,000, army officers estimated, filed into the big tent set apart for the exercises, sat in the haze of heat for two hours and shook the camp with their cheers when the speakers made reference to a united nation.

Every seat under the canvas was taken long before Secretary of War Garrison and Governor Tener, the orators of the day, arrived. Although the men in gray were far outnumbered by those in blue, there were about 1000 southerners in the amphitheatre.

When Tener finished his speech General Young, commander-in-chief of the United Confederate Veterans, rose slowly and bowed to him. "I can give you something that no one can give you," he said. "We will now give you the rebel yell."

Nine famous confederate generals and a thousand veterans of the south gave it so loudly that it was heard far back in the camp toward Gettysburg.

When Young stepped forward to deliver his address he was greeted with wild enthusiasm.

He took as his keynote the conviction of each side in the great struggle that it fought for a principle which it believed was the truth. One of his opening statements was that the northern soldiers deserved more credit than the southerners for the promulgation and successful realization of the present great reunion, which he characterized as the greatest movement of its kind in the world.

This compliment to the northern veterans was greeted with loud cries of "No," to which Young quickly replied. "I know better than you do." His speech captured the audience, and he was overwhelmed by congratulations.

No Spare Room In Camp

All through the night the veterans poured into camp, took graciously what small blessings fate passed out to them for a few hours, and found permanent quarters when the hard pressed regular army officers could get them ready. Major Normoyle estimated that more than 50,000 men are quartered in a camp intended to hold 40,000.

Thousands have been given quarters in the big tent and hundreds of others in smaller tents used in the daytime for speechmaking and reunions.

Many veterans got no further than one meal in camp and one look at the crowded tents and then started back home. The real exodus, however, will not begin until Thursday or Friday, for thousands who might have left sooner expect to stay to see President Wilson.

Before yesterday's exercises began, the reunions of regiments and companies and squadrons began.

The doctors were amazed at the way the veterans withstood the unusual heat, for it poured down in a way to keep men scores of years younger in the shade. Out-and-out cases of heat prostrations were unusual, and altogether the veterans showed their mettle was still good throughout a trying day.

Down-town in Gettysburg, where the temperature was even higher than in camp, there were more cases of temporary exhaustion treated at emergency stations.

Of the blue and gray veterans in camp fully 30,000 devoted yesterday to the 3664 known and unknown dead in the national cemetery on the ridge immediately back of the camp.

The headstones of every grave was decorated with crossed American and Pennsylvania flags, which at a distance turned the Gettysburg battle section of the cemetery into a waving sea of carnations and forget-me-nots. And toward that holy flower bed covering Gettysburg's dead heroes, their surviving comrades traveled all day in reverent pilgrimages.

No veteran found the grave of his company mate without uncovering his head and failing miserably in his attempt to hold back the tears.

And around the statue of the Pennsylvania leader of the first day's battle, General Reynolds, stood a crowd of uncovered veterans all day. Indeed, the cemetery was the greatest attraction to the encamped veterans. Many of them neglected their mess call and stayed at the cemetery, under the trees fringing the soldiers' graves, dreaming all day about fifty years ago.

But not a flower was placed on any of the graves.

HENRI ROCHEFORT

HENRI ROCHEFORT DEAD

Noted French Journalist Had a Busy and Exciting Career

Paris, July 2.—Henri Rochefort, 82 years old, veteran French journalist and playwright, died at Aix-Les-Baines. He was at one time a member of the chamber of deputies and was one of the most famous characters of early French newspaper days. He fought seven duels and was a noted swordsman. He founded several newspapers but lost them.

In 1873 he was deported to New Caledonia for his vitriolic denunciations of the government, but a year later escaped and made his way to San Francisco. For several years he lived in America and then went to London and Geneva. He was amnestied in 1880 and returned to Paris, where in 1889 he was charged with participating in the revolutionary movement and was sentenced to life imprisonmnet. He was again amnestied in 1896.

PRESIDENT STARTS ON A "REST CRUISE"

Customary Formalities on the Mayflower Are Omitted

Washington, July 2.—President Wilson slipped out of Washington for a three days' "rest cruise" on the yacht Mayflower on lower Chesapeake bay. His only companion is his physician, Dr. Grayson.

At Wilson's request no salute was fired when he went aboard the Mayflower, no whistles were blown and the formal welcome aboard by the officers was omitted.

The president expects to return to the White House Thursday night. He will go to the Gettysburg reunion Friday and then proceed to Cornish, N. H., to spend three days with his family.

Segee was found guilty a few days ago of falsifying public records and was sentenced to three years in the house of correction. An appeal has been filed.

Pittsburg, July 2.—With a noose around his neck and members of a mob endeavoring to throw the end of the rope over a limb of a tree, Adolph Philcoin, aged 40, a miner, only escaped summary violence by the arrival of county detectives in an automobile at Brealing, below this city.

With drawn revolvers, the county officers pushed their way in the crowd, unfastened the rope from Philcoin's neck, rushed him to the automobile and, amid a heavy fire from revolvers in the hands of the infuriated miners, escaped unscathed towards this city.

Since publication of Martin M. Mulhall's story of how he had operated to influence legislation and elections in behalf of the National Association of Manufacturers, scores of labor leaders, present and former congressmen and others have come forward requesting that they be heard by the investigators.

Louis J. Siebold of New York also has accepted service. He has been called as a newspaper man connected with the publication of the Mulhall statement to give the committee what information he can as to its preparation and as to the letters and telegrams Mulhall has agreed to produce.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, who figured prominently in Mulhall's story as the object of a long-continued attack by those who attempted to bribe him and force him to give up his fight in behalf of labor legislation, has made public a detailed report of the attempted bribery. It confirms the story told by Mulhall.

The Gompers statement is a report that the labor leader prepared in 1907 after his experience with Broughton Brandenburg, now a convict in Sing Sing, who claimed to be in the employ of the National Association of Manufacturers. Efforts to secure private interviews with Gompers aroused the latter's suspicion, and he took a number of labor leaders into his confidence and later made a full report to them of the occurrences that followed.

Gompers met Brandenburg, it says, under the advice and suggestion of other officials of the American Federation of Labor. Brandenburg, it says, represented himself as in charge of a bureau of the National Association of Manufacturers organized "to expose the immorality and dishonesty of the leaders in the labor movement."

According to his report, Gompers led Brandenburg on until the latter proposed that Gompers should prepare a general statement in the nature of a "confession," should stand for re-election as president of the American Federation of Labor in 1908, and should then resign, leaving the Federation of Labor crippled by his retirement and the exposure of other leaders.

"My object in coming to you is to say I want to save you," Brandenburg is quoted as saying. "I want to save you, and while I do not want to express in specific financial terms what the National Association of Manufacturers is willing to do, yet I can guarantee that you would be financially safe for the balance of your life."

The Gompers report states that the interview terminated there; that Gompers succeeded in keeping the paper Brandenburg had prepared for him to sign, and that Vice President Duncan and other officers of the Federation were at once made acquainted with the circumstances.

Gompers and other officials of the Federation of Labor will probably testify before the senate committee, as the alleged activities of the lobbyists bore directly upon national legislation.

John Kirby, Jr., and D. M. Parry, who were expected to sail yesterday from San Francisco for Australia, wired Chariman Overman, asking to be excused from testifying before the senate committee now, but promising to appear on their return in several months. To change their plans now, they telegraphed, would cost them about $3000 each. Overman wired the two men directing that they hold themselves in readiness to appear.

PROBE STARTED AT LAWRENCE

Mayor Heads Committee to Investigate Drowning of Boys

COURT PLANS SPEEDY ACTION

Inquest Will Be Held at Earliest Possible Moment—Each of Eleven Families Invaded by Death to Receive $100 From City to Help Defray Funeral Expenses

Lawrence, Mass., July 2.—Meeting in special session, the Lawrence city government forwarded the work of preparing for an investigation of the accident at city bathhouse No. 1, which resulted in the drowning of eleven boys, while Judge Mahoney of the local municipal court also took a hand by announcing an inquest would be held at the earliest possible moment.

On the part of the city government no time was lost in appointing a committee headed by Mayor Scanlon to conduct a probe. After viewing the scene of the fatalities on the north bank of the Merrimac, directly following the meeting, the committee again visited the spot, accompanied by City Engineer Marble. The latter bore instruments for making measurements and soundings, together with apparatus for taking photographs.

The regular meeting of the city council will take place today. It is expected the special committee will then announce the date set for the taking of testimony. It is the intention of the committee to summon all persons having anything to do with the construction of the gangway which collapsed, eyewitnesses of the accident, the aged keeper and survivors.

Mayor Scanlon heads the committee selected to conduct the investigation. The other members are Director of Public Safety Lynch and Alderman Hannagan, director of streets and engineering.

Alderman Bradbury, head of the department in control of bathhouses, who is being criticised as the result of the accident, asked to be excused from serving on the committee, his place being taken by the mayor. He also defended his department from blame.

More than 100 people attended the meeting, which took place in city hall, and before it concluded an order was passed directing the city treasurer to forward $100 to each of the eleven families invaded by death. It was stated that some of the parents of the boys drowned would have difficulty in meeting the funeral expenses. It was also voted that all the flags throughout the city should be kept at half staff until after the last funeral of the victims.

GUARD FOR CLERGYMAN

Black Hand Men Making Persistent Threats Against Him

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 2.—Rev. Jonas Shupshinkas, pastor of the Holy Trinity Lutheran Catholic church of this city, has a guard of parishioners and city police about his home at night because he fears an attack from the Black Hand.

He has received several threatening letters signed "The American Black Hand Society," in which he has been told that he must pay $1500 as tribute money "or die like a dog."

Some of the letters bore pictures of blood stained daggers and others the Mafia sign of five fingers clutching a dagger.

He has tried to trap the gang with the help of the police, but his efforts have failed and the letters continue to come.

MAY WAR ON FRAUDS

Court Says Editors Have Right When Acting In Good Faith

New York, July 2.—A newspaper has a legal right to expose a business firm's methods of doing business, provided the motives of its publishers "are open to the belief that they are in good faith, exposing those who are overreaching the simple and abusing the confidence of the credulous."

This was the substance of an opinion handed down by Judge Hand in the federal court, denying a motion made by the E. A. Strout Farm Agency for an injunction restraining the Rural Publishing company from publishing threats to expose the plaintiff's business methods and from writing letters to the firm's customers.

—The young Prince of Wales is no mollycoddle, whatever else may be said of him. Ordered out of the famous Bullingdon club at Oxford by his mother for taking part in a "Bullingdon blind," he recently attracted attention by being "captured" in maneuvers at Aldershot, and now it is announced that he marched twenty miles in the broiling sun, carrying rifle, knapsack and water bottle, sleeping in a barn with his fellow cadets and finishing in good condition. Some prince, that, as they put it in the vernacular.

—All states in time will probably adopt the five-day rule in the granting of marriage licenses to outsiders. It is a good rule, as it tends to prevent hasty marriages which are likely to be repented at leisure, according to the old saying. Most of the New England states now have the law and in Connecticut it will become effective August 1. Until then eloping couples will make the matrimonial business good in the Nutmeg state.—Lowell Courier-Citizen.

—Forty thousand white voters who never read a newspaper are said to live in South Carolina. We do not know that they are any more unfortunate than the forty thousand or more voters in Massachusetts who never profit by what they read in the newspapers.—New Bedford Standard.

ENTRY LIST STILL OPEN

Time Extended for Athletic Events on the Fourth

On account of lack of entries in several of the events for the Fourth th Athletic committee thought it best to hold the entry list open until tonight and accordingly any one wishing to start in the different races may hand in an entry until 8:00 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A. As will be seen by looking over the entries there are only a few fellows in some of the events and it is hoped that more men will enter these events.

The prizes are all of high value and if the athletic sports are to be continued as part of the Fourth of July celebration in years to come there will certainly have to be larger entry lists, as the people do not care to put up good money for only a limited number of athletes.

LADIES AID LAWN PARTY

The annual lawn party of the Ladies Aid of the Hall Place M. E. church was held Wednesday evening on the church grounds with a good number present. It was an ideal night for a lawn party as the slight breeze which blew over the hill took off the edge of the intense heat of the day.

The committees were as follows:

Ice cream—Mrs. Fred Badger, Mrs. Mary McCormick, Mrs. Daniel MacNiel.

Aprons—Mrs. George Hawes, Mrs. William McCormick and Mrs. C. S. Jose.

Candy—Miss Jessie Burke, Miss Jennie Manhire.

COMMITTEE NOW COMPLETE

Will Meet Next Week to Consider Public Dock

Mayor Stone Wednesday afternoon appointed the following as the citizens committee to confer with the City Council committee in considering the matter of a public dock. William T. Shea, Jonathan S. Swingle, Alfred O. Diack, John L. Hamilton and John T. Conway.

The City Council Committee is Councilman John R. Richards, Thomas Griffin, Edward J. Sandberg, Chas. L. Gilliatt, and William P. Thompson. These two committees are to act in conjunction with the Mayor and Dock Commissioner Crane. They will hold their first meeting next week.

HOUGHS NECK CHANNEL

State will Expend $8,000 for Its Improvement

The Port Directors of Boston authorized this morning the expenditure of $8000 for the improvement of the channel leading to the clubhouse of the Quincy Yacht club at Houghs Neck.

The act of the Legislature appropriating $75,000 for harbor improvements in Greater Boston provided that only $25,000 could be expended in any one year. Quincy therefore is fortunate in securing an award this year.

The Port Directors were prompt to act after the hearing given last week to Mayor Stone, the City Council, Dock Commissioner Crane and others. The money is now available and Admiral Bowles of the commission informs the Daily Ledger that work will be begun right away, so that yachtsmen will receive some benefit this season.

A TRIBUTE.

The death of Miss Bumpus brings forcibly to mind her indefatigable services in the pioneer work of the Thomas Crane Public Library.

Her name and devotion are inseparably connected with the history of the Library, and her works follow after her, for the present healthy condition of the Library is in no small measure the result of her wise planning and the faithful performance of the duties of her position.

Her portrait in the Library will introduce to the generations to come the face of one whom not having seen in the flesh they know through her invaluable services.

As reluctantly as the Trustees of the Thomas Crane Public Library accepted the resignation of Miss Bumpus with an appreciative resolution of gratitude, so now as her earthly career is ended, they desire to put on record the "Well done good and faithful servant."

Surely such a woman, who developed her talents to the utmost for the benefit of others, has entered upon her eternal reward.

NO MAILS ON HOLIDAY.

A complete suspension of postal service in Quincy goes into effect at midnight to night and continues throughout the holiday. Last year the suspension was inaugurated and Postmaster Mansfield received no complaints although the Boston district, including Quincy, has 1,500,000 persons. Extra men are being used on extremely hot days and deliveries are being discontinued wherever convenient in the district.

STRUCK A DOG.

An automobile owned and operated by J. Cobey of Weymouth struck and injured a dog at North Weymouth this morning. The animal was placed in the rear of the machine and taken to Dr. Abele on Spear street who shot the dog. The dogs back was broken.

THE GRASSHOPPER.

"And the Grasshopper shall be a burden" so said the world weary writer of Ecclesiastes. To the ordinary summer vacationist, the hopper grass is merely a picturesue little creature who rasps a cheerful song all day and often at night. The farmer knows more, and reads not without apprehension that these insects are rising in clouds in Texas and other Southwest states.

A Nebraska man said the other day that the grasshopper plague of 1875 was the most serious visitation his state ever had had to meet. The pests darkened the sun. At that time he had one field of a half dozen acres of corn, and the shiny leaves glistened in the sunlight. Then came the grasshoppers, and in half an hour there was nothing left but the stalks.

A neighbor said that at the same time he had a fine field of onions. The first grasshoppers began to come one day about noon. He decided to go right out and do what he could to save his corn, when his wife urged him to wait until after dinner. The dumplings were fine, and they would get cold.

So he had had his dinner and his toothsome dumplings. When he got out the grasshoppers likewise had had their dinner, and the onions were gone

Enormous damage is done by this pest. Nevertheless, "Grasshopper sitting on a sweet potato vine" is a bit of American folk song, signifying that when he is not actually obliterating a crop, he has sturdy qualities that awaken a not unfriendly regard.

Mr. Grasshopper is a fighter for his rights. When he finds some juicy pollen, not even the bee with his business end can dislodge him. The hoppergrass lunges at him with a vicious kick, his hind legs being about the most muscular for their size of any animate force. If Brer Bee comes blundering back, Mr. Grasshopper is underneath the plant leaf, looking so much like his surroundings that he is not discovered.

John D. puts on sheep to mow his lawn, as they are cheaper than machines. Some people would consider that an objection.

President Wilson removed his coat on some of these hot days, but so long as he keeps his collar on the Ladies' Home Journal will not get after him.

The bachelor of arts home from college is not much use in the corn field, but there is noticeable improvement in the town boys' ball playing.

Every one is urged to be up in the morning when it is so cool and pleasant, but the only ones who do so are the sporting gents who haven't time to go to bed.

Bryan says that no gun is as strong as a great thought, but even a great thought cannot batter down some of these armor proof heads.

HOW TO LOOK PRETTY EVEN THOUGH SEASICK.

Many women wear the smart steamer coat and hat only at the beginning and end of a voyage, loafing about the deck between times in the comfortable knitted sweaters and caps which are just now the fad. These knitted caps are ideal for ocean wear, as they keep the hair from blowing untidily about and, unlike the chiffon veil, do not themselves whisk about in the breezes.

The quaint bonnet cap matches the white sweater with blue border trimmings, the cap being of white worsted with a border of blue and blue ribbon rosettes and ties. There is a babyish suggestion about such a knitted bonnet with its big ear rosettes that is charming on just the right type of face, and, of course, the girl with the big blue eyes is ravishing in a blue ribboned baby cap.

One sees these caps in lovely soft shades of tan and brown, matching knitted sweaters in the same colors, and one pretty, fair haired girl, crossing recently, wore a well fitting knitted coat of sage green worsted with a bonnet in the same shade, tied with deeper green ribbons.

NOVEL JABOTS.

How to Make Smart and Becoming Neckwear.

A pretty embroidered linen jabot can be made from a handkerchief.

You will have little difficulty making the jabot if these directions are closely followed: Place the handkerchief flat on the table and turn one point under to form a straight top for the jabot. Now, using the point opposite as a center, fold the sides into plaits until the jabot is the desired width.

Baste the plaits in place and press with a heated iron. When the bastings are removed you will have a jabot pretty enough to please any one. The embroidered handkerchiefs with edges of handmade lace are especially lovely when used for jabots.

Four handkerchiefs can be joined to form a dainty tea apron. When these are sewed together by hand they form a large square. Arrange this with one point forming a bib and run a gathering string across the front, so that the apron fits properly at the waist line. Stitch a band of lace insertion over this and run ribbon through to form the apron strings.

Attractive bureau scarfs and a table cover for the bedroom can be made by using the handkerchiefs as medallions and pointing them together. Border these with an edging of lace.

HOW TO WHITEN THE THROAT

Lemon Juice or a Ripe Tomato Will Remove Any Discolorations.

Shapeliness is not all that is necessary to the making of a throat beautiful. The texture of the skin must be fine and soft, white and unblemished. Cleanliness is the first essential. A good thorough scrubbing with a not too soft brush, hot water and soap once or twice a week will do no harm, the rest of the time using the ordinary cloth. Apply lemon juice or a ripe tomato to any discolorations that may appear, and unless the pores are enlarged use cold cream freely.

Alcohol will harden the flesh. As for the various bleaches, there are some that are harmless, except in so far as they invariably are drying, which ultimately leaves the skin harsh and brash. Here is one that can easily be made at home; but, like the others, it is drying, so be sure to counteract this effect by applying cold cream after using it. Mix half an ounce of peroxide of hydrogen, six ounces of witch hazel and half an ounce of lactic acid. Apply this with a soft cloth.

How to Economize on Ice.

A ten cent piece of ice every other day is a more economical purchase than a five cent piece every day. Being twice as large and solid, it will last not only twice as long as a five cent piece, but it will give double as much chill to the refrigerator, and this chill will last twice as long, so that when a new cake is put in it will not melt as soon as it would have done otherwise. In fact, a ten cent piece of ice will often keep a refrigerator so cold that, except in very warm weather, one can get along very well if one only buys it every three days instead of every two.

It is well to buy a new cake before the last one is entirely gone and the chill of the icebox gone with it.

How to Open Head of Lettuce.

To open a tight head of lettuce without tearing the delicate leaves hold the top of the head under the cold water faucet, allowing the water to run at moderate force. The closely wrapped leaves will unfold slowly under the action of the water and there will be no injured leaves. When thoroughly opened and while still wet place in a soft cloth and keep in a cold place until needed.

How to Kill Dandelions.

A householder who does not like to have dandelions sprinkling his lawn applies a few drops of gasoline to each plant with a medicine dropper, putting it directly into the heart of the plant. One should be careful to see that a dropper once used for this purpose is not used again for medicine.

On the morning of the Fourth the rooms will be open to the ladies of the members, and the entertainment committee will show them how the club does things. During the morning the ladies will be served with ice cream, cake, lemonade and fruit.

After the parade the officers of the battleship will be received and entertained informally. The evening and entertainment of the Fourth will be in charge of the entertainment committee who are Thomas G. Smith James H. Lalley and Rollin W. Newcomb.

FIRE BALLOONS PROHIBITED.

As the Fourth of July is near at hand, the State Forester believes that it is very important that the attention of the general public be called to the law which prohibits the use of fire balloons, chapter 141, Acts of 1910, which reads as follows:

"It shall be unlawful within any city or town in this commonwealth for any person to liberate or fly fire balloons of any description. Whoever violates this act shall be punished by a fine of not more than one hundred dollars, or by imprisonment for not more than one month or by both such fine and imprisonment."

In past years serious fires have resulted from the use of these balloons and it is hoped that this timely warning will prevent a repetition this year of a serious menace to the woodlands of the State.

THREE GOOD POSITIONS.

Three examinations for positions under the Directors of the Port of Boston will be filled from the civil service list. Papers for the position of mechanical foreman must be filed on or before July 9. AN ESKIMO DINNER

It Was Not Very Dainty, but It Was a Satisfying Feast.

SEAL MEAT AND BLOOD SOUP.

The First Course Was Served Out of Hand, and the Second In Musk Ox Horn Drinking Cups—The Hospitality Extended to Explorer Stefansson.

An interesting description of the hospitality of Eskimos is given by Vilhjalmar Stefansson in his paper, "My Quest In the Arctic," in Harper's Magazine. At one stage of his adventures the writer found himself among Eskimos who had never before seen white people. He says:

"Like our distant ancestors, no doubt, these people fear most of all things the evil spirits that are likely to appear to them at any time in any guise, and next to that they fear strangers. Our first greeting had been a bit doubtful and dramatic through our being mistaken for spirits, but now they had felt of us and talked with us and knew we were but common men. Strangers we were, it is true, but we were only three among forty of them and were therefore not to be feared. Besides, they told us they knew we could harbor no guile from the freedom and frankness with which we came among them; for, they said, a man who plots treachery never turns his back to those whom he intends to stab from behind.

"Before the house which they immediately built for us was quite ready for our occupancy children came running from the village to announce that their mothers had dinner ready. The houses were so small that it was not convenient to invite all three of us into the same one to eat; besides, it was not etiquette to do so, as we now know. Each of us was therefore taken to a different place. My host was the seal hunter whom we had first approached on the ice. His house would, he said, be a fitting one in which to offer me my first meal among them, for his wife had been born farther west on the mainland coast than any one else in their village, and it was even said that her ancestors had not belonged originally to their people, but were immigrants from the westward. She would therefore like to ask me questions.

"It turned out, however, that his wife was not a talkative person, but motherly, kindly and hospitable, like all her countrywomen. Her first questions were not of the land from which I came, but of my footgear. Weren't my feet just a little damp, and might she not pull my boots off for me and dry them over the lamp? She had boiled some seal meat for me, but she had not boiled any fat, for she did not know whether I preferred the blubber boiled or raw. They always cut it in small pieces and ate it raw themselves, but the pot still hung over the lamp, and anything she put into it would be cooked in a moment.

"When I told her that my tastes quite coincided with theirs, as in fact they did, she was delighted. People were much alike then, after all, though they came from a great distance. She would accordingly treat me exactly as if I were one of their own people come to visit them from afar.

"When we had entered the house the boiled pieces of seal meat had already been taken out of the pot and lay steaming on a sideboard. On being assured that my tastes in food were not likely to differ from theirs, my hostess picked out for me the lower joint of a seal's foreleg, squeezed it firmly between her hands to make sure nothing should later drip from it, and handed it to me, along with her own copper bladed knife. The next most desirable piece was similarly squeezed and handed to her husband, and others in turn to the rest of the family.

"As we ate we sat on the front edge of the bed platform, holding each his piece of meat in the left hand and the knife in the right. This was my first experience with a knife of native copper. I found it more than sharp enough and very serviceable.

"Our meal was of two courses—the first, meat; the second, soup. The soup is made by pouring cold seal blood into the boiling broth immediately after the cooked meat has been taken out of the po tand stirring briskly until the whole comes nearly—but never quite—to a boil. This makes a soup of a thickness comparable to our English pea soup, but if the pot be allowed to come to a boil the blood will coagulate and settle to the bottom. When the soup is a few degrees from boiling the lamp above which the pot is swung is extinguished and a few handfuls of snow are stirred into the soup to bring it to a temperature at which it can be freely drunk. By means of a small dipper the housewife then fills the large musk ox horn drinking cups and assigns one to each person. If the number of cups is short two or more persons may share the contents of one cup or a cup may be refilled when one is through with it and passed to another.

"After I had eaten my fill of fresh seal meat and drunk two pint cupfuls of blood soup my host and I moved farther back on the bed platform, where we could sit comfortably, propped up against bundles of soft caribou skins, while we talked of various things."

Adversity has the effect of eliciting talents which in prosperous circumstances would have lain dormant.—Horace

Prosperity For One Is Prosperity For All

By HOLLAND.

IF you are a farmer the value of your farm depends on the value of the adjoining farm, and the value of both depends on the value of property in the nearest village or town. Farms near prosperous towns are always more valuable than those near dead or dying settlements. And this is true without regard to the fertility of the soil.

The farmer depends on the town just as the town depends for prosperity on the farmer. Their destinies are interlinked; their interests are common. What hurts one hurts the other. Poor crops will affect the city resident who does not even raise radishes, and depressed business affairs affect the farmer who depends on soil, weather and muscle for his living.

Money sent to mail order houses helps to turn thriving towns into dead hamlets. It thereby depreciates the value of farm land. It decreases the population of the towns that most directly use the products of the farm. It lowers the price for butter and eggs, for chickens and for fruits and vegetables.

So, Mr. Farmer, if you deal with a mail order house in a distant city you are taking a course that takes from the value of your farm, that renders it less desirable as a place of residence and less productive of profit. You can't follow a system that injures your neighbors without being compelled to shoulder some of the expense yourself. Take the safer course and should be every man's first choice, but we realize that many men prefer to shop around before finally deciding on the purchase of their garments.

¶ By now, however, most men have had an opportunity to carefully inspect the offerings of others. Let us, therefore, again call your attention to the appeal of Kuppenheimer Clothes to your better judgment.

¶ First of all, they are authoritatively correct in point of style.

¶ Again, the purity of the woolens from which they are made, and the quality of the workmanship in the making, insures the service they will give; the wear you get out of them.

Finally, the price is practically whatever you care to pay.

At $18.00 the choice of styles, patterns and shades is in every sense as varied as at $20, $25 or $27. Of course you realize that the better the price, the better the clothes, but this one point is worth remembering. Whatever the price—Satisfaction is guaranteed.

Remember: If you are looking for lower priced Suits, Ours at $10, $12 and $15 are $2 to $3 less than sold elsewhere. Outing Pants $2 to $6.

B. F. KEITH'S THEATRE.

Next week will be the third and positively last of the engagement of "The Meistersingers In The Wild Woods" at B. F. Keith's Theatre. This is the last opportunity given to the music lovers of New England to hear the combined Harvard, Schubert and Weber Male Quartettes of Boston in their beautiful scenic spectacle, depicting life in the great pine forests of Maine. An entirely new programme will be offered on this occasion, with new songs and new soloists. Second only in importance to the last week of "The Meistersingers In The Wild Woods," will be the appearance of Donald Meek, the popular character actor of the Castle Square Stock Company, in a brand new comedy of country life written especially for him. Mr. Meek scored a decided success on his vaudeville debut at this playhouse last summer, and it is in response to thousands of requests that Mr. Keith has arranged to present him for a second season in a new playlet. Mr. Meek will be supported by an excellent company. His engagement is for one week only. Other excellent features of a fine bill will be Ben Deely and company in "The New Bell Boy;" Maurice Golden, the yiddle with a fiddle, and Grace DeWinters, the kid ventriloquist, in a novel act; the Heuman Trio of wonderful cyclists; Carl McCullough, in "Footlight Impressions;" Cathryn Chaloner and company in "Kate's Press Agent," a new comedy; Carson and Brown, dancing experts; and The Balliots, wonderful experts on the Roman rings.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

GREASE HOUSE DESTROYED

Was Out Of Reach Of Fire Apparatus At Squantum

A building known as the "grease house" situated on the line of the Boston sewer near the end of the car line at Squantum caught fire about eight o'clock today and burned to the ground. The fire apparatus of Atlantic was the first to arrive but was unable to do anything because the building was situated on a stretch of land projecting into Dorchester bay, nearly a quarter of a mile from the nearest hydrant.

The Squantum people were greatly surprised at the one man apparatus which responded to the telephone call sent by Mrs. J. Marden. Box 83 was pulled but probably by an inexperienced person as it was jumbled.

The building was owned by J. Carpenter of Popes Hill and was used as an extracting station for soap supplies.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

During the hot summer months patrons will find the Thomas Crane Public Library a very cool and comfortable place. There are many new books of fascinating interest and a number of beautiful English photogravures on exhibition in the art gallery. Views of gentle flowing streams winding their way through green pastures, the gushing water as pictured in "Seafowl Rock" near Stoneham, N. B., all seem to send forth a silent, but cool breeze. Besides these scenes, will be found "Boyhood of Raleigh," the familiar and beloved character we have studied in history.

Other pictures of varied interest are here, to give benefit as well as pleasure to the people who, as yet, have not seen them.

BIG HOLIDAY BILL.

A very attractive program for the holiday week end is now being presented at Quincy's cool playhouse. The Kincaide players are scoring their greatest success yet in their "1913 Minstrels." Each of the eleven clever talented members of the company have prominent parts in the fast and furious funfest that lasts three uarters of an hour.

The vaudeville attraction include "Charlie" Harris, New England's famous pantomimeco median,w ho puzzles the audience to know whether he is a man or she a woman. Dick Thompson and his company of Irish players present a very pleasing playlet entitled "Erin Go Braugh." This act carries special scenery and electrical effects, and their delicious sketch which exudes the air of old Erin, is proving a great magnet.

An Attractive Line of Women's White Shoes

There is a refreshing freshness about the styles of women's white shoes we are showing. They have a distinctively different look than the women's shoes generally seen. They are actual revelations in footwear. Delightfully comfortable and so charmingly neat and dressy in shape and finish as to command the approval of the wearer and admiration of all observers. SEAMEN FIGHT SEA'S RUSH

Battleship Louisiana Is Saved by Bravery of Her Crew

Newport, R. I., July 3.—The bravery of the engine room crew of the battleship Louisiana helped the vessel out of a dngerous predicament when a valve bonnet blew off, flooding the starboard engine room with water. Incidentally the accident gave Captain Potts, who was dismissed by the naval "plucking board" two days ago, and who retires today, a memorable experience at the end of his long years of service.

Swirling waters carried men off their feet, forced them against the machinery, threatened to drown them, but they stuck to their work. At times the sea in the engine room rose to a height of six feet, but still the officers and men worked on, now swimming a few strokes, now grasping a bar or wheel overhead. Pumps had been started, but the water continued to pour in in greater volume than could be disposed of.

After a long struggle the pumps disposed of more water than was entering, and then the battling force was able to cram into the hole a waste can, heavily packed. This was jacked securely, and the threatened water was stopped.

When the accident occurred, the battleship was without steam, only one boiler being in use for minor purposes while the engines were being overhalued. As a result, tugs had to be called upon to tow the battleship.

SEVEN MEN STABBED

Abuse of Lincoln Arouses Veteran and Free Fight Results

Gettysburg, Pa., July 3.—Seven men were stabbed last night in a fight in the dining room of the Gettysburg hotel, as a result of a fight which started when several men aroused the anger of an old veteran by abusing Lincoln.

Several of the wounded men are in a serious condition. The state constabulary are making efforts to find the men who did the stabbing.

According to all the information the authorities could gather, the fight started suddenly and was over in a few minutes. It began when the dining room was full of people and caused a panic among the scores of guests.

The old veteran, who was unhurt and disappeared in the melee, heard the slighting remarks about Lincoln. He jumped to his feet and began to defend the martyred president and berated his detractors. The men who were stabbed jumped to the defense of the veteran when the others closed in.

Knives were out in a second and the room was in an uproar. It was all over before the rest of the men in the room could get their breath, and the men responsible for it all had got away.

M'REYNOLDS OUSTS M'NAB SUPPORTER

Federal Investigator Herrington Turned Out of Office

San Francisco, July 3.—Clayton Herrington, investigator for the United States department of justice, with headquarters in this city, has been dismissed from the federal service by Attorney General McReynolds.

Judge Herrington had been under suspension since early last week for having telegraphed to President Wilson a demand that the attorney general be ousted from office because of the action he took in the Diggs-Caminetti and Western Fuel company cases, which resulted in the resignation of United States District Attorney McNab.

Herrington was active in looking up evidence in the Diggs-Caminetti white slavery case. His demand for the removal of McReynolds was grounded upon the latter's order for postponement of the trial.

YACHTERS LIKE NEW CHALLENGE

Lipton's Acceptance For Cup Race Boosts the Sport.

WILL NOT BUILD FREAKS.

Yachtsmen to Have Three Seventy-five Footers Which Can Be Raced For Years After—Will Revive Yatching In America.

Members of the New York Yacht club and other Corinthian organizations are well pleased with the news of the acceptance of Sir Thomas Lipton's challenge for the America's cup. It means a renewed interest in yachting and also the development of a new type of racing vessel, and as such the races which are to be held in 1914 will be more than welcome.

The first challenge, which was sent through the Royal Ulster Yacht club, stipulated that the defender should be a seventy-five foot yacht. It was received by the New York Yacht club on March 6 and declined within a week. A new proposal made by Sir Thomas, sent on March 20, also was declined on March 24. On April 8 the Irish baronet sent an unconditional challenge. At a meeting of the New York Yacht club on April 25 this was considered, and an America's cup committee appointed, with power to carry on the negotiations which have resulted in its final acceptance.

There is considerable talk of the coming contest at the New York Yacht club's home, and the trend of it all shows the keenest interest. One member said:

"The challenge of Sir Thomas will surely revive yachting all over the country. I should not be surprised if three seventy-five foot yachts are built to race for the honor of being selected to defend the cup, and they are sure to be boats of which we may all be proud—not freaks that are of no use after the race except for the scrap heap."

William Gardner, the yacht designer, whose sloops Medora, Michicago and Gray Jacket won about everything in their respective classes last season, said:

"I am pleased to hear that the club has accepted the challenge. It is not so much a moral victory for Sir Thomas as it is for the sporting spirit in the New York Yacht club. We shall see some fine racing. When Sir Thomas originally wanted to race under what he considered the new rule—which, by the way, is not the universal rule at all, but the Atlantic coast conference rule—it was then in embryo.

"Since then it has crystallized into concrete form, and a cup defender produced under it will be the finest yacht of her size afloat. These boats, being built of Tobin bronze, will, of course, cost more than the ordinary boat of that size, but the money will not be wasted, for they can be raced for years after as a class with good results."

Of course there is nothing definite yet known of who will come forward to build the defender. It is said that a syndicate is in process of formation with the avowed aim of furnishing the backing for one sloop, and a well known yachtsman who has been interested in the building of other defenders is rumored to be planning to launch another of his own.

GOOD UMPIRES ARE SCARCE.

Officials This Year Not Up to Standard—Close Plays Cause Complaints.

One reason which is given for the numerous complaints which are being made against the umpires is that there have been an unusual number of close plays this season. But this is hardly a good excuse for the reason that most of the errors the umpires have made have been on plays that did not require abnormal eyesight or judgment to decide.

The fact of the matter seems to be that none of the young crop of officials is quite up to the standard, and the shortcomings have an effect on the veterans who work with them, thus bringing about a very unsatisfactory condition. But the fact remains that for some reason or other the umpiring in the American league this season has been far below that of former seasons.

PLANS INTERNATIONAL RACE.

Coach Pat O'Dea of the Leland Stanford university oarsmen is booming a project to pull off an international college boat race on Oakland estuary in 1915.

O'Dea, who is a graduate of Melbourne college, Australia, and also of the University of Wisconsin, says he has heard from the various American universities on the project, in which they are acquiescent, and also from various European universities, and that there is no doubt that the rowing races can be arranged.

Pitcher Pape Is Dissatisfied.

Larry Pape, a pitcher with the world's champions last year, but who has been with Buffalo this season, says he will give up baseball rather than be shunted off to a club in the Canadian league.

MAY LOCK CAR BARNS

Boston Elevated Said to Have Adopted "Non-Resistance" Policy

Boston, July 3.—The policy of non-resistance will be used by the Boston Elevated, it is reported, should its employes, who take a strike vote today at two sessions and another at 1:30 tomorrow morning, decide to walk out.

No cars will be run. No attempts will be made to import strike-breakers. The company will simply put its cars in the barns and then lock the barns. The public will simply have to walk or hire vehicles.

DR. ANDERSON INTERESTED.

The medical world is deeply interested at the present time in the method of Dr. George A. Suffa for correcting what is known as cross eyes. The old method was what was known as tucking. Dr. Suffa and his first assistant Dr. John H. Anderson of this city have devised two instruments with which the operation is now performed. One of these instruments measures the strength of the muscle, and the other is known as the "Suffa stitch." The former determines how much of the muscle may be taken up and the latter does the work. The operation is very simple and does not require over fifteen seconds.

STORM BRINGS NEEDED RELIEF

Sweltering War Veterans Begin to Enjoy Themselves

MILITARY DAY AT BIG TENT

Building of Two Battleships For Every One Laid Down by Japan Is Advocated—Blue and Gray Survivors of Bloody Angle Charge Reenact Scene and Shake Hands

Gettysburg, Pa., July 3.—A roaring storm swept down out of the Blue Ridge over ahe plateou of Gettysburg, brinning needed relief to thousands of veterans in blue and gray who have sweltered for four days in an atmosphere that would do credit to a fireless cooker but is dangerous in a city of 50,000 old and weary men.

For more than a half hour the rain came pouring down upon the sun-cracked and wind-swept encampment ground. The thermometer dropped with wonderful agility and the lightning cleared the air of its humidity.

Last night the veterans were really able to enjoy themselves for the first time since their arrival, although the ground was slippery, the roads a half-inch deep in mud that once was dust and the grass was wet and uncomfortable.

Yesterday was military day at the big tent, but comparatively few veterans appeared to listen to the speech-making and to hear the bands play "Turkey in the Straw," "Old Black Joe" and other well known airs.

Colonel Andrew Cowan of Louisville, Ky., acted as presiding officer of the day. Cowan was an officer in a union battery which played a part in the Gettysburg campaign. He brought the veterans to their feet when he began to praise the officers of the regular army who conduct the big camp.

Cowan turned to the navy and Japanese situation. "We ought to build two battleships for every one laid down by Japan," he said, and the veterans cheered again and again.

"The people of the sea coast cities ought not to be left without protection. We ought to be prepared to demand peace."

Other speakers of the day were Major General Brooke of Pennsylvania, Sergeant Scarborough of North Carolina and Lieutenant Governor Burchard of Rhode Island, representing the armies of the north and the south. Barry Bulkley of Washington read Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

One of the most remarkable figures in the camp was that of General Funkhauser of Virginia, who is 76 years old, but who was vigorous enough in the hot sun to hunt up the headquarters tent of Brigadier General Liggett and pay his respects. The old confederate general who fought all through the war delighted the general of the newer army and his subordinate officers with his stories.

Thousands of veterans left the camp and Gettysburg yesterday for their homes and thousands more probably will leave today. The army officers in charge threw a cordon over the roads leading out and examined the baggage. Many government blankets supplied for the encampment were discovered and removed.

So many cases have been reported of veterans losing their return railroad tickets and the consequent distress because of the inability to purchase transportation that Governor Tener announced that the state of Pennsylvania will pay the return fare of all veterans who have lost their tickets, no matter in what part of the United States they reside.

One of the picturesque events of the celebration occurred today at the Bloody Angle, when the Philadelphia brigade of the union army and survivors of Pickett's division formed on opposite sides of the stone wall where the charge stopped. They charged as best they could with their burden of years, but when they reached the wall they stopped and shook hands. On this spot they picked a location for a monument which they hope to have congress erect there.

FOR BREACH OF PROMISE

Markham Suit Costs Marquis of Northampton $250,000 and Costs

London, July 3.—Two hundred and fifty thousand dollars and all the costs of the suit is the price the Marquis of Northampton has agreed to pay to settle the suit for breach of promise brought against him by Miss Daisy Markham, the actress. The cost will amount to a considerable sum on account of the number of distinguished counsel engaged to plead for the opposing parties.

The marquis only recently succeeded to the title at the age of 27. The plaintiff is well known both in America and the British Isles under her stage name, her real name being Violet Moss.

The settlement was announced when the case was called in the high court of justice in a courtroom crowded with fashionable women and actresses, who had come in anticipation of listening to some interesting evidence.

ROOSEVELT IS FOR GREAT NAVY

At Least Two Battleships Should Be Built Annually

NATIONAL DISASTER IS INVITED

By Senators and Representatives Who Oppose Naval Program—Upbuilding of Navy a Policy Which Should Rise Above Partisanship—Why China Suffered Dismemberment

Newport, R. I., July 3.—The declaration that the Progressive party stood for honesty and justice to big business, on the part of ex-Senator Albert J. Beveridge, a plea for justice and courtesy to other nations, while always maintaining a preparedness for eventualities by having an adequate navy, on the part of Theodore Roosevelt, were the features of the navy day program of the Progressive party's conference here.

Mr. Roosevelt dealt with senators and congressmen who oppose appropriations for at least two battleships annually.

"Every senator or congressman, whatever his party, should be regarded as unfaithful to the public interest, as false to the country, if he fails heartily to support the program of providing every year for two battleships of the most efficient type, and for whatever other vessels and munitions of war are necessary as accompaniments of these two battleships," Roosevelt declared.

"Every senator and congressman who voted against appropriations for two battleships a year stands on a level with the men in congress who voted against fortifying Hawaii and our stations in the West Indies. These men are unfit representatives of the American people and they by their actions invite national disaster and humiliation.

"There is no worse type of public servant than those congressmen who first do all they can to prevent the American people from being able to uphold their interest and honor in event of war, and then do all they can with wanton and ignorant folly to plunge us into war."

Roosevelt declared there are certain policies so vital to the welfare of the country that they rise above questions of ordinary party difference and insisted that the upbuilding of the navy is one of these questions.

"All sincere friends of international peace and well-being; all sincere patriots and good Americans, all men who are devoted to national honor and interest and to the permanent well-being of our fellow-countrymen must, if they really think the matter out, stand for maintaining our navy at least at its present point of efficiency."

Roosevelt pointed out that the republic of China has suffered partial dismemberment "purely because she permitted herself to become impotent in war, so that she had no navy and no adequate army.

"If the American people deliberately choose to follow in China's footsteps doubtless some decades would pass before we would suffer to the extent of China," said Roosevelt, "but long before that time had come we should have to abandon all pretenses of upholding the Monroe doctrine; we should have to abandon Panama and Alaska and every insular possession, and we should have to surrender all right to say what immigrants shall and what shall not be admitted to our country and the terms upon which they shall come here and become citizens and hold land."

"Navy day" brought thousands of visitors to Newport to hear Roosevelt speak twice, partake of a Rhode Island clambake, listen to speeches by several other Progressive leaders and witness a drill and review of the naval apprentices at the naval training station.

When Roosevelt had concluded his speech, the crowd moved from the tent to the convention hall nearby, where the clambake was served. The after-dinner program included political addresses by Colonel Roosevelt, Rev. Dr. Perin of Boston, Mr. Beveridge, Mrs. Maude H. Elliott, Mr. Walker, R. W. Peckham and B. F. Fridge.

BATHS ROTTEN AND SINKING

Belated Discovery of a Lawrence City Official

ARE CLOSED FOR THE SEASON

Confession of Superintendent of Buildings Creates Amazement, Coming After Eleven Lives Have Been Sacrificed—Alderman Had Liability Insurance Discontinued

Lawrence, Mass., July 3.—All of the city bathhouses on the Merrimac river have been closed for an indefinite period, by order of the city government, as a direct result of the fatal crash of the gangway of bathhouse No. 1, which sent eleven boys to watery graves. Investigation has shown that they are unsafe and waterlogged.

Constant usage for thirteen years has made them unfit. The timbers in the bottom of them are decayed and the houses are settling deeper in the water. In their present condition it is impossible to keep them afloat as they should be.

Superintendent of Public Buildings Battershill made a report to this effect in a letter which was read to the city council by Mayor Scanlon. Immediate action was taken by the council in closing every one of the bathhouses.

News of the official confession by Battershill that the bathhouses were rotten and sinking created a profound impression when it circulated through the city. Indignation that they should be allowed to fall into such a state was heard on every hand.

The fact that the bathhouses were closed on the hottest day of the year also helped to stir up widespread feeling in the city. Every bathhouse had its full quota of youngsters splashing in the water when the "shut-down" order arrived.

Parents of children, especially those living in the congested district, were wrathy when told that the only relief their children could obtain from the heat had been denied them.

City officials learned with amazement that Alderman Bradbury discontinued the liability insurance on the city bathhouses last February. The bathhouses had been insured ever since they were put into commission. The maximum insurance on them was $20,000.

Edward L. Arundel, agent for the liability company which had the insurance, confirmed the report. He said Bradbury had ordered the insurance dropped. If the insurance had been in force, Arundel said, his company would have been only too willing to defray the funeral expenses of the little victims instead of having the money come out of the city treasury.

It was Bradbury who secured the appointment of Battershill, who has direct charge of the bathhouses, as superintendent of pubic buildings last January. James Flanagan, former superintendent, was removed from the position and Battershill, who was a political lieutenant of Bradbury, was named to succeed him.

A dozen local lawyers are preparing to bring suits in behalf of bereaved parents against the city. One father has already notified the officials that he will not accept any part of the $100 the city government appropriated to help defray the expenses of the funeral of each of the eleven boys drowned.

Public indignation over the alleged negligence which brought about the fatal crash is increasing, and the entire city is now clamoring for punishment of the responsible officials.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR WREN

Keene, N. H., July 3.—John H. Wrenn, who was found guilty of murdering J. S. Hamilton, was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Pike. A stay of execution of ten days was granted by the court to permit the filing of a motion for a new trial for Wren.

Hamilton was a railroad construction foreman in charge of work at Hinsdale, and Wren was one of the men in his employ. The murder was committed at Hinsdale, Feb. 5 last.

There has been a strike of engineers and drivers.

Alleged Firebug Held In $5000

Somerville, Mass., July 3.—William A. Crombie was held in $5000 for the Middlesex superior court, by Judge Wentworth of the local court on a charge of setting a fire in the cellar of the house at 337 Beacon street. It was testified that Crombie had confessed that he set this fire and a number of others.

The Kitchen Cupboard

VEGETABLE MELANGES.

WHEN there are cold vegetables in the house they need not be thrown away, but may be used up in various ways.

Salads, hashes and vegetable pies may be made up with the odds and ends of cold vegetables that most housewives throw away. This way the high cost of living may be greatly reduced.

Sweet Potatoes and Carrots.

Browned Sweet Potatoes.—Take cold boiled sweet potatoes, peel them and cut into lengthwise slices. Put three tablespoonfuls of dripping in a good sized frying pan, dust the slices with salt and pepper and put them in the hot fat. When browned on one side turn and brown on the other.

Diced Carrots With Cream Sauce.—Take cold carrots and cut into half inch dice. Pour over them a cream sauce made of one cupful of hot milk poured gradually over one tablespoonful each of butter and flour rubbed together. Add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and a half saltspoonful of pepper.

Parsnips and Cauliflowers.

Parsnip Fritters.—Take five medium sized cold parsnips and mash them fine. Add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of flour and a beaten egg. Make into small cakes oval in shape and flattened on the sides and fry in deep fat or saute in a frying pan until a delicate brown.

Fricasseed Cauliflower.—Break into sprays what is left of a cooked cauliflower. Season with salt, red pepper and grated cheese. Have ready a good light frying batter, made with two ounces of flour, a dessertspoonful of olive oil, half a gill of warm water, a dessertspoonful of grated cheese, a seasoning of salt and pepper and the stiffly whipped white of an egg. Dip the cauliflower in this and fry a golden brown in boiling fat. Drain well and serve dusted with cheese and red pepper.

137 years ago this Nation was born, and among the men who helped to make this the greatest republic in the world were men Quincy born and Quincy bred.

50 years ago at Gettysburg men from the north went nto the furnace and welded together again at white heat the roken bands of national unity.

Great men were they, glorious in destiny!

The guns are silent except for the birds who have built their nests in them; and the swords are beaten into plow-shares. War is no more, but its heroisms and glories remain in a long thanksgiving of peace.

The men of Gettysburg from all over the land go once again to worship as brothers at the Nation's Shrine and to rej oice in a common heritage.

This great Western World of broad and most fruitful acreage, vast industries and enlarging commerce comes to a standstill this week to offer with increasing reverence a half-century salute—

For—the men of Gettysburg are passing on —passing on

An Advertisement Is a Challenge

By HOLLAND.

THE man who advertises is fearless. He courts the light. He dares all and sundry to put him to the test. "This is what I offer," he says in effect. "Can you beat it? Can you do better elsewhere? Make comparisons and then do business with me only if you find it is to your advantage."

There is nothing hidden about the advertiser. He stands up for himself, for his goods, for his reputation, for his town. He wants everybody to know him, to know his methods of business and his manner of treating customers.

This makes it safe to do business with him. Having spent much money making his name known, he cannot afford to have it tarnished, and he will go much more than halfway in an effort to correct a misunderstanding that is not of his making. He wants to tell more than the bare truth, to do more than what is really square.

DOOMED TO A LIVING DEATH.

French Convicts Leave Hope Behind When They Enter Cayenne.

Cayenne—red pepper to the world at large, hell to the few thousand of convicts transported to this isolated northeastern corner of equatorial South America. Here, it was rumored, existed one of the world's most antiquated and revolting penal systems, where thousands of men are exiled and doomed to a living death. Men from French Guiana had intimated conditions which vied with the cruelties of the old convict ships.

Groups of convicts lounged about or lay sick and incapacitated on the verandas. At night the barred iron door of each dormitory is locked, and outside paces a guard, revolver in hand. Sometimes under cover of darkness the inmates settle feuds. Occasionally to establish leaders rival gangs fight with cudgels, knives and even paving stones. Some disabled, others dead, the most indomitable are reconciled and form a tyrannical secret society.

Many a poor wretch dreads the night hours, and one suspected of informing may be set upon by an enraged pack. Occasionally murder is committed in profound silence, and daylight finds a dead or dying convict in the passageway or entrance. Questioning is useless, and few guards will risk life in entering the barracks when smothered cries and cursings warn them of internal strife.

All the men I talked with were well disposed toward me, one in particular—a tall, well educated man with a pair of dark rimmed glasses and large eyes fearfully strained through inability to secure proper lenses.

"You must not lose hope," I told a group and almost swallowed my own words. "Hope!" burst out the rich, tremulous voice of the tall man. "It is always the same; there is no hope here." "No; no hope here!" was the echoed murmur of his comrades.—Charles Wellington Furlong in Harper's Magazine.

VARICOSE VEINS.

Their Causes and Effects and the Treatment They Require.

A varicose vein is an enlarged and twisted vein, generally in the leg. It is caused by stagnation of the blood. Often the patient has a hereditary predisposition to varicose veins or he has a weak heart, with a consequent tendency to sluggish venous circulation.

Anything that interferes with the flow of blood through the veins may bring on an attack. Pressure from a tight garter and very severe muscular exertion are often exciting causes. Persons who are obliged to stand for several hours at a time, like policemen, washerwomen and saleswomen, are often subject to this trouble. Under ordinary conditions the blood in the legs must run up hill constantly in order to regain the heart. In the case of those who stand most of the day the blood has to work hard hour after hour in order to overcome the force of gravity, and as a result the veins gradually enlarge and harden.

In mild cases of varicose veins, especially in young and otherwise healthy people, the symptoms are very slight. There is a feeling of weight in the leg and a dull ache toward the end of the day. The ache is soon relieved by the patient's resting with the leg somewhat raised so that the blood can flow back more easily. Sometimes painful cramps complicate the trouble, and the cramp is likely to return again and again until life becomes a burden.

More serious complications are thrombosis (or the clotting of the blood in the vein) and phlebitis (or inflammation of a vein). Often a form of eczema appears in the skin of the leg, or an ulcer may arise. When varicose veins are very troublesome surgical treatment is advisable, but the milder cases can be much relieved by rest and proper bandaging.—Youth's Companion.

Varlet and Valet.

"We have only ourselves, or, rather, our forefathers, to blame for the trouble about the pronunciation of 'valet,'" says the London Chronicle. "If they had stuck to 'varlet' there would have been no difficulty. 'Valet' and 'varlet' are the same word, meaning originally just a boy, the diminutive of 'vassal,' a man. Unfortunately when our ancestors applied a word meaning a boy to signify a servant they went on to make it bear a scornful sense. And so 'varlet' degenerated hopelessly, just as did 'knave,' which is simply the German 'knabe,' boy."

Indisputable Evidence.

"Say, father," said little Fred, "did you ever have another wife besides mother?"

"Why, certainly not," said the father. "How do you happen to ask such a question, my boy?"

"Well, father," continued the boy, "I saw in the family Bible that you married Anne Domira, 1862, and I know that wasn't mother, for her name was Mary Parsons when she was a girl."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not Too Pushing.

"Madam, I must congratulate you on having such a pushing young fellow for a husband."

"Yes; George does very well with the lawn mower, but I have a time with him about the baby carriage."—Baltimore American.

Eating and Talking.

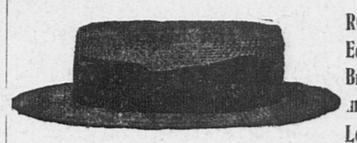

We all eat too much, and it is little wonder—there is so much to eat. And we all talk too much, because there is so much to talk about.—New Orleans Picayune.

He is educated who is master of himself and of his task.—Peabody.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 154 QUINCY MASS., SATURDAY EVENING JULY 5, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

QUINCY'S CELEBRATION WAS ON A GRAND SCALE

A FOURTH OF JULY LONG TO BE REMEMBERED

Thousands of People Out to See the Big Morning Parades

Sports and Fireworks Were Also Big Features

The citizens of Quincy and especially Mayor Stone and the members of the executive committee of the Fourth of July Celebration Association have every reason to congratulate themselves on the success of the celebration in Quincy on the Fourth. It was an ideal day, although hot, and there was an absence as far as known of the loss of fingers and other injuries by the premature explosion of fireworks. The morning was delightfully cool, and while some thought it might be a fore runner of a cool day, the wise guys shook their heads and said hot and it certainly was hot.

Things were doing in City Square from early morning, and about the time the first parade was to pass through City Square there were thousands of citizens astir. Every incoming street car also brought more many coming from Atlantic where they had been to see the parade which was held there earlier in the morning.

Mayor Stones reception committee were on hand early and saw that the officers of the battleship, Michigan were looked after. Capt. Capehart and Mrs. Capehart were the first of the battleship party to arrive, and they were registered at the Greenleaf chambers.

Automobiles went to Houghs Neck and brought others to City Square, so that there were a dozen or more of the ships officers on the reviewing stand when the parades passed in review. Several of the officers of ship had their wives with them. The battleship leaves Quincy Bay at 5 o'clock Sunday morning for Mexican waters where they will remain all summer, and it was natural that the wives of the officers should desire to see their betterhalfs before the long cruise. Some of the ladies came from Washington and New York, while still others came from Virginia and more distant states.

While waiting for the parade Mayor Stone introduced Fred Atwood, a recent graduate of the High school, who read the Declaration of Independence.

The police detail about the reviewing stand was in charge of Chief Burrell and Inspector Goodhue, but it was a good natured crowd to handle and little difficulty was experienced.

It was about 9.30 when word was passed along that the automobile parade was coming and as the last car in this parade was coming through Maple street the Chief Marshal and staff of the feature parade was rounding the corner of Hancock street near the Bethany church so that the two parades passed the reviewing stand as one large parade. Both parades were much better than last year and the applause that greeted all of the features was well deserved.

Just before the first parade passed, several automobiles dashed up having on board several of the Grand Army veterans who were given seats on the grand stand, and an incoming train a few minutes later brought Comrades Lennon and Lapham who had just returned from the reunion at Gettysburg.

FEATURE PARADE OF THE MORNING

Without question the feature parade this year was the best ever seen in the city. While there were perhaps not as many features in the horrible division as some years, what was lost here was made up by increased numbers in the other divisions. This parade was scheduled to move at 8 o'clock, but it was half an hour later before the Buglar Johnson on the staff of Chief Marshal Capt. George E. Adams sounded the notes that put the line in motion. The first division formed on Independence avenue with right resting on Franklin street while the other divisions formed on streets radiating from Independence Square. The parade moved in the following order:

Mounted Police, under Capt. Daniel R. McKay.

Chief Marshal, Capt. George E. Adams.

Chief of Staff, Maj. Fred E. Jones.

Bugler, J. F. Johnson.

Aids, Capt. George A. Wardwell, Albert Keating, William S. Young, John L. Hamilton, F. A. Austin, Sergt. Starboard of the 8th regiment.

Tenth Co., C. A. C., Brockton, Capt. George E. Horton, Lieut. A. S. Reed.

WILLIAMS—FRANCIS.

A pretty little wedding took place Tuesday evening June 24th, when Miss Annie Josephine Francis became the bride of Edward Percy Williams, both of Wollaston. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath, Ph. D., at the home of Mrs. George P. Smith, sister of the groom. The decorations consisted of cat brier, daisies, roses and honeysuckle. A wedding bell of lilies was suspended from a floral arch.

The bride was becomingly attired in white charmeuse and silk lace, with a veil of tulle fastened with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley The bridesmaid Miss Cherry L. Newell of Wollaston was attired in a gown of pink crepe meteor and carried pink carnations. The best man was Byam M. Bean of Malden.

After a brief honeymoon the bridal couple will reside at 92 Brook street, Wollaston where they will be at home to their friends after September the first.

RICHARD'S MEDALS AWARDED

The winner of the L. S. Richards medal this year at the Marshfield High school graduation was Miss Grace Leonard of Marshfield Hills and the grammar school Herman Kent of Marshfield. The winner of the medal for the best original essay on total abstinence was given to Miss Dorris Jenne of North Marshfield who is only about twelve years of age and a grammer school graduate. Her essay was read at the High school graduation.

Mr. Richards has given the high and grammar schools medals for scholarships for ten years and the temperance medal for three years. A large audience filled the town hall for the exercises. There is a great struggle every year for the medals. The judges are the superintendent of schools and the school committee.,

SHIPYARD CHANGE.

Papers were passed Wednesday transferring the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation, of which Charles M. Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel Co. is the guiding hand. The new companies assumes all liabilities and takes over all assets. The transfer assures the continuation of the premier shipbuilding company in America and means probably a new lease of life at the Fore River yards and many increased advantages to Quincy and the future development of the Port of Boston.

CHILDRENS ENTERTAINMENT.

The entertainment for the children at Kincaide's theatre, and the Auditorium were carried out as planned. Mayor Stone addressed the children at both places. Then the curtain went up and a large American flag was shown. This was a signal for the children to rise which they did without any prompting, and extending the right hand they repeated the allegiance to the flag in a manner that sent a thrill running through every older person present. The entertainment closed with all rising and singing America.

FOURTH OF JULY

AUTOS PRETTILY DECORATED

While the Automobile parade was a disappointment to those who gathered in City Square and along the route in Ward Two, it was much enjoyed by people along the route at Wollaston Park, Atlantic, Wollaston, West Quincy and South Quincy. The parade was scheduled to turn from School street into Quincy avenue, and go to Newcomb Square and Quincy Point, but instead the pathfinder took Elm street and others took Hancock street and Quincy avenue, which split the parade.

On Elm street the Automobile parade and the City parade met head on, and the former turned into Bigelow street and went to City Square via Revere road and Washington street.

Over the greater part of the Automobile parade, there were in line full fifty cars, many of them being prettily and artistically decorated. Some in color schemes, others in red white and blue, some in Rambler roses, and others in flags and flowers. Ladies predominated in the cars, and invariably were gowned in white.

AUTOMOBILE PRIZES.

Eleven prizes in all were awarded in the automobile parade. It was originally intended to give two prizes for best decorated cars, and two for grotesque decorated cars, but the judges decided that there were no grotesque cars and were pleased to award four prizes for best decorated cars. All the prizes were large hand some silver cups and were awarded as follows:

Best decorated car,—Wollaston Centre Garage; second prize to Joseph F Prout; third prize to H. E. Sprague fourth prize to Miss Edith Chapman

Best impersonation of either civil or military spirit,—J. Robbie; second prize to Mrs. Rred M. Rollins.

Best Commercial car,—Rice & Hutchins, shoe manufacturers at Braintree; second prize to Wollaston Centre Garage, with load of crushed stone; honorable mention to W. G Shaw, house furnishers.

To Quincy agent having largest number of one make of cars in line for which he is agent,—Wollaston Centre Garage, for 14 Rambler cars second prize to C. P. Gould for Ford cars; honorable mention to George F Spooner for Mighty Michigan 40.

The most valuable prize of all, the Campbell cup, for the best effect was awarded to E. E. Cox.

The judges were Frank F. Prescott of the Daily Ledger, Miss Clara Thayer of Wollaston, and George E. Bean of Atlantic.

GREAT INTEREST IN THE SPORTS

Success attended the efforts of the Fourth of July committee to furnish a premier list of track events on the Merrymount oval.

Three sensational finishes marked the events. J. Phelan and Fred Kinsbury tied in the 440 yard dash. Frank Bruce lost the three mile to Domenico Fasci, a fellow countryman and Walter Wyman took the 100 yard dash in 10 seconds, nosing out Prout in the last four yards.

Phelan and Kingsbury have been training for the 440 yard dash consistently and although the judges disagreed and Dr. J. Gardner Smith, the referee declared it a dead beat, the general impression expressed by people claiming to be watching the mark gave Phelan the race. A wordy argument ensued at the finish between Phelan and his opponent's admirers.

The three mile was one of the prettiest races ever run. Seven started with the gun. Five bunched with two Italians trailing. Bruce who represented Italy in the Olympics at Stockholm and Domenico Fasci alternately led after the second mile. On the second last turn Fasci was leading when Bruce sprinted ahead. Fasci fought his way to the front and crossed the line ten feet ahead. Bruce was in fine form but shot his bolt too soon.

Walter Wyman of Brown University took the dash in 10 seconds, nosing out Everett Prout in less than ten feet. Phelan did not qualify, much to the surprise of his friends who claim that Wyman stole the start.

The day was ideal and a crowd witnessed the events. Valuable prizes were awarded the winners. The summary:

Second heat, won by Ted Keohane; Everett Prout, second.

880 yard dash,—won by Fred Kingsbury, Quincy High school; Fred Maguira, second; S. Tite, Atlantic A. A., third. Time 2m. 6s.

1 mile novice,—won by J. Linden; J. Frizetti, second; T. Wilson, N. Weymouth A. C. third. Time 5m. 18s.

440 yard dash,—tie between J. Phelan, North Dorchester A. A. and Fred Kingsberry, Quincy High school; Everett Prout, B. A. A. second. Time 54s.

Boys race—won by Fred Wallace, Willard school; D. Driscoll, Wollaston, second; J. Sears, Massachusetts Field school, third. Time 48 4-5s.

Three mile handicap,—won by Domenico Fasci, Italian A. C; Frank Bruce, Italian A. C., second; J. Pasenen, Finnish Temperance Society, third. Time 18m. 1 3-5s.

J. Phelan who tied with Fred Kingsbury in the 440 yard dash at Merrymount oval withdrew all claim to the trophy after the referees decision. The cup was given to Kingsbury. It is understood that each challenged for a personal trophy.

BASEBALL ON MANY DIAMONDS

Four base ball games under the auspices of the Fourth of July Committee had surprising endings. The Colonials beat the Orients, 5 to 0 at the Ward Three playground, while the other South Quincy representation the Redmen, lost at Ward Four to the Station Outing Club, 7 to 3. All winners will be awarded purses.

At Merrymount park, the Makarias beat the Fore River Apprentices in a pitchers' battle. Andrews twirled for the winners and Fred Grethe for the Apprentices. The game was well played.

The ball team of the Michigan lost to the South Quincy at Merrymount Park, 5 to 3, in a game replete with fine ball playing. The jackies uncorked a burst of speed early in the game which pointed to a victory but they slowed down and were at the mercy of Monkey Woods, the winning pitcher.

RECEPTION TO THE OFFICERS

During the afternoon everybody was permitted to seek their own pleasure as there was no official function until 5 o'clock. At this hour a dinner was given to the officers of the battleship, and their ladies at Union hall, the dinner also being attended by the members of the reception committee and the executive committee of the association. Covers were laid for 65 and a delightful dinner was the result.

Mayor Stone called for a rising toast to the President of the United States, Old Glory, the Navy department, and the good ship Michigan, and after the dinner Capt. Capehart was introduced.

Capt. Capehart said that he was a man of few words. He was delighted with having been detailed to Quincy, and all had had a pleasant time, so that everybody on shipboard was glad the Navy Department had detailed them to Quincy. He should leave Quincy with a feeling of regret that he could not remain longer.

James H. Elcock of the Finance Committe spoke of how much pleasure it had given the citizens to have the battleship and officers with us today.

Maj. F. E. Jones spoke of the visit to the battleship by the committee Thursday and of the fine body of men that composed the ship's officers and crew. The officer who met the committee at the Yacht Club float was one of the finest looking men he ever saw. When the battleship was reached he found that this officer simply typified what they all were, and he had felt that if time of need ever came the officers and crew could be depended upon. In closing he said that the City of Quincy felt highly honored by having the ship here and at being able to give the officers and crew a little attention.

Commander Althouse was the last speaker, who said that the Captain always did all the speaking. He however thanked the Major for his kind words about the crew. The Michigan certainly had a fine set of officers and men and they could be depended upon. Of course there were some who must remain aboard to look after the machinery and he felt sorry for them.

Three rousing cheer and a tiger were then given for Capt. Capehart and the Michigan and the dinner closed with all rising and singing America. Music during the dinner was furnished by an orchestra.

As the party left the hall a special car was in waiting to take all to Merrymount park for the fireworks.

FIREWORKS WERE THE BEST YET

Without question the fireworks were the most elaborate that Quincy has ever seen, and it is safe to say that George F. Elcock, the chairman of this committee, will not be called upon to refund any contribution to dissatisfied contributors.

The first set piece, an American flag was set off by Capt. Capehart and from then on for an hour the air was full of bombs and rockets which exploding in the air illuminated the sky with millions of bright colored stars.

Words are hardly adequate to describe the different numbers on the long program, for they were all beautiful. The Niagara Falls set piece and the set piece which gave off a powerful white light which made everything as light as day, and afforded those in front a view of the thousands that had gathered about the park beggar description. Best of all was the closing salute, which resembled a terrific explosion. So deafening was the reports that the very ground shook, and some even thought there had been an underground explosion. As the last of these reports sounded and the echo died out in the distance came the set piece "Good Night."

It is hard to say just how many were gathered at Merrymount park, but there were thousands and then some more. The automobiles, some of whose owners think they are entitled to have their car occupy a position as near the enclosure as possible, found this year that Chairman Elcock had made other arrangements and that automobiles were obliged to park at the extreme northerly end of the park, and for this he has the thanks of those who are numbered with the non car owners.

Hundreds of street cars were in waiting on Hancock street and while all went loaded many preferred to walk and not a few went to Music hall and attended the dance of the jackies.

JACKIES GIVE A DANCE

Many of the fair sex in and about Quincy today are wearing a black band, across which in gilt are the letters and word "U. S. S. Michigan." These were the souvenirs which were given to every woman who attended the dance given at Music hall the evening of the Fourth by the Jackies of the battleship Michigan.

The jackies proved themselves past masters at the art of entertaining and the evening was one that will long be remembered. Of course during the first of the evening there were many at the fireworks exhibition but after these were over they began to gather at Music hall and to take an active part in these festivities.

Among the first to arrive after the fireworks was Capt. E. E. Capehart and Mrs. Capehart, with Mayor Stone and Mrs. Stone. There were also several of the other officers of the ship present, and none seemed more pleased to see the jackies having a good time than did the Captain and these same officers.

It was the intention of the jackies to issue a general invitation to the public to attend the dance, but time did not permit. However anyone who applied was admitted and everything was carried out in a perfectly orderly manner.

The decorations were rather unique. Across the hall at the rear of the platform in large gilt letters on a blue background was "U. S. S. Michigan." In addition to this the hall was prettily decorated with the international code flags not forgetting the Stars and Stripes and the Naval Jack.

The dance orders were unique in their make up, and it might be mentioned was the work of some of the jackies, for they maintain a printing plant on board the battleship. The first number on the program of 20 numbers was a two step, called "At the Devil's Ball" and was dedicated to Mayor Stone. Other numbers were dedicated to the Captain, First Lieutenant, Navigator, Ordinance Officer, the engineers, wardroom officers, junior officers, doctor, warrant officers, city officials of Quincy, the ladies, committee, orchestra, the gents, the good ship Michigan, and the crew, as well as to the best liked officer of all, the paymaster, whose waltz was given the title "A Girlie was just made to love."

Lemonade and grape juice were served during the entire evening as were also cigarettes, while during the intermission ice cream and cake were served.

Music for the dancing was furnished by the ships orchestra of seven pieces, and it was good music.

Much of the success of the affair was due to W. A. McGunagle, an Atlantic boy attached to the vessel who worked early and late for its success and he was ably assisted by the following committee, H. L. Edwards, J. Cless, P. C. Nash, H. Kaufmann, W. A. McGunagle, E. McEvoy, S. W. Lampherc, J. T. Bossidy, J. Morgan, W. H. Abbott, J. Maynard, J. J. Mullane.

The aids were: J. Mooney, W. B. Cottingham, J. Ryan, S. Schaffer, W. A. Sweeney.

While some of the popular airs were being played for the dances, the airs were so catching that the jackies could not refrain from joining in singing the choruses.

To our way of Thinking

should be every man's first choice, but we realize that many men prefer to shop around before finally deciding on the purchase of their garments.

¶ By now, however, most men have had an opportunity to carefully inspect the offerings of others. Let us, therefore, again call your attention to the appeal of Kuppenheimer Clothes to your better judgment.

¶ First of all, they are authoritatively correct in point of style.

¶ Again, the purity of the woolens from which they are made, and the quality of the workmanship in the making, insures the service they will give; the wear you get out of them.

Finally, the price is practically whatever you care to pay.

At $18.00 the choice of styles, patterns and shades is in every sense as varied as at $20, $25 or $27. Of course you realize that the better the price, the better the clothes, but this one point is worth remembering. Whatever the price—Satisfaction is guaranteed.

Remember: If you are looking for lower priced Suits, Ours at $10, $12 and $15 are $2 to $3 less than sold elsewhere. Outing Pants $2 to $6.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

AUTO TURNS TURTLE

Bride of Less Than Two Weeks Has Her Life Crushed Out

Danbury, Conn., July 5.—Following the tragic death of her aged husband three years ago and her secret marriage to her second husband on June 23 last Mrs. James A. Benedict died here, having been crushed under one of her husband's racing automobiles when it turned turtle in a ditch near here as they were speeding along a country road at fifty miles an hour. Benedict was badly bruised in the accident.

Mrs. Benedict until June 23 was Mrs. Wynetta Brady, widow of Arthur Brady, an aged and wealthy farmer of Golden's Bridge, near White Plains, N. Y., who was shot mysteriously and killed. He was said to have been worth more than $1,000,000.

Benedict, who is 22 years old, inherited large fortunes from his father and mother and has devoted most of the last two years to the operation of speedy automobiles. His home is in Katonah, N. Y., near White Plains, and it was there he met his bride.

Two Men Killed and Two Fatally Hurt When Auto Hit Pole

Dedham, Mass., July 5.—Two men are dead, two others are dying, and a third pair are suffering from injuries as the result of the overturning of a "joy ride" automobile on Bussey street last evening.

The machine, owned by Alexander Doyle, a Dedham sculptor, who is now abroad, was being driven back from Germantown by Doyle's chauffeur when a tire blew out and the car crashed into a pole and overturned.

All the men in the party were residents of Dedham. The dead are:

George B. Daley, 26 years old, a vaudeville singer, and John P. Delaney, 40, manager of a local pool room.

Walter Green, aged 38, chauffeur for Doyle, and Daniel Mahoney, 38, conductor on the New Haven road, are dying.

HOME TRAINING.

The Domestic Menage Should Be Run on Business Basis.

HUSBANDS MUST CO-OPERATE.

Practical Sense of Common Interests Has Saved Many Families From Dissolution, Says New York Head of Bureau of Domestic Relations.

"Since women have come to play so active a part in the world of work the necessity has arisen to consider the home as a business institution," says Mrs. Ida T. Upshaw, superintendent of the bureau of domestic relations, connected with the department of charities of New York city.

"It is not necessary in the very poor homes to advise business co-operation. In these homes they are obliged to figure closely to make both ends meet. They practice every day stringent domestic economy that they have learned by hard experience. It is the homes of the middle class where training is lacking. The young women have gone from their schoolrooms directly to the office and from the office to their new homes as brides, with responsibilities thrust suddenly upon them of which they know little or nothing. Frequently they are pitifully ignorant of even the simplest household economies.

"On the husband's part the beginning is made in just as bad a way. Not one man out of ten, as a rule, has the slightest idea of what it costs to maintain a home outside of the rent and possibly the gas bill. Even in the latter item he is sometimes far wrong. The young men come from homes where things have been taken care of by a mother who has learned her lesson years ago or from hotel or boarding house where problems of the house were never presented to them.

"Co-operation is necessary in the home. When a young husband hands the wife a certain amount of money each week for the maintenance of the family and she finds it not enough the trouble begins, although the wife may have done her best. The domestic relations court is continually hearing cases based on that trouble.

"Housekeeping is the woman's field; once upon a time it was her undisputed domain. But it would be well for men to understand the science of domestic economy. If they did it would go a long way toward avoiding domestic wrangles.

"The time has come when educational institutions will recognize that a business partnership of husband and wife is necessary. Then there will be taught to men and women alike the science of domestic economy. It will not only keep their money affairs in order, but it will hold husband and wife closer together. The sense of a common interest in the home has saved many a family from dissolution.

"To caution young married people to live within their means is proper enough, but they should at the same time be taught how to economize."

Sunproof Curtains.

Sunproof curtain silk is one of the most satisfactory all the year round curtain materials. For ordinary wear for summer curtains two toned madras is attractive. It is made now in sunproof quality in good shades of copper and bronze and green, with a black thread which gives it an interesting background. Madras is especially attractive used in a white enameled bedroom furnished in mahogany.

Chintz and cretonne are always attractive when made into valance and side curtains. Pongee and several other kinds of silk can also be used for summer curtains. Any plain material can be stenciled with a design extending across the lower edge of the valance and down the sides of the side curtains with a border across their lower edge.

The Handy Washer Skate.

A new boon to the bachelor girl and tourist is seen in the shops. It is called a "washer skate" and is a small, hardwood roller fitted with a handle. A pair of these can be used at one time or the single one, which will act as a miniature washboard, with much better results.

Stockings placed in a bowl, children's small pieces or a soiled waist can be easily rubbed clean with this simple device. It is also particularly good for lingerie, stocks and the small trifles we all wear in summer.

Waists Fasten In Front.

Every one must be happy that it is fashionable to have waists button in the front.

The cotton crape waists are the success of the hour and crepe de chine waists are more popular than ever. Roman pearl buttons in all shades are used and lend a fancy touch quite in keeping with the fabric of these waists

FIRST OF ITS KIND

New Treaty Between United States and Italy Is Ratified

Washington, July 5.—Ratifications of a new treaty between the United States and Italy, the first of its kind ever negotiated by the American government, have been exchanged by Secretary Bryan and the Italian ambassador.

Under its terms the United States guarantees that an Italian subject shall have the same right as a citizen to sue in its courts for damages on account of the death of a relative, and Italy gives the same guarantee to American citizens.

The new convention is a result of a decision of the supreme court of the United States holding that an alien had no right to bring such a suit.

New York, July 5.—Dr. Abraham Clickstein, known as "the cocaine and opium king," was found guilty in the federal district court's criminal branch of conspiracy to use the mails in marketing cocaine, and of the manufacture and sale of smoking optum.

He was sentenced to serve two years in the federal prison at Atlanta, and to pay a fine of $3000.

Fire Closes Shoe Factory

Peabody, Mass., July 5.—More than 200 employes will be made idle for several weeks as a result of a fire in the Jenkins-Smith shoe factory, which caused a loss of $25,000.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

IN MAPLE SUGAR TIME.

MAPLE sugar or maple sirup may be used in mixing many agreeable desserts. There are few palates that do not appreciate maple sugar, and at this season, when it may be bought in the shops, housewives should avail themselves of it.

Plain layer cake may be made with maple icing. It is delicious, especially if the icing is sprinkled before it hardens with English walnut meats.

Fruit Cooked In Maple Sirup.—Apples that are hard enough to hold their shape and are not mellow may be cooked in the sirup. Put thin sirup in a clean vessel (avoid iron) and when boiled down half add the fruit.

A Maple Mold.

Maple Parfait.—Beat the yolks of six eggs till very creamy, add three-fourths cup of maple sirup. Place on the stove, stirring until it has thickened enough to make a coating on the spoon. Turn into a bowl and beat till cold, when it should be very light and creamy. Add one-half ounce of gelatin dissolved in three tablespoonfuls cold water. Beat five minutes. Lastly whip one pint cream stiff and mix lightly with egg mixture. Turn into a mold holding three pints and let stand three hours.

Maple Junket.—Make the junket in the usual way with the crushed junket tablet or liquid rennet, but sweeten with grated maple sugar dissolved in the milk in double boiler. Use about one-third of a cup of the maple sugar to a quart of milk. Maple sirup will answer as well. Use from three to four tablespoonfuls of the sirup or quantity to sweeten to your taste. Serve with whipped cream and grated sugar and chopped nuts.

A Delicate Food.

Maple Custard.—Beat the yolks of three eggs well, add slowly a third of a cup of maple sirup and a pint of scalded milk. Put over the fire in a double boiler and stir until it begins to thicken. Remove from the fire and when cool add a teaspoonful of vanilla. Beat the whites of the eggs to a froth, add gradually a quarter of a cup of powdered sugar and beat to a stiff white foam. Add to the custard. Turn into a buttered mold and cover tightly. Put into kettle of boiling water, with a muffin ring or something of the sort under the mold so it will not touch the bottom of the kettle. Have the water boiling rapidly for twenty minutes. Let it cool in the mold; then turn out on the serving dish and chill. Serve with a meringue or whipped cream over it and sprinkle pounded maple sugar and chopped nuts over the top.

ARMY'S TRIBUTE TO WAR HEROES

Last Formal Mark of Gettysburg Semi-Centennial

SALUTE OF FORTY-EIGHT GUNS

Forty Thousand In Absolute Silence For Five Minutes While Stars and Stripes Are at Half Mast—Thousands Listen to Address by President—Old Soldiers Leaving Camp

Gettysburg, Pa., July 5.—The regular army paid tribute to the thousands who sleep under the hills of Gettysburg. Somewhere down in the heart of the tented city a bugle sang out in silver sweet call that wandered over the field where Lee and Meade made history.

The big flag before headquarters of General Liggett, glorious in the sunshine of a perfect July day, came slowly half way down the staff.

In front of the tent, shoulders squared, figures trim in summer uniform of white, face toward the flag, the general clicked heels together and stood at attention.

Somewhere the guns of the Third battery burst into staccato salute. Every officer over the length and breath of that wide field, every enlisted man, turned away from the duties of the moment and faced the flag, heels together, heads up and eyes alight with the sentiment of the hour.

As the last gun of forty-eight sent the echoes clattering about Seminary Ridge and Round Top there was solemn silence, the hush of peace.

Old veterans who did not realize, perhaps, exactly what was going on stood silent under the spell of the universal feeling that something to sweep the field. Even the clatter of pots and pans in the mess tents was hushed and the yells of cooks about to dish up the mid-day meal lowered to whispers.

For five minutes the camp was quiet. Then the bugle spoke again in notes more joyous. The silken flag leaped up the staff to its pinnacle and the noises that 40,000 men can make resumed their sway—the regular army's tribute to the dead and to the flag of a reunited nation.

That five minutes' silence was probably the last formal mark of the semi-centennial celebration. Only a few minutes before, President Wilson spoke in the big tent to the veterans in blue and gray, and only a short time afterward thousands of those who were left began their preparations for departure.

The president came into Gettysburg shortly before 11 o'clock from Baltimore. His appearance at the station of Gettysburg was the signal for a cheer and from somewhere down in the college grounds came the customary twenty-one guns.

From the station to the camp over the village streets and dusty Emmittsburg road the president was driven while the Pennsylvania constabulary guarded his automobile and kept the traffic clear.

His entrance into the tent to the strains of "Hail to the Chief" brought the crowd, which those who estimate say numbered 10,000, quick from their chairs with a cheer.

The presidest spoke slowly and carefully but the breeze that played under the side of the tent and the restless feet of those who hastened in made it difficult for the old men in the rear seats to hear and understand. He was interrupted only once or twice with cheers.

The president was in the tent only a half hour. At the conclusion of his speech he shook hands with many of those on the platform and then walked between lines of the constabulary to his private war waiting on a nearby siding. A few minutes later he started for Harrisburg and the north.

Special trains began pushing out of Gettysburg early and the railroad men were working their hardest to put them out on schedule.

Although not many left after sundown last night, railroad officials estimated that the run had been almost 1000 an hour for ten hours. It is probable, however, that hundreds will stay as long as possible on the field. Few of them make any pretence that they expect to visit Gettysburg again and they are anxious for as many looks as possible at the hills and fields where their valor went out in deeds that have been told the world around.

"L" STRIKE DEFERRED

Carmen Await Outcome of Conference With Boston Business Men

Boston, July 5.—A strike of the Boston Elevated employes will not be called before Monday afternoon or night. That was decided by the executive board of the union, immediately after a postponement of the conference of the Chamber of Commerce with the union committee until Monday morning.

That the employes are practically a unit in a desire to strike was proven when the official strike balloting count tallied 5276 in favor of a walkout, and but 173 opposed.

CAPTAIN POTTS

End of Active Naval Career Regretted by Sea Fighters

BELOVED BY HIS MEN

Retiring Naval Commander Potts Given Rear Admiral's Honors

Newport, R. I., July 5.—The love and esteem in which officers and crew of the battleship Louisiana hold their retiring commanding officer, Captain Potts, was attested with cheers as he stepped from the ship and was taken to Jamestown to join Mrs. Potts, thus ending his active career in the navy, which has been a brilliant one.

Six officers acted as "side boys" as Potts left to enter a twelve-oared cutter manned by his officers as well, this giving him an admiral's honors.

A farewell letter from the crew was a token of their affection found by Potts in his cabin.

GENERAL FIGUEROA IS PUT TO DEATH

Mexican Federals Execute Prominent Leader In Rebellion

Mexico City, July 5.—Federal troops executed General Ambrosio Figueroa, who obtained great prominence in the southern states during Madero's revolution against Diaz, and who was later in the army as commander of the rural guards.

He was captured by federal troops in the state of Guerrero.

Figueroa with his brothers, had taken a leading part in the rebellion against the present administration.

VICARS IS VINDICATED

Wins $25,000 In Jewel Suit Against London Newspaper

London, July 5.—Sir Arthur E. Vicars, who was Ulster king-of-arms at the time the crown jewels were stolen from Dublin castle in the summer of 1907, was awarded $25,000 damages for libel in a suit brought against the London Mail.

The newspaper alleged that Vicars had shielded the woman who took the jewels out of jealousy of his attachment for the wife of Lord Haddo, son of the Earl of Aberdeen, lord lieutenant of Ireland. Both Vicars and Haddo denied in their testimony all knowledge of the disappearance of the jewels or of their whereabouts.

The newspaper did not attempt to justify its story. The evidence disposes of various stories in circulation that Haddo knew something about the missing jewels.

NEW YORKERS WIN

Boston, July 5.—Visiting oarsmen from New York made a clean-up yesterday at the twenty-seventh annual championship regatta of the New England Amateur Rowing association, which was held on the Charles river basin under the auspices of the city of Boston.

The New Yorkers were here in numbers and showed many good oarsmen, winning seven of the nine races in which the crews figured.

GOLD MINES TIED UP

Strikers Throughout Rand District Are Displaying Ugly Temper

Johannesburg, July 5.—Practically all the mines in the Rand district are now involved in the strike, which is bound to have a serious effect on the gold mining industry of South Africa.

The strikers are displaying an ugly temper toward the "blacklegs." At Benoni a number of soldiers were badly mauled by a mob of strikers. Wild scenes were enacted at various points.

Chicago Athletes Are Winners

Chicago, July 5.—Chicago Athletic association athletes ran away with point honors in the National Junior A. A. U. meet at Grant park. The well-balanced team captured first place in seven of the eighteen events.

EXPRESS SAFE IS DEMOLISHED

Messenger Refused to Give Combination to Bandits

SIDE OF CAR BLOWN OUT

Four Bandits Cut Loose Express and Mail Coaches From Fast Train and Accomplish Their Purpose—Get Fifty Pieces of Registered Mail In Addition to Contents of Safe

Memphis, July 5.—Covering the engineer, fireman, express messenger and mail clerks with revolvers, four masked bandits robbed the safe in the express car of the Illinois Central railroad passenger train and escaped with their loot.

They also rifled the mail bags, which contained many registered letters, and it is believed from this source their loot was greatly increased. While a posse is in pursuit, aided by bloodhounds, no clue of the four men has been obtained.

The robbery, which was the boldest known in the south in many years, occurred shortly after the train passed Batesville, Miss. None of the passenger coaches was entered, the bandits contenting themselves with the contents of the express car safe and the mail bags.

After the train had passed Batesville, the engineer and fireman were surprised to see standing over them a masked figure, who waved two Colt revolvers. At the same time the express messenger saw another man in his car, while a third man entered the mail car. The mail clerks were compelled to go into the express car, where one man stood guard over them.

A fourth bandit sought the conductor and brakeman and marched them into the car.

Then upon a signal the locomotive was brought to a standstill, while the brakeman was forced to uncouple the mail and express cars from the remainder of the train. When this had been completed, again upon signal, the engineer was ordered to run his locomotive ahead.

While the engine and two cars sped over the road at thirty miles an hour the robbers in the express car were busy. They demanded the combination from the messenger but were refused, and then they showed that they had come prepared for an emergency.

One man produced four sticks of dynamite and, arranging them, all filed into the mail car. The explosion that followed blew out one side of the express car and completely demolished the safe. The robbers then helped themselves to the money in the safe.

After they had finished their work, obtaining fifty pieces of registered mail in addition to the money from the safe, the robbers signalled to their companions on the locomotive, who compelled the engineer to run his locomotive to Enid, Miss., where they left the train, escaping into the open country.

EIGHT HOMES WRECKED

Dozen Others Damaged by Fire In Dorchester Section of Boston

Boston, July 5.—A bunch of firecrackers, low water pressure, and a hill combined, gave a section of Dorchester, where wooden houses are thickly packed, a genuine scare last evening and in all twenty buildings were prey to the flames.

Eight were totally destroyed, while the remainder were in some instances made untenantable. The damage will be close to $50,000.

The fire started on the rear piazza of a house in Leroy street and leaped into Josephine street. Within half an hour houses more than a quarter of a mile distant had taken fire.

NEGRO KILLS A BOY

Newport Police Have Hard Task In Saving Him From Angry Mob

Newport, R. I., July 5.—The thousand people, men and women, witnessed a riot on Newport beach last night when a negro, fleeing from a sailor he had stabbed in the back, shot and killed a 14-year-old boy.

For nearly an hour police reserves battled desperately with the mob which was determined to get possession of the negro. Only by carrying him into the surf and holding him in the water up to his neck beyond the reach of the crowd did the police succeed in retaining him.

PROGRESSIVES TO WORK ALONE

Straus Opposed to Compromise With the Older Parties

PROGRAM OF SOCIAL JUSTICE

Newport, R. I., July 5.—The Progressives' national conference ended with a reception for the party leaders at the convention hall. The sessions were of an academic nature and dealt with social, economic and industrial questions.

The principal speakers were Oscar S. Straus of New York, who emphatically opposed any alliance between the Progressives and either the Democrats or Republicans; Professor Kelsey of the University of Pennsylvania; Truxton Beale of Washington, who outlined the scope of the college of politics which he wishes to found at Washington; Gifford Pinchot, Herbert K. Smith and Robert P. Bass of New Hampshire.

"The conservation question," Pinchot said, "lies at the root of every material human problem, for it is the problem of shelter and clothes, which are nothing but natural resources prepared for the use of men.

"The trust or monopoly question is a conservation question pure and simple. Monopoly is the control of natural resources or natural advantages.

"Out of the handling of natural resources necessary to make them available for human use arise all the labor questions and, indirectly, all other questions of social and industrial justice."

No compromise with the older parties, but a straight Progressive program, based upon social justice favoring neither capital nor labor, was the keynote of Straus' address.

"Mr. Fairbanks, former vice president, recently voiced the sentiment of a number of well-intentioned Republicans when he called upon the Republicans and Progressives to forget past differences and return to the fold," said Straus.

"Those who believe or hope that the reactionary Republicans and the Progressives can ever be merged misunderstand the true meaning and significance of Progressivism. It is not a political faction, but a moral awakening—not a partisan bolt, but a determined patriotic purpose to adjust our political life to conserve the basic principles of true democracy, and to conform our economic and industrial development to human needs.

Progressivism demands a non-political tariff upon an economic basis made by experts in the interest of the people as a whole, the laborer and the consumer. Progressiveism is opposed to the Democratic state rights fetish which effectually checks the correction of industrial and economic evils. We are not opposed to state rights; on the contrary, we favor local self-government, but when the evils to be corrected are national we insist upon national remedies.

"We need a national industrial commission with the same power over trusts whose business is interstate as the interstate commerce commission has over railroads.

"We stand for a minimum wage, so adjusted as to prevent sub-standard competition; that is, competition under unfair conditions."

BRYAN REACHES GOAL

Holds Office of President, but Only For Brief Term

Washington, July 5.—William J. Bryan yesterday was "acting President of the United States." This title for years has been given popularly to the ranking officer of the administration in Washington in the absence of the president and vice president, and the Fourth of July found Bryan "sitting on the lid," with President Wilson, Vice President Marshall and every member of the cabinet except himself out of the city.

Advertiser's Aim Is Satisfaction

By HOLLAND.

ONE of the biggest retail merchants in the world, with stores in two of America's largest cities, and who naturally is one of the largest advertisers in the world, insists that his advertisement writers confine themselves to strict truth, and any promise made by one of his clerks is considered to have been made personally by the head of the firm.

A woman bought a fine tablecloth, and after she had it home there was a slight imperfection found. It was nothing to affect the wear of the tablecloth, but she took it back, explaining that she had paid a high price for the article and that she had intended it for her "best." She was somewhat apologetic for returning a purchase with such a slight imperfection.

"You are a stranger in this city?" asked the floorwalker, and the woman nodded. "I thought so," he said. "You do not understand our system. Had you kept that tablecloth you would have done yourself and us an injustice. When you buy here you must be satisfied. If you are dissatisfied for any reason you are not fair to us unless you tell us and give us a chance to satisfy you."

That spirit is behind big advertisers everywhere. It is another reason for doing business with advertisers.

THE FOURTH AT ATLANTIC

Parade And Sports Rival City Celebration

That this year's celebration was one that would be hard to surpass was the opinion of nearly every resident that attended the Atlantic Fourth of July celebration. From early morning when the signal was given to start the parade until the "good night" piece of the fireworks display was set off, there was literally "something doing every minute."

As usual a big bonfire was set off at midnight. of the night before on the Atlantic playground by the young men of the Ward. The blaze burnt royally and was witnessed by a large crowd. There was an absence of big noise, due probably to the strict regulations of the state.

The parade which got underway at 6.30 was a big one and one of which the district should be proud. It contained many features of exceptional merit and showed the result of much labor.

On Clive street the lines were reviewed from the lawns of Charles E. Cherrington and Frank Badger by a large delegation of city officials and invited guests.

Mrs. Albee had long ben identified with many of the affairs of Wollaston. She was a member of the Wollaston Baptist church and had been during her days when health permitted, one of the church workers. She leaves two sons and a daughter. Funeral servcies were held this afternoon from her late residence Rev. Joseph Walther officiating. The burial was at Mt. Wollaston cemetery. During the services music was rendered by the Temple quartete.

BRIEFS

The two Quincy boys among the crew of the Michigan, were W. A. McGunagle of Atlantic and Walter Dineen of West Quincy.

Although there were a number of bell alarms of fire the night before the Fourth, there was but a small fire loss as several of the alarms were false. In all there were ten alarms on July 3 or 4.

It was a quiet day for the police as far as crime was concerned, for there were but eight arrests for drunkenness the night before and these were all released by the Probation officer the ing morning of the Fourth. During the day and evening there were but two arrests of any kind and these were for drunkenness.

The steamship Masachusetts of the E. S. Co., line ran into a sunken wreck on her trip from New York to Boston last night and was badly smashed. She reached Boston this noon. No one was lost.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 155 QUINCY MASS., MONDAY EVENING JULY 7, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

$7,500 BLAZE IN CITY SQUARE

Started in Basement of Clothing Store of the Payson Mitchell Company

Pettengill's Jewelry Store Also Heavy Loser

Flames shooting into the air from the rear of the brick block of Dr. J. F. Welch in City Square about midnight Saturday attracted a passerby who sounded box 24 for the first time since it has been installed. Before the department succeeded in extinguishing the fire it had done nearly $500 worth of damage in the basement. The smoke and water damage to the stock of the Payson Mitchell Co., is estimated at about $6000. The stock of the jewelry store of C. F. Pettengill, the adjoining store was damaged about $1000.

The fire is thought to have started in a rubbbish pile in the rear of the basement used by the tailoring department. The flames shot up through an airshaft to the roof and ate through the partitions separating the basements of the Payson and Pettengill stores.

Four lines of hose were laid by the apparatus which arrived promptly. Nearly all the call men in the city responded and immediately went to work to check the progress of the fire.

When the front door was burst open a cloud of smoke puffed out that was thicker than any seen at any fire in Quincy for a long time. Several firemen who tried to see how far forward the fire had gone were unable to withstand the smoke.

After 20 minutes stiff work the deluge of water which was poured on the area had its effect. By this time the smoke had partly cleared and the men had the opportunity of fighting the remains of the fire at close range.

The smoke rolling from the open doorway of the Payson store was a thick, heavy black, while that coming from the open entrance to the Pettengill store was a fleecy whiteness. From the street it seemed as though the whole block was doomed to destruction.

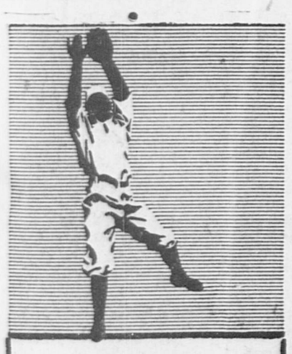

A friend rode to the home of Mr. Payson and brought him to the scene. He reached his safe after much effort and succeeded in getting the account books and memorandum that was in his desk. The cash register and other furnishings and fixings that were metal were charged and several of the firemen received stiff shocks from contact with them.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but the department is satisfied that it started in a rubbish pile in the Payson store. Arrangements were made with the police department to protect the block until repairs have been made and windows replaced.

A GOOD RECORD.

July 5th was an anniversary for one of the Ledger newsboys. For six years John Byrnes has carried the Ledgers through summer's heat and winter's cold; through fair and stormy weather. He has been the longest in service of any boy employed and the most faithful and reliable. Not only faithful to his employers but to the Ledger subscribers who could always depend on him to leave their paper. John is entering upon his second year at the high school. He has money in the Co-operative bank which shows that he is not only a good worker but thrifty as well. Such boys are sure to succeed.

The Bigelows were leading the Riversides 11 to 2 when the later left the field in the fifth inning at Ward Two.

UP IN THE AIR!

RUN OVER BY AUTOMOBILE

Miss Kivioja However Escaped With Slight Injury

Miss Martha Kivioja aged about 14 years, and residing at the home of Miss Hicks of Spear street, was knocked down by an automobile driven by Mrs. Rose A. Reed in front of Hearn's drug store about 7.30 Saturday night. The girl was crossing the street, which was quite crowded at the time and did not see the approaching automobile and Mrs. Reed who was driving the automobile evidently did not see the girl in time to prevent the accident. The girl was knocked down and the car passed over her. In the rear of the auto were Mrs. Reed's two daughters, one of whom was Miss Alma B. Reed, matron at the City hospital

The injured girl was taken to Hearn's drug store and Dr. Sargent summoned, who ordered her removal to the City Hospital. The police ambulance was called and the girl taken to the hospital, being accompanied by Miss Reed. Mrs. Reed and her other daughter then drove to the police station and reported the accident.

Examination of the injured girl at the hospital showed that beyond a severe shaking up and some bruises she had escaped injury. It was a narrow escape however.

DUNCAN SHOWS GREAT SPEED

The new torpedo boat destroyer, Duncan that was launched at the Fore River in the spring made 31 knots on the Rockland course Saturday according to the unofficial figures. The contract calls for a speed of 29 knots and in her four hour endurance contest she averaged 2915 knots an hour.

R. L. Lovell, chief engineer of the company was in charge of the engines. F. O. Wellington, general manager of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation represented the builders and Lieutenant Commander C. E. Courtney will command the vessel when she is placed in commission was on board.

CLUB KEEPS OPEN HOUSE

The Granite City Club as is its custom kept open house July 3, and extended its well known hospitality to all members and friends. An orchestra was present all of the evening rendering popular airs, in which many joined in singing and in the dining room a continuous lunch of lemonade, sandwiches, and fruit was served the entire evening. The rooms of the club were thronged all of the evening up to midnight.

On the morning of the Fourth the clubrooms were open to the ladies of the members and their guests and they were also entertained with ice cream, cake, fruit, lemonade and ginger ale. It is a good thing for the city to have a business men's club like this club, where distinguished visitors may be entertained.

Open house was also kept by the Elks club and some of the ships officer were entertained.

SCANDIA LODGE.

Scandia Lodge, Order of Vasa celebrated the "night before" with an installation of officers and a social in Electa and Protection halls. Dancing was enjoyed and refreshments were served. Deputy Guerna Flogstrom and staff from Valhalla lodge of Dorchester did the work.

The officers installed were:

President—Carl Barstin.

QUINCY A. A. CRIPPLED

In Finals for the Basket Ball Championship

Sometime Tuesday the Quincy A. A. teams which competed for the national basketball championship at Chicago, Ill., will arrive home and a limp will probably be noticeable in some of the boys who are noted for their snappy stride.

The loss of the national championship to Cornell University in the final game 27 to 13 was a great disappointment. It is now conceded that the form of none of the winning athletes was equal to that displayed by the same men at the Stockholm Olympics. This was owing to hot weather. The following telegram from William H. Flynn, whose efforts made the trip a possibility is self-explanatory:

Chicago, Ill., July 5.
Quincy Ledger, Quincy, Mass.

Lost final to Cornell University, 27 to 13. Bern Boyle put out of game in the first period. Period 10 minutes greatly handicapped. Weather 97 degrees. Sid Duggan wrenched ankle badly. O'Rourke out in first half. Manning and Millard Chapman played great game. Boyle and Hebert on the job. Home Tuesday. Marceau with us.

(Signed) William H. Flynn.

MRS. SOPHIA CARLSON.

The funeral of Mrs. Sophia Carlson, wife of Eric Carlson, who died after a long illness was held this afternoon from her home on Smith street. Services were conducted by Rev Leander Hokenson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran Church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. Besides her husband, Mrs. Carlson leaves one child.

Silver Wedding of Mr. and Mrs. John Tytler

A very enjoyable evening was spent at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Tytler, 17 Trafford street, on the evening of July 3, it being the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. About twenty couples were present and among them some who had attended their wedding twenty-five years ago.

During the evening there were solos by William Cantley, Miss Edith Jenkins and Miss Ruth Tytler and piano selections by Miss Edith Jenkins Bessie Cantley and Susan Tytler.

Mr. and Mrs. Tytler were greatly surprised and thanked those present for their kind remembrance and the wish that they may both live to see their golden anniversary.

Besides this they received a silver fruit basket, silver cream ladle, silver topped cut glass salt and pepper shakers, a silver spoon, a hand painted cream set, linen napkins and a cake, with their initials and date of marriage on the top.

On the lawn games and Scotch dances were given, James Reed furnishing music with his bag-pipes..

Refreshments were served and singing was enjoyed until a late hour, when "Auld Lang Syne" was sung.

Those present were: Mr. and Mrs Alex Cowe, Mr. and Mrs. James Reed, Mr. and Mrs. William Cantley, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smart, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Howie, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Jenkins, Mr. and Mrs William Smith, Mr and Mrs. John Knowles and son John, Mrs. M. A. Laing and daughters, Williamena and Isabel, Mrs. John Michael, Mr. and Mrs. George Forsythe, Mr. and Mrs. James Birnie, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth McLellan, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. John Moyle, Mr. and Mrs. John Tytler, Mr. and Mrs. John McKinnon, Mrs. Annie Spargo, Miss Edith Jenkis, Miss Bessie Cantley, Susan and Ruth Tytler, and John and George Tytler and Melvin Cowe.

NEPONSET BRIDGE OPEN.

Commissioner Tupper made a thorough examination on Saturday of Neponset bridge, where the fire was early on the morning of the Fourth and found that the damage was not as bad as was stated. He found that it was confined largely to the planking of the sidewalk on the east side of the bridge. Preparations were made for immediate repairs to the sidewalk and Saturday he had a gang of men sawing up the planking used on the grand stand in City Square. No carpenters could be found Saturday, but a gang of men was put at work bright and early this morning replanking the sidewalk. The main bridge which had been temporarily closed to street car travel after the fire was in use all day Saturday.

In anticipation that a fire might start on the bridge on the Fourth, Chief Litchfield had the bridge thoroughly soaked with water the afternoon before, but the hot sun evidently soon absorbed the water.

AUTO CHEMICAL IN BAD SMASH

Collided With Automobile and Then the Curbing Front of Savings Bank

Fortunately No Fireman or Person Was Injured

The Central station auto chemical was in a bad smash Saturday night and that someone was not seriously injured is miraculous. The apparatus was responding to an alarm from 151 at 8.02. Just as the alarm sounded a street car from Weymouth Landing came to a stop directly in front of the Savings Bank building. About the same time John Chadbourn in his Ford car started from in front of the Adams market diagonally across the street.

Just at that time the auto chemical was heard coming down Hancock street, in charge of William Carroll. The auto was apparently coming at a high rate of speed and as it rounded the corner near the Bethany church it was seen that the auto was on the east side of the street.

Under the laws of the road in passing an electric car standing still the auto must pass to the left. When but a short distance from the electric car the auto chemical swung over to the west side of the street and as it did so the auto of Mr. Chadbourn came into sight going diagonally toward the Central building. It looked for a minute as though the auto chemical would strike the automobile in the centre, but driver Carroll turned sharply to the left hoping to pass between the automobile and the sidewalk. The speed at this time was reduced as driver Carroll had shut off his power. There was not room enough however and as the auto chemical went by it racked the forward wheels of Chadbourn's car smashing both front wheels, but did not overturn the car.

The impact caused the auto chemical to swerve to the right and it came round the front of the, still stationary, electric car and headed for the sidewalk in front of the Savings Bank building.

Driver Carroll tried to keep from striking the sidewalk but was unable to do so, and the car ran bump into the high curbing the right front wheel striking the stone post and stopping the auto.

There were several automobiles standing in front of the Savings Bank building and the auto chemical just grazed the rear mud guard of one of the cars.

The engine of the auto chemical was found to be intact but the stearing gear had been put out of commission by the impact with the stone post and several leaves of the forward springs had been smashed.

Mr. Chadbourn and his brother-in-law who were in the automobile were

AROUND THE SODA FOUNTAIN.

It has been remarked that if the Mississippi river were to dry up, and all the soda water consumed in the United States turned into its bed, the stream would carry on its saccharine bosom large ocean-going ships.

Anyway the soda fountain is a distinctively American institution. It has advanced both in splendor and substantial value during recent years. Formerly soda fountains were simple little cabinets. A few flavors were provided, usually vanilla, strawberry, chocolate, lemon and orange. The village girls knew them by heart, backwardan dfo rward. Those of epicurean habits varied the list by combinations, supposed to appeal to educated tastes.

Now millions are spent in marble, glitter, and statuary in the more costly resorts, which dazzle the eye and contribute to the sense of luxury.

The old time product of this perennial fountain was a fizzy and windy mixture of honeyed sweetness, that temporarily seemed to assuage thirst, but left a cloying taste behind. The modern fountain runs into more substantial foods. Enormous quantities of eggs, milk, buttermilk and cream are dispensed. These not merely provoke a temporary sense of coolness, but supplyr eal nourishment and help one much better to stand the strain of heat and humidity.

The tremendous vogue of the soda fountain is an evidence of the growth of temperance sentiment. It is far less marked in Europe, where use of intoxicating liquors is more general. In this country there are a host of people, without desire to criticise temperate persons who think differently, who have a sincere preference for the water wagon. It takes no bromoselzers to clean up the effects of strawberry ices, and no dull brown feeling follows the refreshing glass of egg and milk.

The "night before," was one of the quiestest seen in Quincy for many years. There was but little disturbance and an entire absence of those dangerous cannon crackers, whose sudden exploding almost made the hair stand on end. To be sure there were hundreds of young people out, but they were armed with paper horns instead of fire crackers, and they quieted down by midnight, as all realized there was much going on the Fourth and a little sleep was very desirable.

While a Sunday school picnic is not thoroughly satisfactory to the youngsters unless there are deep water and high cliffs, the chance to get hurt on trolley cars or automobiles may be considered a partly satisfactory substitute.

Lee and Meade did not consider the disadvantage of having the anniversary come in the heat of July when they fought 50 years ago at Gettysburg.

Skirts will be tighter this summer, and the purse will have to be looser to pay for them .

It is hard to tell whether the currency question editorials are done by the baseball editor or the one who answers sentimental correspondents.

If the college diploma does not count much in a business office, it is appreciated at its real value at the baseball headquarters.

Plums for authors and newspaper men at Washington now. They can do the work all right, but will they wear the necessary tail coats and plug hats?

While it is so hot out in the sun, the Mexican revolutionists are keeping quiet, but as soon as it is cool enough to hoe corn, another outburst of patriotism is expected.

M. M. MULHALL

Lobbyist Whose Charges Will Be Investigated by Congress

Mulhall's startling allegations that representatives, senators and high officials of the government had been "reached" or "influenced," that the lobby conducted its operations from a room in the capitol, paid money to employees there, took an active hand in making up committees and went out actively in the political campaigns to defeat congressmen who opposed legislation the lobby wanted, have thrown congressional circles into an uproar. A rigid investigation of Colonel Mulhall's charges is promised by both the senate and house of representatives.

THE MULHALL INQUIRY

House Committee Reports Resolution That Will Be Sweeping

Washington, July 7.—The machinery of the house was set in motion for the investigation of the Mulhall charges when the rules committee reported a resolution providing for the appointment of a select committee of seven members of the house, to be named by the speaker.

The resolution was amended so the committee will try to determine not only what part the manufacturers played in defeating members, but also to inquire into the activities of all other organizations and persons along this line.

HURRY UP JOB BY LYNN POLICEMAN

Man Arrested, Tried and Fined Within Fifteen Minutes

Lynn, Mass., July 7.—Fifteen minutes after he had assaulted two boys in a tailor shop on Central avenue, John Lazarus left the police court, having been arrested, found guilty and fined $50.

Officer Nelson, in a barber's chair across the way, heard the sounds of trouble, and with one side of his face lathered and the other clean-shaven dashed into the shop. He found Lazarus preparing to throw a third flatiron at the boys after two had missed their mark.

Nelson took him to the police court, only a few steps away, and on hearing the evidence Judge Lummus imposed the fine. Lazarus paid promptly.

HELD ON TWO GHARGES

Negro Who Stabbed Seaman Is Accused of Causing Boy's Death

Newport, R. I., July 7.—Charles B. Smith, the negro who caused a riot on the beach, during which William Eagan, aged 14 years, was shot and killed, was held in $3000 bonds charged with assault on Ernest Rabu, seaman from the naval training station. Rabu was stabbed during a row with the negro.

The assailant was set upon by a crowd of men and boys, and in retreating is alleged to have discharged a revolver, a bullet from which entered young Eagan's head.

Smith pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter, and in default of $5000 bail was committed to jail.

ARMED POLICE ON GUARD

Gold Miners Win South African Strike After Much Bloodshed

Johannesburg, July 7.—While the situation in the Rand district remains critical and armed police are everywhere guarding property, there has been no further serious rioting among the striking gold miners, following the encounters Friday and Saturday between miners and the police and troops, which resulted in many persons being killed and wounded.

Strike leaders assert that the terms of settlement of the strike are being accepted all along the reef.

Revised figures show that twenty persons were killed and 150 wounded on Saturday, and that 100 were killed or wounded on Friday.

AUTO CHEMICAL

not thrown out and escaped injury. None of the firemen were injured.

The alarm proved to have been false, and when Chief Litchfield returned the damaged auto chemical was taken in tow to Scammell's garage.

Chief Litchfield telephone to Boston for the parts necessary to make the repairs and ran his own car in town after them. In just 55 minutes from the time he left Quincy he returned with the parts and workmen were at work making the repairs. The repairs were completed that night and the auto chemical was in commission again at 7 o'clock Sunday morning.

There was considerable speculation as to what speed the auto chemical was making, many claiming fifty miles an hour to have been the speed. The speedometer on the car however showed that the maximum speed to have been 13 miles an hour.

A large crowd quickly gathered about the two damaged cars, and it was while in this crowd that someone asked Robert Burns the time. The party was a stranger and he gave him the time. Then he placed the watch back in his pocket. A few minutes later he found that his time piece was missing and it is thought some light fingered man in the crowd had relieved him of it.

A repair car from Gould's garage responded, and after removing the forward axle of the automobile of Mr. Chadbourn the car was taken away.

WHO IS THE BEST MAN.

The athletic meet on the Merrymount oval on the holiday resulted in some fine contests. One of the most interesting was the tie between J. Fay Phelan of the North Dorchester A. A. and Fred Kinsbury in the 440 yard dash. Both made a pretty start and had no trouble passing the men in front. Both breasted the line at the same time and now the question is being asked about the city, "Who is the best man." It is understood that Kingsbury openly challenged Phelan, the race to take place on the afternoon of July 12 on the track at the oval.

DISTRICT COURT.

Domenic Bolui was fined $25 for assault at Quincy.

Quincy A. A. reached the final in the basket ball tournament at Chicago on the holiday and were defeated by Cornell, 27 to 2. Decidedly hot weather prevailed. Corneli reached the final by beating the Hull House team which was squelched by Quincy in an overtime game. A telegram states all are well.

WALNUT A. C. 27 ATLANTIC 17

The Walnut A. C., the new Ward Six team defeated the Atlantic A. A., the regular representatives in a one sided contest on the playground Saturday afternoon, 27 to 17. Duggan, second baseman of the winners secured a homer and two triples. The severe defeat administered to the Atlantics indicates that their calibre has lessened since the commencement of the season.

Included in the Walnut team were Hayes, catcher; Spinney, short; Duggan, second base; Kelliher, third base Chaisson, centre field; Pitts, pitcher; Kinniburgh, first;! Dingwell, right.

The Atlantics consisted of O'Connell, catcher; Curtin, pitcher; Cullen, right; Johnson, second; Joe Duffy, centre; Chaisson, short; Jack Duffy, left; Gregory, third; McNally, first.

The Walnuts secured 15 hits and made 12 errors. The Atlantics got only six hits and made 18 errors. The score by innings:

Walnut	3	1	5	2	4	0	0	11	1	—27
Atlantic	1	0	0	3	2	4	2	3	2	—17

HOW SQUANTUM CELEBRATED

Many Good Features---Winners of the Prizes

The Squantum celebration of the Fourth of July started with a salute to the flag under the direction of William A. Reed at James Loughan's oval. One hundred children formed in front of the residence of T. F. Callahan and marched to the Loughan estate. There they grouped about a large flagpole and each child was presented an American flag. A handsome flag was then raised to the staff while the children saluted. The children sang "My Country Tis of Thee" and "Star Spangled Banner."

The grand parade of horribles started at 9.30 o'clock. The parade was filled with interesting features and take-offs on local conditions.

The chief marshal of the parade was James Loughan. His aids, all in picturesque costume were Warren Fifield, John R. Nelson, Peter Olson, Chauncy Paul, T. F. Callahan, mounted and representing Paul Revere and Q. A. Friberg, mounted representing the 1915 hobo.

The Squantum band proved an attractive feature of the parade. It was composed of the following all in costume—cornets, Charles Bostwick, Fred Dorsey, Thomas Curley and Webster Kelley; bass drum, William Loughan, Joseph Uppling, drum.

No prettier feature has ever been seen in a Squantum parade than the Squantum Red Sox band of Squantum's prettiest girls, who came next in line. They wore brilliant red coats with white skirts and each played a variety of instruments which were not only tuneful but amusing. The drum major of the Red Sox band was Miss Mildred Hersey and she had all the fine art of a trained military leader. The banner carrier was Mrs. Harvey Urann The members of the band were: Miss Helen Simpson, Miss Margaret Allen, Miss Ann Allen, Miss Frances Allen, Miss Lettie McCarthy and Miss Thelma Holt.

"Gussie," as impersonated by Sturgis Wood, drew a lot of good laughs along the line. Bertha Rund as "Uncle Sam" and Louise Rand as "Columbia" were two very attractive young misses in patriotic garb, Mrs. John Jepson impersonated Martha Washingtona nd was accompanied by Mrs. Borg as "The new woman."

Gus Newberger and George Hersey were dressed as real ferocious cannibals and carried a pot with them for the boiling of missionaries. One of the best local hits was on the Squantum Woman's club. C. H. Singleton and Frank Alexander carried a miniature house, about the size of a bird house which was labeled "Woman's clubhouse." It was a clever take-off on the efforts of the woman's club to build a clubhouse.

Charlie Singleton was dressed as a raven and made a hit among the younger folks by his clever make-up. Parker Reed wore the costume of a robin, and appeared a happy and well-fed one. N. P. Paul, the popular letter carrier got a lot of good laughs from his impersonation of a suffragette.

The modern Hercules was a good get-up by Charles Westlake.

SOUTH BRAINTREE

The members of Braintree Council No. 1462, K. of C. held patriotic open house at their rooms on Holbrook avenue the night before the Fourth. The affair was planned as a reception to the visiting members of Seville Council of Brockton who came down to present a silk parade flag, awarded the knights of Braintree Council for the excellent showing made by them in the last Columbus Day parade in Brockton.

The members invited their friends up to partake of their hospitality and the gathering soon resolved itself into one of the most patriotic events ever held in this town. No better welcome could have been extended to Independence day and every one present was moved to frequent cheers and hearty applause at the remarks of the various speakers.

The program of entertainment was begun at 8 o'clock with selections by Abell's orchestra. The address of welcome was delivered by Grand Knight Joseph T. Shay who spoke eloquently of the patriotic spirit of the Knights of Columbus and turned the rooms over to the committee Edward P. Cuffe sang "Silver Threads among the Gold" accompanied by the orchestra and all joining in on the chorus.

James Madigan of Vera Cruz Council, Randolph did some clever dancing. After these numbers the real patriotic part of the evening was given.

James T. Moran, Grand Knight of Seville Council, in well chosen words full of patriotic spirit stirred the assembly to frequent applause as he paid repeated compliments to Braintree Council. At the end of his speech, a salute to the flag was played on the cornet followed by "The Star Spangled Banner" played by the whole orchestra, everybody standing and singing in chorus.

Three cheers for "Old Glory" were given with a will and then came more cheers and a "tiger" for Seville Council and its Grand Knight. Following this, John H. Sullivan was introduced and in a concise manner told of the events leading up to the signing of the Declaration of Independence after which he read the immortal document in a fervent manner, receiving prolonged applause.

At this time, Dr. C. A. Sullivan stated that a patriotic woman of Braintree, Mrs. John H. McDermott of Town street had expressed a desire to present Braintree Council with a silk flag to decorate the hall. In behalf of Mrs. McDermott, he presented the flag with her compliments and best wishes to the council. Both parties were cheered, the orchestra saluted with high calls and all sang "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean."

Captain John W. Mulcahy then spoke happily of again showing Brockton next year that Braintree deserves another prize. He was loudly applauded for his humorous remarks. Grand Knight Moran then sang "Beautiful garden of Roses" accompanied by Brother Frank Tevlin of Seville Council. A bountiful and delicious buffet lunch was served with Brother Andrew A. Nichols as caterer. Side splitting Hebrew Monologues were rendered by Martin King and popular airs were sung by all in chorus.

Shortly before midnight, the program was concluded with the salute to the flag, the singing of America and three rousing cheers for the U. S. A. Everybody joined in singing "Dixie" and after saluting a passing parade with bugle calls, the affair was over and voted one great, big success.

A flag was also purchased by a committee recently appointed and was presented to the council to be hung outside the building on holidays and other public occasions.

The committee in charge consisted of Michael Burke, Everett Russell, James T. Cotter, Charles E. Greelish and Edward V. Heffernan. John W. Mulcahy was chairman of the patriotic commitee. The committee to purchase the flag consisted of Joseph V. Cuff of this town and Walter Fouche of Holbrook. Members were present from Randolph, Brockton, Quincy, Weymouth and Rockland.

The Premier III of J. P. McIntire is conceded by yachting editors to be one of the fastest power boats in Boston harbor. An exhibition of its speed was one of the most acceptable features to the Atlantic's Fourth of July program.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co. Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

QUINCY OPEN REGATTA

First Prizes to Meemer, Lethe, Clara, and Wanderer

Sixty-two boats participated in the annual open regatta of the Quincy Yacht club Saturday afternoon, and the race was the most successful the club ever had, for all but one of the starters crossed the line at the finish.

There was a light southwesterly breeze at the start, which was shortly after 11 o'clock, and the course gave a run, a reach and a beat to windward.

The race also afforded the skippers an opportunity to see the battleship Michigan, as weil as affording the jackies on board an opportunity to see the race, for the course took them within a short distance of where the battleship was moored.

PREFERS DEATH TO WIFE

Man Makes Three Attempts at Suicide When He Hears Bad News

Webster, Mass., July 7.—After receiving news that his wife, Martha, is coming home after two years' absence, Dominick Bencik, 38, made three attempts to commit suicide by hanging at the picnic of the St. Andrew society at Dudley park yesterday afternoon. He lies now in the Worcester city hospital in a serious condition.

Bencik was playing baseball at the outing when his brother brought him a telegram, sent from Germany by his wife, notifying him of her intention to return to him within a short time. Bencik quit the ball game and made three attempts at suicide within the next hour, beginning to turn black in the face when cut down the last time.

At the hospital he told the physician he was married to the woman eight years ago, and that during the first six years of their married life his wife had beaten him frequently and made his life unbearable.

She went away two years ago, he said, and since that time he has been enjoying the world.

C. L. U. IS NEUTRAL

Taken to Indicate There Will Be No Strike on Boston Elevated

Boston, July 7.—The action of the Central Labor Union yesterday in remaining neutral in the threatened strike of the carmen is taken as indicating a peaceful settlement of the controversy.

Labor leaders regard it as almost a certainty that some method will be agreed upon for the submitting of the differences at present existing between the men and the L officials to arbitration.

It is reported that several names of prominent men of this city have been suggested for the third arbiter, and some of these men are reported as being acceptable to both sides.

Today will be a most important one, and the result of the conference is looked forward to with a great deal of hopeful expectancy. Every effort will be made to bring about an agreement of arbitration today.

CINCINNATI ICEMEN GET RAISE IN PAY

Strike Which Caused Much Suffering Comes to an End

Cincinnati, July 7.—Following a series of conferences between representatives of the unions affected and ice manufacturers, striking ice employes decided to return to work today, thus ending an ice strike which has been in existence three weeks, has caused much suffering and forced the city authorities to seize the ice plants and operate them for the city.

The drivers and helpers are to be granted an increase in pay and recognition of their union will be a subject of discussion.

The Engineers and Firemen's union will be recognized and other demands will be arbitrated.

VOLUNTEER LIFE SAVERS

New England Association Not Connected With Treasury Department

Washington, July 7.—The treasury department issued the following statement:

"Information has been received by the treasury department to the effect that the 'Volunteer Life Savers' Patrol,' maintained by popular subscription, is soliciting funds on the New England coast, and that there is some confusion as to whether this organization is a part of the United States life saving service.

"It has no connection with the life saving service operated under the treasury department. The fact that those identified with the 'Volunteer Life Savers' Patrol' wear a uniform similar to that of the United States life saving service has, perhaps, had something to do with the reported confusion of the two."

EXCISE LAW ENFORCED

Washington Has a "Dry" Day For First Time In Its History

Washington, July 7.—For the first time in its history Washington was dry yesterday. No liquor was obtainable for cash anywhere. The new excise law, which went into effect on July 1, prohibits the sale or giving away of liquor anywhere on Sunday in the District of Columbia. Saloons, hotels and clubs are affected, even the familiar locker system being a violation.

As a result the late trippers on the cars Saturday night all went reinforced. Many there were with suspicious bulges in the vicinity of their pistol pockets.

FOUND DEAD IN FOOT OF WATER

Hub Police Have No Clue to Unknown Man's Identity

PERHAPS ROBBED AND SLAIN

Opinion That He Was Held Face Downward on Tide Marshes Until He Died From Suffocation—Pockets Probably Rifled Before Being Thrown or Falling Into Water

Boston, July 7.—The body of an unidentified man, believed to have been the victim of foul play, was discovered in a foot of water on the tide marshes off Columbia road. A general alarm has been sent out by the police to identify the man so as to trace his movements and find his companions just previous to his death. This occurred probably about 3 or 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The man died from drowning, but whether this was the result of foul play or an accident has not been determined.

When found there was not an article of any description about his clothes which would give the police the slightest clue as to his identity.

The police scout the idea that the man deliberately committed suicide, because of the slight depth of the water. That anyone could have accidentally drowned where the body was found seems improbable to the police.

The man apparently was well-to-do. His clothes are of fine texture. The absence of money or other valuables lead the police to believe that his pockets had been rifled before he was thrown or fell into the water.

Dr. Watters, associate medical examiner for Suffolk county, would not say positively that the man met his death from drowning. He will perform an autopsy on the body today to find any signs which may aid the officers.

The spot where the body was found is one of the most isolated spots. With the marshes skirting one side of Columbia road and Dorchester bay the other, there is not a house or building for more than a mile either side. On Sunday there is little travel on the Columbia road driveway nearest the marshes, that side being restricted to the use of heavy traffic.

To make the isolation complete, the hedge separating the two driveways almost completely bars the view of any persons using the pleasure driveway on the Dorchester bay side from pedestriens who might use the other driveway.

So far as the superficial examination of the man's body could show there were no marks of violence about the man, and if murdered, the police believe he was deliberately held under water until dead.

The body was lying face downward with arms outstretched, as if the man had made some effort to get to his feet.

LOOKING FOR FIREBUG

Police Stirred by Numerous Blazes In Lumber District of Boston

Boston, July 7.—A firebug, who has terrorized the residents of the South End, is now being sought for by the police. Early Sunday morning three fires were set in the lumber district, which is one of the fire hazard zones of Boston. At one of these fires three people were severely burned.

For the past few weeks the police of the East Dedham street station and the firemen of this district have been called out to fires, the origin of which seems to be incendiary. In the most of the cases the alarms were sent in by a young man, whose description seems to tally with the one who is thought to have set the three fires Sunday morning.

FEDERAL AID WITHDRAWN

Equipment Worth $115,000 Lost by Arkansas Militia's Negligence

Little Rock, July 7.—Governor Futrella announced that Secretary of War Garrison had withdrawn financial support of the federal government from the Arkansas national guard.

The secretary's letter, the governor said, stated this action was not taken because the last legislature had failed to appropriate $25,000 for maintenance, but because in a few years about $115,000 worth of federal equipment had been lost through negligence of state officers.

Atlanta, July 7.—Barricaded in the postoffice at Kirkwood, a suburb, where he had blown open the safe, J. W. Johnson fought a posse of constables and citizens until he fell, mortally wounded by a bullet.

The noise of the explosion aroused constables, and a posse surrounded the postoffice before Johnson could complete his work and escape.

WILSON TELLS OF HIS ARREST

Secretary of Labor Forestalls an Expected Attack

HOUNDED BY MINE OWNERS

Tried on Charges of Contempt and Acquitted After Unsuccessful Attempt to Turn Miners Against Him —Conspiracy Charge Never Pressed —Men Hired to Kidnap Him

Washington, July 7.—Being informed that he was to be attacked by a New York newspaper because of his troubles with officials during the Maryland coal strike of 1894, Secretary of Labor Wilson has issued a statement regarding his activities at that time. He did so, he said, to forestall what he believed would be a misstatement of the case. He said he had been informed that the basis of the attack would be that he was arrested for contempt of court and for conspiracy.

Wilson sets forth in his statement that he was sent to the Georges Creek and Cumberland coal fields in April, 1894, to organize the miners in preparation for a strike which had just been called by the United Mine Workers of America. After an unsuccessful attempt had been made to turn the miners against him, by the publication of articles in which he was represented as being a wealthy operator trying to raise the price of coal by a strike, an injunction was issued against him, he says.

It was the usual form of injunction issued in such cases, Wilson says, and a few days after a copy had been served on him he was tried on a charge of contempt and acquitted by Judges Huffman and Boyd, in Allegheny county, Md.

Not long after that, he says, he was standing on the platform of a railway station at Lonaconing, Md., when a train arrived and a sheriff alighted and asked him to go into the train for a few minutes. He did so, he asserts, and the sheriff read a warrant charging him with conspiracy. Before the reading of the warrant was finished the train was under way, Wilson says, and he was taken to Cumberland, Md., and placed in jail.

The conspiracy charge remained on the docket nearly two years and never came to trial, he avers. Wilson says the operators tried in every possible way to discredit him, even hiring men to kidnap him and hold him prisoner in an abandoned farmhouse in order that the owners might tell the miners he had "sold out" and gone away. The desire was to discourage the miners, he says, so they would abandon the strike.

The scheme failed, Wilson says, because one of the men who was asked to help carry it into effect sent a warning to the intended victim.

Love's Young Dream Ends Unhappily For Twelve-Year-Old Elopers

Detroit, July 7.—Two indignantly silent fathers took a boy and a girl, each 12 years old, elopers, back to Windsor, Ont., after the children had spent some time in custody of Captain Breault of the truant squad, who had taken charge of them on Woodward avenue, where they had sought shelter from the storm.

Beatrice Strophonies and Nelson Varge were the children. Beatrice is considerably taller than Nelson, but just as badly smitten. They had told the truant officers they were brother and sister and had run away from an unkind aunt, but the story was not accepted. Later they told the officers their names and the parents were notified.

Before leaving for Detroit the girl had bought the boy a gold "engagement" ring and herself a necklace.

SHUN FRAYED COLLARS.

They Are Apt to Irritate the Neck and Cause Carbuncles.

The back of the neck is the commonest place for a carbuncle to appear. It is a most sensitive spot, not so much on the surface of the skin as in the underlying tisues, wherein are great nerves that communicate very closely with the brain. And it is in these tissues that the carbuncle spreads its "roots."

A carbuncle is a breaking down of the tissue caused by the germs called streptococcus and staphylococcus. These are the principal but by no means the only pus producing germs. They eat and break down the tissues. The white corpuscles of the blood rush to the spot and try to devour the attacking bacteria. Millions of them perish in the attempt, and pus is really a mixture of dead white corpuscles and germs that are exuding virulent poisons.

Carbuncles select the back of the neck so often because of the irritation caused by the collar if this be slightly frayed or roughened by careless laundering. The back of the neck is almost as much exposed to dirt as are the backs of the hands and needs washing almost as often. The rubbing of the collar scrapes off the scaly surface of the skin, which is its protection against germs of disease. This being gone, the germs enter unopposed.

And in a few days you are going around with a bandage on your neck and suffering awful torture. Fortunately the doctors have discovered an antitoxin that quickly cures carbuncles. Yet even when this is administered the patient is doomed to much pain.

The moral of all this is: Don't wear a collar that is the least bit frayed.—New York World.

HER SCHEME FAILED.

Plight of a Singer Who Yearned to Captivate Ludwig II.

King Ludwig II. of Bavaria had a wonderful winter garden at Munich, which was built on the roof of the residenz. There was also an artificial lake with a painted panoramic background of the Himalaya mountains, and when the king sat in the garden a "property" moon shed its gaseous light above the snow capped peaks.

The king used often to command artists from the theater to perform in the winter gardens, and I remember the fate which befell Josephina Schefsky, a large, tall woman, whose one wish in life was to attract Ludwig's notice. As all singers sang hidden behind screens, Josephina's chances of meeting the king face to face were exceedingly small. But what woman is ever at a loss for an expedient? She knew how chivalrously romantic Ludwig could be on occasions, so she decided she would fall into the lake and entreat him to rescue her.

The eventful evening arrived. Josephina warbled her sweetest for the benefit of the listening monarch and when the song was over plunged heavily into the lake.

There was a tremendous noise, and the water splashed to the topmost summit of the "Himalayas," but the lady remained chin deep in the lake, whose still waters were not so deep as they looked. "Save me, save me, Lohengrin!" cried the agitated singer.

The king rang the bell. "Get that woman out of the lake and send her home," he commanded, and the dripping Josephina, sadder and wiser, walked out of the water and out of the residenz forever.—Countess Marie Larisch.

A Letter For Schiller.

Schiller once received a letter which took five years to reach him. In 1793 the national convention created the author of "The Robbers" a French citizen as a tribute of admiration for the revolutionary ideas expressed in that work. The clerk charged with the dispatch of this civic diploma addressed the cover to "Citoyen Gille," and Schiller did not receive it until 1798. On its receipt he wrote: "This document has come to me from the kingdom of the dead. Danton and Claviere attested it. The covering letter is signed by Roland. All three have passed away."—London Chronicle.

Defining the Oyster.

"Now," asked the teacher, "who can tell me what an oyster is?"

Silence for a moment, while small brows were knit in strained effort at remembrance. Then little Tommy's facial muscles relaxed, and eagerly he raised his hand.

"I know!" he triumphantly announced. "An oyster is a fish built like a nut."—Everybody's.

She Smacked of Books.

"They tell me you kissed Miss Sonnet, the poetess, on yesterday's automobile excursion."

"Yes. That is true."

"Indeed! And how did you—ah—find her?"

"Miss Sonnet has a marked literary taste."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

No Exaggeration.

"You told me you were worth a million, and I find that you have only a paltry $10,000," said Blathers' partner.

"Well $10,000 is 1,000,000 cents," said Blathers.—Harper's Weekly.

Commercial Valuation.

"Politeness costs nothing."

"Yes," replied the gentleman of the old school. "Perhaps that's why people have so little respect for it."—Washington Star.

GREECE PUSHES WAR WITH VIGOR

Eighty Thousand Opposed by Hundred Thousand Bulgars

A BLOCKADE OF MACEDONIA

Hellenic Warships Also Guard Coast of Thrace—Bulgarian Minister Quits Athens—Surrender of Timok Division of Four Thousand Serbs to Bulgars—Decisive Battle Near

Athens, July 7.—With a naval blockade extending along the coasts of Thrace and Macedonia, the war is being pushed by Greece with great vigor.

A dispatch from Turkey has given some uneasiness, for while it was understood the Turkish government would remain neutral in this war of Greece, Servia and Montenegro against Bulgaria, information to hand indicates that, the army chiefs are urging Turkey to try to regain some of its lost territory.

The three powers attacking Bulgaria have also received assurances from Berlin that the other European powers will not intervene in this conflict, permitting the onetime allies to fight it out between themselves, so long as hostilities are localized.

The general rejoicing over the formal declaration of war against Bulgaria, however, was followed by depressing news of the surrender of the Servian Timok division, numbering 4000. Six machine guns, twenty-seven quick firers and a complete commissariat train went to the Bulgarians.

The treatment of 1284 Bulgarian prisoners who were taken to Belgrade is said to have aroused such hostility and hatred on the part of Bulgaria that there is no possibility of peace. The populace gathered in the streets over which the prisoners were taken, and even the presence of the dying and wounded in wagons did not check the outburst of cheering on the part of the onlookers.

News is anxiously awaited here of a great battle being fought over an area of fifty miles to the north of Salonica. One hundred thousand Bulgarians are opposing 80,000 Greeks. The Bulgarians forced the Greeks to take the offensive, and this battle, it is expected, will be a deciding factor.

So far the Bulgarians have outmaneuvered the Greeks and have forced them to abandon several advantageous positions, so these reports have caused considerable worriment in official circles here.

Thousands Killed or Wounded

London, July 7.—After ten days of fighting, more severe and deadly in character than anything in the last Balkan war, a little light begins to break upon the hitherto obscure operations.

In the first place the Servians have lost more men than in the whole previous campaign, and semi-official statements issued at Belgrade have the appearance of an intention to prepare the public for news of a disaster.

A conservative estimate of the men killed or disabled in last week's fighting fixes the number at from 30,000 to 40,000. Thousands of destitute refugees from the scene of the fighting are pouring into Salonica.

TO FIGHT RETIREMENT

Potts Will Consult Attorneys In Regard to the "Plucking" Order

Newport, R. I., July 7.—Captain Templin M. Potts, U. S. N., retired, who until Thursday last commanded the battleship Louisiana, started yesterday for Washington, where he will consult his attorneys. Friends said he intended to ascertain whether he had a chance to obtain reversal of the retiring board's action.

The "plucking" of Potts last week caused comment in naval circles. It gained a dramatic climax from the fact that the officer, on his last day of service, saved his ship after the starboard engine room was flooded from the blowing off of an outboard valve bonnet.

BOY SHOOTS HIS FATHER

Didn't Know Shotgun He Found In Greenhouse Was Loaded

Boston, July 7.—An old shotgun, loaded with birdshot, and a youth who didn't think it was loaded may be responsible for the death of the latter's father, John Fitzgerald of Manchester, N. H. The gun, the birdshot, the boy and his father were in a greenhouse in Milton when the accident happened.

The boy raised the gun, did not take deliberate aim, but did pull the trigger. A full charge of birdshot struck his father.

Thirty-Two Years Going Nine Miles

Paris, July 7.—A letter posted thirty-two years ago at Cougny St. Benoite, and directed to En, France, a distance of nine miles, has just reached its destination.

WAS HAMLET FAT?

With His Own Words He Doth Proclaim the Fact Quite Pat.

The traditional Hamlet of our stage is a lean, ascetic young person, an idealized, etherealized, heroic creature evolved for the delectation of the matinee girl. He is a horrid sham. Is it credible that such a man would have lacked the determination, the purposefulness, to put his revenge into operation pat upon the discovery? It is all very well to argue about his mental balance. It was his sluggish liver that stayed him and hampered him.

Hamlet's father was a fat and lethargic man by his own account.

Sleeping within my orchard,
My custom always of the afternoon,

he says in his ghostly interview.

We may then look for some clew to Hamlet's character as soon as he is alone on the stage. What are his words?

Oh, that this too, too solid flesh would melt!

It is a keynote that may not be glossed over as a beautiful thought, for the same idea bursts out some lines farther on, where he says of the world:

Things rank and gross in nature
Possess it merely.

Is it credible that such thoughts are there for any purpose save to guide us as to the nature of this prince? They serve a double purpose. Not merely do we learn that Hamlet was a fat man, but also that he was an unhappy fat man. Hamlet was a man to whom his bulk was an affliction. He was handicapped by it and knew that he was. Some such idea is discernible in every one of the great soliloquies. He scorns himself for a sluggard:

What is a man
If his chief good and market of his time
Be but to sleep and feed?

His mind, unhinged or not, is obsessed by fatness, and in the mad turmoil of emotions after he has slain Polonius his thoughts run:

We fat all creatures else to fat us, and
We fat ourselves for maggots.

It bursts out again in the "Oh, what a rogue and peasant slave!" harangue.

Ere this
I should have fatted all the region's kites
With this slave's offal.

And who but a fat, lethargic man would have said in the "To be or not to be" speech:

Who would fardels bear
To grunt and sweat under a weary life.

Does not the phrase bring to mind at once the picture of a fat man toiling at some loathed task?—London Express.

WON BY A DOLL.

A Gift That Brought the Rebellious Apaches to Terms.

Major Bourke, as aid to General Crook, once showed himself an effective peacemaker. He persuaded a band of Apaches to go back to their reservation by presenting a doll to a papoose. The incident was as follows:

General Crook had been trying to put these Apaches back on the reserve, but could not catch them without killing them, an action that did not appeal to him. One day his forces captured a papoose and took her to the fort. She was quiet all day, but her black eyes watched everything. When night came the child broke down and sobbed just as any white youngster might.

The fort was in despair until Major Bourke had an idea. From the adjutant's wife he borrowed a doll that had come to her little girl the previous Christmas. When the young Apache understood that it was hers to keep her sobs ceased and she fell asleep.

When morning came the doll was still clasped tightly in her arms. She played with it all day, and seemingly all thought of ever getting back to the tribe had left her.

Several days passed with no sign of overture being made by the tribe, and finally in despair the papoose, with the doll still in her possession, was sent back. When the child reached the tribe with the prize grasped in her chubby hands it created a sensation among the native Americans, and her mother later went back to the post with it. She was received in a hospitable manner and kindly treated, and the effect of her visit was such that through her overtures were made, with the result that soon afterward the entire band moved back on the reserve.—St. Louis Republic.

The Money Tennyson Made.

Lord Tennyson made a great income from his poems. When Strahan & Co. took over the publication of the poems in the sixties they agreed to pay Tennyson $25,000 a year in respect to the books already issued and pay the poet all profits on new work, less a modest 10 per cent commission. This second item generally meant $30,000 for each new volume. For many years before his death Tennyson drew a steady $50,000 per annum from his publishers.

A Bad Joke.

"A famous college president declares that there are no new jokes."

"Ah, he does, does he?" grimly returned the old codger. "Well, he ought to see the husband my niece has just married and brought home to live on me."—Judge.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MUSHROOM RECIPES.

WHEN you are unable to get fresh mushrooms the canned ones may be used instead.

If you use fresh ones be sure that there are none of them poisonous. There is no safe rule for detecting these. The test of placing a piece of silver with the mushrooms when they are stewing is not reliable.

Cooked In Scallop Shells.

Mushroom Scallops.—Take equal weight of mushrooms and breadcrumbs, pepper and salt to taste, together with a little parsley and butter, with a dash of mace.

Cut the mushrooms into slices, chop the stalks with a little parsley, pepper, salt and mace.

Line scallop shells with crumbs, put in the sliced mushrooms, scatter the chopped stalks over and cover with breadcrumbs, with a few bits of butter on the top.

Bake in a hot oven for fifteen minutes.

Curried Mushrooms.—Take some fresh mushrooms, remove the stems and wash them. Drain dry and season with pepper and salt. Dissolve one and a half ounces of butter in a frying pan and fry the mushrooms in this for a few minutes. Pour off the butter and add sufficient curry sauce to barely cover the mushrooms. Cook very slowly for another quarter of an hour. Serve on slices of crisp toast placed on a dish, pour the sauce around the dish and serve with some plainly boiled rice, dried till each grain stands apart.

With a Nice Sauce.

Grilled Mushrooms.—Take large mushrooms. Peel and season well. Coat them with olive oil by means of a brush and grill them gently.

Set them on a round dish and garnish in the middle with well softened maitre d'hotel butter.

Maitre d'hotel butter is thus made: Mix until perfectly combined four ounces of butter and three ounces of sifted flour. Soften into a cream. Add a tablespoonful of chopped parsley, a little salt and pepper and a few drops of lemon juice.

Mushrooms and Sweetbreads.—Place some sweetbreads in cold water. Wash and remove the thick membranes and arteries. Cover with boiling salted water and simmer twenty minutes. Drain, cover with cold water and drain again. Shred the sweetbreads. Prepare one-half cupful of fresh mushrooms, cut them in pieces with a silver knife and saute in one tablespoonful of butter. Add to the sweetbreads. Melt one tablespoonful of butter, without browning; add two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until smooth and thoroughly well cooked. Add one and one-half cupfuls of chicken stock and when the sauce begins to thicken one-half cupful of cream, the sweetbreads and mushrooms. When the sauce is heated season, take from the fire and add one egg yolk, beaten slightly.

Those who suffer with kidney backache, urinary ills or any little kidney or bladder disorder, want kidney help. Who can better advise than some Quincy resident, who has also suffered, but has had relief. Quincy people recommend Doan's Kidney Pills. Here's one case and there are many others.

Walter E. Berlucchi, barber, Quincy, Mass., says: "I needed a good medicine for backache which bothered me severely at times. My kidneys acted irregularly and when I took cold it settled in my back and kidneys. I was tired in the morning. Someone recommended Doan's Kidney Pills, and after I used four boxes I was relieved so much that I had no further need of them. I like to keep Doan's Kidney Pills on hand so that I always have them when needed. I wouldn't be without a supply."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

BAD FLAVORS IN BUTTER.

EXPERIMENTS show conclusively that some metals either cause or greatly accelerate certain bad flavors in butter.

Unless dairymen desire to run the risk of turning out a product which may taste like a mackerel they must not permit their cream to come in contact with iron and copper

Rusty cans, poorly tinned pasteurizers and exposed bolt heads in churns are all more or less responsible for an unpleasant flavor in butter which would otherwise be of first quality.

A Short Editorial
From the Boston Globe

RANDOLPH CREAMERY BUTTER

Never tastes "fishy"

It has a sweetness and delicacy of flavor found only in butter that is made in clean dairies, by clean workmen and of the best quality of heavy cream. No copper, no brass, no iron ever comes in contact with Randolph Creamery Butter.

It Costs No More Than Poor Butter.

THANKS TO NEWSPAPERS

Fourth of July Committee Extend Thanks

The Executive Committee of the Fourth of July Celebration Association met Saturday night to go over accounts and settle up. All bills that had been presented were checked up and if found correct were approved and will be paid immediately. In checking up the cash account it was found that quite a number who had promised to send checks had neglected to do so. As the association desires to settle up all accounts immediately all parties who have not forwarded their checks, as promised, are requested to do so immediately. If these checks come in the association will be able to square all accounts.

The Executive Committee voted to thank all who in any way contributed to make the day a success, especially to the local newspapers who did a great deal to make the celebration the success that it was.

WE ARE SOME PEOPLE.

Alexander Cowe, a talented and well-known Scotsman of South Quincy, moralizes as follows in the current issue of the "Boston Scotsman" on the dignity of labor and the disposition on the part of most people to avoid hard work:

"To hide the fool, keep cool," runs the old adage. But to keep cool during hot weather at the business of granite cutting is not so easy and we Scotch people, who have chosen the granite business as a means of earning our daily bread, sometimes think, that, in spite of us, we exhibit a good deal of the fool in us. "By the sweat of your brow shall ye earn your daily bread," is an edict said to be as old as man, but we in Quincy have gone a good deal further than that, and our penalt may be termed, "By all that's in you shall ye grind out a living."

We are not complaining of our lot, for we are a drudging good-natured people, but in these days of clever scheming to dodge hard work and yet get irch and respected we think there should be some way of saving us old Scoties the pain and discomfort inseparable from the fashioning of enduring memorials from the granite hill around us. The young American, be he of Scottish descent or descended from any other tribe of people, knows enough to keep away from hard work and they seem to succeed just as well, and by appearances a sight better.

But we have chosen for ourselves and we must "dree th' dreich" and really we are proud and happy that we are not worse off. And then again isn't our grandly stubborn overbearing nature born of this continual application of brute force and cold-blooded contempt for the finera nd mora modern methods of making a living.

What would the world be without us. For are we not useful. I mean the hewers of granite, for do we not hew and fashion the rocks into monuments which endure and commemorate to posterity that great men lived in these days. Dowe n ot chisel into suared and ornate blocks the hills of granite and pile them one uponan other until a grand and shapely temple stands for the use of man. Yes! we are some people after all, and the summer's heat nor the winter's cold will never deter us from doing what we consider is our bounden duty."

TELEPHONE POLE DOWN.

An 18 inch telephone pole on Granite street broke off at the butt Saturday afternoon and toppled across the street, blocking traffic until it was removed. The arms carried many wires and service was somewhat impaired on this circuit. Another pole will be erected today. The pole had evidently been in a dangerous condition for a long time but had escaped the company's inspectors.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. George H. Kendrick of 18 Beach street, Wollaston returned on Sunday from Belgrades Lakes, Maine, where they have been for the past three weeks. They will spend the remainder of the summer at Germantown.

The lost child call was sounded from Box 38 at 9.15 Sunday— night to summons assistance to search for Salvatoe the 11 year old son of Ferice Marini of 179 Liberty street who had been missing all day. It seems that the boy had gone away with some friends for a picnic and he returned home shortly after the alarm was sounded.

MABEL'S CHITCHAT

EPONGE FOR MOTOR BONNETS.

Any Woman May Make Traveling by Sleeping Car Almost Comfortable by Observing a Little Forethought In Planning Her Equipment.

My Dear Elsa—Don't you think men are more fastidious about small things than women? I have reached the conclusion that they are, and I was made to reflect upon this subject the other day when Dick, speaking about a girl whom he had met lately, agreed that she was mighty good looking, etc. "But," he added, "I don't like looking at her. Her hair is never tidy, pieces of it stream down the back, and there is something about the back of her waist that is disorderly."

I am giving you his own masculine expressions. I really think neatness appeals immensely to men. Soiled gloves, crushed handkerchiefs, untidy footgear have probably done more to disillusion the masculine creature than the culprits who permit themselves these disorders ever imagine.

I think men are more fastidious than women about food and table appointments. They don't insist upon the latest styles in centerpieces or small silver, but they demand a certain general average of good form, one might call it, in the appearance of the table and in the attractive serving of viands. Perhaps this is because women are habituated to the seamy side of cooking and to the sight of uncooked articles. Men see only the results of all these processes, some of them disagreeable enough, whereas even the most fastidious mistress sometimes, however reluctantly, comes upon the kitchen operator in the midst of a far from aesthetic task. Yes, the gilded youth of today is a most fastidious person His chief cult is himself, and anything that jars upon his sensitive nerves and his "culture" seems a heinous offense.

Now let's talk about motor bonnets. You're interested in them, and so am I, although I only ride in the cars of friends. Still one has to have suitable togs even for these occasional spins.

One of the most satisfactory materials I have found for the summer motor bonnet is eponge. It sheds the dust quickly, and if saturated with dirt and the stains of travel it can be easily laundered. One can make these bonnets at home for very little money. Care should be taken in shaping them to have a protection for the hair in the back. Many of the motor bonnets of eponge have a cuff or front portion of the new futurist or cubist silk, with rosettes of the eponge at either side. But don't, as you value your artistic reputation, indulge in cubist silks for any sartorial purpose whatsoever. The designs are an abomination and like nothing that has ever been seen on land or sea, except from a cubist standpoint.

The tailored types of motor bonnets are popular this year for golf and tennis, and for a windy day on the links or tennis court they are ideal. Raffia bonnets are so very light in weight and so very cool and comfortable on a hot day that they are in as much demand this season as they were last, despite the fact that they are no longer a novelty. Another advantage is that if one is clever with raffia a charming little piece of motor headgear may be made for a song. A becoming effect is gained by lining the bonnet with a bright colored silk and repeating the same color in the bow of ribbon used as trimming or in the tiny cluster of satin flowers.

You want to know how to comfortably travel on a sleeping car? As this will be your first experience on a long railroad trip I shall go into perhaps tiresome details as to "what to do."

In the first place toilet articles should be so condensed that a heavy suit case will not have to be opened to reach them. It is usually safe to leave a case under the berth. If the upper berth is not occupied and you have a lower berth you can sometimes use the upper one for the stowing away of your clothing, but failing this, with a hatpin you can fasten your skirt and petticoat to the heavy curtain and if a folding coat hanger is not in your kit the coat, too, may be attached to the curtain.

If the passengers aboard include many women they will probably take their own deliberate time in the dressing room and if the destination is to be reached early in the morning it is possible to nearly complete your toilet in the berth. I never take down my hair at night, but remove the shell pins and tie my locks up securely in a veil. A bottle of alcohol I always carry in my hand bag for cleansing my face. Here's a good tip. If the stateroom is not occupied give the porter an extra fee and it's yours for a dressing room.

I always feel safer sleeping in a light robe, for if an accident should happen a dark mass could not be easily discerned under the debris. Another idea which originated with an optimistic friend of mine is to have a shoe near the window. In case of a wreck the heel can be used to break the window glass and make escape more possible.

My last suggestion is this: Wrap your watch and purse in your stocking, and you won't forget it, for stockings are things one does not often appear without. With best wishes for a jolly trip, Faithfully yours. MABEL.

IMITATION PEARLS.

They Are Made With Essence d'Orient, a Fish Scale Product.

As the real pearl comes from the oyster, so to a large extent is the manufacture of artificial pearls dependent on a certain species of fish. The complete processes of manufacture are, of course, trade secrets, but it is interesting to know that it is from the brilliant scales of the ablet, or blay, that essence d'orient is produced, as with this essence imitation pearls are made.

The blay is a small fish with a green back and a white belly, and the essence is obtained exclusively from its white scales, which are covered with a pigment of metallic appearance. They are first treated with ammonia and then with fish glue, a powder being first obtained and then a paste which can be easily spread on glass.

In the early stages of pearl manufacture, about 1656, this essence d'orient was applied to little balls of plaster, but the temperature and the damp heat of the human body modified the adhesive qualities of the pearly matter and caused changes of color. In 1680 a Parisian named Jacquin invented a method of covering small glass balls with this essence, thereby producing the first practical artificial pearl.

In the north and east of France and in Germany blay fishing is actively pursued. About 4,000 are required to produce a pound of scales, which in turn gives a quarter of a pound of essence. —New York Press.

WINDOW GLASS DECAYS.

It Gets So Brittle In Time That It May Be Cut With Shears.

It is generally supposed that glass is practically immortal. But it has been demonstrated that glass exposed to the elements will decay and in time become so rotten that it is worthless.

Window glass exposed to the heat and cold and varying winds will, after a number of years, become so brittle that it can be cut with a pair of shears. It is said that light and darkness have different effects on glass, and this alternation alone will cause it to become fragile and in time worthless.

It is almost impossible to remove old windows from a building without breaking many of the panes of glass. New glass can be handled with much more carelessness.

There is a certain elasticity to new glass that leaves glass which has faced the weather for a number of years.

Street fakers who travel throughout the country selling scissors will obtain a lot of old window glass and show the crowds how wonderfully their shears will cut by clipping off strips of the glass just as a person would cut paper, when in fact the feat is due to the fact that the glass is actually rotten.—Harper's Weekly.

Many Names of the Thames.

The Thames has been the cause of much controversy. Its name has been variously stated as Tameses, Tamese. Tamises (at the juncture of the Isis and Tame, near Dorchester), Tamisa, Tamesa, Thamisia, Thamesis and finally Isis (where it flows between the Oxfordshire and the Buckinghamshire shores). Thus at Oxford it is still often called the Isis until it receives the shallow river Tame just below Dorchester, from which point it is called Thames. Historians trace this error to an early attempted division of the Latin word Tamesis into two words, Tame esis or Tame isis, suggested perhaps by the existence of the Tame in Buckinghamshire. The Saxons called it the Thames, ancient maps and documents designating it Thamesis Fluvius.—From "In Thamesland."

A Pioneer Tourist.

Thomas Pennant was the great pioneer of the tribe of tourists. He discovered Scotland, Ireland and the Isle of Man, taking with him a tame Welsh artist of genius to illustrate his travels. "I have had the hardihood," he wrote in 1771, "to venture on a journey to the remotest part of north Britain." So alluring was the account of his exploration that the country has ever since been inundated with southern visitors. Of Ireland he was able to make only an imperfect report, because of the "conviviality" of the people, and of the Isle of Man his impressions have perished. Pennant corresponded with Linnaeus and met Voltaire, whom he found to be a "master of English oaths."—London Standard.

Harvard Then a College of Children.

In 1685, when elected president of Harvard, the Rev. Increase Mather refused to resign the pastorate of the North church in Boston for the sake of "forty or fifty children." Therefore he used to ride back and forth from Boston to Cambridge, charging to the college the cost of shoeing and baiting his horse and mending his saddle. Many of these students were but twelve or thirteen years old.

Breaking the News.

"I have decided," said the congressman, "to retire to private life at the end of my present term."

"What's the matter?" asked his colleague. "Has somebody been sending you marked papers from home?"—Chicago Record-Herald.

TRAINING SHIP CREW INSPECT THE RIVADAVIA

Officers and 150 of Crew of The Presidente Sarmiento on Visit to Fore River Yard

Much Interest Shown in Monster Dreadnaught Now Nearly Completed

The officials of the Fore River Company are today entertaining the officers and about 150 of the crew of the Argentine training ship, the Presidente Sarmiento, which arrived in Boston harbor Monday afternoon from New York. The boat is 13 years old and is making its 13th trip around the world.

The visitors, wearing the white uniforms of the Argentine service arrived here this morning about nine o'clock, and were transported to the yards on special electric cars. With them were the local representatives of the Argentine Commission who have been superintending the construction of the Rividavia.

The ship picked up a anchorage off the New Haven docks Monday afternoon and shortly after there was an exchange of courtesies between the Navy Yard officials and Senior Romulo Naon, Argentine minister to the United States, Capt. Moneta of the Argentine battleship Rivadavia and William McKissoh the consul for Argentine at this port.

The ship carries 14 officers, 19 cadets and 300 men. On March 6 she left Buenos Ayres and after a call at St. Helena and Barbadoes she proceeded to New York, where she stayed an unusual length of time. Saturday she leaves for Lisbon and Eastern ports, making the last visit to St. Vincent.

Afer the formalities of the yard had been exchanged between the officials of the company and the officers an inspection of the different departments was made under the direction of the company officials.

The time at the Fore River however was spent mostly on board the Rivadavia, the dreadnought which is being constructed for the Argentine government. From the time the keel was laid until it is finally delivered into the proper hands at Buenos Ayres the watchful eyes of the Latin Republic inspectors have been on every inch of its hull and interior.

For that reason the men now here, although some of them have been assigned to the New York Ship Building Company's yard are in a fine position to fully explain the details of the steel monster which is to be the bulwark of an efficient navy for Argentine.

The men evinced more than an ordinary desire regarding various parts of the Rivadavia which are practically new in ship construction. It is highly probable some of the men on board the Presidente Sarmiento will be assigned to the Rivadavia when she goes into commission.

Wednesday, officers and crew, will celebrate the anniversary of Argentine's independence. The ship will be decked out with flags and bunting, salutes will be fired and ceremonials take place. The members of the commission at the Fore River yard will be the guests of the officers. It also might be mentioned that the keel of the Rivadavia was laid on the anniversary day of Argentine's independence.

The executive officer of the vessel is Horacio Esquival. The vessel is ship rigged and is equipped with engines that can make 15 knots an hour. Four five inch guns and four guns of smaller calibre complete her armament.

The ship was due in Boston harbor June 28 but an overtime stay in New York harbor and a delay while compasses were being adjusted off Block Island caused the late arrival.

At noon the Fore River Co. entertained the officers and crew at dinner which was also attended by the members of the Argentine commission.

ANNUAL FIELD DAY WEDNESDAY

Itinerary of Board of Trade Trip About the City

Plans have been completed for the second annual field day of the Quincy Board of Trade which takes place Wednesday. The plan includes an automobile trip about the city and a visit to some of the industries of the city.

All who took part in the trip last year will remember how successful it was and how although fairly well familiar with the various industries of the city, much surprise was shown at the extent of the business that was being done in Quincy. This year the places to be visited are different in some respects from those visited a year ago when but little time was given to the inspection of the granite industry.

The plans this year call for the trip to start from the rooms of the Board of Trade as near 12 o'clock noon as possible. Those who are to participate will meet at the rooms of the Board at 11.30 when a lunch will be served. As the party starts a moving picture will be taken of the party. The route of the trip is as follows:

Hancock to Adams to Beale to Farrington to Squantum Street to Boulevard to Squantum, Squantum back to Boulevard to Beach street to Williow street to Elm Avenue to Marlboro street to Waterston to Fenno through the Park to Butler road, to Hancock to Adams to West Quincy Boulevard, to Copeland street to Water street to Quincy Column Turning Co. to Intervale street, visit the Granite and Polishing Sheds in that vicinity to H. M. Hansen Shoe Company on Baxter street to Fore River Ship Building Corporation to Street Railway Power Plant to Norteman's for dinner, arriving at Norteman's about half-past five. Members are requested to report at once, and those having automobiles to loan to send word to the Secretary at once.

JULY FOURTH PRIZES READY

The judges on the feature parade on the morning of the Fourth met in the office of Mayor Stone at City Hall this morning and arranged for the awarding of the prizes. All cups and cash prizes have been placed in the hands of City Clerk Crane and all who have been awarded prizes may obtain the same by calling upon the City Clerk with the proper certification that they are the proper parties to whom the prizes were awarded. The list of prize winners was published in Saturday's Ledger.

LADIES DAY QUINCY Y. C.

Annual Event Scheduled for Thursday July 24

The annual ladies' day observance of the Quincy Yacht club is to be held off the clubhouse at Houghs Neck Thursday afternoon July 24 and as usual promises to be a social event of prominence. The program this year differs but little from other years as it includes a review and sail, luncheon at the clubhouse and an illumination and dance in the evening.

The review and sail will be held from 3 to 5.30 and for those who prefer to watch from the club piazzas a promenade concert will be given in the clubhouse between these hours

In addition to the yachts of the club fleet the committee have engaged a steamer so that all who desire to participate in the review and sail may do so. The preparatory gun will be sounded at 2.45 and at 3 o'clock a second gun will be fired which will be a signal for the fleet to get under way and pass in review of the flagship.

Should the day prove to be stormy the review and sail will be held on the following day, Friday.

On the return from the sail a luncheon will be served in the clubhouse to be followed by a social hour until 7.30 at which time dancing will be in order until 10.30. A special electric car will leave City Suare for the clubhouse at 1.40 and returning will leave the clubhouse at 11.05.

SALE SAVES FORE RIVER

Transfer to Schwab Insures Continuation of Business

By the transfer of the Fore River Ship Building Co., to the Fore River Ship Building Corporation the control passes to Charles M. Schwab, inasmuch as the capital stock is owned by the Bethlehem Steel Co. of which he is the guiding spirit, and by the transfer the continuance of the shipyard in Quincy is assured, and 4000 men will remain at work.

By the transfer H. Gerrish Smith, who has been the general manager of the old company becomes vice president in addition to being general manager. Harry Brown also remains a vice president and Joseph A. Sedgwick as treasurer. Mr. Schwab as chairman of the board of directors will be the guiding spirit, H. S. Snyder and Henry H. Schick other members of the board of directors are also the vice president and auditor of the Bethlehem Steel Co.

Francis T. Bowles, president of both the old and new corporations, says the sale was absolutely necessary to prevent the old concern from going into the hands of a receiver and ultimately out of business.

He says: "The company has not paid dividends. An overwhelming majority of the stockholders wanted to put their money into something that would pay dividends. It was absolutely necessary to obtain for the old company more capital or go into the hands of a receiver. It was proposed to wind up the affairs of the company and go out of business. At this juncture a customer was secured in the shape of the Bethlehem Steel Company. By this arrangement, Mr. Schwab renews the life of the shipbuilding industry and will undoubtedly continue to maintain a business so necessary to the development of the port of Boston. The community and the country are under obligation to Mr. Schwab for saving the company, for in recent years a number of shipbuilding concerns have gone out of business on account of unfavorable conditions, such as Roach's shipyard at Chester, Pa., W. R. Trigg Co., Richmond, Va.; Neafie & Levy, Philadelphia; Eastern Shipbuilding Company, New London, Ct., Crescent Shipyard, Elizabeth, N. J., and Sewall's Shipyard, Bath, Me."

McDEVITT WANTS VINDICATION

Takes Out Papers for Renomination as Senator

John J. McDevitt who was suspended by the Senate because he refused to make an apology for making charges against a member of the House which he failed to substantiate is seeking vindication and will become a candidate for reelection as Senator from the First Norfolk district at the coming fall caucuses.

McDevitt defeated Roger Wolcott last November in the First District owing to the fight being a three cornered one and he took his seat in January.

During the early part of the year while speaking at a meeting in Wollaston he made certain statements to the effect that an attempt had been made to bribe him in the legislature.

The charge was immediately taken up by the legislature and an investigation held during which McDevitt named a certain Representative as the one who had attempted to bribe him. He failed to substantiate the charges however at the hearing held and the Representative was exonorated and McDevitt was censured and suspended by the Senate, one of the conditions of the suspension being that if he submitted a satisfactory apology in writing by May 1, he would be reinstated. He failed to do this and for more than two months the First District was not represented in the Senate. Now he says he seeks vindication and Monday took out nomination papers at the State House.

GRAND JURY TO HOLD REUNION

The Norfolk jury whose term ended June 27, will hold a reunion and banquet at the Crawford House, Boston Wednesday evening at seven o'clock. The Quincy men who served that term are Councilman Stephen B. Little, Councilman Herbert G. Beeman, Charles W. Hall, R B. Stiff, William S Cain, Andrew M. Mischler, Daniel G. Butters and William B. Flynn.

BIDS FOR CONSTRUCTION FLEET OF ORE VESSELS

Fore River Company after Contract for Vessels to Run Between U. S. and Chile

Company is Branching Out. More Men Now Being Employed

It is announced that the Fore Ship Building Co., is out after the contracts to built a fleet of ore vessels to run between this country and Chile, and as it is said that Charles M. Schwab, president of Fore River Co., is also interested in the ore fields of South America, his interests would be doubly served should the Fore River Co. receive the contracts. That the Fore River Co., has put in bids for the fleet was admitted by the Fore River Co. this morning.

Should the contract be received it was said that it would be possible to construct the vessels, and have them completed in time for the opening of the Panama canal, which will give them a quick and direct route between the Atlantic coast and Chile.

In connection with the contracts for the ore vessels the Herald says:

In the light of the bids for the ore vessels, it is considered significant that there is a larger working force at the Fore River Ship Building Company's plant at present than at any time for a long while. The number of men now exceeds 4000.

In addition to this straw to show which way the wind is blowing, President Schwab is expected in Quincy during the coming week to look over the plant. It is reported that at that time he will announce plans for its development.

Business at the plant has materially developed since the Bethlehem Steel Company took control, though the number of employes is said to be even larger in proportion to the volume of contracts than at former times.

The considerable quantity of work which the old company had on hand before the Pennsylvania concern stepped in is being rapidly completed.

The big Argentine battleship Rivadavia is to have her trial trip next

It would seem like going too far when any one reading the Declaration of Independence July 4 is arrested for disorderly conduct.

A few real eugenic marriages are taking place, but in most cases stock certificates are accepted as much better than any indorsements the doctors can give.

It seems strange that President Wilson did not let the government clerks loaf Saturday, July 5, when he ought to have been pleased that they were willing to show up from Monday to Thursday.

An affort is being made at the dances to establish a six inches apart rule, but the dancers feel that this is a case where distance doesn't lend enchantment.

The decline of the Jap war scare is causing a distinct depression of spirits among the gun and ammunition makers.

Queen Mary does not want the women of her court to ride astride. They must keep up the bluff awhile longer that they have only one leg.

With 16,000,000 new women voters in Illinois, the politicians will probably show up at prayer meeting once in a while.

The postmasters are ordered to handle newspapers as quickly as possible after first class mail. It would promote the peace in many offices during the base ball season, if the newspapers came first of all.

THE CHILDREN IN VACATION.

Few are the children, particularly of the boys, who will admit that they like school. But before their play time was three days old, they have usually been whining about the house asking Mother to find something for them to do.

In school, with regular hours and disciplined time, under the quiet rule of a well trained teacher, their pursuits seem adapted to their abilities. They have enough out door life to keep them red cheeked, and the regular methodical calm of the school room quiets irritations.

Loose in the street and the playground, they tire themselves in hot sunlight, and wear out their nerves quarrelling.

Still children must have their playtime, though many educators feel that they would be better off if they had summer classes in handwork to give them regular discipline. The boys who have a garden to weed, papers to deliver, or any regular task that does not tire them, are better off than those that wander aimless and restless all day.

FIGHTING DANGEROUS DRUGS.

If the measures proposed by the International Opium Conference in session at The Hague are to be effectual, every state in this union must help fight these growing habits.

In most states in this country, if an opium fiend finds his supply low, he can borrow or steal a doctor's prescription pad. Then he goes to the next city, writes a prescription, and gets his demand filled at any drug store. A favorite trick is to print a fake letterhead indicating that the sender is a druggist. It goes to some distant manufacturer, usually it works. In Jersey City children recently were buying cocaine of peddlers.

There is profit in dangerous drugs. They don't cure a trouble, simply become indispensable. There is little profit in a remedy if a regular customer is lost by effecting a cure.

It is natural for almost any one to try to stimulate ebbing vitality and ease pain by opium and cocaine. The latter gives a half hour's capability for intense effort, so is often used by athletes.

A terrible price of moral, mental, and physical ruin is paid. The drug makes the exemplary mother indifferent to her children, it turns a guileless clergyman into a thief, and the shrewd business man into a pauper.

The physician who uses a hypodermc syringe freely does injustice to his patients. The remedy seems easy. Next time it hardly seems worth while to see a doctor. Often a boy of fifteen can buy a hypodermic syringe as easily as a jack-knife. These soft consolations seem for a moment to separate the victim from sorrow by a veil of silk. Soon this veil divides the taker from normal happiness by a wall of steel.

INDUSTRIAL ACCIDENTS.

Workmen's compensation laws will do much to prevent litigation and istribute the burden of industrial injuries. But they do nothing toward restoring the 600,000 of killed and maimed men that factories, mines and railroads turn out in this country in a year.

Realizing the burden of this tax, the National Association of Manufacturers is to send out a six car railroad train this summer through the great industrial centers, with exhibits and motion pictures to emphasize the dangers of industrial occupations, and the means for escaping them.

Experts say half the accidents are due to lack of safety devices, the other to the typical carelessnes of the American workmen. One authority says the American mechanic takes six times as many chances as the Englishman.

Workmen who sometimes try to rig up extemporized devices to protect whirling knives and gears says they are derided by their fellow employes. When a bunch of men get together, they seem to dislike to display either fear or caution.

Any one who is familiar with railroad work knows how the employes will jump rides on cars and engines, to save themselves five minutes walk.

One investigator found that in a recent year, 526 men were killed by industrial accidents in Alleghany county, Pennsylvania. Two thousand more came to hospitals for injuries. Of the latter number, one-fourth were permanently crippled.

Every one of these cases was a tax on the community, besides plunging some family into poverty. A crippled father means that the children must go to work before they are fit for the shop, and before they have acquired any business intelligence or ideas of citizenship.

The manufacturers' accident train is a fine project, and every employer handling dangerous equipment should give his men regular talks about avoiding these perils.

DENIES STRIKE HAS COLLAPSED

Several former employees of the Draper Mills at Hopedale are ni Quincy, having arrived at the conclusion that the strike instituted under the direction of I. W. W. men has collapsed after a long period of action on the part of the strikers and inaction by the officials of the company.

Caleb Howard of Trafford street, South Quincy, who assumed charge shortly after the suspension by the employees denied in an interview Monday that the strike had collapsed. Several Quincy people that are at present located in and about Milford and Hopedale state that former employees are again asking for work from the company and appear to be willing to return under the conditions prevailing at the time the strike was called.

Howard, although a resident of Quincy for some time was not widely nown until he headed a demonstration of I. W. W. members and sympathizers through the streets of Quincy on Sept. 30 as a protest against further imprisonment of Ettor, Giovannitti and Caruso who were confined to the Salem jail on charges which grew out of the Lawrence Textile strike and from which they were later cleared.

CLAIMS INNOCENCE

Lauterbach Tells Lobby Probers He Was "Vicarious Sacrifice"

Washington, July 8.—The strange tale of Wall street operations, begun before the senate's lobby committee last week by David Lamar, the "Wolf of Wall Street," had another chapter added when Edward Lauterbach, Lamar's associate in many undertakings, pleaded that he had been the innocent victim and the "vicarious sacrifice" in negotiations that have involved the Morgan firm, the steel interests, New York attorneys, members of congress and men of lesser prominence.

Lauterbach, long prominent in legal circles in New York, sat all day under a searching fire of questions from senators on the lobby committee. He admitted most of the facts alleged, but he declared that throughout the questionable negotiations he had been the innocent victim of those who had concealed facts or made misrepresentations to him.

PLAYED WITH REVOLVER

Eleven-Year-Old Uncle Causes Death of His Infant Nephew

Melrose, Mass., July 8.—Norman H. Lefeve, 7 months old, died last night as a result of having been shot through the jaw by his 11-year-old uncle, Barnes H. Lefeve.

The older boy was caring for the baby when the little one became restive. It occurred to the boy that a few days ago when the child was nervous he had found a revolver that had seemed to please the baby.

Barnes got out the revolver. On the previous occasion he had snapped it twice in the baby's direction and no explosion resulted. He tried it again this time, placing the barrel against the baby's right jaw.

He pulled the trigger, an explosion followed and the baby fell over. The bullet came out through the left side of the forehead and imbedded itself in the ceiling.

MILLIONS INVOLVED IN BANK FAILURES

Liabilities of One Institution Alone Reach $40,000,000

Pittsburg, July 8.—The First-Second National bank of Pittsburg, with $40,000,000 liabilities, the First National bank of McKeesport, a neighboring city, the American Water Works and Guarantee company and the banking house of J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, Inc., of this city, were forced into the hands of receivers through the failure of the first named institution to open its doors.

The closing of the First-Second National bank was ordered by Deputy Comptroller of the Currency Kane, after every effort had been made to meet the government requirements as to the legal reserve.

The Kuhn banking house has extensive interests in irrigation projects throughout the west end mines and street traction systems throughout western Pennsylvania, besides being a dominant factor in the American Water Works and Guarantee company.

MELLEN REFUSES TO REPLY

Lips Sealed on Railroad Matters Because of Indictment Against Him

Bridgeport, Conn., July 8.—President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad declined to answer questions as to his duties, powers and responsibilities at Coroner Phelan's final bearing into the cause of the recent Stamford wreck.

He also declined to define the specific powers of other officials, upon the advice of counsel. Mellen said if he were not under indictment for the Westport wreck and must face trial in September he would be glad to answer all questions, for he had no desire to conceal anything.

He said there were no written rules defining his duties, being guided by "experience and common sense."

TWO HUNDRED DEAD

Hotel Fire In Russian Town Where Fair Is Being Held

Simbirsk, Russia, July 8.—At least 200 guests were burned to death in a fire which destroyed a crowded hotel.

One hundred and fifty-four bodies were recovered after the fire had been put out, and others were incinerated. Nearly fifty persons are missing.

Dozens of persons went insane from the horror of the tragedy. The annual fair is being held here and the town is filled with visitors.

ACID IN GOLF BALL CORE

Swallowed by Boy Who Dies of Hemorrhage of the Lungs

Chicago, July 8.—Acid, placed in the centre of a golf ball to give it resiliency, was swallowed by Frank W. Perry, 12 years old, with fatal results. The boy died last evening of hemorrhage of the lungs.

Last Tuesday Perry found an old golf ball and cut it open. Inside he found a small sack, which he put in his mouth. The sack burst and acid ran down his throat.

RUSHED TO THE RESCUE.

Then They Made a Tactful, if Ignoble, Retreat to Safety.

An amusing story of the adventure that four men had with an irritable bull is told by a correspondent of the London Field. It contains a hint that may be useful to some reader who shall hereafter find himself in a similar disagreeable situation.

A farmer had a bull that he thought perfectly docile. One day he was quietly walking behind the herd when without any warning the bull turned and came straight at him. He had a heavy club in his hands, and he struck the animal with all his might over the head and eyes several times, when the club broke. For the moment he did not know what to do and thought it was all over with him, when he remembered that some one had told him that a bull would not attack you if you lay down, so he threw himself flat on his face and shouted for help, and three of his men who were not far off came running to the rescue.

When they got within about twenty yards he told them to come on their hands and knees, and in this way they came up alongside of him. The question then was what to do. They came to the conclusion that the only thing left was for all of them to retreat backward on their hands and knees. This they did, and the bull, never more than a yard off, followed them up with his head slightly on one side. Meanwhile he snorted and bellowed, and his eyes, showing all the whites, looked, the farmer said, as if they would come out of his head. At last the men reached the river bank, slipped over the edge and so escaped.

CUT THE RED TAPE.

Sarah Bernhardt's Lesson to Belgium's Customs Officials.

In the bad old days not so very long ago travelers, when they reached the Belgian frontier, were compelled to leave their compartments in the middle of the night in order to be present at the customs examination of their luggage.

A train in which Mme. Sarah Bernhardt was traveling reached the frontier at midnight, and the customs officials made their customary raid into her compartment. Roughly awakened from her beauty sleep and not in the best of humor, Mme. Bernhardt refused to descend.

The officials uncoupled the actress' carriage, dumped her luggage on the platform and went through it with conscientious vigor.

By this time the train was about ready to start.

"You are not going to leave without me?" cried the actress. "Be so kind as to couple my carriage at once."

"When we have completed our examination," replied the inspector and went on rummaging with redoubled zeal. But he did not know with whom he had to deal. The actress took up a portmanteau, placed it between the rails a few yards in front of the engine and calmly seated herself.

"And now," she said, "you can go on if you please."

The officials were helpless, and the Bernhardt car was attached to the train. This lesson in manners soon afterward produced a change in the Belgian customs.—London Telegraph.

Incidental Music.

One afternoon a couple from an adjoining town presented themselves to a Boston divine and asked to be married just as he was about to enter the pulpit to conduct an afternoon service. The minister replied that he regretted that he could not at that moment comply with their wish, but that immediately upon the conclusion of the service he would take pleasure in performing the ceremony. The lovers after demurring seated themselves in the rear of the church. When the minister had finished the service he made the following announcement: "The parties who are to be joined in matrimony will present themselves at the chancel immediately after the singing of Hymn 415, 'Mistaken Souls That Dream of Heaven!' "—Exchange.

As she transcribed them the recitation began like this:

"That's easy," said the expert to whom she submitted the notes. "It is part of a poem that begins:

"Laugh and the world laughs with you,
Weep and you weep alone."

FORE RIVER DEEPENING

Fore River Co. Petitions War Department for a Hearing

A dispatch from Washington says: Senators Lodge and Weeks have been appealed to by the Fore River Shipbuilding Company to try to get them a hearing on the project for the deepening of Fore River. Col. Abbott, the district Army engineer, recommended this project but it was turned down by the War Department.

The company claims it cannot get out the heavy draft ships it builds under existing conditions. The complaint was referred to the secretary of War.

BIDS FOR CONSTRUCTION

month. The United States battleship Nevada is also under construction in addition to two torpedo boat destroyers the Duncan and the Cushing, and six submarines.

A large number of commercial vessels are beng built also. The Bay State Fishery Company of Boston is having three steam trawlers built, the Cuban Distillery has ordered a molasses boat, the Union Sulphur Company a sulphur boat, and the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad is having three car floats, the largest ever built at the yard.

With few exceptions its is expected that this work will be finished this year, The Rividavia, it is expected, will be ready to go to Argentina in September. One of the two destroyers, the Duncan, is already having her trial test over the government course at Rockland. The three trawlers are so nearly completed that they will probably be launched in August, or in September at latest. The car floats will be ready in early fall.

The only vessels that it is expected will not be completed until next year are the Nevada and the Cushing. It is not thought possible to get them ready for launching this fall.

In addition to the possibility of contracts for several ore vessels, there is considerable conjecture whether the construction of a dry dock such as now exists at Charlestown, may not also be contemplated by the controllers of the Fore River Company.

Such, a dock, shipping interests declare, has long been needed in this state, and would give a big boom to such interests in the Bay State.

With this possibility in mind, they are pondering over the declaration of Mr. Schwab during his last visit to Fore River, and the possible significance of what he said. He declared that the same policy would be pursued at the Fore River yard as at the Bethlehem Steel Car Works—"one of progress and development."

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

Nearly every one of the 1400 comfortable seats in Quincy's pretty playhouse was filled last night, and the large audience showered unstinted applause on the many good features of the attractive program. The Kincaide Players scored another great success in their merry musical comedy "At the Royal Club." The stage was prettily set, and the electrical effects throughout the skit were mighty attractive. In fact, they are bettered by none.

The work of the entire company was splendid throughout. Some of the song successes were "That Hunting Melody" by Jarvis Joselyn; "One little, sweet, little girl" by George Lewis; "When You're Away" by Miss Wood; Travesty Trio, Jocelyn, Maurer and Lewis; "Thora" by Jack Wyatt; "Peg o' my heart" by George Davis and quartet. The biggest hit of all was made by the genial manager of the company George C. Davis who sang "I'm the Guy" assisted by several girls. They were called back four times and even then the audience loudly clamored for more. The whirlwind dance by Mr. Foley and Miss Gilrain well done and got great applause.

The vaudeville attractions were all good. Albano the Italian master of the accordeon, proved an artist of exceptional ability. Kennett & White, two clever celtic comedians, in their songs and jokes were the cause of continuous meriment and applause for many minutes. The Pictures and Orchestra, as usual, pleasing to all.

A Surprise For Joaquin Miller.

When London society after the publication of "Songs of the Sierras" began to lionize Joaquin Miller he was much puzzled at receiving three letters in quick succession from an admirer who signed himself "Dublin," without any initials. One of these contained an invitation to breakfast, which he accepted, and then discovered that his host was the archbishop of Dublin. After his return to America Miller wrote: "At Dublin's breakfast I met Robert Browning, Lady Augusta, a lot more ladies and a duke or two. After breakfast Dublin read poetry to me, with his five beautiful daughters grouped about him. When I went away he promised to send me his books. He did so. I put them in my trunk and did not open them till I got to America. Fancy my consternation as well as amazement and delight to find that Dublin was Trench, the author of 'Trench on Words.' Ah, why didn't he sign his name Trench, for I knew that book almost by heart?"

Jarred Into a Laugh.

Audiences are put in good humor in all sorts of ways, writes Spencer Leigh Hughes, M. P., in "The Art of Public Speaking." On one occasion I was present when John Morley addressed a very large and overcrowded meeting, and when he rose there was much disturbance at the back, not because of hostility to the speaker, but because men's ribs were being crushed almost to breaking point. At last the disturbance ceased, and, as often happens on such occasions, a dead silence fell on the expectant crowd. Mr. Morley had just uttered the words "Mr. Chairman" when in a tone of anguish and rage a voice could be heard snapping out, "Who in blazes are you shoving?" and the place rocked with laughter, while even the scholarly and distinguished man on the platform could not forbear to smile. Then the meeting settled down in a most friendly spirit.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Chinese Nurses.

"One thing that you can't find in New York is a professional Chinese nurse," said a doctor. "The town was raked fore and aft for one not long ago. A sick American recently come home from the orient declared that a Chinese nurse was essential to rapid recovery, and the doctors on the case instituted a thorough search for such an attendant. Every person I have met who has ever been attended by a Chinese nurse cannot be satisfied with any other. There are a number of them in Chinese cities. They have been trained by American and European nurses and missionaries, but as soon as they get the hang of the business they go their instructors one better in gentleness and soothing ways. It is common for persons who have known their ministrations abroad to ask for them here, but they cannot be found."—New York Times.

—The Houston Post says it is the duty of women to fry steak. Wrong! says the Brockton Enterprise. It isnobody's duty to fry steak. It should be made a penal offence. But perhaps a lot of women would be perfectly willing to broil good steaks if their helpmeets have the ability to rustle around and buy the raw material.

A CAMPAIGN OF ODDITIES.

When the Log Cabin and Hard Cider Enthusiasts Rejoiced.

Political enthusiasm has taken many forms during the lifetime of this nation. The Harrison-Van Buren presidential campaign of 1840 was in some respects the most remarkable the country has ever seen. "From May till November," says one historian, "it seemed as if all ablebodied citizens simply went about in processions to attend mass meetings."

The great oddity of the campaign was the log cabin, the coon and the cider barrel. The log cabin idea originated with an opposition paper which had said slightingly that "William Henry Harrison better go back to Indiana and stay there in his log cabin drinking hard cider."

The taunt was taken up by Harrison's followers. Log cabins sprang up all over the Union. In every town there was a house warming, and the log cabin was thrown open to the public amid general rejoicing. On the roof was a live raccoon, and a barrel of cider stood before the door, where any one who desired might drink all he chose.

It was a campaign of oddities. Some of the symbols have never been surpassed for genuine absurdity.—Magazine of American History.

SIMPLICITY IN THE HOME.

There Is Such a Condition as Having Too Many Furnishings.

Many nervous, irritable, dissatisfied, unhappy women would become calm and contented if they would store, give or throw away half of their belongings. Some have abandoned elegant residences and taken their families into hotels or boarding houses who could have continued to keep up their homes if, instead of giving up their houses themselves, they had done away with the superfluous furnishings.

Some one, often the mistress herself, must clean and care for every article of furnishing, no matter how humble its use or how ornamental its function, and this round of duties proves many times to be a grievous burden on delicate shoulders.

There is such a thing possible as having too many utensils and tools to work with, so that taking out, replacing and keeping them clean and in order add to the daily labor. Too much furniture in a room, so that walking through it seems a perilous attempt to steer a course without disaster, too many garments to wear, for time is consumed in caring for them, and even in choosing what to put on.—Suburban Life Magazine.

A Widow's Curious Cap.

A very curious cap forms the "widow's weeds" of the Australian aborigine in one part of the great island continent. Near the northeast bend of the Murray river it is the custom for widows to attend upon the tombs of their departed lords. Then after shaving their heads they cover them with pipe clay kneaded into a paste. The head is first covered with a net to prevent the clay from sticking too tightly to the skin, a misfortune which is partly averted by the amount of grease with which every Australian native is anointed. A layer of this clay several inches in thickness is plastered over the head and when dry forms a sort of skullcap exactly fitting the head on which it was molded. As it weighs several pounds, the widow's cap cannot be comfortable.

Weather Vanes.

The best weather vanes are made with the greatest nicety and precision, so that they balance perfectly and turn with the least possible wear. The vane is, of course, longer on one side of the socket than on the other or it would not turn with the wind, but its weight is the same on both sides. If it is a narrow vane, for instance, the weight of the solid head is easily made equal to that of the longer, projecting but thinner feather end, and all vanes, whatever they may be, are balanced as to weight and so adjusted that they turn easily and with the least possible friction.

Understanding.

A well known artist tells of an amusing colloquy in an art gallery where two young women were viewing a copy of Millet's "Gleaners."

One of the young women was carried away by her enthusiasm. "How beautiful! How wonderful! What art!" she exclaimed. "Above all, how natural!"

Then, after a pause, she said, "But what are those people doing?"

Drawing nearer to read the title, she was enlightened. "Oh, now," she added, "I see! Gleaning millet! How wonderful! How beautiful!"—Exchange.

A Substitute.

Mrs. Crabshaw—When the woman next door returned after being away a week her husband was just contemptible enough to say that he hadn't missed her. Crabshaw—I don't suppose he did. He had the talking machine going all the time.—Judge.

Musical Note.

Tardy Arrival (at the concert)—Have I missed much? What are they playing now? One of the Elect—The "Ninth Symphony." Tardy Arrival—Goodness! Am I as late as that?—Harper's Bazar.

Her Advantage.

"Your daughter has an angelic disposition."

"Yes; we always let her have her own way about everything."

TRIBUTE TO W. C. T. U.

Rev. Fred A. Moore, pastor of the Murray Universalist church of Attleboro who gave the address of welcome to the members of the Bristol County W. C. T. U. who attended the recent convention in this city gave his personal impression of the Institute as follows:

"This is the first gathering of the W. C. T. U. that I have ever attended. I was impressed by the earnestness of all who had any part in the meeting, not only the speakers, but equally so the attendants in the pews. The depth of this quality in Mrs. Elizabeth B. Lamb, the County President, I know intimately as her minister. The evidence of it in Miss Elizabeth Gordon, Mrs. Katharine Lent Stevenson, and the others on the program, was inspiring and delightful.

The spirit of comradeship in a great far-flung battleline for righteousness, temperance, and the Kingdom of God was conspicuous throughout the day. And by no means the least of my thoughts of the day was that of the manifested ability of these women to maintain and extend this great work in the spirit of that peerless woman, Frances E. Willard.

My conviction was strengthened that if more people could only known the W. C. T. U. more intimately, the cause of establishing women's true estate and rights in society, and equally so the purposes and propaganda of the organization itself, would be splendidly advanced in the esteem of men and of a larger number of women.

The Institute was a fine demonstration of the beauty of holiness, that kind of holiness that is enlisted in the divine task of building up the whole life for the whole humanity in the whole world, the holiness of the life of Jesus Christ. Would that more of our people in the Christian Church could feel the call of the Master to this kind of service, as being the literal following in His steps!"

PERFECT SPHERES

With All His Scientific Skill Man Cannot Produce Them.

THE CURVING OF A BASEBALL.

It Is Possible Only Because the Ball Is an Imperfect Globe and In Comparison With Its Size Much Rougher Than the Surface of the Earth.

The real reason why a baseball can be thrown so that it will describe wonderful curves during its progress through the air is that every such ball has a surface made up of mountains, valleys, craters, canyons, gorges, plains and other irregularities of the surface that, when the difference in size is taken into consideration, makes the surface of the earth seem like plate glass.

If it were possible to make a perfect sphere—if it were possible to make a baseball with an absolutely smooth surface and an exact sphere—no pitcher in the world could make it curve. The very best pitchers baseball has ever known or probably ever will know could not make the ball deviate a hair's breadth in its flight.

And so while it is partly in the art or knack the professional pitcher has in holding and releasing the baseball as he throws it, it is also due to the fact that a baseball has a wonderfully rough surface against which the air catches and turns it that gives it the curve.

If you pass your hand over a plate glass it moves smoothly with nothing to retard it. If you pass your hand over an unplaned board you can feel the roughness—splinters we call them. You cannot move your hand as easily over the board. This is the same principle with the baseball. There is a roughness in its surface that catches in the air and forces one side about or retards that side. This has but one result—to make the baseball leave its straight course, and in doing this it describes a curve.

This does not detract in the least from the cleverness of the pitcher who can so accurately judge his muscular control as to make a baseball curve up or down, right or left. But the fact remains that it is the roughness of the baseball that makes all his pitching cleverness possible.

Take a brand new league ball in your hand. It looks to be a perfect sphere—that is, absolutely even and uniformly round and as "smooth as glass." And it may be as smooth as glass, for glass also has a rough surface.

Put a baseball under the most powerful microscope, enlarge it microscopically 10,000 diameters, and what do you see? The very thing mentioned in the first paragraph of this article. The surface is rough. It looks like the landscape in the Alps or Yellowstone park or any other rough section of the earth. It has peaks, ranges, ridges, valleys, plains and holes, gulches and all sorts of uneven places, and if the earth could be made as small as a baseball it would be practically a perfect sphere and absolutely smooth. This is because the highest mountains of the earth and the deepest valleys would be millions upon millions of times smaller in comparison with the rough uneven places on a baseball if either the earth were reduced to the size of a baseball or a baseball enlarged to the size of the earth.

If this were not true the earth would not revolve so regularly upon its axis. It would perform an "in shoot" or "out shoot" and curve off through space.

Even the billiard ball has a surface much rougher in comparison to its size than the surface of the earth, and we refer to a billiard ball as about the smoothest thing known. "As smooth as a billiard ball" is a well known simile. For the same reason that a perfectly smooth baseball could not be curved, a perfectly smooth and perfectly round billiard ball could not be made to curve on the table. It would not take "English," as billiard players call it when they make a ball go forward and then roll backward or in any direction just by the manner in which they strike it with a chalked cue.

This fact of roughness causing it to spin becomes all too evident when a player forgets to chalk his cue and plays several shots thereafter. If the leather tip of the cue becomes shiny it will slip on the ball. There is no purchase with which it can take hold. But chalk is sticky stuff, and the granules are large, so that a well chalked cue has a very rough surface, and this rough surface of the tip of the cue fits into the rough projections on the ball, and thereby a ball can be given a lot of twist. In order to accomplish this successfully, moreover, the billiard cloth nap must be new and therefore rough.

During recent experimentation with regard to the kinetic theory of gases a Belgian scientist desired to find out how perfect a sphere could be made in order that by the clashing of these together an idea might be secured of the effect of the collisions of the spherical atoms that make up a gas. The project had to be abandoned at last because no machinery could be constructed that would turn out a perfect sphere artificially, and nature has no perfect sphere of large size in all her many forms of matter. Perfect disks could be made, but a round ball was beyond the limits of human accomplishment.—New York American.

Union Carmen and Boston Elevated Road In Deadlock

SITUATION IS VERY SERIOUS

Order to Quit Work Will Be Issued Tonight If Today's Conferences Are Fruitless—Union Leaders Say Company Is Inviting Trouble by Discharging Several Road Men

Boston, July 8.—A strike of the members of the Boston Street Carmen's union will be ordered at a meeting at 6 o'clock tonight, if the officials of the Boston Elevated company still refuse to meet the terms of the union on the question of arbitration.

This action was decided upon late last night by the executive board of the union, following the report of their representative at conferences at the Chamber of Commerce that no decision had been reached, and all attempts toward an amicable adjustment were apparently a failure.

With the strike order decided upon last night, the members of the executive board of the union issued a statement in which they declare the Boston Elevated is trying to force a strike, by discharging members of the union employed in the road department.

"Unless this attitude on the part of the company is immediately changed a lockout will exist, which will compel our members to strike immediately," was part of the statement.

Conferences which lasted over a stretch of nearly twelve hours yesterday were attended by a special committee of the Chamber of Commerce, representatives of the Boston Elevated company and the Street Carmen's union.

Every plan which would result in both sides agreeing on a man who would pick the third member of the board of arbitration to settle the wage demands of the union was placed before both sides by the members of this committee, but at 11 o'clock last night, when the committee adjourned to meet this morning, it was understood a deadlock existed.

The special hearing by the state board of conciliation and arbitration at the state house today will be attended by a committee from the union. An invitation has been extended to the officials of the Boston Elevated company, but no information could be had as to whether they will accept or not.

No statement as to the plans proposed by the committee of the Chamber of Commerce for a settlement would be made by the members of the committee, other than that progress was made toward a settlement.

A telegram from the headquarters of the Algamated Association of Street and Electrical Railway Employes of America granting the sanction for the strike vote of the union was received.

MOTION NOT ENTERTAINED

British Laborites Demand Rand Inquiry In House of Commons

London, July 8.—The Labor members of the house of commons demanded from the government an explanation of the use of troops against the striking miners in Johannesburg, South Africa, and Robert Outhwaite, a Liberal member, moved the adjournment of the house as an expression of disapproval, but the speaker declined to entertain the motion.

James K. Hardie, the Socialist, then demanded who was responsible for the action of the troops.

Lewis Harcourt, secretary for the colonies, said Viscount Gladstone, governor of the Union of South Africa, sent 3650 soldiers to Johannesburg at the request of the officials there after 1000 special police had proved unable to check the rioting.

Roosevelt and Two Sons Going on Long Sight-Seeing Adventure

New York, July 8.—Theodore Roosevelt left here with his sons Archie and Quentin for a two months' vacation in the west. The time will be spent in the wilds of Arizona and the grand canyon. It is understood that not a single gun was taken along for the shooting of game, as the trip is to be strictly a sight-seeing adventure.

The colonel was not expected to leave before today and the statement of his secretary that he left ahead of time "to avoid being disturbed" was taken to mean that he wished to escape quizzing as to his stand on the coming mayoralty election.

DEMOCRATS AGAIN CAUCUS ON TARIFF

Plan to Bind Senators to Support Bill Is Considered

Washington, July 8.—Senate Democrats caucused again on the resolution to bind them to support the tariff bill. Opposition which developed Saturday reappeared, but Chairman Simmons and other champions of the bill argued that such action was necessary to expedite debate and to assure the passage of the bill.

Simmons will report the bill to the senate later this week. It is now a little more than three months since the committee on ways and means introduced the measure in the house.

When the bill gets into the senate Simmons intends to follow the Underwood plan of parcelling out schedules to members of sub-committees.

BODY NOT IDENTIFIED

Death of Man Found In Swamp May Have Been Accidental

Boston, July 8.—Although a dozen persons called at the city hospital morgue yesterday in the hope of identifying the body of the man found lying in a swamp beside Columbia road, no identification was made and no clue as to details of the peculiar death was found.

The theory that the man was affected either by the heat or by liquor, and after walking in the swamp a short distance, stumbled and was drowned, is considered probable.

Denver, July 8.—Challenging her husband to a "trial by battle," Mrs. Vencentalli Palacio made good her defense in a duel with knives against the accusation made against her by Samuel Palacio, until the police, who had been summoned by the neighbors, broke through the locked doors and separated the combatants.

Each received many wounds, which, however, are not serious.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Sunday Concerts on Boston Common Would Have Scandalized the Puritans—Today They are Commended by Visitors, Tourists and Natives—Anti Suffrage and Anti Socialist Societies Are Very Active—Such Work Is All Educational—Boston Bachelors Claim Not to Mind the Shortness of Life—A Little Lady Proves th Folly of Getting Mad in Warm Weather.

Since the Chicago investigation showing that married men live longest many Boston bachelors have been heckled and badgered by their acquaintance who argue that self preservation should put them into the class of benedicts. The usual answer of the real or suppositious woman hater is that he prefers to die young.

How foolish it is to get excited about trifles in such torrid weather as New England has been experiencing is illustrated by the incident of a wilted little lady who climbed up the steps of a Boston street car and seated herself with a sigh. She gave the conductor a dime and received a nickel which she continued to hold on her hand. Some other passengers got on and once again the conductor came around and demanded the lady's fare. "I paid it," she protested feebly. He insisted and she paid again. A man sitting next to her was indignant. "I saw you pay that first fare," he said. "If I were you I'd make a complaint about it." "Oh dear me, no," replied the lady. "I might sometimes, but on a day like this it isn't worth while to argue about a nickel."

Sunday afternoon concerts on Boston Common might be expected to cause the shades of the Puritan forbears to rise from their graves in the nearby Granary burying ground. Yet no such protests from another world greeted the first band concert given from the new ornamental bandstand which the late George F. Parkman's money has provided for Boston. The only protests were from those who objected to the lack of seating arrangements. It is all very well, says one of these protestants, to have a fine band in a fine bandstand, but how about the tired shop girl and the overworked car conductor who on Sunday afternoon might like to listen to strains from Wagner and Strauss but not while standing on those poor weary swollen aching feet. Consequently it is not surprising to find people writing letters to the newspapers commending the Parisian plan of allowing a concession to a contractor who lets chairs at two cents each. The chief doubt appears to be whether an American could make good on so small a price for the convenience. The generally favorable impression made by the music of these concerts is indicated by the letter of a visiting New Yorker, Mr. Mark Werthmann, in which he says: "However, be it said that the conductor and the band were good and that the programme was well chosen and well played. There would have been no occasion to escape any part of it, even were there a printed programme to give warning. The rendition of Tschaikowsky's '1812 Overture' was especially notable, comparing favorably with the one heard the night before at Symphony Hall. And the bells were not so flat." It is already evident that to visitors from the hinterland as well as to the poor of the North and West Ends these concerts will prove a great democratic opportunity.

Famous in the old days for its "anti" spirit Boston still has at least two very vigorous "anti" societies. One of these is the Massachusetts Society Opposed to Extension of Suffrage to Women, which is planning a state wide campaign this summer in opposition to the "Votes for women" movement. The anti suffrage organization claims to have largely increased its membership in the past few months, which claim may well be true for a surprising number of people who formerly were perfectly indifferent to the subject are now taking sides. Publicity is gradually bringing about conditions in which the public will be ready to decide which is right. The anti socialist association, which is known as the Common Cause Society, and which has been holding meetings on Boston Common, has not apparently been making any claims concerning its membership—it is only about a year old—but it would not be strange if it, too, found many Massachusetts people glad and anxious to join its ranks, for thanks largely to Lawrence and Ipswich and Hopedale Socialism is also becoming an issue in the old Bay State.

LADY SACKVILLE GETS FORTUNE

Effort to Break Sir John Scott's Will a Failure

NEARLY $5,000,000 INVOLVED

Jury Finds No Undue Influence or Fraud on Part of Daughter of Former Minister at Washington—She Is Not In Court When "Fight For Millions" Comes to End

London, July 8.—The jury which for eight days has been hearing the suit to break the will made by the late Sir John Murray Scott by which he left nearly $5,000,000 to Lady Sackville, daughter of the former British minister at Washington, sustained the will. The jury found there was no undue influence or fraud on the part of Lady Sackville.

Lady Sackville, the person mostly interested in the outcome of the "fight for millions," was not present in court when the concluding stage of the case opened. It was stated that she felt the need of rest after her experience on the witness stand last week.

When Presiding Judge Evans took his seat, the court was again crowded with representatives of aristocratic families.

Sir Edward Carson at once began to address the jury on behalf of Lord and Lady Sackville, upholding the validity of the testator's will. He said Sir John could have changed his will, made twelve years before his death in favor of the Sackvilles, at any time if he had wished to do so. The only hope of the plaintiffs, the members of the Scott family, he argued, was in exaggerating the trivial quarrels of a long friendship into the appearance of something important. If the charges were true, Carson continued, the Sackvilles would be hounded out of society.

Frederick E. Smith, counsel for the plaintiffs, said the jury had the choice of two views of the case. "One is Lady Sackville's own view, expressed by herself, that she would have liked Sir John just as much if he had not a penny, and the other view is that she followed up this chance acquaintance in order to exploit his wealth, and to obtain as large a portion of it as possible for herself and her family."

Sir John Scott was a man easily influenced, Smith said. He was physically weak and constitutionally incapable of asserting himself or of risking a scene or a quarrel. Hence he gave way to Lady Sackville because he was alarmed and dominated by her temper. He continued:

"In all your experience of life you have never encountered a more assertive and dominating personality than Lady Sackville. In cross examination she showed an extraordinary and uncanny cleverness in dealing with every phase of this case."

PLAYED WITH MATCHES

Three Little Sisters Burn to Death While Parents Are Shopping

Boston, July 8.—Three negro children were burned to death yesterday afternoon at 61 East Lenox street as a result of their playing with matches in bed.

Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Johnson, had gone shopping, and put the three—Jessie, Annie and Edith, the oldest 4 years old—in bed to sleep while they were gone.

Neighbors saw smoke coming from the windows of the apartment and rang an alarm. The firemen found one room filled with smoke, with crackling flame playing about the bedstead. A dash of water from the hose put out the fire, and then on the bed they found three charred bodies. The property damage was slight.

FIGHTS FOR LOWER PRICES

So-Called Ice Trust Gives Advice to Other Wholesale Dealers

New York, July 8.—War between wholesale ice dealers created a situation without precedent in New York—that of the so-called ice trust fighting for lower prices. The company—the Knickerbocker—is selling ice wholesale at $4 a ton; competitors are charging $5 and $6. As a result, the Knickerbocker is swamped with demands and faces a shortage.

It says it will not raise the price, and the president issued a statement appealing to the other companies to reduce their wholesale rate to attract the business the Knickerbocker cannot handle. The other dealers have so far refused to come down.

ARRESTED AT MEETING

Sylvia Pankhurst Had Failed to Obey Summons to Court

London, July 8.—Miss Sylvia Pankhurst was arrested, together with several other suffragettes, at a meeting at Bromley, last night.

A warrant had been issued for her arrest because she had failed to appear at Bow street police court last Saturday to answer a summons charging her with inciting a crowd to raid the residences of the ministers in Downing street on June 29.

Housemaid's Love For Husband Gets Her Into Clutches of Law

Long Branch, N. J., July 8.—Cupid in the new role of "assistant burglar" is the latest summer sensation here. Mary Kruger, housemaid, brought the charge against him. She says that only through falling in love with James McIntyre, former butler, was she led to betray her mistress, Mrs. Harry L. Haas, and permit McIntyre to enter the house to steal jewels valued at $50,000. The gems were recovered from McIntyre and Robert Rhimb, his partner, at Greenwich, Conn.

"He told me he would go to Scotland, where he would buy a hotel," wept Mary. "We were secretly married this spring and the prospects of being the mistress of a hotel in Edinboro turned my head. I just loved him blindly and I did what he said."

ADMIRALS MUST BE OF FIGHTING STUFF

No Other Kind Wanted In the Navy, Declares Daniels

Washington, July 8.—Another shock was given the "swivel chair admirals" of the navy when Secretary of the Navy Daniels declared that hereafter no captain will be promoted to the rank of admiral merely because he has reached that grade through length of service and his ranking in the list of officers. He must display qualities to make him a "fighting admiral," one who can be of use to the nation in time of war.

The secretary made this declaration in discussing the case of Captain Templin M. Potts, who proposes to fight his recent retirement by the "plucking board" before congress.

POLICE DOUBT HIS STORY

Check Suspect Says He Killed Pearl Bryan and Seven Others

Los Angeles, Cal., July 8.—Arrested on the charge of having passed a bad check at a seaside resort, Simon P. Helfinstine, who is in jail here, startled officials of the sheriff's office with a purported confession, in which he detailed a series of eight murders in Ohio. These include the slaying of Pearl Bryan, for whose death the medical students, Jackson and Walling, were executed.

Some of the circumstances of the crimes, as related by Helfinstine, do not coincide with facts, and county officials are inclined to believe the prisoner is suffering from insanity.

Pearl Bryan was supposed to have been killed in Cincinnati, but Helfinstine says he murdered the girl in Toledo and then shipped the body to Jackson and Walling in Cincinnati.

TWO LYNCHINGS IN FLORIDA

Pieces of Ears of Alleged Slayer of Sheriff Cut Off For Souvenirs

Jacksonville, Fla., July 8.—A mob of more than 100 men took Roscoe Smith, a negro, to the spot where he is alleged to have killed Sheriff T. S. Cherry of Clay county, and after riddling their victim with bullets, mutilated his body and cut off pieces of the ears for souvenirs.

Pensacola, Fla., July 8.—An unidentified negro who had assaulted a young white girl at Bonifay was taken from a railway train at Milton by a mob, hanged to a telegraph pole and then shot.

SERBS SUFFER HEAVY DEFEAT

Division of 15,000 Wiped Out by Death or Capture

BUT 4000 SERVIAN SURVIVORS

Opposing Troops Fairly Annihilating Each Other In Conflict Now Raging—Ten Thousand Greeks Killed and Wounded Since Fighting With Bulgarians Begun—Contradictory News

Vienna, July 8.—Eleven thousand officers and men of the Servian Timok division were killed during a battle with the Bulgarians, in which it was defeated, according to the Sofia correspondent of The Reichspost. The division, which consisted of 15,000 men, was outflanked and surrounded by a Bulgarian army. Only 4000 of the Servians survived, and these were taken prisoners.

According to other newspaper reports, a Bulgarian column of 15,000 troops has succeeded in reaching the Servian town of Vranya and is threatening the line of retreat of the Servian army.

The Bulgarian and Servian troops are fairly annihilating each other in the conflict now raging. The Servians were victorious at Kotchana, according to latest reports, and entered the city. In the fighting around the city three Servian regiments were annihilated, according to a dispatch from Lieutenant Wagner.

Greeks Have Lost Ten Thousand

Athens, July 8.—The Greek casualties since the beginning of fighting against the Bulgarians total 10,000 killed and wounded, according to official reports.

London Hears Contradictory News

London, July 8.—Reports of the progress of the Balkan conflict reaching here continue to be hopelessly contradictory as to whether Servia is successful over the Bulgarians or the forces of King Peter are being driven back.

It is the general belief, however, the Bulgarians are gradually forcing both the Servians and Greeks back, but not without the most bitter fighting. The battles have been marked by hand to hand conflict, the troops resorting to clubbing with the butts of their rifles.

It is estimated the fighting covers an area of 5000 square miles. More than 100,000 non-combatants are homeless. They have fled from their homes and are in danger of starving. Scores of villages have been burned.

Advices from Belgrade declared the Servians have reoccupied Kivolak. The Bulgarians were routed with heavy losses, it is stated. Advices from Salonica continue to make claims of Greek advances, but it is not believed any serious endeavor is being made to check the Greek forces at present, as Servia is regarded as the more dangerous enemy.

There has been desperate fighting against the Greeks, however, as was indicated when reports here stated that 8000 wounded had arrived in Salonica. Thousands of refugees have also arrived there.

EXTENDS HIS VACATION.

President Wilson Will Remain at Summer Capital a While Longer

Cornish, N. H., July 8.—President Woodrow Wilson has cancelled his arrangements to leave Harlakenden, the summer White House, today, and return to Washington. He was due to leave on the 2:55 o'clock train out of Windsor, Vt., this afternoon, but at the urgent solicitation of Mrs. Wilson he consented to prolong his stay.

Just when he will return was not announced, but it is understood he will remain until congress makes his presence in Washington imperative.

The president spent most of his time yesterday in the open air, golfing at the Woodstock Country club in the morning and motoring over to Dartmouth college, twenty-four miles away, in the afternoon.

New Destroyer Duncan Shows She Is Going to Be Speedy

Rockland, Me., July 8.—With two four-hour trials, one at twenty-four knots and the other at twenty-two, the torpedo boat destroyer Duncan proved she was well within her contract requirements as to oil consumption, according to unofficial figures. The new vessel has already exceeded the requirements for speed.

This morning the Duncan left on a twenty-four run at 15½ knots, terminating at Boston.

Perrine Given Maximum Penalty

Providence, July 8.—Pasquale Perrine, who killed Giuseppi de Rost in an argment over a game of cards, was given the maximum sentence of twenty years' imprisonment for manslaughter. The jury in its verdict recommended that no mercy be shown.

Penfield For Austrian Embassy

Washington, July 8.—President Wilson sent to the senate the nomination of Frederick C. Penfield of Pennsylvania, to be ambassador to Austria-Hungary.

THE MODERN MERMAID.

The Newest Bathing Rigs—Frilly Caps and Brimmed Hats That Shade The Eyes Replace the Bandanna—Parasols On The Beach.

Few shores present better bathing facilities than Long Beach, and the throngs that take advantage of its hard clean sand and tumbling waves, are exceptionally well turned out sartorially whether in or out of the water. Bathing suits like other attire show the rage for combinations of color and materials. On the boardwalk the checked skirt and plain coat are notably smart, and in the water checked skirts to the knee with solid color Jerseys, and checked bathing caps strike the same note attractively.

WATERPROOF FABRICS.

The making of waterproof fabrics has so far advanced that manufacturers of bathing togs have a wide range of silks to use for suits, and for the caps that have this year blossomed out in such a variety of frilly models and brimmed hats that shade the eyes, and protect them after a most effective and becoming fashion. One of the prettiest caps is made with a double frill about the full shirred crown. This frill is of colored waterproof silk and is pleated. It is fastened on with a twist of silk and there is a bunch of little silk fruit at the side. An inner cap of rubber protects the hair from the salt water. Another cap has a frill extending across the back, but cut away across the forehead. This protects the back of the neck where most people burn most readily when exposed to the full heat of a torrid sun. The cap is not only practical, but very pretty and becoming. A blue and white checked cotton cap, which is rimless but pretty, is lined with rubber and has a chin strap of scalloped white cotton to hold it firmly in place. Affording even greater protection in the surf are the wide brimmed round crowned shapes covered with silk, in black, black and white and gay flowered or cubist patterns.

5327

BATHING BAGS.

Big bags of black silk lined with rubber for carrying wet bathing suits are a great convenience. These are mounted on handles, like embroidery hoops, wound with silk, and they open widely after the fashion familiar in darning bags.

WATERPROOF CAPES.

The waterproof circular capes that fall in ample folds about the figure of the wearer have come in again and make the nicest sort of wrap for beach use, over bathing togs, or when a thin cotton frock is a bit chilly in the fresh salt breeze. These are made of Irish friezes and similar stuffs treated to be repellant to rain or moisture which stand the hardest sort of wear without growing shabby. They are near relations of the Shaker capes that have so long been liked by discriminating people for use in the woods, and on shipboard.

PARASOLS.

Parasols covered with cretonnes in gay colorings, rather larger in spread than the average are very much liked for out of town use, especially on the beach where artificial shade is a necessity, for most people. The oddest shapes prevail in dressy parasols of silk, lace and fancy combinations. Pagodas with curled up edges are among the newest, but anything sufficiently freakish is reckoned smart in these coverings.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

BRAISED MEAT.

BRAISING is a combination of steaming and baking. The meat is cooked in the oven in a covered pan, in the bottom of which should be sufficient stock to create a steam.

Braising is an economical process, for there is little loss by evaporation.

Braised Breast of Veal.—Take half a breast of veal, have it carefully boned and spread the boned side with forcemeat made from half a pound of bread soaked in milk, one egg, one teaspoonful of savory herbs, one teaspoonful of chopped parsley and salt and pepper. Roll the meat and tie both ends with string. Line a braising pan with slices of bacon, sliced onion and carrot and a small bouquet of herbs. Upon this place the meat, add a little butter and let the meat get slightly brown over the fire; then add a half pint of rich stock. Cook gently for about one hour and a half.

Cooking Mutton and Beef.

Braised Leg of Mutton.—Slice different vegetables in suitable proportions, such as carrot, turnip, onion, celery, lettuce, etc. Take also a sprig each of marjoram, thyme, parsley and a bay leaf. Put these in a braising pan under the mutton and pour in enough stock to come half way up the meat. Cover very closely and stew till the meat is quite tender. Then place it on a baking pan and put it in the oven to brown while the stock is reduced to a glaze to pour over it.

Braised Beef.—Take a pound and a half of beef, a small carrot cut fine, a minced onion, a teaspoonful of salt, a tablespoonful each of flour and caramel, pepper to taste.

Wipe the meat and put into pudding pan with the carrot, onion, salt and pepper; pour two cupfuls of boiling water over all. Cover and put in hot oven for one and a half to two hours. Have two cupfuls of gravy and add to the meat when needed. Remove the meat and add the flour, mixed with a little cold water and the caramel, and boil three minutes.

Braised Veal.

Braised Veal Cutlets.—For one and a half pounds of veal cutlet have a carrot, turnip, onion, stick of celery, a little butter, a few slices of pork or bacon stock and thickening for the gravy. Cut the meat into pieces about three inches square, pound well with a rolling pin; then press back into shape. Cut the vegetables small and fry them in a little butter till slightly brown. Lay these in a saucepan with the pork and the cutlets on the top. Cover with stock, add pepper and salt, cover closely and stew very gently for one and a half hours. When done remove the cutlets and vegetables and thicken the gravy with a teaspoonful of butter rubbed into the same quantity of flour. Brown these over the fire and add the boiling stock till the sauce is quite smooth and boil for five minutes. Dish the cutlets in a circle, put the vegetables in the center and pour the gravy over all.

ON WAR PATH AFTER DOGS

Warrant to Kill Unlicensed Dogs Given to Chief Burrell

Acting under the authority vested in the executive Mayor Stone this morning issued a warrant to Frank E. Burrill, chief of police, directing him to kill or cause to be killed all dogs not licensed in the City of Quincy. The warrant was issued in accordance with Chapter 102 section 143 of the Revised laws.

A person owning a dog on or after March 31 is liable to assessment. The classification of dogs are male, female, spayed and a special license is issued to permit the operation of a kennel.

In 1911 the dog tax amounted to $2725, representing 1010 dogs. This year $1376 has been collected by Emery L. Crane, City Clerk. The amount collected is turned over to the treasurer of Norfolk County, after 20 cents is deducted for collection. This is retained as a fund from which dog damages etc, are paid and at the end of the dog year the balance is turned over to the treasurer of the Thomas Crane Public Library and is applied to the cost of its maintenance.

This year a brass tag, bearing the license number is issued when the tax is paid. In this way it is easy to determine if a dog's owner has complied with the provisions of the law, or if the dog is the property of someone living outside of Quincy.

This method is of decided value in helping trace the progress of epidemics of rabies which are more prevalent this year than heretofore and at the present time more than the normal number of cases have developed south of Quincy.

Within the past two months several mad dogs have run amuck in Quincy but fortunately no one was seriously bitten. However a valuable cow owned by Russell A. Sears, Glendale road, died befoe a veteinaian could overcome the inroads of hydrophobia caused by a dog bite.

Chief of Police Burrill will immediaely commence to enforce the law requiring owners to license doys and will kill or caused to be killed all dogs not bearing the brass tag.

DUNCAN MEETS EVERY TEST

The torpedo boat destroyer will arrive in Boston tonight from her trial trips which have been taking place off the Rockland, Me., coast with brooms flying for she has not only exceeded all requirements of the navy department, but done even more. Monday she had two four hous trials, one at 24 knots and the other at 22, and she proved on both that she was well within her contract requirements as to oil consumption, according to unofficial figures. She has already exceeded her requirements as to speed. This morning she left on a 24 hour run at 15 1-2 knot speed which will terminate in Boston. and she will arrive at Fore River tonight.

Ellen A. Burrill, widow of Seth Burrill, died Monday afternoon at her home, 49 Walker street, Atlantic, in her 76th year. She leaves a family, among whom is Walter E. Burrill, a son, with whom she has resided.

Girls Can Play Baseball When They Wish to Learn.

AN EXPERT WITH PADDED MIT.

Girls, as a rule, do not care much to play baseball, although most of them like to watch a game in which their brothers and acquaintances are taking part. Perhaps girls do not care to play because they lack the knack of throwing the ball. When they do acquire this art, however, and can throw overhand with precision girls do about as well as boys.

seen handling a ball with as great skill as their male companions. They can send a ball on a line with the real masculine throw, long supposed to be an impossibility for the gentler sex. The girl in the picture was snapped by the photographer as she was reaching for a throw. You can see that she handles her glove like a real ball player. There were several girls on the field fully as skillful, but she was the only one caught by the camera. Exercise in the open is necessary to robust health, and the young people of both sexes should take advantage of the summer season to strengthen their muscles and inflate their lungs.

The Boy With a Queer Name.

Little "I will" was a very small boy with the sweetest face any one could wish to see, and under his white blouse, with its big sailor collar, beat the sweetest little heart that ever grew.

Of course "I will" had another name. His "really truly" name he would have told you was Louis, but those who knew him thought that "I will" suited him better.

"Dear," mother would say, "will you run upstairs and get my scissors? You will find them on the sewing machine."

"I will, I will!" would sing out the pleasant little voice, and in a twinkling the scissors would be put in mother's hand.

Or father would say: "Louis, gather up your toys. It is almost supper time."

"I will!" would come the smiling answer.

Dear little "I will!". He is a big boy now, big enough to study Latin and all sorts of other hard things, but the sunshine of his merry baby ways has never faded from hismother's heart.

What a pity there is not a little "I will" in every home!—Sunbeam.

Game of Portrait.

In the game called portrait one person leaves the room, while the others choose the name of some one they all know. The person on entering the room has to guess the name selected by asking questions to be answered by "yes" or "no." For instance: "Is she married?" "No." "Have I seen her today?" "Yes." "Has she fair hair?" "No." Sometimes the company choose the one who went outside for the "portrait" and the guessing is more difficult.

Riddles and Answers.

When is a soldier not half a soldier? When he is in quarters.

Why is a hive like a spectator at the circus? Because it is a bee holder.

On what day of the year do women talk the least? On the shortest.

What three letters turn girl into woman. A-g-e.

An Enigma.

Two half circles on a perpendicular meet,
An angle, a triangle which stands on two feet.

FRUIT FED RATS OF UGANDA.

By the Natives They Are Regarded as a Dainty Dish.

The idea of eating rats is so repulsive to us that we cannot imagine such a thing unless one were driven to it by starvation. The people of Uganda, however, eat rats not from necessity, but because they like them. The rat of Uganda, however, is very different from the little creature that gnaws holes in our cupboards. This rat is much larger. It is more than a foot long and is therefore quite a substantial animal and as well worth cooking as a rabbit.

The wonderful thing about this rat is that it has two mouths, one behind the other. The first mouth has a pointed ratlike nose and is furnished with two rows of sharp white teeth, with which it bites off its food and passes it on to the second mouth, which is placed just above the throat. This mouth also has two rows of teeth, but one long slender tongue serves for both sets of grinders.

Rats are not only eaten in Uganda, but they are regarded as a delicacy. The king among his many retainers has one whose duty it is to furnish the royal table with rats. A rat catcher is not an exalted person usually, but in Uganda he is looked upon with respect and walks with an air of dignity. He goes out rat hunting daily and generally finds his game among the young banana trees or in any place where fallen fruit or berries may be found, for this is what the rat lives on. Slender shoots of bamboo or banana or fruit and leaves are his food, and this diet makes his flesh tender and wholesome.

A CRESCENT OF RUINS.

The Curious Old Cliff Dwellings of the National Mesa Verde.

In the Mesa Verde National park, in southwestern Colorado, are 300 cliff dwellings, of which only the three largest have been repaired. The largest ruin, called Cliff palace, stands about a thousand feet above the bottom of the canyon and 300 feet below the top of the ledge. All the houses connect and open into one another, the entire settlement forming a crescent about 300 feet in length from end to end.

As we contemplate these silent ruins it is hard to believe that at one time they resounded with the hum of industry, the laughter of children, the droning of priests, and the strident cry of the sentinels calling the warriors to battle. The dwellers of these abandoned communities have left no written record, but the shape of the structures and the relics that have been dug from the debris of centuries give some idea of how these people lived and moved and had their being.

The main houses were built on a ledge close to its front, and back of this was an open space that answered the purpose of a court, a street, a playground or a place for industrial pursuits, such as weaving and pottery making. At intervals along the front were towers and bastions, and in the interior were kivas or secret chambers used for religious ceremonies. In every village were storehouses to provid a supply of provisions in times of war or failure of crops.

Leigh Hunt's Chaotic Home.

A curious description of Leigh Hunt's house, where the poet lived with his wife and six children, is that given by Carlyle, as recorded in "Bulletin and Review of the Keats-Shelley Memorial, Rome:"

"Hunt's house excels all you have ever read of—a poetical tinkerdom without parallel even in literature. In his family room, where are a sickly large wife and a whole shoal of well conditioned, wild children, you will find half a dozen rickety chairs gathered from half a dozen different hucksters. On these and around them and over the dusty table and ragged carpet lie all kinds of litter—books, papers, eggshells, scissors and, last night when I was there, the torn heart of a half quartern loaf. His own room he keeps cleaner."

A Real Born Lady.

The word "lady" has been variously defined. Perhaps the best test, however, of "ladylikeness" is that cited by G. W. E. Russell in one of his books. "A good woman who let furnished apartments in a country town describing a lodger who had apparently 'known better days' said: 'I am positive she was a real born lady, for she hadn't the least idea of how to do anything for herself. It took her hours to peel her potatoes.'" The admiration of the worker for the "out of work" is one of the strangest phenomena of our modern civilization.—London Graphic.

Elegant Discourse.

"I wants to be proscrastinated at de nex' corner," said Mr. Erastus Pinkly.

"You want to be what?" demanded the conductor.

"Don' lose your temper. I had to look in de dictionary mays'f befo' I found out dat 'proscrastinate' means 'put off.'"—Washington Star.

The Jaws.

Mrs. Henpeck — Shame on you for growling about Dr. Bolus. Didn't he just bring you back from the jaws of death and— Henpeck (wearily)—And back to the jaws of life.

Pretty Close.

"Is he parsimonious?"

"Well," was the guarded reply, "you might say that he carries his money in a purse that shuts a good deal easier than it opens."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BLAZE STARTED FROM SPARKS

The alarm from box 36 at 12.25 this noon was for a fire on the roof of the old Daniel Baxter barn off School street, better known perhaps as the slaughter house barn. The fire started from a bonfire among some rubbish in the rear of the barn near the railroad tracks. Chief Litchfield was informed of the bonfire about noon and put it out with a chemical stream. He then went home to dinner and had hardly arrived home when Box 36 sounded. Evidently some of the sparks from the bonfire had gotten under the clapboards and shingles and had not been noticed when the Chief put out the bonfire.

Theb arn is now owned by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad having been purchased by them some time ago in anticipation of the building of four tracks. The barn will now be torn down. There was no loss.

JOHN J. CAHILL.

Twice within three months death has visited the family of Mr. and Mrs. George Cahill of Phipps street from measles. This morning John J., age eight years and six months died from diphtheria. The other death was due to measles. Mr. Cahill is the chauffeur of the Quincy police auto.

BRIEFS

Michael Scully of the Central fire station commenced his vacation Monday.

—The legislature now closing may well go down in history as the "veto legislature." Thirty-one bills of resolves have been vetoed, and on eight of these the governor's action was overruled, while he was sustained on twenty-three. Among the most important of the bills passed over the veto were the Washburn railroad bill and the western trolleys bill.—Milford Gazette.

By HOLLAND.

MONEY that is kept in the community helps every one in that community. It is a part of the common fund on which any one with anything to sell—merchandise, labor, farm products—can draw. Money that is sent away from home is withdrawn from this common fund. It helps to impoverish the entire community. Send all the money away and all the people in the community would be "broke."

The dollar that you spend with the local merchant will continue to circulate in the neighborhood, paying lawyer, doctor, blacksmith, carpenter, teacher. Ultimately it may return to you to be again started on its journey of purchase and payment. The dollar sent to the mail order house goes to swell the bank account of a concern in Chicago or New York. It is lost to your community forever. Your neighbor can't get it, and you will never see it again.

Can't you see that self interest tells you to do your buying at home? Can't you see that it is the part of wisdom to spend your dollar where you are likely to get it again?

The advertisements in this paper will aid you in deciding where to make your purchases. Only the more reliable merchants can afford to advertise continuously, and only the better grade of goods can stand such publicity.

TRAINING SHIP CREW VISIT FORE RIVER YARD

Argentine Cadets and Jackies Spend Day in Sight Seeing at Ship Yard and About City

Storekeepers near Fore River reap Harvest. More Coming Thursday

On Tuesday, one half of the crew of the Presidente Sarmiento, the Argentine training ship which is now in Boston harbor visited the Fore River yards where they made a thorough inspection of their new fighting machine, the Rivadavia.

The visiting party consisted of Capt. Hasacio Ballve, Commander of the Presidente Sarmiento; Lieut. Jose C. Gregores, Eng-Lieut. Elmiro Bianchi, Eng-Lieut. Gualtemo Carminati, Lieut. Ezequiel Real de Azua,Surgeon Hector D. Berri and Paymaster Guillermo O. Zapiola. Eighteen cadets who are completing their training at the Argentine Naval Academy were also in the party.

Among those who arrived during the day was Minister Naon who has not paid Quincy a visit since he watched the laying of the keel of the Rivadavia three years ago. He had a distinguished party of personal friends with him.

Captain Moneta of the Argentine Commission which is in charge of the construction of the war machine welcomed the visiting party. The 150 members of the crew that were on hand were divided into groups of tens and placed under the direction of a mechanic of the commission. In this way they had no difficulty in viewing the different parts of the yard and in conversing in their mother tongue.

At noon a luncheon was severd in the dining room by the Fore River officials and a large box of luncheon was given each member of the crew. There was no formality of any kind.

When the crew received their rations they were allowed to roam about at will and many sought the banks of Hayward's creek where they ate and smoked for an hour or more. The joy of being on shore proved to be somewhat of a tonic to many and they turned the visit into one grand old fashioned out-of-door picnic.

Monday they received their pay in English gold. The open stores opposite the Fore River gates attracted their attention and they purchased articles ranging from tobacco to shoes. When it was time to pay for their purchases they presented the English gold but several of the merchants refused to accept it until one of the American attaches of the commission graciously took it upon himself to personally call on all doubting Thomases.

Several of the crew appeared to be amazed at the size of the Rivadavia. They said that in Buenos Aires a ship of 5000 tonnage was considered of good size and they wondered what their neighbors and friends in the Latin country would say when the 27,500 ton monster steamed into the harbor.

About 2 o'clock the visit got monotonous for some of the crew and they started for Quincy Square. All along the line they literally scattered their money and one invested in an obsolete pattern of a bicycle which he rode through Quincy Square, furnishing amusement for even the oldest inhabitants.

The main party left the yard at 3.40 in special cars and boarded the 4.04 for Boston at the Quincy station. Three extra coaches had been attached to the train at the request of the Fore River officials.

Just as the train pulled out several of the crew hove into sight heavily laden with fruit and bundles and a quick run brought them to the train side which they boarded without accident.

Nothing occurred during the day to marr the visit. Although given the free run of the yard they were particularly careful to keep out of the way of the workmen and to avoid dangerous corners.

Today Minister Naon is host to a large number of invited guests in honor of the anniversary of the independence of Argentine. Their Fourth of July will be celebrated at the Copley Plaza. Today the Presidente Sarmiento is decked out in the national colors of all countries, with the flag of Argentine flying at the peak. Tonight the boat will be illuminated and special exercises will be held by the crew

Thursday the remainder of the boats complement will pay a visit to the yard and be extended the same privileges given the Tuesday party. It is expected that the party will consist of 130 men and eight officers.

HAPHAZARD ESTIMATING

Time for Granite Men to Adopt Comprehensive System

The editor of Granite, Marble and Bronze, hits the nail squarely on the head, and furnishes local granite manufacturers food for serious thought when he says editorially:

"Competition in the monumental business has reached such a point that it is obvious the time has arrived when a concern should seriously consider the adopting of a modern and comprehensive system of estimating. The amount of unproductive time which manufacturers and dealers are called upon to expend in laborious figuring is reason in itself for the adoption of uniform or standard system.

A legitimate competition can only come in where one man has better facilities than another for cutting a job, or some advantage over another in buying; but it is evident that no amount of figuring can reduce the real quantity of material required for a certain piece of work or the time it takes to execute it. Our present method of haphazard estimating, together with a senseless competition, cannot go on forever. It has already brought men to grief all over the country and has even prevented the making of a proper and legitimate profit amongst those who succeed in doing business on a fair profit basis.

No new or untried principle needs be involved. It is simply that of a definite quantity of material and work tor a definite amount of money. In submitting an estimate the omission of carefully specfied details has often resulted in the loss of a contract, diverting it to a competitor who bas elaborated on his specifications producing the impression on the prospective purchaser that he was getting more for his money, when, perhaps, the case was the reverse. But the contract submitted by the first dealer did not contain enough data to sufficiently impress the prospect.

The existence of present conditions, which is greatly to be regretted, is due to a blind continuance of early day customs and is entirely unsuited to modern methods. The great difference in bids arises not so much from price or money values placed against the quantities, as it does from errors in computation; and the time is not far distant when all will fully realize the folly of wasting their time and money in competing against each other on quantities as well as prices.

BETHANY SUNDAY SCHOOL PICNIC

A fine day and a very enjoyable time was the unanimous verdict of the 300 or more of the Sunday school of Bethany church who participated in the annual picnic Tuesday at Ridge Hill grove, Hingham. The party left Quincy in the early morning in special electric cars and a run of a little over an hour brought them to the grove. During the day there was a series of sports, including running races, etc., not forgetting a game of baseball.

During the day ice cream and lemonade was furnished the children who carried basket lunches. The return to Quincy was made in good season, Quincy being reached shortly after 5 o'clock.

OUTING TO PORTLAND, ME.

Massachusetts Press Association Delighted With Visit

For a delightful vacation trip one but has to wend his way in the direction of Portland, Maine, for to meet anybody who has been there you will always find them ready with an enthusiastic response in describing the beauties of this spot, with one of best harbors in the east.

If a trip by water is made, either by day boat or night boat, it will be found very enjoyable, for H. H. Cudworth, the general passenger agent of the Eastern Steamship Company, has anticipated the comfort of all.

A great variety of places are offered to one stoping at Portland, for it can be on the mainland or on one of the numerous islands. One of the most convenient places in the harbor is at Peaks Island. A ferry makes frequent trips to the city, or one may use one of the speedy little boats of the Casco Bay & Harpswell Steamship Co. The general manager of this Company; C. W. T. Goding is very careful of his boats. They are kept trim and neat, and give frequent and good service among the many islands.

For a pleasant time while on Peaks Island all one must do is to fall into the good hands of Ralph E. Rowe, manager of the Peaks Island House, this gentleman who entertains many thousands of guests during the summer, has it down to a fine art. His table is delicious, and the house is on a commanding and sightly location for a view of Portland and its harbor.

Once settled on the island either for rest or pleasure one is reluctant to leave. One may rest on the wide piazzas of the Peaks Island House and enjoy the pretty view of the harbor. For amusements one of the largest theatres among the summer resorts of New England is near by and Manager Rowe gives his guests a continuous variety of entertainment, dances and concerts, assisted by a young ladies' orchestra. For exercise one has but to arise some morning at daybreak and take that five mile marathon, which means a circle of the entire island giving one of the most delightful varieties of landscape imaginable, continually changing from hills to woods, to water and a walk long to be remembered.

And one may also find pleasant trips away from the island. If you go to Portland you will find H. B. Ives, general manager of the Portland Street Railway, ever alert to give good accommodations to visitors. His cars cover nearly all the interesting spots in the city and stops can be made at the new City hall containing the largest municipal organ in the world, another stop can be made at the residence of the poet Longfellow, or the car will take you out to that noted Riverton Park.

If one wishes to go any considerable distance out of Portland for a longer trip, he can do so for there are numerous trips that can be made. One very pleasant trip is by trolley a distance of 16 miles to that resort known to all as Old Orchard Beach. And justly proud can its residents be of this splendid expanse of sandy beach of 5 or 6 miles and no wonder Frank A. Eliott, publisher of the Surf Echoes finds it pleasure to entertain friends and point out the beauties of the beach. And another prominent resident of the resort W. M. Davis, like Mr. Eliott, finds much enjoyment in extending every hospitality which is greatly appreciated by the visitors. And to make a stay here still more enjoyable is to stop with John Hutchinson, who is proprietor of the Brunswick House; it is a delightful and restful place on the cool piazzas of this house, and still more enjoyable to taste the fine cuisine in its pretty dining room.

But right in Portland Harbor one can spend many delightful hours sailing about, touching here and there as the little Casco boats make their frequent trips to the various islands to take or leave passengers. And there are noted spots. Who has not heard of the "Pearl of Orrs Island," to see that little white cottage on the hill slope where Harriet Beecher Stowe found her heroine, one little wonders why that novel became so famous, for the very spot itself is incentive for a pretty story. The island where Admiral Peary lives is pointed out to you as the boat passes, and everywhere you look are islands, some big, some little, and different colors according to vegitation. And there are numerous islands for when you stop to think there is one for each day of the year.

So you see, one can spend all vacation in the harbor and enjoy each day with new sights and to one who is the least sceptic regarding this conclusion, has but to ask any who have taken this trip, or ask any member of the Massachusetts Press Association who this year took their outing of five days in this locality, visiting the places and points of interest mentioned above, and they will find a unanimous approval or verdict that it was one of the pleasantest outings they have yet taken.

LADIES NIGHT QUINCY L. O. L.

Ladies of John Adams Lodge Special Guests

Quincy Loyal Orange Lodge held their ladies night in Protection hall Tuesday evening and entertained members of John Adams Loyal Ladies Orange Lodge. A business meeting preceded the festivities at which three applications were received and two members admitted, one by certificate and one by initiation.

Friday night they will be the guests of Manager Wardwell at the Kincaide theatre.

Final arrangements were made to participate in the annual celebration at Riverside recreation grounds Saturday. The members will parade to Quincy station where they leave on the 7.55 train. The local field day committee consists of Gus Lundberg, Joseph Harron, David Wright, George Littlewood and John Arbuckle.

Business was disposed of as quickly as possible and the program opened with instrumental selections by John McFarlane, John Sharp and Thomas Sargent. Songs were rendered by Thomas Reed, William Lavory, Fred Simpson and John McFarlane. Thomas Davidson and Miss Sadie McFarland contributed recitations and there was a cornet solo by John Sharp and violin selections by John McFarlane. Refreshments were served and dancing was enjoyed.

FIELD DAY OF BOARD OF TRADE

The Board of Trade have an exceptionally fine day for their second annual outing and field day which takes place, this afternoon. There were nearly fifty automobiles in the party which left the rooms of the Board in the Adams building a few minutes past noon and the trip will wind up at 5 o'clock tonight at Norteman's cafe at Houghs Neck where a shore dinner will be served. The participants in the outing met at the rooms of the Board at 11.30 and were served with a lunch.

QUINCY MAN FOR COMMISSIONER

Ex. Senator Hultman Being Considered by Gov. Foss

A morning paper announces that the name of ex-Senator Eugene C. Hultman of Quincy is being considered by Gov. Foss for appointment to the board of Harbor and Land Commissioners. This is but one of the several vacancies in state boards to be filled by the Governor, who it is announced will clean up the list this week.

Ex-Senator is a civil engineer by profession and is now employed by the Elevated railroad. He is a man of wide experience and Gov. Foss could do no better than to hand the ex-Senator the appointment.

SYMPATHY FOR OFFICFR CAHILL

Deep sadness hangs o'er the household of George Cahill, chauffeur of the Quincy police department, whose family has been visited by death four times in three years. This morning John J., eight year old son was buried in St. Mary's cemetery. He died Tuesday after a short illness with diphtheria. A few months ago a daughter failed to rally from a severe attack of measles.

RETURN OF G. A. R. VETERANS

It is somewhat remarkable that with the thousands of Grand Army Veterans from Massachusetts, who attended the reunion at Gettysburg, not one died or was injured in any way, or in fact was overcome by the heat. The last of the Massachusetts party has arrived home. All complained of the excessive heat, but are glad that they went and say that it was a reunion long to be remembered. Most of the Quincy veterans arrived home Saturday night, although one or two came earlier in the week.

SHOPS TO OPEN ALL DAY MONDAY

Two City Square Barbers to Open Monday Afternoons

The adage "barbers have no heart" was contradicted in Quincy today when the Greenleaf and Hancock Barber shops announced that hereafter they would be open Monday afternoon. Henceforth it will be possible to have hirsute appendages removed Monday afternoon, much to the delight of patrons whose hours on the first week day morning forbid them the joys of a shave or else whose nervousness warned them not to attempt the operation themselves. Considerable speculation is rife regarding the outcome of the idea and it is admittedly an open question as to whether or not other shops will follow suit. The closing hour on a holiday eve will be 11 and if the day falls on Saturday or Monday shades will be drawn at 11 A. M.

REV. DR. HARDY HERE IN AUGUST

July 27, Rev. George E. Martin, D. D., of Lexington, Mass.

It will be noticed that Rev. Dr. Edwin N. Hardy, a former pastor is to occupy the pulpit on Aug. 24, and he will probably receive a warm welcome from the parishioners of the church.

UP AGAINST HOT WEATHER.

The people who complain most of heat are not those who live in warm climates. They learn to adjust themselves. It is in temperate latitudes that hot weather runs against all business and social arrangements.

If man fitted his movements to the laws of nature, he would rise in summer at 4 a. m., and begin his work at five or soon after. By eleven o'clock when heat becomes burdensome, the bulk of his day's labor would be done and work laid aside, to be resumed if necessary for a time in the late afternoon.

Modern life is a complicated machine, and it seems impossible to shift its workings even where health and comfort require it. But a good many people are beginning to feel that an earlier start in summer would be both healthful and pleasant. The old time farmers always knew the advantage of a five o'clock start, though their stern devotion to toil often led them to omit the noon day rest that should correspond.

FADING SECTIONALISM.

When Blue met Gray at Gettysburg, there were than perfuntory handshakes. It was not merely that rancor had been blotted out by the gray mist of 50 years oblivion. It was not merely that whatever misunderstandings have occurred between North and South have been created more by politicians and grafters than by the old soldiers.

Kindly Father Time heals all scars. The men who once stood against each other in deadly hate now seem to have a positive affection . Their common share in an awful experience create a kinship. The man whom you fough 50 years ago seems closer than th indifferent youth of to-day, to whon is merely disagreeable because it ha to be studied about in school.

Railroads and travel are greater forces for peace than arbitrations and organizations. In the old days a business man who penetrated from one section to another was looked at with some awe as a globe trotter. In those times one assumed that the opinions pronounced by the wise men of your own village comprised the sum of this world's wisdom. That other ways of looking at life might find justification in the basic facts of human nature was dreamed by but few.

It is out of those conditions that sectional hostilities and civil wars proceed. Happily they are past. The more you see of people from other section, the more you are influenced by thier point of view . The journey between South and North to-day is but a holiday excursion or a business incident.

The Southerner returns from the North more than ever with the feeling that the stars in their courses fought against the beloved Lost Cause. Th Northerner comes back from the South with the feeling that those fellows have got to work out race problems in their own way.

ON THE WAY TO VACATION.

What a sight a train full of excursionists makes, as it bangs into a station on its weary and dusty way Heated men and perspiring women doubled up in their seats, in the im possible endeavor to make the angula chairs of a day coach fit the huma frame.

Not merely are the men reduced t the shirtwaist state, but the majorit of them are minus collars. The wom en are fanning themselves despairing ly.

In the chair cars are a minority o comfort seekers, who may or may no be at ease. They can move an inch o a foot without treading on some onc But even they cannot usually stretc out without leaving an unsupporte and aching back.

Much as inconvenient methods o travelling in Europe are derided, ther are some respects where they "put i over on us." In their compartmen cars, the back of the seat rises abov the traveller's head, which rests com fortably for many a mile. Half th discomfort of travel in this countr comes from the fact that the day coach provides no support for the head which is left to jerk and flop.

The worst discomfort of long rail road journeys is the result of being confined in a cramped position. I these days of dining cars, the breal afforded by taking your meal en rout is a restful change, but that comes only once in five hours. The old time restaurants along the way led to a lo of hasty eating and dyspepsia, but they did give the traveller an excuse to get out and take refreshing exercise.

If people were not in such everlasting hurry, the stops along the way would probably be a little more leisurely, and would afford the tired wayfarer the needed chance to stretch his legs. But backache seems to be preferred to the loss of a few moments at the terminal.

MAY WIDEN FORE RIVER CHANNEL

A dispatch from Washington says that the proposal to deepen and widen the channel of the Fore River from Boston harbor to the plant of a large shipbuilding company is to be made the subject of a hearing on July 15 by the United States board of engineers for rivers and harbors. It is contended that the increase in size of ocean-going vessels has made an improved channel necessary.

NEILS OLSON.

While a collier of the New England Gas & Coke Co. was making Norfolk, Va., Tuesday, a wireless message to Capt. Leonard Olson flashed news of the death of his son Neils at 19 Clarendon street, Quincy Point. The child was in his fifth year and death was due to tuberculosis, contributed by measles. Mrs. Olson, the mother of the boy is awaiting the return of the father who is expected hourly. The funeral will take place Friday afternoon. Burial will be in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

CONFECTIONERY.

Curiously enough, the making of confectionery originated in a way with the apothecaries about 500 years ago. It was then that sugar was first imported into England, and it was then that "confections" first became known. For a time they appeared only in medical form, the apothecaries using the newly imported sugar as a means of mitigating the bitterness of their doses. In other words, they mixed their drugs with it, and therein lay the origin of many of the sirups and medicated candies, the ancestors of our cough drops and lozenges. The cost of sugar was far too high, and most people were far too poor to permit of its being eaten for its own sake alone and as a mere luxury.

It was only a couple of centures ago that there began to appear a new phase of the apothecary's art. Confections began to be made more or less apart from any medicinal purpose and because people liked them, and eventually the confectioner's business became quite separate and distinct from that of the apothecary.

Although the confectioner's trade may be said to be about 200 years old, it was only within recent times that it became a real and extensive industry. At first sugar was heavily taxed, and the confectioner's trade was pursued upon very elementary principles. For a long time everything was done by hand. Implements were of the very simplest—candy kettles heated on small brick furnaces, pestles and mortars, rolling pins and scissors, etc. The output was very small, and, comparatively speaking, sweetmeats of all sorts were expensive and frequently unattractive.

All this has been changed, and nowadays the most improved machinery and implements combine to produce the most delicate and attractive sweets. Muscles have been superseded by engines, pestles and mortars and rolling pins, and scissors have given place to revolving pans and steam pans, and mechanism for beating and kneading and mixing, for cutting and slicing and grinding, for rolling and grating and stamping, for crushing ice and freezing cream and other processes.

While many of the best and most expensive candies are still very largely made by hand processes, by far the greater mass of sweetmeats is produced by machinery.—Harper's Weekly.

Hopkins, the Witch Finder.

Though some people still believe in witches, there is no longer any use for the witch finder. Englishmen of earlier generations gave this person abundant employment, sometimes fetching the real expert enormous distances to cleanse an afflicted town. In 1649, for instance, the magistrates of Newcastle sent into Scotland for one who could find witches, agreeing to pay 20 shillings ($4.80) a head for all that he convicted. His particular method consisted in pricking the suspect with pins, and fifteen old women were duly executed as the result of his visit. The most notorious of witch finders, one Hopkins, was finally executed as a wizard after trial by one of the more painful of his own many cleverly devised tests.

Elizabeth's "Excellent Wash."

Good Queen Bess liked her ale and had to have it. Wherever she went there ale had to go also—strong ale. Great were the trials of her host, the Earl of Leicester, as expressed in a letter from Hatfield to Lord Burleigh: "There was not one drop of good drink for her here. We were fain to send to London and Kenilworth and divers other places where ale was. Her own beer was so strong as there was no man able to drink it." And one quart of this "excellent wash" of good strong ale for breakfast, we are told, put the queen in good spirits for the start of the day's work.—London Chronicle.

Hugo's Long Sentence.

For the longest sentence on record we must go to the French. In "Les Miserables" Victor Hugo has one sentence that runs through a hundred lines, and earlier in the book, in one of the chapters descriptive of Waterloo, there are over fifty lines without a full stop. England's record rests under official patronage, for it would appear to be the seventh section of the foreign enlistment act, which does not stop until it has very nearly reached its six hundredth word.—London Graphic.

Long Lived Ornaments.

Ornaments last longer than anything else that man makes. There are brooches and necklaces in museums more than forty centuries old. Monuments, perhaps, stand second, and houses third. The life of furniture is shorter still. There is very little furniture in England which dates beyond the year 1500. Pictures last longer than furniture, and there are paintings still in fair condition which have weathered six centuries of life.

Then She Got Mad.

"I've never seen the man yet," she declared, "who couldn't be made a fool of by a pretty woman."

"Um!" he replied. "Of course you, I take it, have studied the matter from the standpoint of the innocent bystander."—Philadelphia Ledger.

MELLEN GIVES UP PRESIDENCY

No Longer Heads Boston and Maine and Maine Central

McDONALD TAKES HIS PLACE

Man Under Whose Administration New England Railroad Securities Have Shrunk $200,000,000 In Market Values Will Devote His Full Time to New Haven Road

Boston, July 9.—Charles S. Mellen resigned from the presidency of the Boston and Maine railroad yesterday afternoon. At the same time he resigned as president of the Maine Central railroad. Almost coincident with these resignations comes the report of the interstate commerce commission, which will be made public this afternoon.

Morris McDonald was elected today as president of both the Boston and Maine and Maine Central railroads in place of Mellen. Up to yesterday he was vice president and general manager of the Maine Central. McDonald was superintendent of the Central Railroad of Georgia when called to Maine in 1894.

Mellen will continue as a member of the boards of directors of both roads. In a statement given out from the press headquarters of the New Haven road it was admitted that no one man can properly handle the affairs of the New Haven, the Boston and Maine and the Maine Central railroads.

The statement says the "change means nothing more than that Mellen will devote his full time to the affairs of the New Haven road and its direct subsidiaries, and that McDonald will be in all respects handle the Boston and Maine and Maine Central railroads."

The administration of Mellen as head of practically all of New England transportation interests has marked the stormiest times known in railroad history and railroad politics in New England. Mellen has been compelled to undergo the severest criticism. He also has not lacked friends.

During his administration, New England railroad securities have shrunk in market value $200,000,000. Boston and Maine stock, which has sold up over 200, was quoted at 53 yesterday. Within a few weeks it broke at 50. New Haven was quoted yesteray at 101. Before Mellen became president, it sold up to 250.

Only a few weeks ago, at the last meeting of the directors, the Boston and Maine passed its dividend for the first time in seventy-three years. The passing of the dividend created alarm among the small holders of Boston and Maine securities, of which there are thousands in New England.

At the same time Mellen denied he was resigning. This condition of affairs puzzled State street for a few days, but the matter finally blew over and nothing further was heard of the resignation until yesterday afternoon, when it came in the nature of a surprise.

It was in 1897 that the New Haven road, under the presidency of Mellen, acquired 109,000 shares of Boston and Maine, giving the New Haven road a controlling interest in the affairs of the Boston and Maine.

Friends of Mellen say he found the Boston and Maine in bad condition and that the road would have been in financial difficulties anyway. They further claim it is owing to him that the day of reckoning has been postponed for so long.

The New Haven road has been compelled to face the severest criticism, which finally culminated in charges being preferred before Commissioner Prouty. Hearings were held before the commissioner which terminated in May. Charges included those of poor management, graft and the diversion of freight. It is the report of the commission growing out of these hearings that will be made public this afternoon.

Chase is charged with accepting money from milk producers for protection from prosecution, and Scott is alleged to have been negligent and to have been influenced in his duties by political consideration.

BIRDS AS FOES TO INSECT PESTS

Interesting Letter of William R. Lord

Friends of Rev. William R. Lord of Dover formerly of Wollaston will not be surprised to hear that he is still interested in birds and their welfare.

E. H. Forbush, state ornithologist in a recent article in the Boston Sunday Herald tells of the value of birds as foes to insect pests and of the endeavors of Mr. Lord as follows:

"Birds should be protected from gunners as the army of licensed gunners is remarkably large—a number equalling 50 full regiments in Massachusetts with proportionate numbers in other states of the Union, but the number of wardens for the enforcement of the law is pitiably small. Attempts have been made in Massachusetts to remedy this evil. Last year a law was passed — Chapter 465 of the Acts of 1912—which allows each town to appoint a fish and game warden, but his salary cannot exceed $50 a year. Forty Massachusetts towns have already established such wardens.

"It remained for the Rev. William R. Lord of Dover, however, to propose a law under which each town could appoint a bird warden and fix his salary. The bill was enacted into law by the Legislature of 1913, which has recently disbanded. The law reads as follows: "Cities by a vote of the city council, and towns by a vote at town meeting, may appropriate money for the protection and encouragement of birds which live upon insects injurious to crops and trees. Such protection and encouragement may include the appointment and payment of bird wardens."

"Mr. Lord has suceeded in having the first town bird warden in Massachusetts appointed in the town of Dover. Dover is fortunate in counting Mr. Lord among its citizens. He is an ornithologist, has travelled widely, and during his stay in Oregon he published a standard book on the Birds of Oregon. He has been for years an enthusiastic worker in the cause of bird protection and has exerted a powerful influence in that direction in this commonwealth. He has experimented with practical methods of attracting birds and has been successful in increasing the birds about his own home.

"The town warden of Dover, who was appointed by a recent town meeting, is William F. DeMerritt, a native of Boston, who has lived in and around Dover practically all his life, save for an adventurous trip to the Alaska mining fields. He is a man of character and intelligence, a former captain of the militia. He is familiar with the woods and knows the wild creatures in their haunts. Dover is very fortunate in having such a man ready at hand to be the first to take up the work of town bird warden in Massachusetts. Among his other qualifications he is a good mechanic and can manufacture bird houses, nesting boxes, feeding tables, food houses, etc., such as are needed for attracting birds.

"The duties of the bird warden will be many and varied; first, he will protect the birds in the town and act as an extra warden or assistant to the state warden; second, he must experiment with various appliances on the public domain and instruct citizens of the town in the most improved methods of attracting and protecting birds. As state ornithologist, I shall be glad to give town bird wardens my heartiest co-operation and we shall hope to secure such results in Dover as will convince the most sceptical of the value of birds and the necessity of town wardens to secure their protection.

"When we realize that the people of Massachusetts and adjacent states in conjunction with the entomological department of the United States government, are paying out more than $1,000,000 a year for the suppression of the gypsy moth alone, when we realize that Massachusetts this year will suffer hundreds of thousands of dollars loss in her apple orchards from the common tent caterpillar, and that there are 50 species of native birds that eat hairy caterpillars or the moth or eggs that produce such caterpillars, we can see how this department of protection has been neglected.

"It is encouraging to note that the utility of birds, as well as their esthetic value, is being recognized localy now throughout the country. Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer of Detroit, Mich., has bought over 2100 acres, representing many individual farms, about nine miles from Detroit, and has taken up modern farming. As a part of his plan, he has made the whole tract a refuge for birds, has put up nesting boxes and feeding houses, and has even imported large numbers of birds for the purpose of protecting his crops and trees.

"Several large landowners in Lenox are planning to unite for bird protection. A bird club has just been formed in Brookline, and another recently in Milton. Ernest Harold Baynes has established a bird club and a bird reservation in Meriden, N. H., where he has attracted great numbers of birds and he has started branch clubs throughout New England. Pittsburgh, Pa., has a city ornithologist whosework is carried on along such lines as those which will be taken up by the Dover bird warden but, so far as I can learn, Dover is the first town in America that has actually engaged and appointed a bird warden. Mr. DeMerritt will begin his duties in the fall which is as soon as he can arrange to leave his present occupation, and give his whole time to bird warden work."

FIRST GAME FOR QUINCY

The Quincy base ball players who are making a tour of the Provinces played their first game Tuesday at Digby, N. S., with the local team of that city and won out by a score of 7 to 3. The Quincy boys put up an exceptionally strong game and the Digby boys had hard work finding Quincy's pitcher.

NOW WEARS GOLD WATCH CHARM

One of the proudest officials at City hall is Edward J. Lennon, for hanging from his watch chain is a handsome gold Grand Army watch charm, suitably inscribed. The charm is the gift of the clerks employed in the basement of City Hall. It was intended to give the charm to Ed before he left for the reunion at Gettysburg but it had to be made to order and did not arrive until a few days ago. Tuesday the charm was presented to him in due form and it now occupies a prominent place on the front of Ed's vest.

AN ANSWERED PRAYER

By M. QUAD

Copyright, 1913, by Associated Literary Press.

"Now, Henry, I want to talk to you on a very serious matter," began Mr. Gregg's wife as they sat together one evening.

Mr. Gregg nodded and sighed. He was a bored husband. His wife had a serious subject to bring up every week or two.

"You know our Polly?" queried the wife in a half doubting way.

Mr. Gregg was the father of Polly and ought to be fairly well acquainted with her. He nodded his head.

"Polly has another beau, and I want to know what we are going to do about it."

"I can't do anything," slowly replied the husband after a moment's thought, "but you can."

"What?"

"You can butt in and crowd Polly out and do the courting yourself, as you have done with every other beau she has had!"

"Henry Gregg, may the Lord forgive you, for I never can!" wailed the wife as she covered her face with her hands.

"But I'm right," he defended. "Suppose that when a young man called here to see Polly I went to the door to shake hands with him and tell him I was glad to see him.

"Suppose I sat beside him in the parlor for fifteen minutes hinting around how nice it would be when he and Polly were married."

"Suppose I dinged it at him that Polly was an angel and that he would never have a chance to marry another.

"Henry Gregg, you are an unnatural father, and I'll never speak another word to you on this matter. If Polly lives to be ninety years old and never marries it will be all your fault."

It was common gossip that Mrs. Gregg was so crazy to marry Polly off that she was making a fool of herself. No one had given her a tip, and the girl had heard nothing. No one blamed her. She was a sweet, sensible girl and didn't even realize that there was too much mother and not enough of herself about the affairs.

Mrs. Gregg had received a bad setback from her husband. She felt that he had usurped a privilege as sacred as the cow of India. A daughter's love affairs and matrimonial prospects ought to be left entirely in a mother's hands. The wife had said that she wouldn't discuss the matter further with her husband, and she meant to keep her word, but she must talk to somebody. She hardly dared trust a woman, but who then?

"Why, the minister of my church, of course," she replied after casting about for a day or two.

"Are you in trouble, Sister Gregg?" asked the good man as she entered his study with tears in her eyes.

"Y-yes; great trouble."

"Concerning your husband?"

"Partly. He has come between me and Polly."

"Hem! How is that?"

"Why, he says I'm to let her beaus alone and that she is to manage her own affairs. Did you ever hear the like?"

Her parson had heard all the gossip about Mrs. Gregg butting in. Parsons know what is going on in their parishes as well as anybody else, but they don't repeat the gossip.

"How old is Polly?" was asked.

"Going on twenty."

"Hem! And she has another beau?"

"Yes—Will Somers."

"And he calls at the house?"

"Two or three times a week."

"I see. Young Mr. Somers is highly spoken of."

"He's just as nice as can be, parson."

"But Mr. Gregg objects to him?"

"Oh, no, no!"

"Then I don't exactly understand."

"Why, I want him to know that I'm glad he's courting Polly, and Mr. Gregg says I'll drive him away. He calls it butting in."

"Y-e-s, I believe I've heard the word before. Sister Gregg, don't you think Polly is old enough to be courted?"

"Why, yes."

"And to be courted the way other girls are?"

"Without me around?" was asked.

The parson nodded his head.

"But—but I want Mr. Somers to know—know"—

"He'll know."

"Then you won't advise me?"

"I never mix up with family matters if I can avoid it."

"Well," said the discouraged woman as she rose to go, "if you won't advise me I shall at least hope you will pray for me."

"Um!" replied the parson, leaving the matter very much in doubt.

Three weeks later Mrs. Gregg fell on an icy sidewalk and broke a leg. After a couple of weeks the pastor made a call, as it was his duty to do. He found her mending and cheerful. She welcomed him with a smile and said:

"I have some news for you Polly and Mr. Somers are engaged!"

"Ah, indeed!"

"She told me this morning."

"Happy to hear it."

"And I want to say how thankful I am that you prayed for me. You did pray, didn't you?"

"Hem! Hem! Well, sister, if I did not exactly pray I thought how nice it would be for you to be laid up for several weeks and give Polly a show to do some courting, and my thought seems to have been answered!"

FEDERAL PROBE ON BANK CRASH

First-Second National of Pittsburg "Seriously Mismanaged"

MAY PROSECUTE FOR FRAUD

Incorrect Statement of Bank's Liabilities Is Keynote to Present Situation—No Financial Storm In Pittsburg With Exception of Institutions Controlled by the Kuhns

Washington, July 9.—John S. Williams, assistant secretary of the treasury, who represented Secretary McAdoo at the closing of the Pittsburg First-Second National bank, declared the institution had been "seriously mismanaged, and the extent of the mismanagement would be determined by the department of justice."

It developed that the treasury department on Monday offered the solvent Pittsburg banks $5,000,000 of government deposits to meet any emergency, but that the offer was declined because the banks were in a position to meet the situation.

The entire capital and surplus of the First-Second, amounting to $5,500,000, has probably been wiped out, but officers of the bank have assured the government that depositors will be paid in full or nearly in full.

"Members of the clearing house committee of Pittsburg," said Williams, "have assured the department that the banking situation is now well in hand, and that they believe that the clearing house association will be able to prevent any further trouble."

The law requires the publication of correct statements, and the publication of an incorrect statement of the bank's liabilities is the keynote to the present situation. It was this, it is explained, that immediately attracted the attention of the comptroller's office once more to the status of the bank.

Officials now are giving particular attention to the discrepancy between the sworn report of the bank to the comptroller of the currency on June 4 and the financial statement it published in the Pittsburg newspapers.

The report to the comptroller showed nearly $2,000,000 in rediscounts or borrowed money, but that item was omitted from the published statement. The national bank act requires the publication of the statement in the form submitted to the comptroller.

No Financial Storm

Pittsburg, July 9.—Financial Pittsburg shows little outward evidence of the crash in banking circles involving the failure of the First-Second National bank, with $32,000,000 of deposits, the First National bank of McKeesport, an allied institution, and the appointment of receivers for the American Water Works and Guarantee company, the largest concern of its kind in the country, and for the banking house of J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, Inc.

No unusual scenes are observed about other banks in the city, with the exception of Pittsburg Bank for Savings, controlled by J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, who controlled also the majority of stock in the two banks that suspended. The run on the savings bank that was started by the failures Monday was resumed yesterday. All depositors were paid $50 at once and notice of thirty, sixty and ninety days for larger amounts was required.

With the assurance of several millions in cash and quick assets on hand, the run on this bank is not looked upon as likely to result seriously.

J. S. and W. S. Kuhn resigned yesterday as president and vice president, respectively, of the savings bank.

The First National bank of McKeesport, which was closed by the directors Monday, was formally closed yesterday by the order of the comptroller of the currency at Washington.

FOR SHOOTING POLICEMAN

Vaudeville Actor Placed on Trial on Charge of Murder

Hackensack, N. J., July 9.—James S. Devlin, a vaudeville actor, was placed on trial here for the murder of Patrick Considine, a policeman. He is alleged to have shot the policeman with the latter's revolver after the two had quarrelled over the attention paid by Considine to the actor's wife.

Miss Annie Devlin, a cousin of the defendant, and an eyewitness to the tragedy, testified that Considine had handed his revolver to Devlin and said: "Go ahead and shoot." Devlin fired the fatal shot, she swore.

"WOLF OF WALL STREET"

Lamar Gives Lobby Probers His Reason For Impersonating Congressmen

Washington, July 9.—The senate lobby investing committee took a look at Wall street through the spectacles of David Lamar.

The dapper operator on the bear side, who admits that he bandied about in the marketplace the names of men high in congress, took the committee completely into his confidence. For all the machinations he contrived there were, after all, he swore, but two reasons.

He wished to cause an "explosion" which would bring the Wall street men whom he felt were antagonistic to him "into the open" and he wished to insure the re-employment of Edward Lauterbach, his lawyer friend, who had fallen into disfavor with the mighty of the street.

Although the committee tried to develop that there might have been some other consideration involved, Lamar denied such an allegation as often as it was made.

HITS "WARM AIR CURRENT"

Army Officer Killed When Aeroplane Collapses In Texas

Houston, Tex., July 9.—Lieutenant Loren H. Call of the United States aviation corps was killed by the collapse and fall of his aeroplane north of Texas City. He had started his flight from the aviation field in the second army division mobilization camp.

The dangerous thing known to aviators as a "warm air current" is held responsible for Call's death. Call rose from the aviation field bordering the gulf, turned his biplane northward and flew over the level stretches near the artillery camp at an altitude of about 500 feet. He was plainly visible to several soldiers who said that his biplane seemed to be running smoothly when, without warning, it turned its nose downward and plunged almost straight to the earth. The impact broke nearly every bone in Call's body.

WORK OF CAUCUS IS PRACTICALLY ENDED

Tariff Schedules May Be Passed by Senate Separately

Washington, July 9.—The action of the senate caucus in binding the majority on the tariff bill means that the work of reconstructing the tariff bill has been practically completed and that the bill will, within a few days, be taken up in the senate for debate and passage.

How long the period of debate will run no one can tell. There are rumors among the majority members of a plan whereby the work would be facilitated by passing each schedule separately, thus making secure the ground beneath their feet before going on to the next one.

It is calculated by some that the tariff discussion will still be raging by the first of September.

Lawrence, Mass., July 9.—At the close of yesterday's session of the inquest into the death of the eleven boys who were drowned on June 30 when the city bathhouse runway collapsed, Judge Mahoney said he wanted more evidence presented and continued the inquiry until Thursday.

Jeremiah J. Murphy, who for the past seven years has built the runway, testified that the material used in the construction of the runway had been used before and several other carpenters who assisted in the building of it corroborated his evidence.

"I did the best work I could," said Murphy, "and I should estimate that the runway should have held two tons. The ledger boards that were fastened from post to post were new, and it was constructed as well as I could build it."

CONFERES AGREE UPON ARBITRATORS

Danger of Strike on Boston Elevated Is Eliminated

Boston, July 9.—With the selection of James J. Storrow, president of the Chamber of Commerce, as third member of the arbitration committee to consider the differences between the Boston Elevated and the Carmen's union, the menace of a strike was finally and indisputably removed last evening.

Storrow's acceptance of the responsible post reached Boston from Manchester, Vt., three hours after the other two members of the board had chosen him as their chairman.

The arbitration board now stands as follows: James H. Vahey, representing the Carmen's union and the affiliated "L" organizations, including practically all the employes; James L. Richards, executive director of the Elevated company, and Storrow as the unbiased, nonpartisan chairman and mediator.

To the Chamber of Commerce is due the credit of bringing about the amicable adjustment of a trouble that threatened serious consequences.

DEATH WAS ACCIDENTAL

Coroner's Verdict In Case of Man Insured For $1,178,000

Jacksonville, Fla., July 9.—Death by accidental drowning was the verdict of the coroner's jury after nearing evidence in the case of E. O. Painter, the manufacturer, who was drowned in the St. Johns river.

Painter's life was insured for $1,178,000. Counsel for the Painter family announced that the application of the Fidelity and Casualty company of Baltimore for a receiver to take charge of the drowned man's vitals, now held by a Baltimore chemist, would not be further contested.

EXTENDS HIS VACATION

President Wilson Plans to Remain In Cornish Until Sunday

Cornish, N. H., July 9.—President Wilson has so improved in health in the last three days and likes his summer home here so well that he has practically decided to prolong his visit until Sunday.

Should affairs in Washington, however, become pressing, the president is ready to forego the pleasures of his vacation and start back immediately to the national capital. His private car is on a siding at Windsor, Vt., a few miles away.

The court granted a writ of error, but Quinlan was unable to raise the bail demanded. He is the first of the I. W. W. leaders to be convicted of inciting riot. Indictments against William D. Haywood and others are pending.

INVASION WITH ARMED FORCES

Turkey Will Endeavor to Regain Lost Territory

NEW PROBLEM FOR POWERS

Servia, Greece and Bulgaria Already Fighting and Others to Join—Vienna Hears of Further Reverses For Servian Arms, but Reports Reaching London Are Conflicting

London, July 9.—A Constantinople dispatch says the sublime porte has decided to reoccupy with armed forces the territory which was taken over by the Balkan allies as a result of the London peace treaty, signed in May. This means the Turks will have to enter the teriritory by force, and preparations are being made for the invasion against Bulgaria.

The London treaty took 60,000 square miles from the Ottoman empire. This was turned over to Bulgaria, Servia, Montenegro and Greece, and the porte has decided forcibly to occupy the territory along the Enos-Midia line, which is the new northern boundary of the empire.

Bulgaria is occupying the territory along the line toward which the movement will be made, and it is understood that a note was sent to Premier Daneff asking that the Bulgarians evacuate.

With Servia, Greece and Bulgaria now fighting, Roumania promising to have her army mobilized by Thursday or Friday, and Turkey preparing to take the field, the Balkan situation will again be a serious problem before the powers.

Dispatches from the front to Belgrade say that the third army rested Sunday, but that now fighting is proceeding. An outbreak of cholera is reported from Istip.

Dispatches received at Vienna from Belgrade show how impossible it is to gather any idea of the real situation from the official statements disseminated from Belgrade and Sofia.

One dispatch, direct from Belgrade, announces fresh victories for the Servian troops, who are said to have captured the Bulgarian position at Kitki on Osigowa plain, as well as Rujan Heights. It is also asserted that the way to Kustenil now lies open to the Serbs and that the Bulgarians tried to cross the frontier near Obrenovao, north of Pirot, but were driven back with heavy losses.

Another message from Belgrade by way of Semlin, where the correspondents evade the censor, says that private advices regarding the disaster to the Servian Timok division and the critical position of the Morava division have become known in Belgrade, and have caused the deepest depression.

It is added that the Morava division has been shattered and that the last levy, comprising all males between 60 and 18 years of age, have been summoned to arms.

Sulzer's Removal of Clinton Prison Warden Causes Surprise

Albany, July 9.—Governor Sulzer announced the removal of Harry M. Kaiser as warden of the Clinton prison at Dannemora, and immediately after it was reported in the state capitol that George W. Blake, who made the special investgations of the state's prisons, may soon retire to private life.

Kaiser's sudden removal caused astonishment, as he was long warden of a prison to which Blake gave a clean bill of health in his sweeping inquiry.

CHARGES AGAINST JUSTICE COHALAN

Taken Up by Committees In New York Legislature

Albany, July 9.—The legislative inquiry into the charges preferred against Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of New York by John A. Connolly, a contractor, began before the senate and assembly judiciary committees.

The charges, which were presented by the grievance committee of the New York Bar association, embrace the assertion of Connolly that in 1904 Cohalan agreed with Connolly to secure city contracts in return for 55 percent of the profits, and that he agreed, in 1909, as part of the settlement of a suit brought by Connolly to recover the money paid on the 55 percent basis, that a false complaint be substituted in the action to the effect that the money in question had been loaned.

Hundred Thousand Trainmen on Eastern Railroads May Quit Work

New York, July 9.—By an overwhelming vote 100,000 conductors and trainmen on railroads north of the Potomac river and east of Chicago have voted to strike.

After a three hours' conference, in which both sides refused to recede from their original positions, a conference between representatives of the railway managers and of the Order of Railway Conductors and of the Brotherhood of Trainmen was broken off yesterday afternoon.

President Garretson of the Order of Railway Conductors said an immediate call would be sent to the committeemen of all roads involved to meet here Saturday and set a date for calling the strike. The men demand more money and reorganization of working conditions.

THE SCHOOLMA'AM'S WAY

It All Ended Happily

By CLARISSA MACKIE

The trail to Red Spider postoffice was a dusty streak of white twisting through the purple sagebrush.

Tony Goff and Bert Reid yanked their horses aside as the schoolma'am came flying up the trail on her little black pony.

"There ain't a fire nowheres?" called Tony jocosely as she swept past them.

"No," she laughed. "I'm just out for a breath of fresh air."

"Jest like a woman to go tearing around losing her breath so's to get a fresh breath," mused Tony as they watched her graceful, receding form.

"Yes," agreed Bert.

Tony looked at him narrowly.

"You and Miss Nan Laren ain't so chummy as you was," he said bluntly.

"Not so you'd notice it," growled Bert.

"So she handed you yours, eh? Jest as sweetly as she handed me mine and Mason Pepper his. Well, when I get to housekeeping I'm not going to put out a sign 'Beware of the Dog.' My sign's going to read, 'Beware of the Schoolma'ams!'"

"We're going to have rain," remarked Bert.

"You can change a subject most delicately, Bert. Speaking of schoolma'ams makes me weep; weeping makes me think of tears; tears are like rain; hence and therefore it looks like rain!" Tony threw back his head and laughed mirthfully, and Bert joined him with a rueful glance.

"She wouldn't even let me ask her," he confided suddenly. "She seems mad about something."

"Mebbe she just can't stand seeing you around, on general principles," chuckled Tony, with a glance at Bert's handsome, moody countenance.

"That sounds likely. Well, you fellows can count me out of the game There's Dan Cox. I've got to see him a minute, Tony." Bert dashed ahead to intercept the postmaster at Red Spider, while Tony Goff pulled his horse to a standstill and mused thoughtfully.

Suddenly he wheeled the animal about and dashed back along the trail in pursuit of Nan Laren.

He was surprised to find that young lady sitting shoulder high in the purple sage, looking mournfully at the setting sun.

"Oh, it's you, Mr. Goff," she said in a constrained tone.

"It's only me," admitted Tony in a thrilling tone. "Somehow nobody ever wants me. Now, if it had been Bert Reid"— The pause was eloquent.

"I hate him!" said Nan Laren coolly. Tony smiled wisely. "She's sure gone on him," he told himself.

"He certainly is no account," he agreed cheerfully.

"What do you mean?" she asked quickly.

"Oh, I mean he's just the kind of a man any one would naturally hate. He ain't got a winning way with him."

Nan was silent. Again she turned to the sunset. Tony Goff winked at his pony.

"Well, I must be humping along if I'm going to the dance at Red Spider. I don't reckon we'll see you there, Miss Nan?"

"Hardly," returned Nan coolly.

"I'm sorry. I expect there's plenty others will miss you, too," said Tony regretfully.

"I'm tired of dancing," yawned Nan with a successful air of boredom. "I had planned to ride over to the Water Drop tonight and see if I couldn't get a photograph of it by moonlight."

"Over to the Water Drop alone?" shrieked Tony, surprised.

"Certainly. I'm not afraid."

"Miss Laren, please don't go, or if you insist upon going let me go along. I'll keep in the background, but you hadn't ought to go alone."

Nan arose to her graceful height and shook back her sunny hair.

"Thank you so much, Mr. Goff," she said sweetly, "but I'm not in the least afraid. In fact, I prefer to be alone."

"Ouch!" winced Tony, turning his pony's head toward home.

"Don't mind my being hateful," she said with a sudden quaver in her voice.

"I don't mind. I'm used to being trod upon. That's what worms are for," grinned the volatile Tony, waving his hat in farewell.

"I'm sorry," her voice floated regretfully after him, and when after a little he turned and looked at her her face was buried in the soft black mane of her surprised pony.

"Gosh, I do believe they've quarreled," mused Tony as he went pounding homeward.

After supper he found Bert Reid making his toilet upstairs in the room they shared together. As Bert knotted a crimson silk scarf under the soft collar of his white silk shirt Tony splashed noisily in the basin in the corner.

"You all know I was lightly smitten with the schoolma'am," spluttered Tony after awhile, "but I declare if I wouldn't like to be her pa tonight, jest for an hour or two."

"Yes?" asked Bert coldly, but Tony noticed that he had stopped short and held the ends of his tie in both strong bronzed hands.

"Yes. If she was my daughter I'd lock her up in her room tonight. What do you suppose she's got on her mind?"

"Really it's beyond me," retorted Bert aloofly, but still he stood rigidly.

"Not going to the dance; tired of dancing; going to ride over to the Water Drop and take a picture of it by moonlight. It'll take hours to get a picture, and it's going to rain, ain't it?"

"Certainly looks like it," was Bert's brief reply, and Tony could get no other word out of him.

They rode over the trail to Red Spider in silence. Light clouds scudded across the sky now and then, blotting out the face of the full moon. In the northwest dark clouds were piling up.

At the dance hall they separated, and Tony did not know that Bert Reid had slipped quietly downstairs again and, mounting his horse, had plunged in the direction of Water Drop canyon.

Five miles over the southeast the little canyon afforded a green and cool retreat from the dusty plains. At the farther end, where it narrowed to a sharp point, there fell from the rocks above a silver rope of sparkling water. When the moon was at the full this was a favorite objective point for lovers' evening rides.

As Bert rode rapidly toward the canyon he was concerned to note that the dark clouds were piling up toward the zenith. Soon they would overtake the fair moon sailing over the canyon.

He hoped that Nan Laren had changed her mind and had stayed at home. He did not intend to thrust his company upon her, but he would keep within sight of her and thus protect her from the dangers of the night. His face saddened into grim lines as he thought that she didn't want him near her. He couldn't understand her sudden dislike for him. She had always been so kind and so sweet that he had really cherished hopes of winning her for himself. In that event he might take his savings out of the bank and buy the small ranch on Red Spider creek. But now—well, he avoided Red Spider creek; he didn't like to see the little ranch any longer.

When he reached the mouth of the canyon he paused and looked within. It was like a stage setting, and it was weirdly effective. Overhead the black clouds had gathered from all quarters until there remained the moon shining down out of a small circle of blue sky. The canyon was bright as day, and down at the extreme end was a girl's form standing on a high, jutting rock. Near by the black pony drowsed sleepily.

Bert slipped from his saddle and staked his horse. Then he walked down the narrow trail that led straight to the Water Drop, his eyes fixed on the girl's slender form. Now he could see beside her the black bulk of her camera resting on a shelf of rock, and so absorbed was she in the taking of the coveted picture that she did not hear his approaching footsteps until he was almost upon her.

Then, startled, she turned with a slight cry, and the camera went crashing down on the stones below.

"It's only me," cried Bert, leaping forward to catch the falling camera, but he was too late, for it eluded his eager hands. He lost his balance, his foot slipped on the flinty rocks, and he fell heavily and lay motionless.

For a moment the girl stood there as though stunned by the sudden occurrence. Her face was very white in the last glimmer of moonlight. Black clouds effaced the moon, and a heavy roll of thunder vibrated overhead. Bert's horse neighed shrilly from the canyon entrance, and the black pony answered.

"I am afraid," the girl whispered to herself, and tears ran down her cheeks as she slipped down from the high rock and felt her way over the stones toward the fallen man. Vivid flashes of lightning guided her, and presently she had lifted his head into her lap and was calling on him to speak to her.

Still he lay there, unresponsive, and she clasped him closely, and with a little sob of despair she laid her cheek to his. Then came the rain—not gentle drops of a summer shower, but an avalanche of water as if poured out of the heavy clouds.

The first wet dash roused Bert Reid to consciousness. "I must get to Water Drop," he said thickly. She will be afraid there all alone."

"I'm here, Bert," said the schoolma'am's voice, wonderfully meek and tearful.

"Here?" he echoed, and then he became aware that her arms were infolding him, that with her body she was trying to shield him from the heavy downpour and that once or twice her cheek touched his. Wonder of wonders!

"What made you come here tonight all alone?" he stammered.

"I was unhappy, and I hoped you would come, too," she whispered.

"You wanted me? I thought you hated me, Miss Nan."

"Sometimes I did because you were so—so—slow about"— Nan's face was lifted and turned away from him. He reached up a hand and drew her lips down to his.

"Slow about"—

"About telling me that you loved me," she quavered happily.

Bert Reid laughed contentedly. "I was so bursting with love, honey, that I suspected every man, woman and child—yes, and every critter—from here to the boundary could read my secret, and I tried to tell you, but you wouldn't let me."

"I know, but you ought to have told me anyway," cooed Nan in his ear.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COCOANUT DAINTIES.

WHEN cooking with cocoanut get a fresh nut if you can and grate it. Desiccated cocoanut is generally used because it is so much more convenient, but the flavor of the other makes it much more desirable.

Cocoanut Sponge Pudding.—Take two cupfuls of hot milk and pour over one and one-half cupfuls of sponge cake crumbs; then add one cupful of sugar, the beaten yolks of three eggs and one cupful of grated cocoanut. Allow it to stand for one-half hour; then add a grating of nutmeg, a little rosewater and the whites of the eggs beaten to dry froth. Bake in a buttered mold. Serve with wine sauce.

Combined With Fruit.

Cocoanut Fruit Custard.—Any canned or fresh fruit which is convenient may be used for this. Place a portion of the fruit in individual dishes and pour some custard over; then sprinkle with grated or desiccated cocoanut and serve with hard sauce.

To make the sauce take a cupful of confectioner's sugar, two tablespoonfuls of butter, three drops of lemon juice, a dash of nutmeg and hot water.

Begin to cream the butter with a little of the sugar. Add sugar gradually. This will soon be too stiff. Then add some boiling water. This will melt the sugar and cause it to become quite soft. Beat until a light, soft fluff is formed. Pile lightly on to a fancy dish.

Nut and Tapioca.

Cream Tapioca With Cocoanut.—Take three tablespoonfuls of tapioca and soak for four hours in cold water. Pour off the water and stir it into one quart of boiling milk. Boil for ten minutes and then add the yolks of four eggs well beaten, half of a small cupful of sugar and three large tablespoonfuls of dessicated cocoanut. Stir and boil this for five minutes longer. Pour into a pudding dish. Beat the whites of the eggs to a stiff froth, adding a very little powdered sugar, and spread over the pudding, sifting a little cocoanut on top. Brown in the oven.

BRIEFS

It looks like a holiday in City Square this afternoon with all of the stores closed up.

W. W. Mitchell left on the midnight train Tuesday for a brief business trip to New York.

The last of the July Fourth decorations in City Square and the reviewing stand have disappeared for another year.

There is one thing people can be thankful for and that is that while the days have been hot the nights have been cool.

Old Cuckoo Superstitions.

In the spring the cuckoo's first call of the season formerly played a great part in love divinations. A common English belief was that an unmarried person hearing a cuckoo call and immediately taking off boots and stockings would find on the great toe of the right foot a hair whose color would be that of the poll of the destined lover. Another idea, mentioned by Milton, and persisting till this day, was that an unmarried man or maid would remain single for just as many years as the number of the cuckoo's calls when first heard in the spring.

The Counsel of Perfection.

"If every one would mend one," suggested a witty parson, with admirable understanding of human needs, "there would be more true Christianity in the world."

Matthew Arnold took this ennobling counsel for self discipline from Pope: "Make each day a critic on the last." That was the star by which he guided his own difficult course.—Youth's Companion.

Right Up to the Minute.

"His wife is a business woman, all right."

"What makes you say that?"

"She installed a time clock in the hall, and he has to punch it when he goes out nights and when he gets back."—Kansas City Star.

Plain Facts.

"You can't make a silk purse out of a sow's ear."

"No, and who wants to? Leather goods are all the go."—Washington Herald.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ANCIENT SECRETS.

COLORS OF THE OLD MASTERS.

They Are the Envy and the Despair of Modern Artists, to Whom Their Composition Is a Mystery—Greek Fire and Roman Mortar.

Numerous are the trade secrets handed down generation by generation from father to son, and vast is the capital made out of some of them in the commercial world of today.

Particularly, perhaps, is this the case among the numerous manufacturers of piquant sauces and the countless venders of patent medicines.

But there is also, it must be remembered, another side to the case. Many, alas, are the priceless trade secrets buried far down below the moldering dust of the misty past and lost to the world, perchance never again to be recovered.

To cite the first example that occurs to the mind of the writer, for instance, what would a Royal academician of the present day give to be possessed of the secret held by the old masters—Raphael, Rubens, Correggio, Van Dyck and their compeers—for mixing their colors so as to render them imperishable and impervious to the ravage of time?

The red colors especially of these artists of a bygone epoch are every whit as bright now as they were three long centuries ago. On the contrary, the colors of pictures painted only 100 years ago have lost their luster and are faded and decayed to a deplorable extent.

Again, in the world of music, the manufacturers of violins—old masters, as one may justifiably term them, in another branch of art—treasured a recipe for a varnish that sank into the wood of their incomparable instruments and mellowed it as well as preserved it.

With such extreme, relentless jealousy, however, did they guard their great secret that it, too, is lost, to all appearances, irretrievably.

Rather more than 100 years ago there lived in a quaint, old world village in Wales a working blacksmith who had managed by some means or other to bring the welding of steel to such a pitch of perfection that the joint was absolutely invisible and the temper of the steel as fine as on the day it left the tester's hands. By his process he was able to join the very finest of sword blades, and after he had finished with them they were absolutely as good and as sound as when they had left the factory.

The blacksmith's fame spread far and wide, and, naturally enough, he attained a great reputation, but he made a point of invariably working in solitude. He was offered large and tempting sums to divulge his secret, but kept it obstinately to himself, and when his span of life had run its course he took it with him to another world.

The ancient Greeks had a substance which we call Greek fire and which they used in naval warfare.

Their method of employing it was simply this—to throw the substance upon the surface of the water, where it flamed up and set fire to the ships of the enemy. What was it?

The only known substance of the present day that would do this is the metal potassium, but to set fire to a ship in the manner described would necessitate the use of at least half a ton of the metal. Where did the Greeks obtain the substance they used with such effect? Or how did they make it? If Greek fire was potassium the secret of the process is another that must be numbered with the lost.

The man who could disinter the buried recipe for Roman mortar would be bowed down to and worshiped by the builders of the present day. How they made it is a profound secret and bids fair to remain so.

The mortar is as firm now as it was 2,000 years ago. It has calmly scoffed at the ravages of time and weather.

The above are but a few—a very few—of the lost and buried secrets of antiquity which modern scientists and mechanicians would give much to learn.—London Answers.

That Held Him.

One of the young men in the boarding house had the double fault of slowness in paying his bill and fussiness about the table service. One morning he said peevishly to the landlady, "Mrs. Jones, will you tell me why my napkin is so damp?"

"Yes, Mr. Wicks," replied the landlady promptly. "It's because there is so much due on your board."—Brooklyn Times.

Close.

"You say he is stingy?"

"Stingy! I should say he was stingy. He never tipped a waiter but once in his life. It was on his wedding tour, and the tightwad gave the waiter 10 cents and asked for a receipt."—Chicago Tribune.

Authoritative.

"So you are going to leave your studio?"

Women Workers.

According to the American Medicine, "experience shows that the strain of self support is too great for female nerves, and physique and early breakdown results. In very few callings do we ever find women of middle age who show anything like the comparative vigor of men of the same decade of life. As far as we know every class of female labor is considered a temporary employment and not a life calling. It is almost invariably exchanged for the more normal family life—if the right man comes along."

Sloth, like rust, consumes faster than labor wears, while the used key is always bright.—Benjamin Franklin.

AFTER THE FOURTH.

My dear Editor:

The 4th of July 1913 has passed into history. All the pleasures of the day are now simply a memory; the fine parade of the morning, the fireworks of the evening, the lovely weather that prevailed in the evening, showing that nature was disposed to join with the work of men in giving Quincy one of its most unique and delightful incidents.

Today we take account. in some measure, of what the day accomplished for us, and in the brief retrospect we find much to help us on through the oncoming days until we shall have touched another landmark ,perhaps of similar character in 1914.

What it saved materially in having the day so sanely conducted, preserving our homes, preserving our children, and preserving our purses, all tells in favor of the conduct of the day as managed by the 4th of July committee. The cost to the City in an appropriation of one thousand dollars seems very trifling when we consider that the loss of interest on one thousand dollars is something approaching forty-five dollars, and when we consider further that we shall probably have added to the taxable property of this city duirng the current year something approximating a million dollars, to have lost the tax upon some forty-thousand dollars out of a million it seems a very small imposition upon the finances of Quincy. Some of our friends were considerably disturbed in thinking that Quincy had, as they supposed, used up one thousand dollars in one day's merriment, but a little reflection upon the far-reaching effects of a day so emphatically given to a contemplation of the value to every one of us of our flag and all that it stands for; the added respect, unconscious in many instances, of the growing generation, for what this country has accomplished in the past hundred years, leads one to remember that, as has been said, the cost is trifling compared to the grand benefits to us and our immediate posterity.

This Nation only thrives as the best sentiment of its people is kept alive. The captains of industry do much to forward its material wealth ,but the work of these men is small, compared to the constant efforts made by men of lofty sentiment to impress upon the people high ideals. We would lapse rapidly into an earlier stage of greed and disregard of right, if it were not hat constantly there is held before our poeple some appreciation, of the unity of our interests, and the prime necessity of doing what we may to enforce worthy sentiments.

At no time in our history has if been more deisrable that the young and old should have a realization of what a free republican government means to them; and Quincy, though its worthy Mayor and his very worthy assistants, has done a very great deal for the uplift of this city of ours toward higher ideals and a stronger sense of the worth of this grand republic.

Let me in conclusion emphasize again that this Nation progresses only through the cultivation of sentiment, that that is the grand moving force which carries this people to a higher plane of living that makes really for progress; that its absence leads down into lower depths; and will conclude by quoting from Oliver Goldsmith:

"Ill fares the land
To hastening ills a prey,
Where wealth accumulates
And men decay."

You Live Better Than Kings of Old

By HOLLAND.

ALL the great rulers of the earth from King Solomon to Peter the Great were at a disadvantage compared with the citizens of today. Not one of them had a bathroom with a porcelain tub and modern plumbing in his palace. Not one of them used a safety razor, had an appetizing breakfast food, used a telephone or enjoyed the comforts of an electric light. All these are within the reach of rich and poor today. All are enjoyed by rich and poor.

You are better off than Emperor Napoleon, Rameses II. or Louis XIV. You have conveniences they never imagined or dreamed about. Chief among them are the modern newspaper and its advertisements and advertised wares. Are you getting all the good out of life that is possible?

You are not if you neglect to read the advertisements and to buy the articles that are advertised. Comforts, luxuries and necessities are offered to you in great profusion, and the fact that they are advertised proves that the articles are reliable.

There is Comfort in

SEEING QUINCY FIRST TRIP BOARD OF TRADE

Large Party Participate in Second Annual Automobile Trip About the City

The Day Closes With Fine Fish Dinner at Houghs Neck

Fifteen automobiles, carrying nearly 70 members of the Quincy Board of Trade visited the industries of the city Wednesday in its "See Quincy First" campaign. Considering the difficulties that confront the majority of the members the representation was large.

At the start off, John L. Hamilton, president of the board demonstrated that he was a "Man of Letters" for the banners telling the significance of the outing were designed and executed by him at his home on Sunday.

Among the guests of the day was Herbert Smith, president of the Squantum Improvement Association, William R. Kenyon, past president of the same, Rep. Michael T. Sullivan, Post Master Charles L. Hammond, and countless other men who have been conspicuous in Quincy's industrial and public life. Women were conpsicuous by their absence.

The route covered all sections of the city and the day closed with a dinner at Norteman's Pavilion, Houghs Neck.

The start was made from the Board of Trade rooms where luncheon preceded the filling of the cars. Each car carried a small American flag at each light and A. W. Pierce took a group picture of them bunched in front of the Adams building.

Benjamin Hodgkinson, Jr., sounded the assembly at about 12.30 and the pilot car carrying Mayor Stone, who is past president and John L. Hamilton, the present booster, shot through Quincy square and down Adams street to Squantum, via Wollaston. When they arrived at Squantum they were joined by the representation of the Squantum Improvement Association at whose request, President Hamilton called to the attention of those in the party the proximityof the Moon Island Pumping-station from which odors of a nauseating nature are often times released.

Circling the big hill in Squantum the party dislodged dust that hadn't been turned since the Fourth of July parade by the Squantumites and it flew across the slope so thickly that it was impossible to see houses situated at a short disance.

Completing the circuit the party took Squantum street to the boulevard after several turns through byways and Wollaston park street the party arrived at the home of President Hamilton. Punch, deliciously mixed was served, cigars distributed and Mrs. Hamilton was introduced to the gathering as the head of the Board of Trade.

After a 20 minute stay the cars wound through shaded streets to the Boston Gear Works where a thorough inspection was made of this flourishing industry. Several experimental stations were explained in detail and the sprinkler system, including fireproof automatic doors which close when the sprinklers are released attracted the attention of many in the party.

About 1.45 the travellers ran back through Quincy square on their route to South Quincy where the first stop was made at the tool manufacturing plant of Alfred P. J. Pinel. Tonics and cigars were here distributed.

After the party had looked at the electric fires and saw how they manufactured different tools the assembly was sounded and all headed for the Quincy Turning Co., where some of the members saw for the first time how stone is turned. Proceeding up Granite street they swung over to the plant of Deacon Bros., and then back to the monumental and statuary yard of Fred Barnicoat. Here more than a passing gaze was given the work on the blocks.

The ramblers once again embarked for the Fore River, passing the new Adams school which is partly constructed and paying a short visit to the Tuberculosis camp which is about to undergo radical changes in compliance with state regulations. A visit was also paid he Hansen Shoe Co., on Baxter street and then all swung into line for the steel industry.

Along Quincy avenue the party was giving several salutes by automobilites who seemed to know of the outing. Joseph Sedgwick, vice president of the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation welcomed the visitors and extended to them the privileges of the yard.

Over half an hour was devoted to the different departments and S. T. MacQuarrie furnished young men who escorted the party through its nooks and corners. The last call was made at the power house of the Bay State Street Railway Co. where Councilman Thomas Griffin did the honors.

The party then headed for Houghs Neck headquarters being made at the well known cafe of William Norteman. William had been apprised of their coming and knowing that all would be hungry, he served one of his appetizing shore dinners.

When the party arrived at Norteman's they were tired and dusty but the fine dinner served set all in good spirits. The affair was informal and opened with a grace by Rev. B. A. Willmott who later on gave a five minute talk on his impressions of Quincy. President Hamilton thanked those present for taking part in the outing and particularly those who had loaned their automobiles.

Capt. George W. Wardwell, manager of the Kincaide theatre extended the privileges of his house and nearly 50 filed into the theatre as the second film was being run.

Those that took the trip were Mayor Stone, President John L. Hamilton, Secretary John O. Hall, Arthur W. Stetson and Benjamin Hodgkinson, Jr., bugler; W. G. Shaw, Rev. B. A. Willmott, A. F. Bromley, H. G. Crocker, John R. Nelson, Edward Eager, William R. Kenyon, President Herbert Smith of the Squantum Improvement Association, William H. Mace of Weymouth, Joseph A. A WORD TO PARENTS

Let the child's foot grow as it should

Educator shoes (which cost no more than other kinds) positively prevent foot troubles by allowing the foot to grow as nature intended, by providing ample room for all five toes and by giving proper support to the ankle muscles, arch and instep.

BAD FLAVORS IN BUTTER.

EXPERIMENTS show conclusively that some metals either cause or greatly accelerate certain bad flavors in butter.

Unless dairymen desire to run the risk of turning out a product which may taste like a mackerel they must not permit their cream to come in contact with iron and copper

Rusty cans, poorly tinned pasteurizers and exposed bolt heads in churns are all more or less responsible for an unpleasant flavor in butter which would otherwise be of first quality.—(Globe.)

A Short Editorial

From the Boston Globe

RANDOLPH CREAMERY BUTTER

Never tastes "fishy"

It has a sweetness and delicacy of flavor found only in butter that is made in clean dairies, by clean workmen and of the best quality of heavy cream. No copper, no brass, no iron ever comes in contact with Randolph Creamery Butter.

It Costs No More Than Poor Butter.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE NOW OPEN

Large Attendance at City Playgrounds on Opening Day

The city playgrounds at Ward 3 and Ward 4 opened on Monday morning with an unusually large attendance, Ward 3 having over 300 for the day and Ward 4 doing even better with a total of about 475 for the two sessions.

The playground which has been located in the rear of the Coddington schol for the past two years has been moved to the Washington school and will be opened tomorrow morning. The new location is a far better one in every particular and the attendance ought to far exceed the figures of last year.

Several changes have been made in the force of directors, Ward 3 adding a new assistant to Miss Lucille Elwell and Frank Tirrell succeeding Henry Trask. Miss Arnold is to assist with the girls.

Miss Agnes Connor of the Sargent school will be in charge of the new grounds at Ward 2, Washington school, while Russ Bates will keep the boys busy with their sports. Louis F. LaRose of the Y. M. C. A. will have general charge of all the grounds.

A playground is also being planned for Wollaston which will be located in the rear of the new Wollaston school. This will not be ready for use until the month of August as the grounds will have to be levelled and all equipment erected.

BOYS DROWNED OFF SQUANTUM

Tried to Escape From School at Rainsford Island

Two of the three boys who attempted to escape from the school at Rainsford island were drowned and the third nearly exhausted Tuesday night when they attempted to swim from the island by easy stages to the Quincy shore.

The boys drowned were Arthur Allen and Frederick McGinley. Their companion, John Scully, was found almost lifeless on the shore of the island the following morning. Each boy was 13 years old. Allen and McGinley were sent to the school for breaking and entering, and Scully was there for stubborness.

Dressed in night clothing, they dashed out of the dormitory at 10.15 p. m. Tuesday night. Throwing off the scant attire, they plunged into the water and struck out for Joe's Rock, 200 yards across the channel. They became exhausted in the current and Scully was the only one who managed to reach shore again.

A cry for help was heard by the night watchman, but a night search resulted in nothing but the night clothes on the shore being found. Wednesday morning Scully, wearing a shirt and overalls taken from the house of a fisherman on Joe's Rock, was found. He said the trio had planned to swim by easy stages to the Quincy shore.

The trustees went to the school Wednesday afternoon to make plans to prevent any further attempted escapes.

MUCH NEEDED RAIN STORM

The rain which has long been needed and which farmers have prayed for some weeks arrived Wednesday night, and during the night it rained almost continually. The early evening Wednesday gave promise of rain but it was not until about 10.30 that the first few sprinkles came. At that time the wind was blowing fresh although the rain was hardly more than a sprinkle at first. Then as the night drew on, the rain increased and during the night it fell in torrents giving everything a thorough drenching. The early morning gave promise of more rain before the day is out.

STEAM TRAWLER CREST LAUNCHED

The steam trawler Crest was launched at the Fore River yards Wednesday afternoon. There was no ceremony, the blocks were simply knocked from under her, the soul pieces sawed off and the Crest allowed to slide into the water. The only witnesses to the launching were the officials of the company and Charles M. Schwab, President of the new company who was at the yards Wednesday. The Crest was built for the Bay State Fisheries Co., which already has three vessels of the same type in commission.

Just as the boat was about to be released Frank Kuchl aged 18 years of 1 Broadway fell from a pile of planking near the launching platform and fractured the bones of his left leg. He was taken to the Red Cross hospital on the grounds and later removed to his home.

ELLEN A. BURRILL.

The funeral of Ellen A. Burrill widow of Seth Burrill, who died Monday afternoon in her 76th yaer was held from the home of her son, Walter E. Burrill, 49 Walker street, Wednesday afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. Thomas W. Davison, pastor of the Atlantic Memorial church. Burial was in Woodlawn cemetery.

MUCH DAMAGE BY THE NOON STORM

Electric Traveling Crane at Yard Of H. C. Smalley Co. Blown from the Tracks

Lands in Heap on Railroad Tracks. Other Damage

During the heavy storm this noon the big electric traveling crane in the yard of the H. C. Smalley Granite Co. was blown off the rail and landed in a heap on one of the spur railroad tracks. The crane runs on rails some twenty feet from the ground. The rails run east and west and the heavy wind took the crane and carried it along the rail to the end of the line when it ran over the end and fell onto the railroad tracks and was badly smashed. Just how much damage was done is hard to tell but it is estimated that it will not be far from $1,000.

A rumor says that a workman who was on the crane at the time was carried over with it and injured. All of the telephone lines in that vicinity however were put out of order and this rumor could not be verified.

The storm was one of the most severe that has visited Quincy for a long time. The sky began to grow dark shortly after 1 o'clock and in a few minutes there was the sound of distant thunder. Acompanying this were vivid flashes of lightning and then the rain fell. With the rain came a high wind and the water was blown along the streest in great sheets. From City Square the water rushed down Granite street clogging up the catch basin be-

A letter that was written in 1861 has just been delivered to the addressee at Pottsville, Pa. Postmaster General Burleson may claim that it would have been delivered sooner if the Democrats had been in power all these years.

Why can't the Colonel make that contemplated Argentine trip by easy overland stages, and pacify the Latin-American belt as he goes along?

Dr. Alexis Carrel has demonstrated that the human heart can be stopped for ten minutes, but the human brain for only five minutes. In that latter case, however, it should be remembered that the human mouth usually keeps on working.

A College education is said to be worth $25,000. What a bunch of hot footed collectors the universities will throw on the market this month.

OLD DANCE TUNES.

When the fiddlers played "Turkey in the Straw," "Old Zip" "Coon," etc., some of the Confederates at Gettysburg dropped their suit cases in the dusty road, and toed out the old measures until the musicians could saw on no longer.

Where are the dance tunes to today that will set the present set of boys girls to footing it out on some 50 year day in the dim future?

A certain school of dance music familiar to our fathers, and heard within comparatively few years, now seems almost to have disappeared. "Irish Washerwoman, "Money Musk," were examples of whole libraries of merry jigs. They were simple, homely little airs, suggesting breakdowns in farm house kitchens, and dances of the squirrel tail hand tub company.

There was a kinkiness about these little measures, a rollicking quality, that modern machine dance tunes, sawed off by the yard to sell to music publishers, fail to show. This quality inspired very agile and individual manners on the dance floor.

In the old "contra dances" many people were not satisfied with the standard movements taught by dancing masters. They had individual kinks and pranks, which they kicked out to suit themselves. Some would become famous for these originalities. Visitors would come from miles around to see noted dancers go through the standard measures with their own variations.

The new style turkey trots and tangos are a revival of this taste for more vigorous and individual dancing. But they seem to run more to sex suggestion, and less to pure physical merriment and high spirits. One would go a long way to see those old "Johnny Rebs" of '63 do "Turkey in the Straw" on the road to Gettysburg!

AMERICAN RAG-TIME.

The American rag-time songs, it is said, are the rage in Europe this summer. Good authorities assert the rag-time movement, formerly regarded as mere trash, does contain an originality that entitles it to be considered as a "folk song," an expression of the life of the people, not some conventional and commonplace thing made according to rules found in books.

The erratic division of rhythm in rag-time—technically called syncopation—undoubtedly fits the American temperament. Stately and formal dances do not suit our young people. They want a rhythm that calls for vigorous motion, not fixed by arbitrary dancing master rules.

The trouble with ordinary rag-time is that most of it is written by mediocre musicians. Their harmonies and melodies are of about the character you would find in a book of kindergarten songs. One sounds just like another, and the melodies of 1913 are indistinguishable from those of 1912.

SOCIETY FOR BETTER SCHOOLS.

Dr. David Snedden of Boston, Chairman of the Massachusetts State Organizing Committee of the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene, which is to be held at Buffalo the last week in August, has received a letter from Dr. Thomas A. Storey of the College of the City of New York, and Secretary-General of the Congress, suggesting the continuance of the State Committee for the purpose of establishing a permanent organization in the interest of better school hygiene. In his letter Dr. Storey writes:

"The various state organizing committees are serving a useful and important purpose in their relation to the progress and success of this Congress. But it would be a pity for these committees to go out of existence as soon as this Congress becomes a thing of history. The service they render this international enterprise is small in comparison with the service they might render soceity in general if they were to effect a permant organization in the interest of better hygieneic conditions in all the schools of our country. Let me urge you then to use your committee as the nucleus of a state organization whose object shall be the acquisition and conservation of the health of the school child."

In response to this letter the members of the state organizing committess are now in correspondence with the various boards of education boards of health, school superintendents, school improvement associations mothers' clubs, parents' association teachers' associations, charity societies, tuberculosis leagues, visiting nurses' associations, boards of trade and women's clubs, within a view of seeing what can be done in the way of permanent co-operative organizations.

All the foregoing organizations are also being urged to send delegates to the Buffalo Congress. The Congress is open to all persons interested in improving the health and efficiency of school children.

Sargent Garrett, the complainant testified to the extent of the violation and all the while Benton smiled. He was fined $15 and paid the fine but the smile had disappeared.

INSPECTION OF MEAT PLANTS

Government Takes Steps to Check Storm of Criticism

TO EMPLOY OUTSIDE EXPERTS

Instructed by Secretary of Agriculture to Report Directly to Him Fully and Frankly Conditions as They Find Them—Effort to "Foster Confidence of the Public"

Washington, July 10.—Professor William T. Sedgwick of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology has been designated by the secretary of agriculture as one of three experts in veterinary science, meat inspection and public sanitation to inspect and report on meat packing establishments operating under federal supervision in New York, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Missouri and Illinois.

In an official statement the office of information states that it is the idea of the department to "foster confidence of the public in the meat inspection work."

Recent hearings before congressional committees, coupled with articles in magazines attacking the meat inspection service, have brought a storm of criticism about the ears of the government officials and in many instances there have been "near scandals" not unlike those which led to the exposures of stockyard conditions during the Roosevelt administration.

It is pointed out here that the real situation is probably worse than the public in general suspects, since the calling of outside experts indirectly intimates that the experts in the employ of the government are not considered sufficient.

In addition to Sedgwick, the department has authorized the appointment of Dr. W. A. Moore, professor of pathology at the New York State Veterinary college, Cornell university, Ithaca, to inspect and report on conditions in the meat packing establishments at Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Buffalo and New York.

Dr. J. W. Connaway, Missouri Agricultural college, Columbia, Mo., is to inspect and report on conditions in the meat packing establishments of Kansas City, St. Louis and St. Josept, Mo., and National Stock Yards, Chicago. The secretary's instructions to each of these experts read as follows:

"With a view to safeguarding public health, and maintaining the highest degree of efficiency in the meat inspection service of the department, it is my desire that you report directly to me fully and frankly the conditions as you find them at the various packing establishments; together with such recommendations looking to improvement of the service as in your judgment may seem best.

"This new inspection of meat packing establishments by outside experts (says the department), under temporary assignment by the government, will in no way supersede or lessen the work now being done by the bureau of animal industry. The idea, according to the secretary, is simply to have the inspection and regulatory work checked up by competent authorities, who will report directly to the secretary."

SNAKES AS THEY FEED.

When They Start Swallowing They Never Know When to Stop.

The swallowing process is a serious matter for any serpent, which must draw itself painfully over its prey by hitching its jaws, armed with backward curving teeth, forward, on one side and then the other, and by similar movements of the neck, ribs and skin, until the whole mass has finally reached the prolonged stomach. The snake's jaws are attached to the skull, and the bones of the head and neck are connected by elastic ligaments which may be so stretched that an object considerably larger than the head itself may be swallowed if rightly seized; hence prey is usually turned about after killing it until its nose is foremost, when the undertaking begins. A copious flow of saliva assists degultition.

Once started, a snake never knows when to stop; has little ability to do so, indeed, and the prey rarely kicks loose. It has happened frequently in zoological collections that a large snake has swallowed a smaller one mechanically, as it were, when each has seized the same food animal. Both swallowed at it until the larger reached the nose of the smaller diner and then kept right on as long as there was anything in its mouth, unless the victim of this discourtesy managed quickly to let go of the fare and escape.

Bartlett tells us, in his book on the care of animals in the London zoo, of one case where a boa constrictor devoured a cage mate nine feet long who did not feel disposed to let go of his half of a pigeon. Next morning this boa could not curl up, but had to lie straight out for several days, and a month was spent in the digestion of this inhospitable meal. Snakes will keep pushing their jaws over a string of frogs or mice tied together until they have got outside the whole chain. These animals have little, if any, sense of taste and when they get their teeth into anything soft try to eat it.

BULLET PHOTOGRAPHY.

Moving pictures have been made at the rate of 100,000 a second in contrast with the rate of fifteen or twenty a second, which is enough when reproduced on a screen to give the eye the impression of a continuous picture. The only thing that moves fast enough to make such tremendous speed worth using is a bullet, and some extraordinary pictures of bullets have been taken at this rate, seventy-two pictures being taken of a revolver bullet as it moved ten inches from the muzzle.

Pictures of a bullet passing through a stick of wood showed a queer condition. The bullet passed completely through the thin stick and was well on its way beyond before the wood gave any sign of distress. Then some tiny splinters started out, following the bullet; the stick began to split, and after the bullet had proceeded some distance the stick suddenly fell to pieces. No camera shutters are fast enough to take pictures at anything like this speed, so no shutter was used.

Instead, a series of electric sparks was flashed, the sparks following one another at the rate of 100,000 a second, each spark making a picture. The film was mounted on a wheel about three feet in circumference, and the wheel was revolved at the rate of 9,000 revolutions a minute. When all was ready the bullet was shot, the spark flashed and the wheel revolved, the actual exposure being limited to a fraction of a second so as not to pile up pictures one over the other.—Saturday Evening Post.

Not In His Line.

A motor stopped in front of the photographer's, and a woman lacking none of the artificial accessories deemed necessary to "looks" entered the studio. A couple of days later the photographer submitted proofs for her approval. "Not one of those pictures looks anything like me," the woman insisted. The photographer tried in every way to pacify her, but, finding this an impossibility, lost control of his temper. "Madam," he exclaimed, "did you read my sign?" "Yes." "Well, it does not say 'cleaning, dyeing and remodeling.' It says 'portraits.' "—New York Times.

The Sequel to the Joke.

Many years ago a visitor to Edinburgh was being shown over the high court of justiciary. He made some remark concerning the dock and its duties, and in reply the official jokingly said the visitor might one day be sentenced to be hanged in that very room. The sightseer was the notorious Dr. Pritchard. Two years later in the dock he had so closely inspected he was doomed to death for poisoning his wife and mother-in-law.

"They are the most popular couple in our flat. We'd all hate to see them move out."

"Why are they so popular?"

"They always have the windows open when they quarrel."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Surprising Information.

"So your little boy is in the hospital?"

"Yes; the doctor said he would have to have his asteroids taken out."

Bird and Walsh Candidates For Bay State Governorship

Boston, July 10.—Declaring that he believed it to be his duty to serve the Progressive party this year, Charles S. Bird last night announced that he had authorized the placing of his nomination papers in circulation as a candidate for governor on the Progressive ticket.

CHARLES S. BIRD,
Progressive Candidate For Governor.

In his announcement Bird said he would rather work in the ranks than as a candidate for office, but as he owes the Progressive cause more than it owes him he had decided to become a candidate for governor.

LIEUT. GOV. DAVID I. WALSH.

Lieutenant Governor David I. Walsh is preparing to make a formal announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor within a few days whether or not Governor Foss takes out papers.

The supporters of Walsh are not satisfied with the attitude of Governor Foss. While the governor expresses kindly feelings toward the candidacy of Walsh he has refused at any time to state he would not again be a candidate.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The library has just added 3 books which should prove interesting reading in connection with the recent and present labor disturbances both at home and abroad. The three are, John Graham Brooks' American Syndicalism (69.137), Arthur D. Lewis' Syndicalism and the General Strike (69.139), and John Spargo's Syndicalism, Industrial Unionism and Socialism (69.236)

The first, American Syndicalism, is an exposition of the I. W. W., which answers such questions as, What is Syndicalism? and What chance is there that its principles will be applied through revolutionary power to our American democracy?

The second, Syndicalism and the General Strike, is a study of syndicalism, throughout the world. The author summarizes arguments for and against the general strike, which is the main contention between syndicalism and socialism, and he also provides material not previously accessible.

The last, Syndicalism, Industrial Unionism, and Socialism, is a non-partisan statement of the situation, showing the differences between the three subjects of the title. The appendix contains the original and the new preamble of the I. W. W., and these two make an interesting comparison.

There was a narrow escape from a serious accident near the Quincy Adams station this noon when the brakes on a freight car standing on the spurr of the Boston Ice Cream Co., became loosened allowing the car to slide down the grade toward Water street. On its way down it bumped into a car of the Quincy Oil Co. and then ran onto a derailed track and finally landed in the middle of Presidents avenue. It was necessary to send the wrecker out from Boston to get the car back onto the iron.

neath the Granite street railroad bridge and in a few mintues there was two feet of water beneath the bridge making the street impassable.

Dr. J. F. Welch attempted to pass over the street but got stuck in the centre beneath the bridge and it was necessary to solicit the aid of the big truck of the Gas Co., to pull his car out of the mud.

Shortly after Dr. Welch was pulled from the flood Walter Jackson, operating a delivery truck of W. G. Shaw plunged into the water and as he struck the centre of the pool his engine stalled. He was thrown a line and hauled out.

The culvert on the southerly side of Granite street blocked completely and an Italian six feet tall was at work with the water above his waits line.

The house of Mrs. Harry Elden on Church street, East Milton was struck and badly damaged. An alarm was sounded from box 67 but the house did not take fire.

A large elm tree on Third hill, opposite the Eaton Ice house was split in halves. A large tree was blown across Adams street, opposite the Congregational church, East Milton.

It is possible that new marks for Sea Girt will be made.

WIDE PROBE OF LOBBY ORDERED

House Prompted Largely by Allegations of Mulhall

HEARINGS ARE TO BE PUBLIC

Manufacturers Ask That About Forty Past and Present Members of Congress Be Called to Refute Charges—Fight Against Allowing Committee to Employ Counsel Is Lost

Washington, July 10.—A lobby investigation of extraordinary scope was authorized by the house, to supplement the senate probe already under way. With the passage of the Henry investigation resolution, a special committee of seven members was immediately appointed by Speaker Clark, with Representative Garrett of Tennessee as chairman. The committee will meet today to make plans for the institution of the probe at once.

While the house investigation was prompted largely by the allegations of M. M. Mulhall regarding the legislative activities of the National Association of Manufacturers, the resolution as finally passed so enlarged the scope of the inquiry that all efforts to control members of the house, or to influence legislation, will be subject to the inquisitorial power of the committee.

The speaker appointed, with Chairman Garrett, Representatives Cline, Russell and Rodenberry, Democrats; Willis and Stafford, Republicans, and Nolan, Progressive.

The special senate committee continued its inquiry into the activities of lobbyists concerned with the sugar and wool schedules of the tariff bill. The committee has not begun its probe of the Mulhall charges.

Many of the witnesses involved in the Mulhall charges are already in Washington, summoned to take the stand before the senate committee. Among those are several former members of congress and the officers of the National Association of Manufacturers. The latter have asked Senator Overman to call about forty former and present members of congress, among them former Speaker Cannon, former Senator Aldrich, former Representative Watson of Indiana and others mentioned by Mulhall.

These witnesses will undoubtedly be wanted by both the senate and house committees. Printed copies of the Mulhall correspondence have been prepared for the house inquisitors.

The resolution adopted by the house provides that all of the hearings of the committee shall be open to the public.

The fight against the resolution was led by Representative Levy, who opposed particularly the reinsertion of a provision allowing the committee to employ counsel. This was done by a vote of 102 to 104.

During the debate, Representative McDermott of Illinois made a statement denouncing the use of his name in the Mulhall letters.

Club members and members of committees of the Squantum Women's club who are working for the Bazaar to be held July 19 met at the home of Mrs. Edward Eagar, Harbor View street this afternoon to talk over arrangements and to sew for this occasion.

Among those who kept open house the night before the Fourth was Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Harper. The young people enjoyed dancing and singing and were served refreshments later in the evening. All agreed that Mr. and Mrs. Harper proved themselves delightful entertainers.

A report has been going around Squantum that the ladies of the Squantum Women's club had given up trying to have a clubhouse but Mrs. William A. Reed, president of the club when interviewed said there was no truth in the rumor and that members of the finance committee were hard at work and expected satisfactory results very soon.

FACING TORTURES.

The Sublime Courage Shown by an American Indian.

WILLING TO DIE FOR ANOTHER.

Story of a Dramatic Episode In Which the Iowa and Musquakie Tribes Figured—Heroism That Won the Admiration of the Enemy.

A striking story of the courage and self sacrifice of which the American Indian at his best is capable is given by O. H. Mills in the Des Moines Register and Leader. It was told to the white men by the famous Sac chief, Black Hawk, who himself saw the incident.

It all began with an unfortunate quarrel between an Iowa and a Musquakie, in which the latter killed the former and then in a moment of frenzy scalped his victim. The two tribes were at peace, and this act, allowable only in time of war, was, in Indian eyes, an intolerable breach of good faith.

The Musquakies offered all sorts of reparation, but the Iowas would accept nothing but the person of the offender, to be tortured and put to death in propitiation of the outraged spirit of the dead man. To this the Musquakies agreed on condition that the culprit be given a month to fortify himself for his terrible ordeal. But just as the month was about to expire he fell ill with a raging fever. In that condition he could not be carried across the prairie, but a failure to produce him at the appointed place would arouse the suspicions and perhaps the hostility of the Iowas.

A council was called to debate the matter, before which appeared Cono, a brother of the sick man. "There are no squaw men in our family," he declared. "I will go in his place."

The others tried to dissuade him and described to him the tortures he would have to undergo, but he insisted upon making the sacrifice. Accordingly an escort was selected to accompany him, at the head of which Black Hawk, then a young but widely respected chief, was placed.

"I never saw a more pathetic scene," said Black Hawk, "than the parting of Cono and his father and mother and other relatives. The whole tribe was overwhelmed with gloom."

In the middle of the afternoon the party arrived at the Iowas' village. Cono had asked that his identity should not be disclosed, but one of the Iowas who was present at the time the young Indian was slain saw that the guilty party was not being delivered, and Black Hawk told the whole story. The Iowas accepted it as true and, after a brief council, consented to the arrangement. The death circle was staked out and patrolled with armed guards, and Cono was placed in its center, while his escort was entertained in the tepee of the chief. It was a chill November day, and the sun was just sinking behind the cliffs of the Des Moines river when the escort left the camp.

They paused on a hill about a half mile distant from the camp. They could see that the fires had been lighted round the death circle, and in the hush of the evening came the plaintive sound of Cono chanting his death song.

Having traveled some two hours, they halted and made camp. About midnight they heard the clatter of horses' feet, and in a moment more a single horseman rode up. It was Cono! This was his remarkable story:

The fires of the death circle were burning brightly, and the squaws with their burning sticks were preparing to make the first attempt to extort a cry of pain and agony, when an old man, the father of the dead Indian, raised his voice:

"Stop!" he said. "Let me speak. I am the one that has suffered. My son was killed and scalped by a Musquakie. I was hungry for revenge, and were the one that killed and scalped him here I would shout with joy at his torture. But this young man is brave. Never have I seen such bravery before. He is too good a man to torture and kill. Release him and let him return to his own people."

Although the entire village a few hours before had been eager for revenge, there was a murmur of approval as the old man gathered his blanket about him and took his seat. Without any one's making a single objection, Cono was removed from the circle and given food and drink. A few hours later he was led from the camp, allowed to mount his own pony and depart in peace.

Persuasive.

The teacher meant to convey a profound lesson. "You must forgive your enemies, boys," she said, "and then your enemies will forgive you. I want you all to try it."

The next morning Johnny Jones came to school with a very black eye.

"Why, Johnny, what's the matter?"

"Aw," replied Johnny, "I've been forgivin' Scrappy Green an' makin' him forgive me."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Willing to Try.

Mary—The butcher is here, ma'am. What shall I order? Mrs. Morris Parke—Dear me, I haven't a thought. What can I order? Mary (thoughtfully)—I really don't know, ma'am. I'm sure. Mrs. Morris Parke—Oh, can't you make a suggestion? Mary (cheerfully)—I can try. What do you make it of?—Puck.

If you make money your god, 'twill plague you like a devil.—Fielding.

BULGARS ANNIHILATED

Fate of Invaders of Servia, According to Belgrade Reports

Belgrade, July 10.—According to authoritative private information, the Bulgarian forces, nine battalions strong, which invaded Servia at Kniarsevatz, were entirely annihilated. They met the Servian forces and engaged in a desperate battle at the entrance of Zajetsar pass.

Losses to the Bulgarian and Servian armies, engaged for days about Kotchana and Ishtip, will reach 35,000.

This was the news reaching here from the front and with the report of the termination of the battles the Servian government claimed a great victory for its troops. More than 200,000 men were engaged in the conflict, and the Servian troops now occupy Kotchana and Ishtip, according to the claims of the war office.

This assertion is borne out, too, by reports from Sofia which declare that it is admitted the Bulgarian troops have evacuated the cities.

GREAT STRIKE SEEMS NEAR

Prospect That Hundred Thousand Trainmen Will Quit Work

New York, July 10.—With the abrupt termination of the negotiations between the board of railway managers and the representatives of the 100,000 trainmen and conductors who are demanding a 20 percent increase in wages, a mammoth strike that will partially or entirely cripple forty-two railroads north of the Potomac river and east of Chicago appears inevitable.

As the railroad managers have refused absolutely to grant any increase, or even to submit the question to arbitration, the prospect of a general strike is more menacing than at any time since the employes formulated their demands. Should there be a general response to a strike order the situation would become one of the most serious that has been faced in the east since the crisis of 1877.

HAS NO OBJECTION TO COOL CLOTHES

But Meriden Priest Bars Split Skirts at the Altar

Meriden, Conn., July 10.—Rev. James Conlon of St. Rose's Catholic church announced that women whom he believes to be immodestly or too scantily clad will be barred from the sacrament at the altar. Conlon said he believed it was his duty to refuse holy communion to women in slit skirts or girls wearing low or peek-a-boo waists.

"The church is neither a ballroom nor a recreation pier," he said. "I have no objection to women wearing cool, decent clothes, but it is time to halt when they appear in things that are mere apologies for sleeves, a wisp of cloth and a yard of nothing."

RUN ON BANK SUBSIDES

Financial Situation In Pittsburg Is Returning to Normal

Pittsburg, July 10.—Conditions in financial circles have, to all appearances, reached normal. The run on the Pittsburg Bank for Savings, which was started by the closing of the First-Second National on Monday, entirely subsided yesterday afternoon, after a resumption of the run yesterday morning had caused some anxiety.

Further developments in the affairs of the First-Second National are not looked for until Receiver Murray has had opportunity to organize his forces necessary in the liquidation of the institution.

Bankers on the whole feel that the tension has been relaxed and that the financial situation locally has been greatly clarified.

HOLDING NIGHT SESSIONS

Democratic House Committee Is Pushing the Currency Bill

Washington, July 10.—The Democratic members of the house committee on banking and currency have begun holding night sessions in order to consider the Glass bill and speed it on its way to the house via the party caucus.

It was determned to hold night sessions, partly because this time would suit the convenience of members better and partly because if the weather again turns hot the nights will be a good time to work.

Suicide In Front of Locomotive

Boston, July 10.—An unidentified woman, apparently about 37 years old, cast herself in front of a train in this city last night and received injuries from which she died.

Killed by Fall From Water Wagon

Boston, July 10.—Driver T. T. McCarthy of a water wagon was crushed to death on Faxon street when he fell from his seat and a wheel passing over his head.

FOUND ITS GOLDEN HEAD.

Riddle of a Marble Column In Italy Read by a Beggar.

Near the monastery of San Vito, in Naples, stood a marble column that had been erected by an eccentric Frenchman about the beginning of the last century. On it were written in French the following enigmatic words: "On May 1 every year I have a golden head."

The inscription sorely puzzled the inhabitants of Naples. On May 1 the year after the erection of the column a great crowd came to it in the hope of finding the top covered with gold pieces. Needless to say, they went home with their pockets as empty as they were when they came.

For several years people came to see the promised wonder and went away disappointed. At last the authorities had the column taken down in the belief that treasure would be found beneath it. Nothing but earth was found, and so the column was set up again. Obviously the words had a mystic meaning, but no one was clever enough to guess it, and for years the riddle remained unsolved.

Finally in 1841 a ragged beggar named Annibale Tosci noticed the inscription. He stood looking at it for a long time while he pondered its meaning. Then suddenly the solution of the puzzle flashed into his mind. He waited patiently until May 1 before he tested the accuracy of his interpretation of the mystic words.

On the day mentioned in the inscription Tosci, bearing a pick and shovel, set out at daybreak for the column. He arrived before any chance visitors, and as soon as the monastery's bells tolled 6 he started digging in the ground covered by the shadow of the top of the column. He had not dug long before he came on a satchel that contained 80,000 francs. The inscription was a true one—the head of the column covered the golden treasure every year on May 1.

Annibale Tosci, the beggar whose sharp guess had given him comparative wealth, became a landowner near Mantua. He died at the age of ninety-four.—Youth's Companion.

HISTORIC RAILROAD TRIP.

Fillmore and Webster on the Erie's First Through Train.

The completion of the Erie was the most important event in the history of railroad building down to that time—a matter of national consequence. Recognition of this fact was made when in May, 1851, a special train carried on a two days' trip through the mountains and valleys of southern New York, sweet with the leaves and blossoms of early summer, President Fillmore, four members of his cabinet and other guests of national distinction.

Daniel Webster, majestic even under his heavy burden of age and ill-health, was secretary of state in Fillmore's cabinet and rode on that first through train. He made the journey in a rocking chair lashed to a flat car, that he might lose nothing of the scenery and the sweetness of the fresh verdure. Nor was he too feeble to enjoy the great barbecue at Dunkirk, where oxen and sheep were roasted whole, pork and beans were cooked in vessels holding fifty gallons each, bread was baked in loaves ten feet long and two feet thick, so heavy that two men staggered under their burden, and the whole was served at a table 300 feet long, spread under a specially built shed along Railroad street from Deer to Lion street.

It was a great day for Dunkirk; it was a great day for New York state and the nation, and it was a great day also for President Fillmore, who found the pork and beans especially to his taste.—Wells Fargo Messenger.

Soaking the Clothes.

Mrs. Browning had a new domestic named Agnes.

"Agnes," said the mistress, "did you put the clothes in soak?"

"Oi did not," answered the girl. "Did you want me to, mum?"

"Why, certainly," was the reply.

"Very well, mum," said Agnes.

About two hours later Agnes presented herself to her mistress.

"Oi hev put thim clothes in soak, mum," she said, "but the pawnbroker wud give me only chew dollars on the whole outfit. Here be th' money, an it's sorry Oi am that ye bees so harrud up."—Harper's Magazine.

"Sapsy."

"At Liverpool street station, London," said an American, "I asked a booking clerk whether he could tell me where Sapsworth was. His answer was that he had never heard of such a place. "But," I urged, "is not that the way the country people pronounce Sawbridgeworth?" "No, indeed," he laughingly replied. "They call it Sapsy."

Kipling's Response.

The Cantab, the Cambridge university weekly, onced asked Rudyard Kipling to contribute to its columns. In response came the following reply:

There once was a writer who wrote,
"Dear Sir—In reply to your note
Of yesterday's date,
I am sorry to state
It's no good at the prices you quote."

Gymnastic Stunt.

Barbour—You seem warm. Have you been exercising? Waterman—Yes, indeed. I went to the mutes' dance and swung dumb belles around all evening.—Michigan Gargoyle.

Meteorological.

Wallie—When I called on Zella last eve she acted toward me like a weather forecast. Wardie—How was that? Wallie—Fair and very cool.—Kansas City Star.

Bandit Robs Bank and Then Locks Two Men In Vault

Rigby, Ida., July 10.—Widespread search was instituted for a robber who entered the State bank of Rigby and took $3800.

The robber drove the cashier and assistant cashier into a vault, compelled them to throw out all the money in it and then locked them in.

The cashier's 5-year-old son, arriving as the robber departed, gave the alarm.

You will be glad to know the following experience.

'Tis the statement of a Quincy citizen.

Mrs. R. A. Neil, 40 Edison Park, Quincy, Mass.: "My hands and ankles swelled. I was worse at night after I had done a hard day's work. I used several remedies, but they did me little or no good. My husband brought home a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and I began taking them. I could see an improvement right away. Doan's Kidney Pills got my kidney's acting right and the swelling went down. I wasn't so nervous and felt better in every way. I now keep Doan's Kidney Pills in the house and consider them a fine family medicine."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

WOULD BREAK UP MONOPOLY

Commerce Board Condemns Policies of the New Haven

WASTEFUL IN THE EXTREME

Road Should Cut Off Its Trolley Lines and Divorce Boston and Maine—Present Bookkeeping Methods Should Not Be Tolerated—Executive Heads Declared to Be Overloaded—Report of Probers Unanimous

Washington, July 10.—Financial operations of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, its ownership of trolley lines and control of allied New England railways, are condemned in unmeasured terms by the interstate commerce commission in the report of its investigation made public here. The commission's conclusions are:

That the "outside" financial management has been "wasteful in the extreme," and that had the New Haven confined itself to actual railroad activities under the same conditions that prevailed in other respects "it could have paid a dividend of 8 percent for the fiscal year 1912 and carried to surplus account $1,794,000, instead of showing a deficit of $930,000."

That the New Haven's agreement with the Boston and Albany is "violation of the spirit of the statute against the restraint of competition and should be cancelled." "In our opinion," says the commission, "this line should be kept entirely free from New Haven control."

That the New Haven should divest itself of its trolley lines, not because the present ownership is in violation of law, but because such ownership might be used to prevent the building of competing lines in the future.

That the Boston and Maine's merger with the New Haven, if permitted to stand, will result in "an almost exclusive monopoly of transportation facilities by railroad in the greater part of New England."

The report further declares:

That the New Haven's bookkeeping "utterly beclouds" operations and "such methods should not be tolerated."

That the financial "misfortunes" can all be traced to a desire to control New England transportation.

That the financial condition of the New Haven company gives "no occasion for hysteria."

That the New Haven's violation and disregard of laws are responsible for agitation.

That the public "may well protect itself against control of trolley lines."

That the federal government must assume certain jurisdiction in operation of the New Haven and Boston and Maine.

That the Boston and Maine and New Haven freight service is inferior to what it should be.

That the New Haven "paid $13,500,000 for nothing" in Rhode Island trolley deal.

That $12,000,000 "vanished into air" in Westchester road deal.

That the New Haven company "gave away" to J. L. Billard and associates $3,000,000 in Boston and Maine stock transaction.

That other "outside ventures" were "almost uniformly at a loss."

That Mellen's note transactions with the company were handled "in a lax way."

That "any betterment of railroad conditions in New England must begin with the assurance that the New Haven management will act not only prudently, but, above all, within the letter and the spirit of the law."

Commissioners Clements and Marble submitted a concurring opinion in which they "agree heartily with the report," but make their position clear as to some of the issues mentioned.

Concerning the merger of the New Haven and the Boston and Maine, they assert that "this is a phase of the subject that should be left to the congress, just as the issues under the anti-trust law have been left to the courts.

"If it were properly to be considered here, however, we would give weight to the suggestion that the merger has so overloaded the executive heads of the entire aggregation as to impair not only correct and economical financial administration, but also efficiency and safety of operation.

"The Boston and Maine and the New Haven are shown by the report to be separable organically. They are not one system, but two systems under one management. Therefore, closer superintendence, with corresponding gains in efficiency and safety, might be expected from a dissolution of the merger."

The report of the interstate commerce commission is the result of proceedings instituted under the general authority of the commission to investigate and report upon the matter of rates, classifications, regulations and practices of carriers.

GENERAL ASBERT

Governor of Havana Province Charged With Shooting Riva

In a quarrel over the arrest of the porter of a political club in Havana General Armando Riva, chief of the Cuban national police, was mortally wounded. Governor Ernesto Asbert has been arrested for the shooting. Three bullets entered Riva's body, and two other persons were wounded by flying bullets.

DEATH OF CHIEF RIVA

Makes Dying Statement That Asbert Fired the Fatal Shot

Havana, July 10.—General Armando Riva, chief of the national police, who was shot during a revolver duel with Governor Asbert and Congressman Arias, died yesterday.

On his death bed Riva charged that Asbert fired the fatal shot, and public feeling against the governor is running high. The shooting is said to have been a direct result of Riva's crusade against gambling in political clubs.

FARNSWORTH SET FREE BY PARDON

Clemency For Writer Who Killed a Chicken Thief

Boston, July 10.—David Farnsworth, the poultry raiser and magazine writer, was pardoned by the governor's council after he had begun to serve a six months' term in the Plymouth jail for shooting and unknowingly killing a chicken thief at midnight. Farnsworth is back at his farm at Bridgewater with his wife.

When the governor's stamp of approval was attached to the action of the executive council it marked the conclusion of one of the quickest pardons that was ever obtained for a prisoner in Massachusetts. The vote of the council was unanimous.

Counsel for Farnsworth had a host of witnesses present whom he intended to present, but they were not called.

CLARK IS RE-ELECTED

Thirteen Thousand Delegates Attend Christian Endeavor Convention

Los Angeles, Cal., July 10.—With nearly 13,000 delegates attending from all parts of the Christianized world, the twenty-sixth international Christian Endeavor convention opened here last night.

Francis E. Clark of Newton, Mass., president of the organization, who, because of his initials, is known as "Father Endeavor," presided.

The election of officers were perfunctory. Dr. Clark, founder of the society, was unanimously re-elected president.

"We expect to keep Dr. Clark at the head of the Endeavorers as long as he lives," said Secretary Shaw of Boston. Shaw and the other officers were re-elected.

SALMON IN BIG BONFIRE

Nearly a Thousand Cases Burned Because Unfit For Food

Boston, July 10.—Moving picture men ranged their cameras on $3000 worth of burning salmon on the commonwealth flats, where the federal government destroyed the fish because it was below the pure food law standards. There were 984 cases in all, or 23,616 cans, of Alaskan salmon. The burning was done by Deputy United States Marshal Bancroft and Bailiff Trask.

The salmon, which was shipped from Alaska to a Boston dealer, was seized because government officials alleged it was adulterated and contained putrid decomposed animal matter.

Rich Coal Operator Killed

Berwick, Pa., July 10.—Baird Snyder, Jr., one of the wealthiest independent coal operators in the anthracite regions, died from injuries received in an automobile accident when C. S. Hindle, who was riding with him, was instantly killed.

Exit Embossed Stationery

Washington, July 10.—Congressmen will hereafter have to get along without embossed stationery, an economical committee having decided the luxury isn't worth the $30,000 a year it costs the tax payers.

SEEING WAR

A Man Encounters Enough of It Without Smelling Powder

By HARRY VAN AMBERG

When the Franco-Prussian war broke out I was twenty-five years of age and a globe trotter. Within me flamed up a desire to see war, actual war, men standing up to kill each other professionally—not that any one man had a grudge against any other one man in the enemy's ranks, but because he was a soldier, whose business it was to kill and be killed. As to the war in question, it was undertaken by a man who had usurped the government of the French people. They were preparing to get rid of him, and he proposed to direct their attention elsewhere on much the same principle that one would put an end to a family disagreement by setting fire to the house.

At that time, young as I was, I took no thought as to the cause of the war. I was interested only in seeing the fight. I was in St. Petersburg at the time, and so eager was I that I took the train for Berlin in order not to lose any part of it. Fearing that if I asked permission to go to the front it would be denied me, I went without permission. All I had in the way of vouchers was my passport, certifying that I was an American citizen.

When I reached the border line between France and Germany the Prussians had advanced beyond it. I hurried on in their wake, fearing the war would be over before I could have an opportunity to see any of it. When I reached the columns I was chasing I found that they had halted in their march and gone into camp. I was surprised to learn that they didn't know whether they were to remain there one hour or a century. On reaching their outposts I requested to be taken to their commanding officer, and they obliged me. I was conducted to the tent of Colonel Lauterjung, who looked at me very sternly.

I handed him my passport and told him in the German language, which I spoke indifferently, that I was an American citizen and had come to his camp in order to see the war. He glanced at the passport and asked me if I had received a permit from the war office at Berlin to come within his lines. When I admitted that I had not he turned to an officer standing near and ordered him to expel me from the lines in the direction from which I had come and see that I didn't get back again.

Seeing that protest would be useless, I followed the officer out of the tent, but we had not gone far before we were halted by the colonel's orderly and recalled. The colonel told me that he had reconsidered his action and had decided to send me to the headquarters of the corps d'armee, where I would have an opportunity to state my case.

The officer who conducted me on arrival at the general's tent sent in a communication from Colonel Lauterjung, and presently I was admitted to the tent. General Kritzmacher looked at me with more interest than I had reason to expect from him. He asked me a number of questions—where I had lately been, from what direction I had approached the army, my object in coming. I told him that I had come straight from St. Petersburg through Berlin and desired to see the war, especially a battle. I asked him if he would move forward soon, for if not I thought I would go on, fearing the war would be over and I not having seen it. His brows contracted at this. Then he explained that even corps commanders did not ask such questions of the general in chief. He said also that he would be pleased to have me attach myself to his command, but it would be impossible for me to go from one part of the German army to another. He said this in so firm a tone that I saw at once that where I was I would remain till it suited his purpose to let me go elsewhere. He sent for one of his aids, Major Guenther, and told him in my presence to show me such attention as would be permitted by the rules of the service. Then he dismissed us both.

Major Guenther, I judged, was the member of the staff one of whose duties was to take care of persons not belonging to the military service with whom the army came in contact. He provided me with a tent and food, and I could see plainly that he was keeping an eye on me. The headquarters were surrounded with a guard of honor, and on attempting to pass beyond it I was stopped by a sentinel. I asked the major if he would pass me out so that I could visit the camps, and he said that citizens were not permitted to roam at large, but he would be happy to ride about with me himself and show me all there was to be seen.

After luncheon, which we took together, I was provided with a horse, and Major Guenther kept his promise. Indeed, there was no part of General Kritzmacher's army that I did not see, and my conductor afforded me every information as to the number of men it contained, the divisions of infantry, artillery and cavalry, the weight of the field guns—in short, any and every thing that goes to make up a fighting force.

I took my dinner with Major Guenther and turned in early since my haste to see war had led me to travel day and night and I was very sleepy. I slept on an army cot and lost myself as soon as I lay down. Nevertheless I awakened in about an hour oppressed by a feeling of apprehension. It seemed to me that there must be some reason for my being treated with so much attention, and, though I could not explain why, I dreaded lest it meant something malevolent.

While I was thinking about it I saw the tent flap shoved noisily aside and in the lighter aperture a crouching figure. Being curious to know what would happen, I breathed like a sleeper. A hand was thrust into the tent, which grasped my clothing, including boots and hat, and took them away.

What did it mean? Something must be wrong. I had been watched. Now some one had removed my clothing, doubtless for a purpose. Why I could not divine. I lay perfectly still and presently saw the tent flaps parted again and heard some one replace my belongings. I was curious to know if they showed any signs of what had been done with them, but thought it better to wait till morning. I did not care to have it appear that I was awake and cognizant of the incident.

When day came I looked through my clothes, but nothing was missing. Nothing had been added. They were just as when I had taken them off the night before. I was more puzzled than ever.

During this day I could not detect that I was watched as the day before. I was not treated with more cordiality, but more indifference. Either there was a change of feeling toward me or no time to attend to me. But I had met with a surprise during the night, not to say a shock, that I did not recover from. I passed the day in fear lest something should happen to me. I had come to see men injure each other and now dreaded lest they injure me. And the worst of it was that such injury was being wrought out in secret.

My fears were somewhat allayed during the day by the officer who was responsible for me giving me an invitation from his general to dine with him in the evening with a party of friends from Berlin. I replied that I had no evening dress with me, but was informed that under the circumstances this would be excusable. The dinner took place in the open air by the light of Chinese lanterns. The guests consisted of both men and women. I had drunk enough wine to make me feel comfortable and banish my fears when a lady sitting next to me, screened by the table, put a crumpled piece of paper in my hand. I dared not look at it, so I put it in my pocket till the dinner was ended. On parting with the other guests I did not bid them goodby, for they were not to return to Berlin till the next afternoon. As soon as I was alone I examined the paper. It read:

We are both in danger, both being in the same service. I shall not be permitted to depart, and tomorrow the information of the German forces I give below will be found on me. I can destroy the papers, but prefer to turn them over to you, hoping that you may succeed in getting away with them or transferring them to another.

Here at last was an explanation of my singular treatment, an explanation that filled me with apprehension. And when I thought that I might be arrested with this paper on me I felt the marrow in my bones congeal. How should I get rid of it? If I tore it into bits and threw them away they might be collected and put together. The only safe way was to burn them—that is, if I could do so without being seen. I finally hit on an expedient. I had a pipe with me and while putting tobacco in it for a smoke contrived to put the paper in also. Then, lighting the contents, I smoked vigorously. The paper stopped the draft, and I was obliged to relight several times. Finally there was nothing left of the paper but ashes.

After the departure of the guests from Berlin the general sent for me and received me with a manner entirely changed.

"I have to offer you an apology," he said, "for a suspicion that has attached to you since you came into our camp. We had information that a spy answering your description was seeking admission to our camps. That is the reason you were sent to me instead of being expelled from our lines. We have been watching you while giving you every facility to gather information which we did not intend you should take away. The lady who gave you a slip of paper last evening did so at my request since we desired evidence against you.

"However, the traps we have laid for you came to a halt this morning by the arrest of the spy we were after. He might have been your twin brother, he is so like you. Permit me to congratulate you on a very narrow escape."

"Thank you."

"He is to be shot this afternoon. Would you like to see the execution?"

I declined the honor and asked the general's permission to depart at once. On getting out of the German lines I made a bee line for home. I had seen very little of war, and what I had seen concerned myself and not others. It is a far different matter seeing others killed from being killed oneself. When I reached home I was asked repeatedly:

"How does it seem to see a man killed?"

"I don't know," I replied, "and I don't wish to know. I narrowly escaped death, and that not in the excitement of battle, but standing before a file of riflemen or by a rope."

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

MEATLESS SANDWICHES.

SANDWICHES for the children's school luncheon should, if possible, be made without meat, but with some nourishing and appetizing filling. Cheese and chopped nuts, combined with olives or fresh vegetables, such as lettuce or fresh tomatoes, make nice sandwiches.

Savory Sandwiches.

Cheese and Pimento Sandwiches.—Take a can of pimentos. Rinse them in water. Add to them a peeled onion and a half pound of cheese and chop until quite fine. Slice some sandwich bread, butter it and spread with the chopped mixture. Place two of the slices of bread together to form a sandwich.

Fancy Cheese Sandwiches.—Take an ounce of butter, four tablespoonfuls of American cheese, grated, a teaspoonful of chopped parsley or two teaspoonfuls of chopped olives, a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt, a dash of cayenne and white pepper, a little paprika and a half teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Put the grated cheese into a bowl, add the butter after melting it, then put in the salt, pepper, olives or parsley and the Worcestershire sauce. Mix well and spread on slices of buttered sandwich bread which have been cut thin.

Flavored With Olives.

Cream Cheese Sandwiches.—Mash the cheese in a bowl until it is a paste and then add a little beaten sweet cream and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce to every cheese. Add salt and pepper to taste. Spread on slices of fresh graham bread which have been cut into rounds and buttered. Add chopped olives, place the slices together and serve.

Sweet Sandwiches.

Walnut Cream Rolls.—Place three tablespoonfuls of finely chopped walnuts into sweet cream enough to cover them. Add two teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar and a dash of nutmeg. Let the nuts stand for several hours, then drain and add two teaspoonfuls of whipped cream. Then beat the mixture until it is smooth and spread on slices of sandwich bread which have been thinly buttered and deprived of the crusts. Roll the slices and tie with white baby ribbon. Dip the ends of the rolls in whipped cream, then into chopped and powdered nuts. Adorn the bow with a sprig of parsley.

SURE SIGN OF RAIN.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MAINTENANCE OF EARTH ROADS

If you look a the ordinary country road after a shower you will see small puddles along the wheel ruts and sometimes larger pools. This water stays on the road surface because it cannot drain away into the side ditches. If you look closely you will see side ditches which have grown up with bushes and weeds in many cases, and which are so far from the travelled part of the road that the rain water does not drain into them. That part of the roadway where the wagons travel is called the travelled way. To prevent water from standing on the travelled way the road should be raised in the centre and should slope gently into broad shallow ditches. It is then said to have a crown. If it is 10 feet from the center of the road to the side ditch, the surface at the side ditch should be at least 10 inches lower than it is at the center where the horses travel. The road then has a 10-inch crown. The rain that falls on a road properly crowned will run quickly to the side and not soak into the surface or form pools. The side ditches for surface water should run parallel to the right of way, and should be open at every low point so that the water can run out of them into neighboring brooks or streams. If the ditches merely collect the water from the road surface and it can not run away, large pools will be formed along the roadside, which will gradually soak into the soil beneath the road and make it so soft that the wheels of wagons will cut through the road surface and soon destroy it.

Sometimes water runs from land along the road into the road and forms a little stream down the wheel tracks or in the middle where the horses travel. When driveways into farm yards are built across the side ditches they frequently form channels for water from the farm yard to run into the road. The pipes under driveways become filled with leaves or rubbish and the water can no longer run away. If the driveways that stop the ditch water were rebuilt so that no pipes were necessary and the ditch could be left open, much trouble from surface water would be stopped.

Sometimes a road runs across low ground or through a swamp where the road can not be drained by side ditches alone. If the road were built higher like a railroad embankment across such low land and made with a crown, it would be dry and hard. Sometimes a road passes through what is called a cut. This is a place where the earth has been dug out so that the road can go over a hill without being too steep. The water which always flows quietly under the ground on hill sides is known as ground water. In road cuts such water sometimes makes the road very muddy, and the road then needs what road builders call underdrainage. A good kind of underdrainage is a trench to go along under the side drain and about 3 feet deep and a foot and a half wide. In this trench a pipe is laid near the bottom and covered with loose stones no bigger than an egg. When the trench is completely filled with loose stones the ground water, instead of soaking into the roadway, will stop among the stones and flow down the hill through the pipe.

To keep a road smooth and crowned the best method is to drag it with a road drag. A road drag is made easly with two halves of a log which has been split. The log should be about 6 or 8 inches in thickness and about 6 or 8 feet long. The two halves of the log are set 3 feet apart with the smooth faces forward and upright. They are then fastened together with braces set in holes bored through the log. A pair of horses may be used to drag the road and are hitched to a chain fastened to the front half of the log. The road drag should move forward so that it slants across the road in such a way that a small amount of earth will slide past the smooth face of the log toward the center of the road, thus forming the crown. The edges of the logs will smooth out the ruts. The best way to drag is to begin at the side ditch and go up one side of the road, and then down the other. In the next trip the drag should be started a little nearer the center and the last trip over the road the drag may work close to the center itself. Small ridges of earth will be thrown in the horse track and smeared by the round side of the log smoothly over the road. The smearing of the earth by the drag is called "puddling" and it tends to make the surface of the road smooth and water-tight after the sun comes out. The road is always dragged after it has rained and not when it is dry. A good, strong pair of horses with a well-built drag can drag about 3 or 4 miles of road in a day, and it is the best way to maintain good roads. In every country some farmer along each 4 miles of road should own a drag and drag the road when it rains. He would always find the road in good condition when he goes to market.

Owing to the fact that many rural schools were closed at the time when the prize maintenance essay was announced by Director Logan Waller Page of the Office of Public Roads, it has been decided to extend the limit for receiving the essays to October 15, 1913. In addition to the gold medal given as first prize, two silver medals will be given as second and third prizes. If a child who has submitted one essay previous to the issue of this notice should care to try again, he is at liberty to do so, but he must be a pupil of a rural school. There is some misunderstanding in regard to the subject of the essay. The idea is to set the children thinking how to better their earth roads with the material they have at hand.

Regarding the conditions attending the "Olympic" meet in the Windy City Marceau wrote home: "Wretched track and worst accommodations. Small tent to dress in, a la Scotch picnic-disgusting."

Marceau's opinions of the Chicago athletic festival differ little from those of all the other Massachusetts athletes who took the trip."

A Chinese Umbrella

By REGINALD D. HAVEN

I was dining the other day with my friend Alan Bonbright. Mrs. Bonbright is the daughter of a missionary whose field was in China, and she had spent most of her girlhood there. Her husband had been to China on business, met her there and brought her home with him as his wife.

Mrs. Bonbright, a girl at this time, was with her father at his missionary station in the province of Shantung. After dinner I was taken to a room where a collection of souvenirs of the Flowery Kingdom was kept. Among them was an umbrella made of bamboo wood and paper, covered with the customary pictures of men and women, birds and flowers. Across it when expanded were Chinese characters which, of course, I could not read. Bonbright directed my attention to the umbrella, and Mrs. Bonbright said, "If you're going to tell that story I'll go elsewhere." She went out with a look indicating that I was about to hear something unpleasant.

"You know," said Bonbright, "that China is full of persons who live by highway robbery. They cut off their heads whenever they capture them, but this doesn't seem to deter others, for life is cheap there and only the better classes care much about their own or others' terrestrial existence. Well, one day I was traveling on horseback through the province of Shantung. I had no mind to be set upon by the highwaymen and had armed myself. There is not much fight in even the robbers in China unless they have every advantage, and I didn't feel in much danger so long as I could defend myself.

"I was not attacked myself; but, hearing a shouting ahead of me, I pressed forward and found a Chinaman in the dress of a mandarin being set upon by a gang of robbers. I fired shots at them, and they left their prey in a sorry plight and took to their heels. I picked him up and set him to rights. I had come up just in time to save his pocketbook, and he offered me a portion of its contents as a reward. This, of course, I declined, whereupon he talked his thanks—so I supposed, for I did not understand a word he said. Just before I left him he took a writing stick and wrote those characters you see there on the umbrella and gave it to me. There was nothing to do but accept it, and as the day was hot I used it.

"Every Chinaman I met looked at the umbrella, then at me, and their indifference was at once turned to reverence. Some of them stopped and salaamed as I passed. I wondered if they mistook me for the governor of a province or an executioner. Singularly enough, I didn't catch on to the fact that it was the umbrella that was drawing forth such respect.

"I stopped that night at the missionary station presided over by my wife's father and found them in great trouble. They had got wind through some of the Christian natives, servants and others attached to the mission of the Boxer movement that was about to break forth. My wife was then a girl of nineteen and the oldest of a family of seven. The converts were in a terrible state of fear, which naturally communicated itself to the white family.

"Drowning persons will cling to a straw, and this family clung to me. True, I was only one man, but I was well armed, and even one man might be of some protection. I suppose I would have remained anyway, but I could not leave the girl who struck my fancy. When she looked appealingly at me with those blue eyes of hers I could not resist and said I would remain with them till the trouble was over.

"Remembering how easily I had put to flight the robbers, I really thought that with my two revolvers and some fifty cartridges I would be a protection, but when I heard the shrieks of the Christian converts as the crowd approached the mission house I didn't like the prospect. The yells of the brutes who were murdering them were equally appalling. What could I do against an infuriated mob?

"However, I stationed myself at an upper window, laying my ammunition and extra pistols beside me. I called upon Ethel to stay beside me and load them for me as fast as I fired, and she nerved herself to do so. I put my head out and, seeing the mob coming reeking with blood, my heart sank. Wishing something to conceal me from them, I took up the umbrella the mandarin had given me, opened it, fixed it before me at the window and poked holes through it so that I could see where to fire.

"The mob had broken into the next house and killed every one there, then was ready to storm the mission. Already an ax had fallen on the door below me when I saw a man look at my umbrella and become much excited. He ran forward, then back with the man who wielded the ax. A knot of rioters gathered, all looking at the umbrella. Not another blow was struck. I did not need to fire a single shot. The mob seemed disappointed, but passed on.

"As soon as it had gone I withdrew the umbrella. Ethel, who could read Chinese as well as English, clasped her hands, raised her eyes to heaven and gave thanks. Then she interpreted the characters to me. It was an order from the greatest mandarin in the province to "respect this man and all that belongs to him."

I. W. W. INVADE BROCKTON

Brockton, a city which not many moons ago was the home of many Socialists is about to be given the attention of the I. W. W. and Caleb Howard of South Quincy who has been active in the recent Hopedale trouble arrived there Wednesday prepared to improve what he calls the poor conditions in the tack manufactury of the W. W. Cross Co. The workmen suspended work last week and are understood to ask for a $2 day and 54 hour week with a 50 hour week for night workers. Caleb Howard alleges that the feeders have been working on a basis from $1.25 to $1.35 per day.

VIOLATION OF MUFFLER LAW

George W. Keach and James T. Holland, both of Milton were arraigned in court this morning for violation of the muffler law at Milton. The complaint was dismissed by Judge Avery after a lengthy hearing in which Sergeant Garrett of the Metropolitan police, two attorneys and both defendants participated.

The alleged violation was committed on the Milton river in June and Officer Philbrick who made the arrest presented strong testimony in defense of his case. The defendants took exceptions to the positiveness of the officer that they were the parties that had committed the violation because a heavily wooded bend in the river screened them from view.

The arrest by the officer was the first in the campaign against violators of the muffler law in Milton.

There is a hole in the sidewalk at the corner of Hancock street and Butler road that becomes a small pond every time it rains. A small load of gravel would fix the job and receive the thanks of people who use this sidewalk. It is not pleasant in the night to step into a deep puddle of water, especially for the lady who wears white shoes.

QUINCY THE CENTRE OF THURSDAY'S STORM

L of a Small House at Quincy Neck Demolished---High School Struck

Damage Caused by the Wind and Also by Floods

According to the Boston papers, Quincy was one of the places most hardly hit by the storm Thursday noon. As stated in the Daily Ledger of that day the storm broke shortly after 1 o'clock and for half an hour it blew a gale and the rain and hail fell in torrents flooding the streets.

The storm did a great amount of damage in Quincy but fortunately no one received any injuries. The most serious damage was at the granite plant of H. C. Smalley Granite Co. where the massive traveling crane was blown along the run and then dropped onto the siding from the main line of the railroad. As the crane fell an outward train was approaching and the engineer was thinking that the tracks might be blocked, brought his train to a stop. Fortunately, however, the crane fell as noted above on the siding and it was later hoisted into position again by the railroad wrecking crane which had been sent to Quincy Adams to clear up the wreck caused by the runaway freight car.

All along Franklin street trees were blown down taking telephone wires with them, and many telephones in the South Quincy district were put out of commission. A large tree on Franklin street was one of the big trees to be blown over. In addition to this tree, limbs were blown down all over the city and the ground was covered with broken branches.

One bolt of lightning struck the large chimney on the northerly end of the High school building sending the bricks flying in all directions. A bolt struck the chimney near the top making a big hole in it. The heavy caping however was not blown off. The bricks fell into Butler road and the grounds on that side of the building were roped off as a warning to pedestrians to look out.

One of the freaks of the storm was seen on Sargent's land in the Fore River district. Here a large willow tree was uprooted which in falling struck the L of a small house occupied by Simon Antone, ripping off the room and leaving the kitchen exposed to the elements. The family were badly frightened but none of them were injured. It was a funny sight to see the kitchen stove and dining table exposed to the elements.

One of he humorous sights was Granite street near the railroad bridge. There is a small catch basin beneath the bridge which takes care of the water of an ordinary storm but which is entirely inadequate to cope with the storm such as that of Thursday. The water rsuhed down the grades of Granite street on both sides and accumulated to the depth of several feet beneath the bridge as the mud from the street had completely clogged the drain. Dr. John F. Welch on a hurry call attempted to pass through but got stuck in the mud and water and it required the services of the big truck of he Citizens' Gas Co. to pull him out. In the meantime Everett Crane had taken the doctor in his car and carried him to his destination. One of the trucks of the W. G. Shaw furniture company also got stuck and had to be hauled out.

One of the street gang was sent to free the catch basin and the water was up to the waist of the man as he stood with a long pole trying to free the grate from the mud.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS IN CAMP

Having Time of Their Lives at Sharon

The eighteen boys who have spent the last two weeks at Camp Massapoag, which is located at Sharon, have had the time of their lives, if the reports that have come back can be believed. In the first place they were taken down in automobiles which were kindly placed at the disposal of the Association by A. N. Murray and W. G. Shaw. Then there have been quite a number of the parents of the boys who have graced the camp since the boys have been there. These people have seemed to be pleased with the way camp is being conducted and the site as well.

Another interesting feature, as far as the boys is concerned, is the fact they have received 100 per cent. at camp inspection for the past five or six days. They propose keeping this up during the remainder of their stay at the camp. The boys will arrive home Monday noon at 12.07.

Wanted.—A camp site for the Quincy Association. With the securing of a camp site by the new County Association at Braintree, it would seem as though the Quincy Association might be able to do the same. There is no question but that this feature of Association work which is being made much of by the Associations throughout the country, is one of great benefit to the boys and young men of the membership. It makes possible the getting away from the city and out into the open of many a boy and young man, who otherwise could not have this opportunity. They can go out for a night or for the week-end. They are in good care, get good food, and have a good wholesome time. Before another camp season rolls round it is to be hoped that the Quincy Association will find some friend who will realize his or her opportunity in this direction.

SEWER WORK STARTED.

Two sewer gangs were started at work this week laying main and lateral sewer pipes. Work in this department was commenced considerable later than usual this year for the reason that the appropiation of $40,000 for this work has but just become available. The order was passed early in the year but the City Treasurer was unable to borrow the money at the rate of interest, named and it was necessary to amend the order increasing the interest to four and one half per cent.

SQUANTUM WAR ON MOSQUITOES

Oil Being Used on the Pools and Marshes

An appropriation of $25 was made by the Squantum Improvement association at its regular meeting Wednesday night to keep up the campaign against mosquitoes. Squantum has been practically free of the pests this season owing to the work of the association. Several weeks ago the association appropriated $10 which was spent in buying oil which was sprayed upon all the stagnant pools in Squantum and in the marshes between Squantum and Atlantic. Volunteers among members of the association did the work. They donned rubber boots and went into the muddy marsh lands in their fight against the mosquito pest.

The effect of the work has been very noticeable. Many residents who had previously screened in their verandas found no need of such protection this season. In fact mosquitoes have been as scarce in Squantum this season as they have been by millions in previous years. Old residents of the place say they never knew such freedom from the pests as this season.

Chairman W. N. Kenyon in his report as chairman of the mosquito committee said that with $25 or even less an active campaign against mosquitoes could be continued. After some discussion this sum was appropriated. A dozen men volunteered their services and the mosquito squad will be out at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon with two barrels of oil and a number of small spray pumps to cause a wholesale slaughter in mosquito breeding places.

Chairman Kenyon said that in pools not over a foot square in the marsh land he had found millions of "wigglers" which were about to take wing and fly away as full bred mosquitoes. The application of oil came just in time to check the breeding of millions of mosquitoes.

Several speakers criticized the Quincy City Council for its action in dropping the $1000 which Mayor Stone has asked to be appropriated to aid in mosquito extermination. From Squantum's experience it was plain that with $1000 the City of Quincy would go a great way in ridding the entire city of mosquitoes.

The newly elected officers were in charge of the meeting. President Herbert A. Smith presided with James H. Foster, secretary and Charles Bostwick, treasurer.

Chairman Smith of the minstrel show committee read his report in detail showing that $61.00 had been cleared by the two performances for the benefit of the Squantum Women's club. It was voted that the treasurer send the Squantum Women's club a check for this amount.

Chairman Kenyon made his report as head of the Fourth of July committee. He report showed that $135 had been collected and that all but about $30 had been spent in the pleasures of the day, including the handsome prizes given in all the sporting events and the parade. It was voted that this balance be devoted to a Fourth of July fund.

Reports of progress were made by the Spectacle Island, street railway and entertainment committees.

It was voted to hold a Dutch supper in the near future and the entire matter was placed in the hands of the entertainment committee of which Edward Eagar is chairman.

GRAND JURY AT DINNER.

The complimentary dinner to Judge Quinn at the Crawford House, Boston Wednesday evening by the members of the grand jury who served during the last term, proved to be a most enjoyable evening. Councilman Stephen B. Little who was one of the Quincy men on the jury says the occasion was enlivened by a number of brief addresses, His honor enlivening the occasion in a very pleasant and witty manner. During the evening the jurors presented Judge Quinn with a diamond stick pin. Before the evening was over a permanent organization was formed and it was planned to hold a yearly reunion.

DIPHTHERIA UNDER CONTROL

Police Officer Has Been Enforcing Quarantine

The epidemic of diphtheria on Water street, in the Italian section between Franklin street and Quincy avenue has passed in the opinion of the officials of the Board of Health, and the police officer who has been keeping the homes of infected people under surveilance will probably be relieved from further duty today.

Within a short time five advanced cases of diphtheria were reported to the Board of Health and when they investigated conditions they found that more might develop. They placed three houses, occupied by Italian families under quarantine.

But a short time elapsed when they found that the families were not rigidly observing the quarantine regulations and rather than openly allow further progress of the disease they promptly adopted measures to force a respect for the law.

While no further danger is anticipated a close watch will be kept on the district and if necessary firmer measures will be taken to protect the public.

CLAIM HEAVY DAMAGES.

Miss Lillian V. Donovan of Perkins street who was one of the passengers of the Braintree bound train which collided with a gravel train at Capen's bridge, a short time ago has entered a suit against the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad for $2,000. The damages set are the heaviest entered this year. Nearly 50 passengers on the train received severe shocks. Most of the claims were adjusted without suit. It isunderstood that several others who sustained slight injuries are preparing to bzring action.

NO BIDS FOR IMPROVEMENT BONDS

Although City Is Willing to Pay 4 1-2 per Cent That Is No Attraction

Street Orders and Side Walks are Therefore Held Up

Unless something unforseen turns up it will be some time before Commissioner Tupper can commence work building the new streets authorized by the City Council or to begin work building the permanent sidewalks, for the City treasurer was unable to get any bid for the bonds.

The original orders called for 4 1-4 percent but were later amended so as to read 4 1-2 percent. Bids were advertised for $27,500 street loan, $11,275 permanent sidewalk loan and a $9,200 miscellaneous city loan. This latter loan included the order for $6500, for furnishings for the new Adams school building and the order for $2,700 for lowering water courses.

The City Treasurer advertised for bids to be received up to 12 A. M. July 11, but at that hour not a single bid had been received. Unless the Treasurer is able to place the loans with some of the banking concerns it looks as though work contemplated by these orders will be hung up for a while.

The same situation prevailed on the orders for $50,000 for water extensions and the order for $40,000 for sewer construction, although the Treasurer was able to place these loans after the rate of interest had been increased.

Quincy is not the only city that is finding difficulty in placing its loans this year for every city is meeting with the same result. The truth of the matter is that money is scarce ,and that most firms are able to get at least 5 per cent.

MR. BATTISON SUMMONED

A WORD TO PARENTS

Let the child's foot grow as it should

Educator shoes (which cost no more than other kinds) positively prevent foot troubles by allowing the foot to grow as nature intended, by providing ample room for all five toes and by giving proper support to the ankle muscles, arch and instep.

If Congress doesn't take a recess in September, it is believed that at least the clerks, stenographers, and pages will attend the sessions.

Ex-President Taft has lost 41 pounds since he left Washington, but he has not yet been asked to withdraw his name from the roster of the Fat Men's club.

Not merely does the hot weather force along the grain harvest, but it accelerates the threshing of the old tariff straw at Washington.

It is fortunate that the college boys have come home, as they can now mix up some cool lemonade in the shade for Dad out in the hayfield.

From the information given at the lobby investigation, it would seem as if Uncle Reuben could easily make a fortune by flim-flamming Wall street.

Grandma seems to think it would be safe for the boys to go in swimming if they would always take a pulmotor and a doctor along to resuscitate them.

A New York newspaper man is trying to go around the world in 35 days. Have New York readers got tired of reading about divorce cases?

It is not necessary to take special pains to find a warm and sunny spot to hitch your horse in during July.

No doubt the veterans would have shown better judgment had they kept away from Gettysburg in the awful hot weather. And if they had shown similar prudence 50 years before, they would never have been at Gettysburg in the first place.

TOWN SPIRIT.

The principal of a high school once said he had long worked to develop school loyalty. At school dances, he told his boys that they must see that every girl had partners. If the girls were neglected socially, they had a miserable time and it hurt the school. The result of his teaching was that every pupil became a booster for that institution.

Is there a similar spirit in this town? If not, why not, and if so, to what extent?

If all our people had this same spirit of standing by home friends, buying of home stores, what a boost it would give! While money would be circulating here, available for taxes, improvements, and also raising the value of real estate, that is only part of it.

This spirit would fill our business men with hope and enthusiasm. The place would have an air of prosperity in every line of its exterior. Every one who visited it would carry away the story that this is a place of smiles, hustle and success.

NO NOISELESS BALL GAMES.

The occasional visitor to the ball grounds is impressed by the overflowing loquacity of the American audience. Stirred by tense emotion, the undertone, or rather the overtone of the battle is the raucous chorus of coachers, players, and "fans."

It is apparently believed that fellow contestants need an incessant undertone of friendly encouragement. The pitcher and the batter, who are under specially intense strain, are supposed to be strengthened and self control made firmer by shouts of "all right, old kid" and an infinite variety of encouragement.

Some well meaning people have sought to eliminate from the ball field everything except necessary directions to players and hand clapping and cheering for good work. But this meets with no sympathy on the bleachers. To them baseball is not merely a battle of skill and physical endurance. It is one of self control in all situations. The team may excel in the two first, but according to American sporting ideals if it lacks a calm superiority to derisive clamor, it fails in a final element of power and deserves to lose.

A full report of all the impromptu witticisms would fill many newspaper columns. Players and spectators alike engage in this anthem of purported humor. The absurdities, the errors, manners and personal appearance of opposing players are jeered at. All which must be received in impassive silence. One man cannot successfully compete with a hundred hostile wits.

American ball games will never be noiseless. The chorus of advice, encouragement, and derision is merely the spectators' way of participating. A man's desire for athletic success may have been blotted out by his inexpert eye and feeble muscle. But if he possesses a ready tongue and a carrying voice, he feels that he helps turn the tide of victory. Perhaps he does.

COUNTRY CHURCH PROBLEM.

Rural pastors and educators are meeting July 21 at Manhattan, Kan., to consider what is the matter with the country church. The announcement of the meeting states that 1200 country churches have been abandoned in Kansas because of lack of interest. Probably that is an exaggeration, yet everywhere the country church is finding hard rubbing.

People went to church more faithfully in the strenuous old days, but partly because there was no other place to go. The desire to hear the pastor expound that disputed text in Ecclesiastic was not the only motive After church they stopped on the steps and swapped village news. Today the automobile is waiting out in the shed, and liable to get rusty if it is idle over Sunday.

In past years people were very particular about their own individual brand of theology. The minister who merely preached faith, hope, charity, the love of God and the message of Jesus, did not cover the ground. If he failed to conform to one of the 39 articles, the congregation knew it before he did. Another church across the way was the result. There were double bills to pay, while the contribution box was no bigger.

In religion as in all else you get what you pay for. The church with only half a revenue is only half a church. Where all the energy goes into competition, there is precious little left for Christian work.

The country church will prosper when people become able to cut out side issues and consolidate up to the point of efficient service. Then the country church will cease to be a place where seminary fledgelings are tried on the dog. There will be some encouragement then for a bright man to stay and build up a permanent work.

THE NEWSPAPER EXCHANGE.

There is no section of a newspaper that comes home closer to the real life of the people than the classified advertising. The news dispatches tell of things that are very important, but distant. The classified advertising tells of things that closely affect the daily lives of home people.

One learns more of what is going on in a town from reading these columns than from the best edited news stories. The housewife is anxious to see who is advertising for positions as servants. Working people want to know who desires help. People who own, or who want to buy or sell real estate, are interested in the transfers that are going on. It is hard to find a class of people who do not follow these notices.

Hence it is astonishing how many answers one can often get from a simple little notice in the To Rent, For Sale or Want columns. Anything you can do by personal inquiry is multiplied a hundred fold through the newspaper press.

Some people will put in hours or days making inquiries and running around haphazard, when they want to rent a place or sell a piece of property. They devote dollars worth of time, when a few cents spent in the newspaper would reach a hundred times as many people.

This kind of advertising permits the buyer to get the best service, because he soon learns whether there is to be any competition. It gives the seller the most advantageous trade, because he finds whether there is really a demand.

Farmers could do a rushing business, particularly through the parcel post, if they would advertise their products in nearby towns. They could develop a trade that would pay special prices rather than buy through middlemen. The classified ads are a time saver and a money saver.

Friends are very glad to see on the piazza again Marjorie Dame of Botolph street who has been confined to her home with diphtheria.

DEATH OF MRS. SANBORN

Wife of R. M. Sanborn of Sanborn & Damon

Eliza Mary, daughter of Ansel and Sarah Arnold Thayer, was born in Braintree, Sept. 10, 1841. She was educated in the local elementary schools and graduated from the Hollis Institute. May 10, 1866 she was united in marriage to Richard M. Sanborn of Braintree, the ceremony being performed by the Rev. R. B. Moody, pastor of the Old Baptist church. The couple have always lived in Braintree and for forty years Mr. and Mrs. Sanborn have occupied their present home at 15 Crescent avenue, which had been the property of the latters family for many years.

Two children were born to them, Arthur Frederick who died when he was ten years of age, July 16, 1879 and Eliza Mary, wife of Frank A. Reed, treasurer of Quincy Co-operative bank. Mrs. Sanborn was the youngest girl in a family of seven boys and four girls. Her eldest sister, Mrs. Maria L. Jenkins passed away Jan. 15, 1912.

Mrs. Sanborn was the last of her generation to pass to the "great beyond." Those who knew her can but speak repeatedly of her many good qualities. She was entirely devoted to the members of her family. Her heart was there and her honored place can never be filled but although she freely gave of herself to the near and dear to her she always found time to help any and all who needed her. She was most ateive in outside interests.

A most patriotic woman, she was and a charter member of the Woman's Relief Corps No. 94 and held various offices during her membership and was always enthusiastic and energetic in the works of the corps. Four of her brothers were sacrificed for their country during the Civil war; Loring W., who was killed at the battle of Popular Grove church, George Fred who gave up his life, at Fredericksburg and two others who died shortly after the war from disease contracted during service.

All her life, Mrs. Sanborn has loved music. Since she was fourteen years of age she has sung in some church choir. Possessed of a remarkable soprano voice of power and rare quality she has given much pleasure through all the years to her hearers. She joined the old Baptist church in her youth but after it disbanded, the South Congregational church became her church home and she sang in its choir for thirtyfive years. She was a member of the old Stoughton Musical society and attended the last New Year's annual sing at Stoughton.

She was a member of the Bay State Independent Order of Odd Ladies of Fields corner, a charter member of the Loyal Knights and Ladies and a member for a number of years of the Eastern Star lodge of Boston. She always was active in church work and many remember her hospitality in connection with the ladies social circle which later merged into the Woman's Guild of the South Congregational church.

Her husband Richard M. Sanborn, has been for many years a member of the firm of Sanborn and Damon of Quincy. About three years ago he retired from active business although he is still interested in the business. Besides Mr. Sanborn and the daughter Mrs. Reed, three grandchildren survive her, Arthur Wilmot, Clara Sanborn and Richard Turner Reed, also the following nieces and nephews, Miss Lois E. Jenkins and Loring W. Thayer of South Braintree, Ansel Frederick Thayer of Woods Hole and Mrs. George W. Field of East Milton Mrs. Sanborn had been in her usual good health but passed away suddenly at six o'clock Thursday morning.

The funeral services will be held from her late home Sunday at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. Tyler E. Gale, pastor of the South Congregational church will be the officiating clergyman.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BALKAN UNION IS DESTROYED

Slav League No Longer Menaces Balance of Power—Austrian Intrigue Has Resulted In Again Setting Nationalities at Each Other's Throats In Macedonia

London, July 11.—Whipped on the field of battle in a war which she started in a greedy attempt to "hog" the major part of the spoils of the Balkan war, Bulgaria is crying for quarter and on her own initiative is asking the powers to bring the conflict to an end. She has placed herself unreservedly in the hands of Russia, while France has undertaken to plead with Servia and Greece not to make their terms too onerous.

Apparently Bulgaria is getting what she deserves. She has found that fighting Greek and Servian armies was an entirely different proposition to that involved in defeating the Turkish army.

Spurred on by Austrian intrigue, Bulgaria began an aggressive campaign to occupy the territories after which she lusted. Her military plans aimed at surprising the Servians and Greeks, driving a wedge between them and seizing Uskup and Salonica. It seems certain that she has failed utterly in this attempt.

In the fiercest fighting seen in Europe for many a decade both Servians and Greeks have thrown off the Bulgar attacks and out-fought and outmaneuvered the common enemy. The losses have been something frightful and propably will exceed greatly those of the war with Turkey. It is probable that Servia and Greece will succeed in keeping what they won if Europe does not take it from them.

At any rate, the intrigues of Austria have won a signal triumph for the policy in force at Vienna. The unity of the Balkan league has been destroyed and the threat of a great Slav union as a menace to the balance of power has been withdrawn.

The nationalities who for decades cut each other's throats in Macedonia, egged on by the wiley Abdul Hamid, but who got together to expel the Turk, have been set at each other's throats again by the "diplomacy" of Austria, the cowardice of Europe and particularly by the hesitating policy of Russia, who appears to have been thoroughly awed by the rattling of the Austrian sabre.

Asks Red Criss Aid

Washington, July 11.—The American Red Cross has been appealed to for aid in relieving the sick and wounded in the Balkan war. The American consul at Salonica cabled the Red Cross society as follows:

"Ten thousand wounded soldiers in Salonica. American missionaries wish to open hospitals and appeal for funds. Urgent need for nurses and doctors."

Advices received by the Red Cross indicate that there are many thousands of seriously wounded soldiers in Belgrade, where there is a great lack of surgeons and hospitals. The society announces that it will receive and forward contributions for relief work in the Balkans.

HUNT FOR DESERTERS

Several Members of Coast Artillery Corps Reported Missing

Boston, July 11.—Boston and its environs were ransacked last night by a squad of Massachusetts coast artillery corpsmen detailed to the task of rounding up deserters.

One battalion of the corps, comprising the First, Second, Third and Sixth companies, began its ten days tour of duty at Fort Strong, Long island, yesterday, and when the mustering-in call was sounded last night several men were reported as missing.

"Good and sufficient reasons" for absence is demanded of the militamen when assigned to duty, and as none of the missing soldier boys had forwarded such reason, the searching squad was the result.

PLEW HELD FOR MURDER

New Haven, July 11.—James Plew of Middlebury and Mrs. Bessie J. Wakefield of Bristol are held criminally resposible by Coroner Mix for the death of William O. Wakefield, the woman's husband, in his finding in the case.

The coroner finds the death wounds were inflicted by Plew and that Mrs. Wakefield was an accessory to the commission of the crime.

THE STORM AT MILTON

Narrow Escape at the Adams Street Crossing

On Wednesday people standing in East Milton square saw an automobile crash through a gate at the crossing, in the path of a swiftly approaching train, and an instant later they saw the woman who was operating it open her up and crash through the other gate in time to avoid being struck by the train. The machine was said to have been owned by Arthur E. Driscoll of 312 Billings street Wollaston and carried two people. The machine, a Hupmobile, was not damaged but both gates were torn from their fastenings. New ones have been placed there.

The broadside from the clouds which swept East Milton for about one half hour Thursday was accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning, loud peals of thunder, a downpour of rain and a heavy hail storm. A bolt of lightning entered the home of Mrs. L. F. Elden on Church street, filling the house with smoke and ripping away part of the roof. When smoke filled the house an alarm was sounded from box 67 but no fire broke out. A tree which crashed to the street opposite the Congregational church carried with it, all the wires on the poles of Adams street and service of all kinds was seriously impaired. A large tree in the yard of Mrs. Sarah Smith was twisted partly around in its natural bed and a poplar tree opposite the Mission of Our Saviour was uprooted, doing heavy damage to the granolithic sidewalk. Fire which damaged the home of Mrs. Helmer Erickson, 67 Bearce avenue, to the extent of $59 started from a bolt of lightning which entered through the roof. Mrs. Erickson was thrown twice to the floor but sustained no injury.

The Milton Town Hall will be enlarged in the near future. A committee is considering plans which will provide for a larger auditorium, a stage and more commodious office quarters. The question of erecting a new Town Hall will also be discussed. The committee consists of William B. Thurber, C. W. Whittier, A. H. Tucker, P. S. Dalton and J. B. Baxter.

Changes of major importance are being made in the telephone exchange at Milton and the new section which has recently been leased for telephone extension will directly benefit the 36 operators. New switch board positions will be installed and better arranged recreation room contemplated promises more conveniences.

While towns and cities throughout the state are sweltering under a heavy tax rate the residents of Milton are worried because it is predicted that their rate may reach $11.50 this year.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Ward of Adams street are at North Waterford, Maine for a short stay.

Dr. and Mrs. R. E. Edison of East Milton are traveling across country by easy stages to Stockton, Cal. They are making a tour of the Canadian north west at the present time.

Edward McCue, chief of the fire department, has transferred the new chief's auto from East Milton house. Ernest Choate, inspector of wires and chauffeur of the late Chief Choate, who recently died had the use of the old auto in taking care of the wires. Under the present condition slight complications arise since no provision has ever been made by the town to furnish a means whereby Mr. Choate can fulfill the duties of his office.

J. Albert Simpson has purchased a lot of land on Edge Hill road for immediate development.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Fanning have returned from their honeymoon and will occupy their new home on State street. The marriage was performed at Boston about three weeks ago and was known only to the immediate friends of the couple.

Charles Davis and family of East Milton will be at Park cottage, their summer home at Bar Harbor, Maine, for the remainder of the summer.

J. Dingley of Bunting place is in charge of the East Milton station during the vacation of David W. Bearce.

Walter K. Pendis has opened a well equipped hardware store in a new block erected at Granite avenue and Adams street. Mr. Pendis has been a traveling representative for a Boston house for four years.

A delay in the delivery of material for the Palisi block in East Milton has caused a suspension of work to the interior for about two weeks.

Mrs. Edward M. Carey of Adams street has opened her summer home at Naushon Island, Woods Hole, where she will remain until early fall.

ARGENTINE CADETS HERE.

The second detachment of officers cadets and crew of the Presidente Sarmiento, the Argentine training ship wrich is in Boston harbor, arrived in Quincy this morning. They were transported to the Fore River yards in special electric cars where they will be conducted on a tour of inspection by the mechanics of the Argentine Commission in charge of the construction of their dreadnought the Rivadavia.

CENTER OF THE STORM

building failed to carry off the heavy downpour and it worked into the cellar of the Woolworth store, where it damaged goods. The stock was mostly perishable and the damage is estimated at about $600. At one time a clerk passing from the shipping room to the stairway was obliged to wade through water knee deep.

The large barn on the Dr. Simmons estate at Braintree was badly twisted ou tof shape and the north westerly side was ripped in a number of places. Lightning struck in the immediate vicinity, but buildings escaped.

At about the same time the chimney on the High school was hit, a bolt struck the chimney on the machine shop at the garage of C. P. Gould and scattered the bricks all over the yard. The bolt went through the top of he roof. Double precautions were taken by Mr. and Mrs. Gould just before the storm broke and no further damage was done there.

Water entered some of the underground conduits of the Telephone Co. and as a result many instruments were put out of commission .

A large tree near the Eaton ice houses was split down the centre, the cut being as clean as though done with a sharp axe.

Quite a number of windows on the northerly side of houses were also smashed by the hail stones which were driven against the glass by the fifty mile gale.

The storm was about thirty minutes duration. Then it cleared and the sun came out hot and the remainder of the afternoon was pleasant.

After the storm Commissioner Tupper sent a number of city teams about the city gathering the broken limbs of trees that had been blown into the streets.

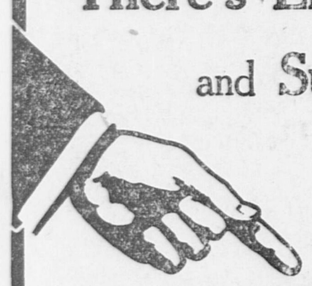

JOINT MEETING.

Two slimly attended meetings in Electa and Protection halls proved to be the forerunner of one of the most enjoyable affairs ever held in the building on Thursday evening. Quincy Circle of Lady Moose quickly disposed of a short calendar of business and were the guests of the members of Granite Conclave, of Heptasophs, in Electa hall. The Heptasophs had ice cream of all kinds in large quantities and a goodly assortment of the spices of life that go with ice cream. James Provost presided at the piano, while dancing was generally indulged in. All heartily joined in singing the popular songs of the day and several rendered solos. The success of the affair was probably due to the suddenness of the friendship which sprung up between both organizations.

Mills in British Columbia are shipping considerable paper pulp to Japan.

AMUSEMENTS

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Another delightful bill will be presented be the Eleanor Gordon Players, beginning on next Monday night, in "Sham," a comedy in three acts by Geraldine Bonner. This piece served as a vehicle for a long time for Henrietta Crossman and is one of the best comedies seen in a long time. It will be first Boston stock production of the play. "Sham," is the sort of play that offers an open book of society. In other words it gives a graphic picture of how a young lady, high in society, left penniless by a spendthrift parent, struggles vainly to maintain her position. One of her relatives, an aunt, tries hard to bargain her off to the worthless son of a wealthy family. The girl however, is determined upon making her own selection and forsakes her "society" friends. Miss Gordon will be seen in the role of Catherine Von Piper, the part created by Miss Crossman. Needless to say she will be perfectly at home in the character. As a matter of fact this role is better suited to Miss Gordon's versatility, than any in which she has already appeared in. The production will be elaborately staged and strict attention will be paid to detail, a fact that Manager Wyrley Birch is bent upon carrying out at all times. Miss Gordon will have the support of the leading members of her company including Douglas J. Wood, Wright Kramer, Edward Langford, Mrs. George A. Hibbard Francesca Rotoli and others. Since the opening of the Gordon Players the list of subscribers has steadily increased with the result that today Manager Birch has the largest subscription list that any Boston stock company has ever had. It is indeed the deserving reward of able efforts, for Mr. Birch has corraled an organization that is the equal of the famous Boston Museum stock company. You have only to witness in once to convince yourself of the absolute truth of this statement. The usual popular-priced Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees will be given at 2.15. All evening performances start at 8.15.

AT B. F. KEITH'S.

For the week of July 14th only, the famous "Meistersinger All-Star Minstrels" will be revived at B. F. Keith's Theatre, presenting an entirely new and different production. This remarkable aggregation, which was unanimously pronounced by all who saw it to be the greatest first part in the history of minstrelsy, when stage at this house two summers ago, will be produced on an even more elaborate scale than before. New faces will be seen on the ends, a new interlocutor, and an entirely new chorus of thirty voices, besides an orchestra of twenty, will surround the combined Harvard, Schubert and Weber Male Quartettes, without question the great vocal organization of its kind in the world. The exact personel of the organization is not as yet quite ready to be made public, but it is announced that for the ends Phil and Jack Kaufman and John F. Swor and Charles E. Hack will rattle the bones and handle the tambos. These four men are without question the foremost delineators of the negro type now before the public. They are as thoroughly representative of the younger generation as Messrs. Thatcher, Benedict, Dougherty and Healy were of the older school. A beautiful and massive stage setting has been built for this occasion, with a brand-new outfit of gorgeous costumes. The program of songs will be entirely new. Surrounding this great feature will be Charles Leonard Fletcher in "Studies From Real Life;" Kennedy and Rooney in "A Happy Medium;" Robinson Newbold and Marie Louise Gribben, musical comedy favorites; Claude Golden, the card manipulator; Ryan Brothers daring aerialists and the Edison Kinetophone with new pictures.

PARAGON PARK.

Paragon park has never had such a week in its history as the past one, starting with the Sunday before the 4th of July. The crowds have broken all records. As strong as the cabaret program has been it is still stronger this and the coming week. Sylvia, "the modern Venus," has made such a tremendous hit in her poses plastique that she has been secured for another week. Another new Cabaret feature is the Handel Sisters, acrobatic dancers and cafe chantants.

There will be those great favorites, Art Spaulding, Marie Camilla, Edna Leader, Louise Laurie the Rombolie Trio, Trixie Trigoli, Aerryl Torrie, the arimbas, Raceagy's Military Band and the Palm Garden Orchestra. In the free open air circus this week Nervo, "the human comet" continues his daring act, and new features will be LeRex & LeRex, aerial ring artists, and Harring & Omy, acrobatic wonders on the revolving ladder. Fireworks will be given Wednesday and Saturday nights. The late boat back to Boston at 10.45 is proving a very convenient and popular innovation this summer.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

More than a thousand people were on hand last night to enjoy the mid-week change of program at Quincy's pretty playhouse. And one and all went away well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

As usual, the Kincaide Players were greeted with great applause. In the five weeks they have been here, their clever work has won the admiration of all, and the appearance of each artist is warmly applauded.

"At Sandy Valley" is the title of the tempest of merriment now being made. It is quite different from the nine comedies which the company has heretofore produced. The action takes place in three scenes, the last of which is church scene with the entire company splendidly singing "Sauletaries"

The vaudeville acts were good. Roy Raceford a comedian from England has a pleasing line of patter and his English version of "Everybody's doing it" is certainly some song. Tenny proved a very pleasing entertainer, doing difficult juggling feats with apparent ease. He responded to three encores.

The feature picture "Alone in the Jungle" was watched with intense interest from the start to finish.

Beginning Monday the management will present the picture they had taken of the 4th July parades at Atlantic and Quincy. This will be an extra feature, and it's of such strong local interest, that in order that all may see it, 'twill be shown the full week.

NEW YACHT AS CHALLENGER

Expected to Bring Back the Quincy Challenge Cup

The races for the Quincy Yacht club Challenge cup will be sailed off Marblehead beginning Saturday, July 26, and will continue each day until one of the yachts has won three races. The Quincy club will be represented by ex-Commodore Charles F. Adams, 2d, and it is expected that he will race the new sonder boat which was built this year but which as yet has not been named. The Harpoon which unsuccessfully defended the cup last year has been sold.

Aside from the races for the Quincy cup, the races are expected to furnish the Eastern Yacht club with some important knowledge as to the relative speed of the sonder boats as the principal clubs, including the Eastern, Corinthian and Quincy have challenged for the cup.

The Boston club will defend the cup with the new Ellen built by C. P. Curtis, Jr. The Eastern yacht club have in mind the international races to be held later in the season and one of these sonder boats will probably be selected for those races.

It is planned to sail two races each day for the Quincy cup, at 10 A. M., and 2 P. M. There will be alternately windward and leeward, and triangular races. The windward courses are of ten miles and the triangular races 12 miles.

THE CONTROVERSY WAXES HOT

Fitzgerald, Disapproving of Vahey and Storrow as Members of Arbitration Board to Settle Labor Troubles, Issues Statement, to Which Elevated Employes Object

Boston, July 11.—Public interest in the arbitration proceedings by which it is expected to settle the questions at issue between the Elevated and its union employes was yesterday shifted to the bitter quarrel that has developed between Mayor Fitzgerald and James H. Vahey and the Street Carmen's union.

In a statement issued by Fitzgerald last evening, Vahey, counsel of the Carmen's union and its representative on the arbitration board, was severely criticised. The statement also contained a criticism of James J. Storrow, who, the mayor said, represented holders of securities of the Elevated railway.

The mayor said in part: "Perhaps the carmen will wake up to a realization before long of the kind of a man Mr. Vahey is, as other interests have who have employed him to their sorrow. I hope it will be done before it is too late."

When shown the statement of the mayor last evening, Vahey, who was attending a meeting of the Carmen's union, decided to make no reply himself.

The members of the executive board of the Carmen's union, who were shown the statement, took up the cudgels in Vahey's behalf and prepared a statement in reply to the mayor, which was read at the meeting of 1000 conductors and motormen who were at the meeting and approved by a unanimous vote.

Among other things the statement of the union's executive board says: "If there had been a strike on the Elevated, Mayor Fitzgerald would have been absolutely responsible for the calamity because after he knew that he was objectionable to us he should have declined to act.

"He had made no agreement to act and he could very easily have declined and had he had the interest of the 'dear public' at heart as he claimed to have, he would have done so, but he tried to force himself on us and didn't get away with it."

It is understood that Fitzgerald thinks he was roughly used by the Carmen's union members in being rejected as the man who should choose the third arbiter. He believes that it was an attempt to injure him in the public estimation and is inclined to the opinion that Vahey is responsible for the whole thing and that there is more or less politics in it.

In the selection of Storrow, his old opponent when he last ran for mayor in one of the most spectacular campaigns Boston ever saw, as the third arbiter in the Elevated thouble, Fitzgerald also thinks he sees the hand of Vahey.

Yesterday afternoon, when the board of arbitration of the differences between the company and the workmen met, Storrow announced that through a trusteeship and through stock holdings of the firm of Lee, Higginson & Co., of which Storrow is a member, he was interested in the Elevated company.

Vahey, representing the carmen, said this would not be any reason for the men to object to Storrow's service on the arbitration board.

That statement on the part of Vahey prompted the mayor to issue his statement in which he accused Vahey of "hypocricy."

JUDICIAL INQUIRY CLOSES

Evidence In Lawrence Bathhouse Tragedy Taken Under Consideration

Lawrence, Mass., July 11.—The judicial inquiry into the Lawrence bathhouse catastrophe, where eleven boys were sent to watery graves by the collapse of a gangway, was completed in the final inquest session held in the police court. Judge Mahoney will give a decision placing the responsibility for the tragedy after consideration of the testimony.

The most striking evidence was given by John O. Battershill, superintendent of public property, who admitted that the fence railing of the gangway should have been stroger and that two ledge boards, supporting the gangway underneath, should have been used instead of one.

CONFESSES ARSON

Suffragette Burned Mansion and Tried to Perpetrate Bomb Outrage

Liverpool, July 11.—A dramatic confession of incendiarism was made by a well known militant suffragette, Mrs. Edith Rigby, wife of a physician at Preston, in the police court here.

Mrs. Rigby declared it was she who had on July 8 burned down the country residence at Rivington of Sir William H. Lever, causing damage estimated at $100,000. She further confessed to being the perpetrator of the outrage at the Liverpool stock exchange on July 5, when a bomb exploded, but caused little damage.

Mrs. Rigby surrendered voluntarily to the police. When arraigned she gloried in her achievements, saying she wanted Lever to "consider whether his house was more valuable as a show place than as a beacon lighted for the king and the country to see women suffering an insupportable grievance."

LOST FOR A WHILE

President Wilson Gets Tangled Up on New Hampshire Roads

Cornish, N. H., July 11.—President Wilson got lost in the New Hampshire woods late yesterday, finally reaching home at 8 o'clock, an hour late for dinner. He started out shortly before 4 o'clock with Mrs. Wilson, Miss Eleanor Wilson, Miss Helen W. Bones and Dr. Grayson.

They motored south along the Connecticut river for many miles toward Springfield, N. H., and intended to make a wide circuit homeward, but got tangled up in the routes and were overtaken by darkness.

The president passed through a number of small towns, where he was recognized and greeted, but made no stops except to inquire here and there as to the route home. Covered with mud, the big White House machine made the journey without mishap.

FORMER SING SING WARDEN INDICTED

Charges Withheld Until Kennedy Is Placed Under Arrest

White Plains, N. Y., July 11.—John S. Kennedy, former warden of Sing Sing prison, was indicted by the Westchester county grand jury.

The charges contained in the indictment were withheld by the authorities with the explanation that they would not be made public until the arrest of Kennedy.

The indictment is understood to be the result of the recent investigation of affairs at Sing Sing by George W. Blake, a special investigator, appointed by Governor Sulzer, and who preferred charges against the warden. Kennedy was subsequently removed by Sulzer.

WEIGHT BREAKS A BRIDGE

Big Load of Liquor Bound For Augusta Is Seized by Sheriff

Lewiston, Me., July 11.—After a sensational race in his auto Sheriff Stevens captured a Boston auto truck in the town of Wales loaded with liquor and bound for Augusta. He arrested the men in charge, who gave their names as Francis R. Downey and Frank J. Glaser of Boston.

The truck, with the whiskey packed in sugar boxes and covered over with canvas to look like a load of furniture, would have reached its destination had not the weight of the truck caused a small bridge over Sabattus stream to give way. Some one discovered the auto was loaded with liquor and telephoned to Sheriff Stevens.

The truck contained seventy boxes, each holding forty pints of whiskey, making a total of 350 gallons.

DOGS RAIDED HIS SHEEP

Claim of $1075 Damages Filed With Berkshire County Treasurer

Lenox, Mass., July 11.—Howard Willetts of New York, who has a country place in New Marlboro, filed with County Treasurer Brewster a claim of $1075 for the killing by dogs of thirty-one imported Dorset sheep, one ram, and damage to the flock. This is the largest claim ever filed for similar damage against Berkshire county.

The sheep were so badly mutilated that it was thought at first a bear recently seen in that town or wildcats from the Green mountains had raided the sheep fold.

Maine Men Found Guilty of Violating Child Labor Law

Lewiston, Me., July 11.—John T. Russell and Alcidas Roux, overseers in the Androscoggin mills, charged with violating the child labor law, pleaded not guilty, but were adjudged guilty by the court and fined $10 and costs.

They appealed and gave sureties for appearance in the supreme court. One of the cases against Roux was filed.

TO REORGANIZE THE NEW HAVEN

Vail May Act as Arbitrator In Making Changes

A NATURAL BOARD OF APPEAL

In Close Touch With Morgan & Co. and Boston Interests Back of Meyer Committee—Commerce Commission Blames Railroad Management For Stamford Disaster on June 12

Washington, July 11.—Theodore N. Vail, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, bids fair to be the arbitrator in the forthcoming reorganization of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, which is expected as a natural consequence of the disclosure of conditions in the New Haven system made by the interstate commerce commission.

Vail probably would disclaim any such position; nevertheless he will participate in the forthcoming inquiry under circumstances which will constitute him a natural board of appeal. Vail has been a member of the New Haven directorate only about a year.

Some ten days ago, when George von L. Meyer, chairman of the New Haven stockholders' committee, went to New York to consult with the executive committee of the New Haven directors to try to reach an agreement regarding future procedure, the addition of Vail to the general committee of investigation, composed of the executive committee, was one of the results of the conference.

Vail's relations with the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., which has been influential in New Haven affairs, has been very close, while he is on terms of equal intimacy and friendship with the Boston interests which are back of the Meyer committee. He is recognized as a man of pre-eminent business ability and, in the present situation, peculiarly well qualified to stand as a neutral representing all interests which may be involved in any possible plan of reorganization.

RAILROAD NEGLIGENT

Safer Operation of the New Haven Immediately Necessary

Washington, July 11.—The interstate commerce commission's report of its investigation of the New York, New Haven and Hartford passenger train wreck at Stamford, Conn., June 12, holds that the railroad was negligent in placing Engineer Doherty in charge of a through passenger train when he "was inexperienced and uninstructed."

Six persons were killed and twenty injured in the wreck.

The general conclusions, written by Commissioner McChord, include the following statement:

"Establishment of safe and more efficient operation of this railroad is immediately necessary if congressional legislation extending the scope of governmental regulation of railroads is not to be called for and justified in the interests of public safety."

The report scathingly arraigns the corporation, declaring there is no proper system for checking up repairs on locomotives, that signals were not placed correctly and brakes were not as efficient as demanded by the wrecked train. It further declares that modern steel equipment should be installed.

Mellen Silent at Present

New York, July 11.—It was announced at the offices of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad that President Mellen would have no comment to make regarding the report of the interstate commerce commission upon the affairs of the road until after the report had been submitted to and canvassed by the executive committee. "It will depend upon the disposition of the committee whether a reply will be made after the meeting," the announcement read.

SMALL BROUGHT TO BOSTON

Arrested In Arizona For Promoting Alleged Swindling Scheme

Boston, July 11.—Frederick E. Small, who was arrested in connection with an alleged mining stock fraud through which persons in New England were swindled out of more than $500,000, was brought to this city yesterday from Mayer, Ariz., where he was arrested.

A. C. Cruchet of Marblehead, who the government authorities claim was allied with Small in the alleged swindling scheme, was arrested in this city the day following the arrest of Small in Arizona. He pleaded not guilty and was released under $10,000 bonds pending a trial.

He is treasurer of the American Securities corporation and was an officer in the Brooklyn-Arizona Mining company, of which Small was president and treasurer.

Child Killed In Front of Home

Winchester, Mass., July 11.—Florence Rossley, 4 years old, was instantly killed last night by being run over in front of her home by an automobile said to have been driven by George M. Leghorn of Boston.

New York Stock Plunger In Union Pacific Lobby Scandal.

LAMAR CASE BEFORE JURY

District Attorney Calls Ledyard as One of the First Witnesses

New York, July 11.—The case of David Lamar—his impersonations of United States senators and congressmen in connection with the so-called Union Pacific conspiracy—was placed before the federal grand jury by District Attorney Marshall.

All the testimony taken in the case before the senate lobby investigating committee was given to the jury, and Lewis C. Ledyard, one of the principal witnesses before the committee, was called to testify in person.

His examination is not completed. Other witnesses having knowledge of the case are understood to be under subpoena.

JOHNSON BIDS ADIEU TO UNITED STATES

Pugilist Says He Will Never Return to This Country

Havre, July 11.—Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, arrived here on board the Corinthian, and immediately on landing announced his determination never to return to the United States. He said he would in the future take up his residence in Paris.

Washington, July 11.—Jack Johnson's announcement that he would never return to the United States caused department of justice officials immediately to consider steps to bring about the forfeiture of his $30,000 personal bond pending in Chicago for his appearance in connection with white slave indictments upon which he has not yet been tried.

TO PROBE LABOR WARS

Senate Lobby Committee Calls on Gompers and Mitchell

Washington, July 11.—All the "wars" that have been fought between labor and capital, all the efforts that both have made to secure legislation which would profit them, and the tangled skein woven about their relations in the last ten years are to be investigated by congress.

The senate lobby committee in executive session last night decided that the "wars" must be inquired into.

Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, will appear before the committee on July 25, and a subpoena was issued last night for John Mitchell, vice president of the Federation and former head of the United Mine Workers. At the same time the committee subpoenaed George Pope, president, and J. P. Bird, general manager, of the National Asosciation of Manufacturers.

CONSPIRACY IN CUBA

Secret Police Unearth Alleged Plot to Assassinate Cabinet Minister

Havana, July 11.—The Cuban secret police report the discovery of a conspiracy among the adherents of Governor Asbert to assassinate Colonel Hevia, secretary of the interior, whom they accuse of attempting to disrupt their party by ordering the late General Riva, chief of the Cuban national police, to raid the Asbert club on Monday night.

This action probably precipitated the tragedy on the Prado, in which Riva was mortally wounded. No arrests have been made, but the suspects are closely watched, and Hevia is strongly guarded.

A Case of Woman's Rights

Involving a Case in the Courts

By MARTHA V. MONROE

Margaret Elwood was a new woman in every sense of that term. She believed in the ability of woman to do anything that a man can do, but admitted that since woman had been kept in a subordinate position from time immemorial she needed time and opportunity to develop any particular faculty. "A muscle," she argued, "becomes flabby and weak from disuse. Exercise it and it becomes hard and strong."

But Miss Elwood believed in the home and the family. She recognized that it was woman's mission to bear children, but she denied that this was all of woman's mission.

Edmond Blair was equally liberal minded. He was a fine man and if he married would require a fine woman for his wife. What he meant by a fine woman was not a showy woman, but one with a head on her shoulders, one who could think out a problem in everyday life and execute it. He had no use for what is commonly called a "smart" woman.

These two met and were mutually pleased with each other. Miss Elwood admired Mr. Blair's reasonable way of looking upon subjects. He was a lawyer by profession and used to establishing his points before insisting upon them. He knew the difference between a proved fact and a dictum. He was the first man Miss Elwood had ever met who accorded thoroughly with her views of the proper sphere for woman. They became engaged.

So far as reason, judgment and foresight go, never did a couple become engaged with better prospects for happiness. Nevertheless, that they might take a proper precaution against making a mistake, they agreed to put off their marriage for one year.

Everybody, as soon as the engagement was announced, remarked that it was an excellent match. Persons who were noted for caution and forethought said that if marriages were always made up in that way there would be no divorce. There was but one person who predicted that the match would be a failure. That was the lady's father. He had been at the head of a large manufacturing plant for thirty years and during his incumbency had been a one man power. He declared that his daughter and her fiance were each quite capable of leading in any enterprise. He saw nothing more feasible in two heads to a family than two heads to his business.

It was not to be expected that a man whose judgment had for three successive decades been warped by ruling a small army of employees would take an unbiased view of circumstances arising from a union of hearts. Mr. Elwood simply gave his opinion. He did not attempt to enforce it. When an old friend twitted him by reminding him that democratic principles cannot find favor in a despot he replied: "If I am a despot my daughter is quite likely to be one through heredity."

One day Miss Elwood called at the office of her fiance and, being admitted to his consulting room, said to him:

"Here are the papers in the case of the Mercy hospital (of which I am managing director) against the city."

"I thought you told me it was a case of the city against the hospital."

"It doesn't make any difference. There's a suit to be tried, and I wish you to act for us. The city ordered us to put down a sidewalk surrounding our buildings, which occupy a whole block, at a cost of over $3,000. The matter has been in dispute between the city and the hospital for several years, and I am perfectly familiar with all that has transpired. Consequently I am the one to present the points at issue and indicate the position it is desirable that you should take. The city engineer told me repeatedly that"—

"I beg pardon, Margaret, for interrupting you, but when our firm takes a case we make the necessary investigations and decide upon the course to pursue ourselves."

She looked at him in surprise. "Which means, I suppose, that all these years during which I have been contending with the city government and the experience I have acquired count for nothing."

"It is not a matter of your experience. It is a matter of law."

"And I, who am responsible for the proper handling of the case, am to put it in your hands with the confidence of a child. Do you suppose that my associates on the board will excuse me in case you are beaten?"

Mr. Blair looked at his fiancee with a troubled glance. To refute her argument, to set her right in the matter between them, would require his going back so far that a great deal of his valuable time would be taken up before he could make his position clear to her. There are a great many knots in the affairs of men that it is not practicable to attempt to untie. They must be cut. And the cutting makes the trouble. Mr. Blair found himself in a position to cut this knot.

"If you don't have every confidence in my ability to handle your case I would prefer that you should not employ me."

"It is not a matter of confidence," replied the lady, evidently troubled that she could not make him understand her; "it is simply that at present you know nothing about this case and I know everything. It stands to reason that I should bring your knowledge of it up to mine; that"—

"Pardon me. Experience has taught me that I can get the situation much easier in another way."

"And I, who have been intrusted with the management of the matter, am to step aside and leave it all to you?"

"Only as your legal adviser."

She thought a few minutes in silence, then, rising, said:

"We are wasting our time. I haven't your knowledge of courts and all that, but one thing I know—I'm not going to transfer a responsibility that I have accepted from others to you or any other man."

"Margaret!"

She walked out of his presence, conscious of having done her duty in her official position, though the duty was a painful one.

That evening Mr. Blair thought he would call on his fiancee, but before doing so he had better think out some method by which he could set himself right with her. But the more he considered the problem the greater seemed the difficulties in the way. A subsidiary matter occurred to him. If he yielded the point with her and consented to listen patiently to all she had to say about the case he would be expected thereafter to continue to do so and to adopt measures she would enforce upon him that might lead to still greater trouble.

And this led to another subsidiary matter, though of far greater importance. Would Miss Elwood when she became Mrs. Blair adopt the same method of enforcing her opinions on subjects which she was not as competent to pronounce upon as himself? That there would arise matters in which she would be far more competent to lead than he he did not doubt, and if he did not yield to her in such he would be in error. They might beforehand make a list of matters included in the wife's prerogatives and those included in the husband's. This was only a suggestion that popped into his head and was discarded at once. His law firm's name was Blair & Carlisle. Mr. Carlisle being the junior partner. When their views clashed in the handling of a law case Carlisle gave way. The marriage firm's name would not be Blair & Elwood or Elwood & Blair. It would be Mr. and Mrs. Blair.

The lawyer did not call upon his fiancee that evening because he did not know what he could say to her to improve the situation. There must be an outcome somewhere. Many couples, each composed of an intellectually strong man and an equally intellectual woman, had lived contentedly together, and they must have found some way of doing it. He thought that if he could pass the matrimonial gate the problem would work itself out independently of him or his wife. This led him back a step. He was nearly forty years old, and his fiancee had turned thirty. Wouldn't it have been better if he had married when he was young?

Mr. Blair, not being able to solve the problem of what he should say to Miss Elwood, kept putting off going to see her. Then he saw in a newspaper the name of Sommers & Sommers attached to a legal notice in a case of the city against the Mercy hospital and knew that his fiancee had given it to another firm. He winced. He was to marry a woman who it had been demonstrated couldn't get on with him in a matter of business. How would they live harmoniously as man and wife?

The call Mr. Blair was always intending to make was never made. Months elapsed and the couple remained apart. Then one day he saw a notice that the case of the city against the Mercy hospital had been decided against the hospital with costs, the whole amounting to double the original claim. The next day Miss Elwood called at Mr. Blair's office.

"I wish you to appeal the hospital case," she said.

"In your way or mine?"

"Yours."

"Has it been handled thus far by your plans or those of your attorneys?"

"Mine."

"They charged a good fee, I suppose?"

"A thousand dollars."

"Expensive, wasn't it?"

"I should think so. Father will pay it."

"Very well; leave the papers in the case. I'll look into it, and when I make up my mind with regard to it I will let you know. Will you be at home this evening?"

"Yes."

She arose and departed. She had called on business, and business had been attended to. In the evening, when Mr. Blair saw her, there was an affair of another kind to settle, an affair that had been settled already in the main by an expensive experience.

"I don't give up my ideas of woman's sphere," said Miss Elwood.

"Nor I mine," was the reply. "I shall always permit you to have your way in everything."

"Not at such a cost as in the present case."

Mr. Blair obtained a reversal of the decision in the hospital case, and it was not carried further by the city.

"Do you still believe in woman's rights since you were married?" Mrs. Blair was asked recently.

"Yes, when she is right," was the laconic reply.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

FRUIT WHIPS.

DELICIOUS desserts are the following, which are made by combining lightly beaten cream and eggs with fruits.

They are so light and dainty that they will appeal to the most delicate appetites. Whips should be made just before serving.

Preserved fruits or fresh ones may be used for this purpose. The preserved fruit should be passed through a sieve before using. Fruit sirups also are available.

Whipped Canned Fruit.

Raspberry Whip.—Take a cupful of canned raspberries, the whites of two eggs, a half pint of cream and two or four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Whip the cream and whites of eggs separately and then combine them. Then stir in the raspberries and sugar. Serve in sherbet cups garnished with whole preserved raspberries.

Apricot Whip.—Separate the yolk and white of one egg. Beat the yolk till thick, add half a cupful of milk, one tablespoonful of sugar and a speck of salt. Cook till creamy. Flavor and set aside to get cold. Beat the white of the egg till stiff. Fold in carefully from two to four tablespoonfuls of canned apricot pulp, a few drops of lemon juice and two tablespoonfuls of sugar. Serve heaped on a glass dish with some of the custard around it.

Light and Delicious.

Banana Whip.—Peel the bananas, scrape off the coarse threads and press the pulp through a sieve. Add sugar and lemon juice to taste and cook over the fire, stirring until the mixture boils. Remove from the fire and chill. Beat some cream until it is firm. Fold the banana and cream together and chop some pistachio nuts fine and sprinkle over the mixture after it is put in glasses.

Prune Whip With Custard Sauce.—Take a half cupful of cooked prunes. Mash them well with their juice. Whip the white of one egg. Then with a large fork beat it well with the prunes. Set where it will keep cool and make the following sauce:

Sauce.—Dissolve some cornstarch in a little milk. A cupful in all will be needed for the sauce. Put the rest in a double boiler and stir in the cornstarch when the milk is hot. Beat the yolks and sugar until light, pour on a little hot milk, pour back, add salt and flavoring and beat well. Then take from the fire and let it cool. Serve the fruit whip in sherbet glasses with custard on top of it.

TABLET TO FIRST MAYOR

Erected to Charles H. Porter by Loyal Legion

A beautiful bronze memorial tablet, to the memory of Col. Charles H. Porter, Quincy's first Mayor, was placed in City Hall Thursday afternoon by the Loyal Legion. The tablet occupies a place on the wall over the entrance to the basement where it can be seen by everyone as they enter City Hall. A shadow however strikes the tablet so that the inscription can not be read until quite close to it. The inscription on the tablet is as follows:

"To the memory of Charles Hunt Porter 1843-1911—First Lieutenant 39th Massachusetts Infantry—A faithful officer in the war which preserved the union and destroyed slavery—His companions in arms of the Commandery of the State of Massachusetts of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion of the United States have here placed this tablet—Lex Recit Arma Tuentur."

NEW RAIL ON COPELAND ST

Girder Rail and New Paving Will be improvment

The Bay State street railway commenced laying a heavy girder rail on Copeland street, from the Willard school to Brewers corner, on Tuesday. Until the work is completed patrons of the line will be obliged to suffer the inconveniences which usually precede much needed improvements.

Thursday passengers were obliged to walk from Buckley street to the Evans turnout, a distance of over 600 feet, and today the distance will increased.

The advantages of the new rail over the old T rail which has been doing service for some years will be doubly appreciated. In addition, the paving blocks between the tracks will be relaid and will be of material appreciated by teamsters drawing heavy loads to Quincy Adams. In some spots the condition of the street is deplorable, particularly in a section which was built over a swamp.

The railway men are greatly handicapped by the actions of children along the line of improvement. Since operations commenced extra cars have been left at each end and the children in the immediately vicinity have adopted the habit of jumping on and off them, to the accompaniment of the clanging of the car bells. Passengers Thursday evening were startled to see an eight year old girl riding on the running board of an open car.

Inquiry in the neighborhood brought out that the parents of the children were making no real efforts to guide the actions of their children. The number of children in that section is large and accidents and injuries have been very infrequent. However, the present attitude of children and parents in no way guarantees that accidents may not occur since they are making the occasion on the average of once a minute.

BAND CONCERT ENJOYED

First to be Given at Quincy Shore Reservation

There was a very large attendance Thursday evening at the band concert at the Quincy shore reservation at the foot of Beach street, by the Fifth Regiment band. This is the first of the concerts to be given on th beoulevard by the Metropolitan Park Commission. The tide was just right for evening bathing and many enjoyed their daily dip while listening to the music. The beach for its entire length was thronged with people and automobiles, and the concert was thoroughly enjoyed. The next concert here will be given Aug. 22, by the Eighth Regiment band. The concerts on the Furnace Brook parkway will be given Aug. 14 and 26.

AT CAMP OF BOY SCOUTS

Practical Talks One of the Great Features

The Boy Scouts of America have a large camp in the Blue Hills, Reservation which will be maintained until September. It is not alone for pleasure, but practical in many ways.

The first in a course of five lectures on "Fire Fighting and Prevention" to be given by Fire Chief Sennott on Thursday. This course has been arranged by Fire Commissioner Cole, who will probably address the boys during the series.

Chief Sennott treated of the history of fire fighting and organization of fire and bucket brigades, illustrated the various fire drills, how to use extinguishers and other articles such as salt and blankets in a small blaze, how to send in an alarm, a fire signal box having been erected on the grounds and the direction of the firemen to a fire, which he claimed was an important detail many mature people neglected to do.

He also taught the boys what to do in case they are in a burning building. giving special instruction to those boys who are employed in department stores and other large buildings; emphasizing the necessity for keeping cool, how to assist others, danger of drafts and keeping close to the floors in smoke filled rooms.

Th second lecture will be given July 10 and the other three will follow on Aug. 7, Aug 14 and Aug. 26.

The mornings will be devoted to practical instruction, the afternoons to lectures and the evenings to lectures and entertainments. Some of the lectures will be on "Forest Conservation," "Public and Personal Health" "Paper Making" and "Animals."

HEARING ON PIER PETITION

John J. Powers Says It Is For Private Use

Considerable opposition was developed Thursday at the hearing before the Port of Boston Directors on the petition of John J. Powers to build a pier in Quincy bay at Houghs Neck. Powers desired to build a pier on the southeast side and the opposition came from summer residents and the Houghs Neck Associates who feared that Powers intended to run a line of steamers between Houghs Neck and Peddock's Island, where the rounders may satisfy their appetites as far as liquid refreshments are concerned. Mr. Powers assured the residents, however that he did not intend to inaugurate a line of steamers from Houghs Neck to Peddock's Isanld but intended to use the pier for private use. After the hearing the directors granted the petition.

After a honeymoon trip through New York State they will reside in Neponset.

A base ball game between two good teams of nearly equal ability is assured at Merrymount Park Saturday afternoon when the Fore River Apprentices and the Boston Gear Works clash in their first game of the season. The rivalry between both organizations is keen and Manager Larkin of the Apprentices promises that his team will produce a bang up style of base ball. Manager Gillis is equally confident of the showing of his boys.

Illuminating Gas.

In 1792 a manufacturer of Redruth, in Cornwall, named Murdoch made gas to light his home and factory. Pall Mall, in London, 1807, was the first street to be lighted by gas. Philadelphia introduced it in 1815, Boston in 1822 and New York in 1825. Gas is obtained from coal, which is heated in large retorts. The heavy gas drawn off passes by a pipe, called the hydraulic main, through a number of curved pipes called condensers, in which process coal tar and ammoniacal liquor condense and fall into a well. The gas passes to purifiers over slaked lime, which takes up sulphureted hydrogen and carbonic acid. It is then headed downward to the gas holder, a large tank having its base resting on water and from which the gas is distributed to the consumers. Certain byproducts are obtained in the course of manufacture which are more valuable than the gas itself. These include coke, ammonia, aniline, phenol or carbolic acid; naphthalene dyes, various artificial drugs and basic perfumes.—Christian Herald.

QUINCY DAY FOR GRANITE DEALERS

Manufacturers Association, Board of Trade and Mayor Stone Interested

Program Outlined a Good One to Boom Quincy

There was an enthusiastic meeting of a committee composed of granite manufacturers, members of the Board of Trade, and his honor, Mayor Eugene R. Stone, at the Granite Manufacturers rooms on Friday evening, to consider having a grand Quincy day at the close of the National Retail Monument Dealers convention in Boston, August 22, when some twelve or fifteen hundred dealers will be in Boston from all sections of the United States and Canada.

These are the men that our manufacturers sell their products to, and as Barre, Vt., is making preparations to entertain them, and take them by special train from Boston, Quincy must awake to their opportunity. It was thought by some of the committee, that perhaps the merchants would co-operate, and the Board of Trade, and make it one grand "Quincy Day."

The idea that met with most favor, was to have automobiles assemble at Hotel Brunswick at 8.30 in the morning and bring the retail dealers to Quincy via the Fenway to Jamaica Plain, through Harvard arboretum, thence through Forest Hills cemetery, to Milton, and to West Quincy to inspect the principal quarries, and then to South Quincy to inspect the granite cutting and polishing plants.

From there to City Square, where a short address of welcome would be made, and then for an inspection of the Fore River shipyard and then across to New Downer Landing where a real Rhode Island shore dinner might be served. As the New England Memorial Convention Bureau has promised the convention a sail down the harbor to the briny deep, the steamer could be at the Street Railway power house wharf, and take all on board for a sail to Minot's Light, around the outer harbor, and back to Boston, making it a day long to be remembered in the minds of every dealer.

If such a program is to be carried out, it means the hearty co-operation of every merchant and business man every citizen who wants to see Quincy come back to its place at the head of all granite producing sections. It means that the committee must have about a hundred and fifty automobiles for a half day. Can they be gotten? Have we patriotic citizens enough to volunteer such? It also means a considerable expenditure of money but if our people unite there will be no trouble. All it requires is the proper spirit. What helps the granite business, helps the working man, and every other business man in the city.

MORE CADETS VISIT SHIPARD

Also Take in the Sights of the City of Presidents

The gates at the Fore River yard were thrown wide open on Friday, for the second time this week, when five officers, several cadets and 114 members of the crew of the Presidente Sarmiento, the training ship of the Argentine Republic, spent the day inspecting the Rivadavia, their new fighting machine, and other points of interest in and about the yard.

Rear Admiral Onofre Betheder and Lieut-Comm. Julio Ayala Tarales from the central Argentine Commission of New York made an inspection visit of the boat. They remained the greater part of the day and left for New York at 2 o'clock.

Minister R. Naon and Capt. Ballve, commander of the ship are both at Washington, but Captain Ballve will be on deck Tuesday when the ship sails for Toulon, France.

The officers who were here Friday were Lieut. Carlos Siegrist, Lieut. Victor Tablet, Lieut. Oswaldo Repetto, Eng.-Lieut. Gualterio Carminati and Eng.-Lieut. Toribio Romero.

Commencing Tuesday the cadets will be given their first real test since the navigation of the ship will be turned over to them entirely. Lieut. J. C. Gregores, chief navigator, will act only in an advisory capacity.

At noon the officers and cadets were the guests of the management of the Fore River yards at an informal dinner and boxes of catered luncheon were distributed. They were given the free run of Quincy Point and as their fellow countrymen who visited the yard on Tuesday, spent considerable of their money in Quincy. Some had business with the Granite Trust Company.

The visiting party were transported to and from the yard in special electric cars and were the sole occupants of an extra coach on the train from and to Boston. Several of the officers were taken back to Boston in automobiles. Unlike the embarkation of Tuesday visitors, several lost the train Friday and were obliged to find their way back to the ship alone.

Noble Grand—John Barclay.
Vice Grand—John Nimmo.
Grand Master—William McClay.
Permanent Secertary—George Poch.

INTERESTED IN QUINCY.

Ex-Representative William L. Newton of South Boston is summering at Germantown, Quincy, and already is actively engaged in booming his summer town. Wednesday he was the guest of the Quincy Board of Trade in its tour of the manufacturing industries of the city. Mr. Newton attended a meeting of the Quincy City Council a few nights ago and the method of procedure there, he said, was the nearest approach to a genuine democracy he ever say.—Globe.

SQUANTUM BREEZES.

Squantum was represented in the "inspection tour" of the Quincy Board of Trade by the following: President Herbert A. Smith, Vice-President John R. Nelson, ex-President C. E. Carlson, William N. Kenyon, Edward Eagar and Edward Carlson, all of the Squantum Improvement association. The Squantum delegation had three automobiles in the line out of 19 machines.

STATE HOUSE MEN.

The mid-summer outing of the State House Associates will be held at the Villa de Napoli, Nantasket, on Saturday. Lieut. Gov. Walsh will be the speaker. The association is composed of the male persons in the employ of the Commonwealth of which Irving L. Shaw of Wollaston is the president.

MIDNIGHT TRAIN SCHEDULE

All Quincy Stations on Main Line to Benefit

Official announcement has been received by the Daily Ledger of the new midnight train from Boston which will be put on Monday night by the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. The new train will leave Boston at 12.05 (night) and will be operated between Boston and Braintree on the following schedule, nightly, except Sunday:

Leave Boston at 12.05.
Leave Atlantic at 12.17.
Leave Norfolk Downs at 12.19.
Leave Wollaston at 12.22.
Leave Quincy at 12.26.
Leave Quincy Adams at 12.29.
Due at Braintree at 12.33.

CITY HOSPITAL.

A change which undoubtedly will increase the popularity of the Quincy City Hospital took effect a few days ago when the Board of Trustees voted to include practically all doctors in the city on their staff, and in order to insure proper treatment a surgical and medical division will be maintained.

This is of great advantage in case of accident cases. The limited number of physicians on the board in the past and the probabilities of a physician not being able to quickly respond in accident cases, often resulted in much suffering to the patient because of the delay, but the board anticipates that both their divisions include enough physicians to overcome the possibility of all delay.

At the present time the institution is without a matron, Miss Alma Grant having resigned a few weeks ago to accept a similar position in Cambridge.

Ward One Republicans Plan to be Active

The Republican City Committee of Ward One, Charles H. Johnson, chairman, met last evening only one of the committee being absent. It was an enthusiastic meeting and will be followed by a gathering at some shore place at which time each member of the Committee will invite ten young voters of the ward. Mr. Johnson, the chairman of the committee has always commanded the respect and confidence of young people, this coupled with his recognized ability as an organizer, may put an unexpected phase on the future political situation of municipal affairs. It was the unanimous feeling of the committee that the time had come when the City Committee should be recognized.

CHIPPERS SMOKER.

The Chippers and Caulkers local held a smoker in the Johnson building Friday evening which was well attended. A short business meeting preceded the opening of the program. Songs were rendered by J. Hendry, James Harrison, John Taylor, Fred Clarkie and Albert Freme. Among those who told humorous stories was Fred Clarkie. Refreshments were served.

SEEKS RENOMINATION.

The first paper nominating a candidate for State office to be voted for at the September primaries has been filed with Secretary of State Frank J. Donahue. It is the paper of Representative John G. Faxon of Fitchburg, formerly of Quincy, who seeks renomination as a Republican candidate for the lower branch of the Legislature from the 12th Worcester District.

PERMIT WAS REFUSED

But Socialists Plan Meeting for City Square

Rev. Paul Drake of Wollaston will speak in City Square Sunday evening under the auspices of the Socialist club on the "Brotherhood of Man." A permit to speak was asked of the Commissioner and refused but the speaker will make his address just the same If arrested for violation of the city ordinances, bail will be ready so that he may immediately be released.

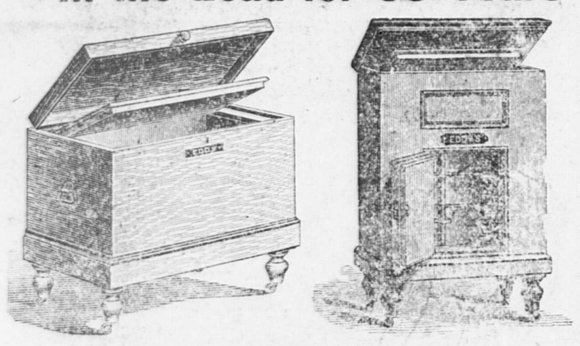

FIRST ST. JOHN'S CHURCH.

Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor of St. John's church, made a fortunate find of an old photograph of the first St. John's church while searching through old records of the parish. The first edifice was erected in 1853 by Rev. Fr. John T. Roddan, then pastor. It was about half as long as the present structure, nearly one third as wide, but had no basement. A half tone engraving has been made and copies will be distriuted to the parishioners to insert in the history of the parish which was given out the closing Sunday of the golden jubilee.

REMOH SELECTED.

The 35 foot power boat Remoh IV, owned by Capt. Arthur P. Homer of Wollaston, has been selected by the Boston Yacht club as finish boat for the daily racing runs which start in Saturday from Marblehead and which wind up at Camden, Me., a week later. The Remoh IV will be the object upon which skippers will focus their binoculars during the run while they are engaging in a friendly rivalry for the handsome trophies. Toward her the helmsmen will shape their courses while plying every trick of shrewd helmsmen.

GETTING THERE QUICK.

The attempt of a New York Evening Sun man to circle the globe in 35 days particularly appeals to Americans. The majority of people in this country are in a way trying to do the same thing.

The motorist is not concerned so much with the scenery along his way, as whether he covers the distance in a time creditable to his machine and his abilities as a driver. The traveler by rail does not first speak of the crops seen from the car winodws, or the habits and manners of fellow travelers. The chief thing was whether they reached the destination on time.

A woman once remarked that she enjoyed an accommodation train much better than the express. The latter whisked her by the stations so fast that she could not see how people lived nor what they looked like.

She must feel lonesome in this country. And if the Sun man wins this race against time, it will be partly because the habits of a race make every step and thought agile.

With the advent of the vacation season, the social activites of the town have been almost entirely suspended and people are spending all their leisure time out of doors and taking life as easy as possible during the hot months. Many fortunate ones are enjoying life at beach, camp or mountains and others will take an outing later in the season, seeking rest and recuperation for the more strennous fall and winter season. There are yet others who will be unable to get away from business longer that perhaps a week-end now and then. Vacations in these busy times have become not a luxury but rather a necessity to all who would keep in the best of health both physical and mental and those who can't take the time or money to enjoy them are much more in the minority than formerly.

The various town officials must be greatly pleased with their quarters in the new town house and it is very probable that Braintree's business can be handled much easier and quicker than in the old building. The auditorium will hardly be much used just now or for sometime to come owing to the warm weather and the consequent cessation of indoor functions but in the autumn it will no doubt be in great demand and the townspeople will enjoy the beautiful hall more than ever after being denied a suitable meeting place for so long. May the present structure serve the town for years to come and unvexed by fire or other misfortunes be used by this and coming generations as the public forum of the good old town of Braintree.

Miss Jessie Wilson is to be married at the White house next November, and of course all her father's constituents expect to be invited to the wedding.

Apparently the fellows who want a wedding in the White house under this administration have got to fill plans and specifications pretty quick.

Vacationists are protecting against the habit of delaying trains by lifting trunks carefully out of the baggage car when they could be thrown.

Three-fourths of criminals are unmarried, says the New York district attorney. This goes to show why bachelors hate to give up their fun and come under strict discipline.

Formerly the big cities were noisy and the small towns quiet on July 4. Now the cities are quiet, and it is in in the small towns that you get the big bang-bang.

Even if the iceman is able to tell the exact weight of a cake by looking at it, it makes the consumer feel much cooler to have it weighed.

The cabinet members have agreed to pay only $2000 a year rent, but in Washington people can always eke out a meagre income by taking in roomers.

BRAINTREE Y. M. C. A. CAMP

Manomet, July 10, 1913.

The Braintree Y. M. C. A. camp here was opened for occupancy about the time the Observer went to press last week. Among the first arrivals July 3d were President and Mrs. Marcus L. Urann and daughter Ruth, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Bryant with Miss Gladys and Master Gordon, and Mr. and Mrs. James E. Folsom with Miss Edith and Master Forrest. The directors and friends interested in the camp, with members of their families, continued to arrive during the remainder of the day until at supper time there were more than forty-five present. Others arrived late (8.30 o'clock) in the evening when everybody was interested in the arrangement of camp quarters for the night.

It was truly a "camping-out" party, for while some sought the comforts of cots and mattresses in the camp building and others settled in the two tents and portable house near the camp, there was a goodly number of real fresh-airists who selected the elevated opening in the old Indian apple orchard in front of the camp and there with pine boughs or other soft material beneath and the clear blue sky overhead slept in pure refreshment till the rising sun called all into activity between the hours of three and six. Never has a company been more sanely ushered into the glorious Fourth than were these campers by the lone notes of the whip-poor-will. No other sound broke the silence of the night.

A brief song and prayer service preceded the morning meal. After breakfast two hours were spent in varied amusements. A plunge at the beach was next in order. Some preferred the milder waters of Fresh pond near by, while others took a dip at each bathing place.

The driving of a twenty-seven foot well and the attaching of a pump was the morning task of two strenuous members of the party. Abundant and clear water was reached at sixteen feet. There are now two wells near the camp.

The arrivals of the morning of the Fourth brought the total of the party up to fifty-eight, about twelve more than Commissary- Pratt and his assistants could accommodate at the first setting of the dinner tables. Besides the above named the following partook of the hearty fresh salmon dinner: Rev. and Mrs. A. Lowell Ryan with Miss Martha and Master Allan, RRev. and Mrs. Tyler E. Gale with Master Bennett, Rev. and Mrs. J. A. Mitchell and Master John, Rev. and Mrs. Harry Grimes, Rev. Nelson A. Price, Misses Susie and Eliza Arnold, Miss Emma and Prof. Lucy Keith, Mrs. S. S. B. French, Mrs. George French, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred O. White, Miss Elizabeth Pray, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hoe with Miss Amy, Mrs. G. B. Moody Mr. and Mrs. Arthur H. Cobb, Miss Mary E. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Hardy and son, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Rogers, Mr. and Mrs. George O. MacDonald with Master George, Mr. and Mrs. Warren W. Sylvester and Masters Stanley and Elwin, Mr. Julius Illes, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, George Dunkerly, Paul Pratt and Wallace Williams.

Friday evening and Saturday morning witnessed a general exodus of the visitors. During Saturday the boys at the camp were joined by Stewart Avery, Hartley White, Edward Hunt, Richard Hunt , Frank Ballou, Hunting Fisher, Melville Wood, John Davenport, Edwin Wheelock, Joseph Dutton, Rufus Smith and Earl Pennock.

Mr. Illes impersonated the proverbial "early bird" Saturday by taking three beautiful pickerel on a "3 A. M." expedition.

The boys have had delightful weather. The rain of last night has settled and washed away the sand dust so all is fresh and clean today. Mr. Ernest P. Conlon, Y. M. C. A. secretary and Boy Scout commissioner for Norfolk County, with a Scout Master from Wellesley as assistant, and Rev. Harry Grimes of Braintree have been in charge of the camp during the week.

Two particularly pleasing arrivals during the week were two dozen base ball caps contributed by Murphy Bros. Department Store of South Boston and an 8x12 American flag.

Most of the boys in camp will return to Braintree Saturday, July 12th when another delegation will arrive. Twenty will be in camp the coming week. Those desiring to spend the week of July 19 to 26 at the camp should apply at once to Mr. F. C. Folsom, 27 Lowell street, John A. Hillier, Rev. A. L. Ryan and Arthur Davenport will assist Mr. Conton in conducting the camp the coming week.

6.00 Reveille.
6.15 Morning dip and exercise.
7.30 Breakfast.
8.30 Morning council.
9.00 Hike.
12.30 Dinner.

SIXTY-FIVE YEARS MARRIED

Sang at a Concert Given As Early As 1842

Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Tilden, of Weymouth, are today observing the 55th anniversary of their wedding. Mrs. Tilden was Harriet C. Cushing, and was born in Weymouth, Nov. 12, 1831. Mr. Tilden, also a native of the town, was born Jan. 1,1824. He has been a shipbuilder, a musician, and has served as town constable, having been appointed to that office in 1860. He has been prominent in the musical interests of the town all his life, organizing a singing school there, and conducting singing classes in Weymouth, Quincy and Randolph. As a member of the Weymouth Singing Society, he sang at a concert given in Duxbury in 1842, and was entertained, together with 69 other members, by Daniel Webster. Of this number, Mr. Tilden and W. W. Raymond of East Weymouth are the only ones now living. He was a charter member of the original Weymouth band, and belonged to various other musical organizations.

BACK FROM GETTYSBURG.

Morris Gurney of East Braintree, a member of Company K, 16th Infantry Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers, has arrived from Gettysburg, where he took part in the reunion o fthe surviving veterans of that memorable battle.

Mr. Gurney's account of the trip is very interesting. The plan was to reach Emmitsburg road, the scene of the beginning of the conflict on June 30 the same hour that the enemy was encountered there fifty years ago; but owing to the lateness of the train they did not arrive until 3 A. M. July 1. From this point they went to Little Roundtop and then to Bloody Angle where Veteran Gurney received as a souvenir, part of a shell which had been fired from General Lee's headquarters. Pulp's Hill was next visited and then Seminary Ridge, which was called the High Water Mark of the battle. One of the pleasantest features of the reunion to Comrade Gurney's Company was a reception which was given by them to the same southern company which they fought against in days of strife.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Mayor Fitzgerald's Rooster Gets the Axe and Dorchester Stenographers Can Now Sleep—Suffragists, Too, Have Left Town for a While—They Will Stir up Massachusetts Before Going to Washington—Lexington Gets a Replica of the Ancient Paul Revere Belfry—Interesting Facts About the Way Fish Fight.

Once again there is sleep in the shaded suburb of Dorchester where many Boston stenographers have their abode and where Mayor John F. Fitzgerald also sleeps. Out in Dorchester there has long been complaint of Fitzy's Rooster, one of the loud crowing kind whose clarion notes could be heard for many a block what time the east was reddening and Gladys, just home from Paragon Park, was hoping to get at least an hour of sleep ere mother summoned her for breakfast. At last the mayoral bird, owned by one of the scions of the family, grew so obstreperous that jointly and severally the citizens of the neighborhood moved on the board of health and requested an abatement of nuisance. Then at last the Hon. John F. moved too. He moved in the direction of the chicken coop with an axe. All that remained to tell the tale was a tough young foul, one of the kind known in cheap restaurants as a two-day-and-a-nighter. The bird was dead and Gladys could henceforth sleep two hours if her mother would let her.

Awake, old Bay State burghs. The Suffragists are among you again, five of them, in a bedecked touring car, proclaiming votes for women from Barnstable to Berks. It is a good looking quintet, too. After doing Massachusetts they will go to Washington to make a demonstration, with others, in favor of a national amendment permitting women to vote.

If interested in New England antiquities you will have an added incentive to go to historic Lexington now that they have set up there a replica of the famous old belfry from which Paul Revere, rang the alarm to assemble the minute men on April 19, 1775. The original belfry, it is well remembered, lasted for a long time, but in 1909 it was blown down by a high wind, and only a few sticks were left to be preserved sacredly at the Clarke-Hancock house. Consequently when Belfry Hill was purchased some time ago for a park and playground, it was determined to have an exact replica of the famous old belfry. This it is which the Lexington Historical Society has lately installed and which will almost as greatly interest the thousands of patriotic pilgrims as did the original structure.

With an attendance averaging more than 35,000 a week Boston's Aquarium at City Point is proving itself as successful as those who had followed the fortunes of the New York Aquarium predicted that it would be. On the technical side it has been even more remarkably successful than had been anticipated. Director Louis Mowbray is said to have established a wonderful reputation for himself through the very small number of deaths among his finny captives.

Any one who is privileged to go behind the scenes at the Aquarium speedily realizes the thoroughness with which the fish are guarded. You might suppose that when a fish is brought to the institution he is simply put into one of the big exhibition tanks amongst others of his kind. As a matter of fact he is examined as carefully as the immigration officials inspect immigrants who, if unwatched, may bring dangerous diseases into the country. If the newcoming fish should prove to bear on his body fungi which might spread among the other fish he is given a bath in a solution of salt and bicarbonate of soda, or, if his case is very bad, he is immersed for a few minutes in a thick solution of permanganate. After that he can safely be allowed to associate with his fellows.

Whether he will be allowed to associate with them in safety depends much on his ability to take care of himself after he is dropped into the tank. When a school of fish has for some time been swimming happily together they are very likely to resent an intruder. Consequently the first few minutes in which a fish is in the tank are perilous minutes. The careful scientist aims to have each fish in prime physical condition before he slips him into water in which others are already well established. Sometimes the invader is not even noticed, but sometimes there occurs a most sanguinary fight. Fish do not play fair, and it is nothing unusual for a dozen to fall upon one with the utmost savagery. If he gets by the first hour or so the importation speedily becomes one of the old timers.

Several tanks in the reserve section are maintained as a hospital in which ailing fish may be treated as efficiently as if they were human beings. The fish in the exhibition tanks are so well groomed and healthy that they invariably make a favorable impression on the many visitors.

STORM DAMAGES.

The thunder storm of last Thursday afternoon was quite heavy in South Braintree, but especially destructive in the north and east part of the town where much damage was done. A large limb fell from a tree in front of the home of Mr. F. O. Ellis on the corner of School and Washington streets and tore away a large section of wire fence. In front of the home of Mrs. H. S. Thayer, a tree fell, tearing down an awning and damaging the door. Near the Drinkwater tannery a big tree was uprooted, carrying away electric light and telephone wires and crippling the electirc light service in the district for the rest of the evening. A large tree near All Souls' church was blown down. The streets were badly washed by the heavy rain. On Granite street great damage was done to the growing vegetables of that section.

NO COMPLAINT IN QUINCY

Ice Dealers Are Giving Full Weight to Customers

James M. Cantfill, the sealer of weights and measures has been hot after ice men during the past week, but to the credit of the Quincy dealers he says that he has found none of the dealers but what were living up to the law.

The complaints that some dealers were giving short weight has become general all over the state since the Boston dealers have been arrested and convicted for giving short weight.

The most of the complaints that Mr. Cantfill has received have come from the Wollaston section and for the past week he has been following up the ice men.

As soon as an ice man would enter a house and deliver a cake of ice, Mr. Cantfill would immediately enter after the ice man had gone and weigh up the cake that had been left. The ice wagon drivers were not aware that they were being watched.

Mr. Cantfill said this morning that in no case had he found that the drivers were giving under weight. He found that in many cases they were giving much over weight, but none that were under weight.

In justice to the Quincy ice dealers it should be said that all have given orders to their drivers to see that customers get all the ice they are entitled to, although it must be understood that it is very difficult for any man to cut a piece of ice to the exact weight, but they were instructed not to charge for an ounce more than was delivered.

An Escape

By LUCY K. WYNKOOP

Joe Green, a boy ten years old, lost his father, then his mother, and was thrown out upon the world at an age when he should have been subject to the necessary training to direct him in an honorable career.

Joe was a bright boy and fitted for a better life than robbery and passing the principal part of his life in jail and the rest of it undergoing the risk of jail or something else. But the time had not come for him to show strength of character enough to enable him to break away from the path in which fate had placed him. When he was fifteen he and some other youngsters attempted to rob a man who defended himself till a policeman arrived, and the boys were all caught in the act.

Joe, who was the youngest of the lot, was sent to a reformatory. It was one of those prisons where boys are taught some trade by which to earn an honorable living. There was a power house, with an engine to drive the machinery in the other buildings. Joe was interested in this engine as soon as he saw it and succeeded in getting himself assigned as a helper to the engineer. He began by shoveling coal into the furnace, but showed such aptitude for mechanics that he was advanced to the post of assistant engineer.

To be more explicit about Joe's aptitude, he was full of resource. Where another person would take an ordinary way to accomplish a mechanical result he would take a short way. The first notice that was taken of this faculty was one day when a machine broke. A piece of work that was due to be finished at a certain time was dependent upon it. It would require some time to procure the broken part, and it seemed that the work it was doing must stop. Joe suggested a way by which it might be temporarily repaired and the work go on. His suggestion was acted upon and the work finished in time.

Joe became so infatuated with machinery that he was anxious to get out into the world and become a machinist. He was not a patient boy—few persons whose abilities are of the kind called genius are—so his inventive brain turned toward a method of escape from the reformatory that he might go to some place where his past would not be known and enter upon a career connected with machinery. He thought over a number of plans by which he might get out of the prison, but none of them were practicable.

But at last he hit upon an original conception, one that was allied to the science of mechanics. Some mathematical knowledge was required to put it into practice, but there was a school in the reformatory which the boys were required to attend, and Joe showed a considerable aptitude in a mathematical way.

The suggestion came in this way: The power house was built against the prison wall. Besides the engine, it contained a broad leather belt turned by the shaft, the upper end running over gearing attached to the ceiling. Beside this gearing was a window, which was usually kept open in order to let out the heated air of the engine and furnace room.

One morning it occurred to Joe that the belt might possibly be used as a conveyance to carry one to the window, whence he might lower himself to the ground outside the prison wall.

But no one could jump from the belt to the window without running the risk of being dashed against it or falling to a brick yard pavement below it, or both. There was but one time when such a ride could be taken. That was when the steam had been shut off and the belt was slowing up previous to stopping its revolution. This was attended to by the engineer himself at 6 o'clock every workday evening, and there were usually other persons, prisoners or officials, about during the closing hour; therefore the feat must be performed in presence of others.

Joe found time when he was supposed to be studying to calculate a point where he could jump on to the belt, be carried to the window and stop there, though the basis of these calculations was obtained by watching the belt revolve previous to stopping, noting especially the position of the lacing with reference to the point at which the belt must be boarded.

He was months making these notations and calculations and at last was enabled to fix a point which many notations at the closing hour showed always stopped at the window.

One evening when there was no one but the engineer and Joe in the engine room the former saw the boy seize a coiled rope that he had kept ready for his purpose, jump on the belt, hold on to each edge, ride to the window and disappear. The engineer was too astonished to give an alarm, and whether he gave one at all was not settled at the investigation that followed the daring feat.

It was midwinter when Joe Green made his experiment, and it was not only dark without, but a snowstorm was raging. Joe was never heard of again, but a much respected and wealthy contractor for machinery named Joseph Greer is living in Rio de Janeiro. He never talks about his boyhood, but has given away a fortune for the betterment of boys who are deprived of a home training and has helped hundreds of young men who have served terms in prison to a means of earning an honest livelihood.

SUFFERS NEW HUMILIATION

Bulgaria Is Invaded by the Roumanian Army

FORTIFIED CITY IS CAPTURED

No Resistance When Troops Enter Silestria—Will Occupy 2500 Square Miles of Territory as Compensation For Neutrality During Turkish War—Balkan Confederacy Far Away

London, July 12.—Roumanian troops yesterday occupied the Bulgarian city of Silistria, on the right bank of the Danube. Roumania's army of 400,000 to 500,000 men is fresh and in fine shape, as it has not been involved in previous fighting.

The Bulgarian garrison, composed of a few hundred men, surrendered to the Roumanians. The invading force subsequently penetrated for a distance of nine or ten miles into Bulgarian territory.

Silistria, until the conclusion of the Russo-Turkish war in 1878, had been for about 500 years the main bulwark of the Ottoman empire on its northern European frontier. It sustained many sieges through the centuries and always offered a stout resistance.

Even as late as the Crimean war it was able to defy a bombardment by the Russians, but after the last Russo-Turkish war the Turkish troops retired and left it in the hands of the Bulgarians. It has more than 12,000 inhabitants, many of whom are Mohammedans.

Roumania will occupy 2500 square miles of territory which she claims from Bulgaria as compensation for her neutrality in the late war. This strip extends from Turtukai to Baltchik on the Black sea, and includes the city of Silistria.

The Roumanian government decided that Roumania would take part in the discussion of the final partition of the territories of what was formerly European Turkey.

Roumania's declaration of war and invasion of Bulgaria adds the last straw to the humiliation that King Ferdinand is made to suffer for his contemptuous treatment of the allies who made his victory over the Turks possible. Swollen with the pride of this achievement and selfishly regardless of the plight in which Servia found herself as a result of Austrian intrigue, Bulgaria sought a conflict to destroy her former helpmate.

The scheme for a great Balkan confederacy has been pushed into the far future. Hatreds have been rearoused where friendships might have been established and an era of political and material prosperity inaugurated.

The one element of strength is the continued union of Serb, Greek and Montenegrin. If this holds, Austria may not get all she wants.

The war has completely set aside all treaties of alliance and any peace or rearrangement of boundaries must now be negotiated on an entirely new basis. The action of Roumania may assist in bringing to an end the carnage in the Balkans by forcing speedy action on the part of the powers, who have been invited to intervene.

The object of King Charles of Roumania in assuming the part of a belligerent is to strengthen Roumania's claim to participate in the ultimate division of territory in the Balkan peninsula. For the present Roumania is likely to content herself with occupying the strip of Bulgarian territory from Turtukai, on the Danube, to Baltchik, on the Black sea, including the city of Silistria. She has coveted this for a long time and she can now accomplish her object without Bulgarian resistance.

The campaign of the Servians and Greeks against the Bulgarians in Macedonia is regarded by the Servian military authorities as concluded since the defeat of the Bulgarians in the recent fighting. The Servian troops yesterday joined hands with the Greek forces, which had just taken Strumitza, and the Bulgarians are being driven from pillar to post throughout Macedonia.

NEW MAINE LAWS PUT INTO EFFECT

All But Public Utilities Board Become Operative

Augusta, Me., July 12.—Laws passed by the last legislature, except the public utilities act, which will be submitted to the voters later on petitions already filed, and emergency measures, became operative at midnight last night.

The new laws include acts to establish a state highway commission, to retire teachers of long service with pensions, to create a state board of charities and corrections, to provide that persons residing outside the state who desire to be married shall file their intentions five days in advance of the ceremony, to regulate the business of dealing in securities, to protect trade and commerce against unlawful restraint and monopolies, to compel steam railroad corporations to pay their employes weekly, to prevent the organization or existence of secret societies in public schools and to abolish grade crossings of railroads.

BAY STATE LAW AS MODEL

Senate Again Passes Bill Relating to Working Hours For Women

Washington, July 12.—For the second time within a year the senate passed the Peters-La Follette bill providing for an eight-hour day for women workers in the District of Columbia.

This bill went through the upper chamber last spring but was killed in the house by a parliamentary trick during the closing hours of the session. It now goes to the house.

Certain features of the bill are copied from similar legislation enacted in Massachusetts.

RATHER EXPENSIVE FUEL

Woman Unwittingly Burns Up $700 In Her Kitchen Range

New York, July 12.—Barnett Gelford's shaken confidence in banks since the Pittsburg crash has cost him $700. He had that amount in a Williamsburgh savings bank, withdrew it and placed it in the kitchen range in his home, at 833 De Kalb avenue, for safekeeping.

Gelford failed to inform his wife, and yesterday, for the first time in two weeks, she started a fire in the range preparatory to cooking and the money was destroyed.

Big Inheritance Tax

Concord, N. H., July 12.—The state treasurer has received a check for $10,660.70 in payment of the inheritance taxes charged against the estate of Anna P. Peabody of Boston.

COMMONS SHAKEN UP

Toy Pistol, Mousetraps and Cats Figure In Latest "Outrage"

London, July 12.—The report of a shot fired from the strangers' gallery in the house of commons, accompanied by a yell of "Justice for Women," caused a panic among the members who were in session. Simultaneously with the report a shower of leaflets on which were printed the words "Votes for Women" rained down on the members.

Two men pointed out as the perpetrators of the outrage were seized by the officials, hustled from the gallery and detained pending investigation. It was later discovered that the weapon was merely a toy pistol.

A number of toy mousetraps satirizing the "Cat and Mouse" act, wrapped in the pamphlets thrown from the gallery, reached the members. On top of each mousetrap was a figure representing a cat.

This phase of the demonstration was obviously a protest against the enforcement of the "cat and mouse" act under which suffragettes are released from prison when their condition becomes serious from hunger-striking, but are returned as soon as they have recovered their health.

MAYOR SEES POLITICS

Fitzgerald's Battle of Words With Boston Carmen Continues

Boston, July 12.—The verbal battle between the Street Carmens' union and Mayor Fitzgerald, precipitated by the latter's attack on James J. Storrow and James H. Vahey, in which the mayor accused Vahey of hypocrisy, was continued yesterday, when the principals hurled further charges and counter charges in public statements.

The mayor's latest contribution expressed his regrets at the possibility of the street car situation in Boston being made "the football of politics."

The streetcar men came back with the retort that if the mayor would "on this one occasion make an exception of his usual rule, mind his own business and not attempt to bolster his failing political fortunes by embarrassing the arbitrators in their very serious work, we would be grateful; but perhaps that is too much to expect."

DEMANDS RELEASE OF FIVE AMERICANS

Garrison Orders Cavalry to Take Action in Mexico

Washington, July 12.—Secretary Garrison ordered Colonel Brewer of the Fourteenth cavalry at Fort McIntosh to demand the release of five Americans, together with 350 cattle and thirty horses, held by Mexican revolutionists at Hidalgo, Mex. Secretary Bryan requested the action.

The attention of the state department was called to the imprisonment of the Americans and the seizure of their property by Consul Garrett at Nuevo Laredo, Mex.

Their offense was said to have been trading with Huerta sympathizers. Those under arrest are Robert, Arthur and Ashton Hazelegg, Isaac Cade and William Randolph.

STARTLES ENDEAVORERS

Dr. Sheldon Suggests Confessional For Protestant Churches

Los Angeles, Cal., July 12.—Rev. Dr. Charles M. Sheldon, Congregationalist, author of "In His Steps," startled the Christian Endeavorers in convention here by urging the union of all Protestant churches under one head, and the establishment of the confessional therein.

The power of the Catholic church Sheldon ascribed to its solidarity, the fact that it had but one head, and the confessional. He had heard confessions in his church in Topeka, and had found the confessional worked great good.

"All sorts and conditions of people have come to me," he said, "knowing that they would receive helpful advice."

AN UNEXPECTED BEQUEST

Keeper of Hotel Willed $100,000 by One of His Guests

Philadelphia, July 12.—After giving $317,500 to churches and charitable institutions of Philadelphia and vicinity, the will of Francis W. Smith of this city gives Samuel W. W. Briggs $100,000 and directs that the latter shall have the use of a motor car owned by the testator and be paid $1500 a year for its upkeep.

Briggs is manager of a Philadelphia hotel, at which Smith often stopped. Briggs expressed surprise when told of the bequest.

"Copper Magnate" Bankrupt

Death of Noted Diplomat

The Hague, July 12.—Jonkheer L. H. Ruijesenaers, who was secretary to the international arbitration tribunal in 1901, is dead. He was 63 years old and had a brilliant career in diplomacy.

ALL JUMPING ON THE ICE MEN AND WHY

The American people have suffered from a good many kinds of humbug in their day and generation, but the silliest of all silly humbugs on record is without doubt the present hullabaloo against the ice men. It is the old, old story of man's ingratitude when he chooses to forget.

For millions of years the old earth rolled around with summer heat and winter cold. During all these years no human being thought it possible to take the winter ice and store it for summer use. Within the past hundred years it was found that ice could be stored. Fifty years ago there was comparatively little ice cut and there was little general demand for it, the cost being excessive.

Then came the ice men as capitalists and in a capitalistic way they reasoned that if ice could be supplied to the homes as well as to the markets and wholesale users there would be a big demand and a possibility of corresponding profit.

The reasoning was right but the progress was slow because the people considered ice in summer an extravagant luxury. Some indeed argued in the same old way that all changes were condemned, that ice in summer was sinful, because it was flying in the face of Providence who would have provided for the ice if His Wisdom found it necessary.

But the immense value of the ice supply was soon apparent and the demand increased. Then the ice men made a study of cutting, storage, delivering and all the details that make up an important industry. More and more capital was necesary until there were corporations on a large scale all working to reduce the cost of gathering the ice and delivering it to the consumer.

Ice in summer at the prices furnished is now considered a necessity. Every season we have the newspaper lamentations about the sufferings of the poor and the dying of many thousands of children for want of ice, which the grasping greed of the ice men will not furnish free. These sympathetic souls in their appeals for other people's money overlook the fact that in no other country in the world is ice considered such a necessity.

Then the people in their easy-going way can hardly understand why the same ice that was worthless and a nuisance in winter should cost money in summer. They know nothing of the work or the details or the uncertainties of ice crops. Rarely in recent years has there been one month of steady freezing with good ice cutting conditions. Snow storms make extra cost and thaws stop the work. In seasons like last winter ice cutting is almost impossible.

It is true that great progress has been made in mechanical plants for making ice and for refrigerating, but with all that can be done in this line it will be many years before the manufactured ice can amount to more than a small fraction of the total supply of ice now called for.

The development of the ice business has been one of the industrial wonders, and no other industry of equal value of investment and product has ever given such remarkable results for the comfort and welfare of mankind. For this the ice men are condemned beyond all others.

As to the retail or distributing end of the ice business the newspaper made public opinion is even more damnable. If the flip critics, the half baked reformers and the cheap politicians could be made to spend one day on an ice wagon they would be obliterated.

The ice man, with all his weary round of climbing stairs with his dripping burdens and being ordered back for different shaped pieces, is expected to be an expert bookkeeper and expert weigher and be able to split up a block of ice so that the parts shall all be exactly equal in weight.

Every legislature or city or town council is eager to pass laws and make regulations for the ice man. He must answer every call and keep children from under his wagon wheels while he is delivering a five cent piece of ice on the top floor. There, by the way, he may find a sleuth of a pop-eyed official waiting to see if the five cent piece is not four ounces short weight!

All ice men are rated as thieves and grafters so courts are eager to sentence and fool newspapers eager to work up sensations from the charges.

What other human industry of any kind gets such insanely villainous treatment from the public?

Is any grocery delivery wagon so regulated and so followed by sleuths? Is any deparmen store delivery so hounded? But milk and ice wagons are fair game for all sneaking informers.

It only remains for the pure food lunatics to get busy and show how the ice may be contaminated. Then get laws passed ordering all deliveries of ice in sealed glass jars, with weight certificate, date and place of cutting all filed out and signed by the high official ice inspector.

The cost would be enormous, surely, and poor people would have to go without. But think of the pages that a Cassidy could fill in the Boston American telling all about this great victory in bringing the criminal ice men to terms.

Senate Tariff Measure Reduces the House Duties

SUGAR AND WOOL UNCHANGED

Other Agricultural Products Transferred From Dutiable to Free List—Income Taxes Established to Raice $70,000,000 a Year—Provision For Collecting In Senate Bill

Washington, July 12.—Reductions averaging nearly 10 percent from the duties provided in the house bill are the distinctive features of the senate's version of the Wilson-Underwood tariff measure, approved by the senate finance committee and reported by Chairman Simmons to the upper house.

While raw wool is to become free of duty Dec. 1, this year, and sugar is to go on the free list May 1, 1916, as provided in the original Underwood bill, the senate has switched most of the other agricultural products from the dutiable to the free list and has drastically reduced the rates on metals.

To make up for the reduction in national revenues due to the lower tariff rates, the bill provides a system of income taxes which are established to raise $70,000,000 a year, and additional internal revenue taxes upon brandies used in fortifying sweet wines and upon trading in cotton futures.

The effect of the latter—whether it will produce a large revenue or will merely put an end to cotton exchange speculation—is declared by Chairman Simmons to be highly uncertain.

The income tax will be collected from all American citizens, whether living at home or abroad, upon their net income above $3000 in case of single persons or persons having no one dependent upon them for support, and on all such income above $4000 in cases where a wife or husband is living with and dependent upon the taxpayer. A further exemption of $500 is given for each child dependent upon such married taxpayer. The house bill made a general exemption of $4000 income.

From $3000 to $20,000 of taxable income, the rate is 1 percent a year. For the next $30,000, 2 percent, for the next $50,000, 3 percent and for all above this point 4 percent. The amount due from each citizen is to be reported through the internal revenue collector for each revenue district.

The purely perfunctory step of voting on the bill in the finance committee went through as per program, the majority defeating the united minority in the vote on Senator McCumber's motion to report the bill adversely. Similar fate befell motions by Senator Smoot to strike out the free sugar and free wool provisions.

SMALL'S BAIL RAISED

Alleged Fraudulent Mining Promoter Is Held In Sum of $15,000

Boston, July 12.—On the recommendation of Assistant United States Attorney General Garland, Judge Dodge in the United States district court increased the bail of Frederick E. Small of the American Securities corporation and the Brooklyn-rizona Mining company, to $15,000 when the prisoner was taken before him.

Small came from Arizona under bail of $10,000, which he failed to secure. He is charged with A. C. Cruchet with fraudulent use of the mails in connection with the sale of mining stock throughout New England.

While in the cage in the office of United States Marshal Murchie Small was informed that the chief of police of Everett has a warrant for his arrest for alleged non-support of his wife.

JOHNS HELD FOR MURDER

Charged With Killing Girl Despite Verdict of Coroner

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 12.—Herbert Johns was held without bail on the charge of murdering his 18-year-old sweetheart, Alice Crispell, at a hearing last night before Alderman Brown.

Although Johns was exonerated by the coroner's jury which probed the death of the girl, whose body was found floating in Harvey's lake, District Attorney Bigelow declared there was enough evidence to make out a prima facie case against the prisoner.

Alexandra Spends Money Freely

London, July 12.—Queen Mother Alexandra is said to have been living beyond her income of $500,000 a year, has lost in some speculative investments, and her affairs had to be straightened out.

FREED OF BRIBE CHARGE

New York Supreme Judge Cohalan Exonerated by Investigators

Albany, July 12.—Supreme Courr Justice Daniel F. Cohalan was exonerated last night from the charges of misconduct preferred by the grievance committee of the Bar association of New York. This was the culmination of a four days' trial before the senate and asesmbly judiciary committees.

The testimony of Cohalan was a sweeping denial of any wrongdoing. He admitted that as a lawyer he had received substantially the amount Connolly claimed to have paid him. He acknowledged he was prominent politically at the time, one of his activities being as a sachem of Tammany hall.

POLICE AS LOVERS PROVE GOOD BAIT

Land Man Who Has Been Holding Up Couples in Park

Springfield, Mass., July 12.—George L. Walz was arraigned in police court here, charged on three counts of impersonating an officer, three counts of attempted assault and one count of assault and robbery.

Walz was trapped late at night by two policemen, one dressed as a woman, who enacted the role of lovers in an endeavor to capture the miscreant who has been holding up couples in Forest park and attempting to assault the girls after intimidating their escorts.

The police claim Walz has confessed to the charges.

WILSON GOES EXPLORING

Cornish, N. H., July 12.—President Wilson went exploring in his automobile yesterday. He took an unfrequented road and his big car picked its way slowly and cautiously over a mountain ridge. The road had been so little used that in many places it was overgrown with grass.

The president's car mounted the hills with little difficulty, but frequently in the descents brakes were thrown on tight. The view of the surrounding hills amply repaid the president for the bumping he got, as both he and Mrs. Wilson saw the Green mountains from unusual vantage points.

GIRL WITH "PINK AURA"

She Will Make an Affectionate Wife, Declares Dr. Beckwith

Chicago, July 12.—"Picking the right girl" is the easiest matter in the world if you hunt around until you find one who radiates a pink aura. "The girl will fall on your neck and say yes, for the pink rays show she is plumb full of affection."

Dr. Edwin Beckwith gave this advice gratis to a crowd of lovelorn who gathered to hear his lecture. "A yellowish green aura surrounds the girl you must avoid," volunteered the doctor. "She has a spiteful temper. Spotting the aura is a difficult thing," admitted Beckwith. "One has to be real sensitive."

A DARING SCOUT.

His Quick Wit Fooled the Federals and Saved His Neck.

Wat Bowie, a scout for the Confederate army, was a young Maryland lawyer at the time the great conflict began. After months of successful work he was captured and taken to Washington and sentenced to be hanged. He made his escape, and in "On Hazardous Service" W. G. Beymer tells of the weeks that he was followed by secret service men and small details of Federal cavalry and how by his very audacity and quick wit he escaped recapture.

He blundered into a camp of them one morning at dawn and saw instantly that retreat was impossible; they were ready to open fire with a dozen revolvers. Without hesitation he strode up to the men and shouted indignantly:

"You make mighty free with my rails! With all this wood round you did not need to burn my fences." He seemed very angry.

"Who are you?" a corporal stammered.

"The owner of the rails, of course!" And then, apparently somewhat mollified, he went on: "Well, well! War is war, but don't do any more damage than you can help, boys." He sat down with them to their breakfast and chatted with them pleasantly. One of them asked if he had seen Wat Bowie and described him accurately. At the description they all stared at him and moved uneasily, in doubt as to what was to be done. He tallied with the description in every respect. But his insolence in walking up to them and upbraiding them for burning "his" rails made them doubt their own eyes.

"Why, yes," he drawled. "Wat Bowie was in these parts last week. I know him well. They say he has gone to the north part of the county, where he hails from. I don't know, though as to that."

Then rising and stretching himself he looked down into their doubt filled eyes and laughed at them—laughed in their very faces—and said:

"I'm glad you all met me on m' own land. You might have made trouble for me elsewhere, for they all say I look like him a lot. Goodby, boys! Good luck!"

AUSTIN'S EGOTISM.

It Cropped Out Strong In Comparing Himself With Tennyson.

Austin might almost be said to rival James McNeil Whistler as having given rise to humorous anecdotes—with this difference, that while the anecdotes of Whistler exploited his wit or his superb arrogance ("Why lug in Velasquez?") those of Austin were based on little more than the fatuous self esteem which enabled him (if ability is the word) in 1870, in his volume of so called criticism, "The Poetry of the Period," to attack Tennyson, Browning, Matthew Arnold and Swinburne as if the author of the book were the superior of the whole pack of them.

It was apparently not this book, but a later criticism written in 1885, which led Austin to boast of his friendship with Swinburne and to declare that, though he had been forced to criticise Swinburne, the latter had not permitted it to disturb their relations. It proved that Austin's criticism had attracted so little attention that Swinburne had not even heard of it, and when, following Austin's boast, he took pains to read it he became very angry and would have nothing to do with Austin.

It was the same fatuity which led Austin in his autobiography to advertise his own ultra respectability as compared with the possible "low tone" of others. Tennyson might be acquitted perhaps of once using an improper word in conversation, but Tennyson certainly smoked. Austin never.—Springfield Republican.

Weaving In Shadow.

In one of the famous lace shops of Brussels there are certain rooms devoted to the weaving of the finest and most delicate lace patterns. These rooms are entirely darkened except for the light from one small window falling directly upon the pattern. There is only one lacemaker in the room, and she sits where the narrow stream of light falls upon the thread she is weaving. Lace is always more delicately and beautifully woven, it is said, when the worker is in the dark and only her pattern is in the light.

Canning Tomatoes.

"Our sporting editor took the place of the 'Home Hints' editor yesterday."

"Anything happen?"

"A lady who wrote asking how to can tomatoes was told to get an old can and piece of string, then to catch her tomato and to proceed the same as if canning a dog."—Houston Post.

Baby Talk.

Was there ever a baby that said "choo-choo cars" without being taught to say it? One would be credulous indeed to believe it. Baby talk is ordinarily the mature product of persons ranging in ages from twenty to seventy. They only put it off on the babies.—Kansas City Star.

The Art of Talking Back.

"I hardly know how to answer you," said she when the soft voiced widower proposed.

"I would not let that worry me," said he soothingly. "That is something a woman learns perfectly soon after marriage."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

TESTIFIES AT NIGHT SESSION

Mulhall's Testimony Heard by Senate Lobby Investigators

WAS INFLUENTIAL IN POLITICS

Refused Bribe of $5000 and Life Position In Naval Service While Managing Campaign In Two Counties In New York—His Relations With Labor During Anthracite Strike

Washington, July 12.—After an all day effort to settle the question of whether the senate lobby investigators or the next house committee should stage the inquiry into the confession of M. M. Mulhall, diplomatic negotiations were broken off last night and the senate committee called Mulhall at a night session.

Mulhall took the stand and subscribed to the oath with a smile on his face. Senator Reed, designated by Chairman Overman to examine the witness, began by placing in evidence a list of the officers of the National Association of Manufacturers in 1907, and a list of the members of the association.

Mulhall said before he went with the National Association of Manufacturers he was "principally in politics," and was connected with the Republican national committee.

"I refused a bribe of $5000 and a life position in the naval service in 1892," said Mulhall. "That year I had charge of the Republican campaign in Albany and Rensselaer counties, N. Y. Previous to that I had charge of William McKinley's gubernatorial campaign in Ohio."

The witness said he first became interested in the National Association of Manufacturers in 1902, when he met Marshall Cushing, its secretary, in a Washington hotel.

Senator Reed asked him about his relations with labor. He said the late Senator Quay of Pennsylvania sent him to confer with John Mitchell during the anthracite strike in the Pennsylvania fields in 1902 "to get the inside story." During that time Mulhall said he arranged for a conference between Governor Stone of Pennsylvania and three labor leaders.

The first Mulhall letter introduced was addressed to Mitchell in February, 1902, relating to these meetings.

A letter of March 18, 1902, from Mulhall to Mitchell declared the leaders of the Republican organization could do more for the miners' union "than any arbitration board in existence."

A letter dated May 17, 1902, from Mulhall to Mitchell, told of a conference between Mulhall and Governor Stone at which Stone expressed sympathy with the miners. "I think you could make a grand stroke," the letter said, in suggesting the calling of a strike, "if you would meet Governor Stone and make him your friend; he will be of great assistance to you in the event of an anthracite strike."

A letter of August, 1901, from M. C. Downs, who Mulhall said was secretary to the late Senator McComas of Maryland, related to the employment of two men in the treasury department in Washington. Mulhall said the men for whom the employment was secured were officers of the Moulders' union in Baltimore.

Edwin Booth, one of the men who was to get a Washington job, wrote to Mulhall about the work being done to keep up the Workmen's Protective association. Mulhall said this organization was Republican in politics. "We don't propose to do anything for the Republican party this fall unless they do more for us," he wrote. Both said the organization could put 200 active political workers in the field."

A letter of July 12, 1903, to Mulhall, as head of the Workmen's Protective association, from an officer in an association of engineers in New York, was read. It said "Senator McComas has voted right in the interests of labor in every measure that has come before the United States senate in the last six years."

At this time, Mulhall said, Marshall Cushing was secretary of the National Association of Manufacturers. He had known Cushing in 1898 when the latter was an editorial writer in New York, and Cushing came to see him in Washington, stating that he wanted to engage his services in doing organization work for the National Association of Manufacturers.

Speaking of letters from Cushing, Senator Reed found one without a signature and wanted to know if the National Association of Manufacturers' secretary wrote unsigned letters.

"Always," said Mulhall.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

NEW ONIONS.

WITH new onions available onion lovers have many pleasing dishes to choose from.

Onions are a wholesome food, and it is a pity that it is the fashion to sneer at the vegetable. The confirmed onion eater has generally a good skin if a somewhat objectionable breath.

Stuffed With Meat.

Onions In Surprise.—Take some large onions which have been peeled and washed and put them into a saucepan containing plenty of cold salted water. When the water boils up draw the pan to the side of the stove and let them cook gently until they are parboiled. Drain the onions and carefully remove the centers. Place half a lamb's kidney in each, pressing it well into the onion, put on a baking pan which has been rubbed with some good beef dripping and surround them with small pieces of beef fat. Cover the onions with greased paper and let them cook slowly in a moderately heated over for four hours, basting them frequently. Serve with thick brown sauce, which should be very savory.

Stuffed Onions.—Take large onions of uniform size, boil until tender, drain, cool, remove the hearts and fill the space with a forcement made by chopping together a cupful of bits of ham, a little of the onion heart, salt and pepper to taste and enough cream or milk to which butter has been added to soften the mixture. When the heart spaces are filled put a bit of butter on the top of each, lay the onions in a deep baking dish, pour a little milk or stock about them and bake, covered, for twenty minutes. Uncover, sprinkle crumbs over the top, brown and serve very hot.

Covered With Sauce.

Smothered Onions.—Peel some onions and cut so as to produce rings and put drippings or a little butter into a frying pan. When hot add the cut onions, sprinkle with one teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper, put over a slow fire, cover the pan, but do not let the onions brown before they are cooked through. Turn the rings, being careful not to break them. They should be a light yellow when done. Place them on a layer of boiled rice and cover with cream sauce.

Cream Sauce.—Put one tablespoonful butter into saucepan, melt, add one tablespoonful flour, mix well and add one cupful cold milk and stir until smooth and creamy. Add one teaspoonful salt, a dash of white pepper and boil one minute.

Browned Onions.—Peel and slice three large white onions and soak in milk for ten minutes. Then drain and dry on a towel. Separate the slices into rings, put a dozen or more at a time in a frying basket and plunge into smoking hot fat. Take out as soon as delicately colored, drain for a moment on unglazed paper, turn into heated dish, dust lightly with salt and serve at once.

NEW SPORTS AT FIRE STATION

Billiards Now Popular With Quincy Firemen

Richard Williams, chauffeur of Chief Litchfield, has organized a class in English at the Central Fire station, and all men at the house are closely following his instructions when they start driving three well seasoned ivory balls around the new billiard table which was recently presented by Benjamin Johnson. Most of the men have never become interested in this branch of sports to really understand the principles of the game and they are all attention when the teacher raps for order.

"Say Dick," said Herb Griffin, during the lecture, "What does a billiard ball do when it stops rolling?"

"Oh. looks round, of course," answered Dick, with a sly wink at Captain Faircloth who howled with delight.

And along such lines is the class being conducted. All are eager to become Suttons and Hoppes, but no bets have been posted as yet regarding the run that will establish this station record.

More fun is promised because some one, whose name cannot be disclosed, has promised them a pool table, and a few nights ago, a man was heard saying that he was going to send in a piano. The men anticipate some enjoyment.

FOR CARRYING A REVOLVER

Braintree Man Fined $50 in the Quincy Court

Buseppi Stallit of Braintree was brought before the district court this morning charged with assaulting Rapheal Tate with a dangerous weapon. Tate testified that he met Guseppi near the Braintree pond and that he chased him with a revolver which he snapped several times.

Tate however testified that he was walking along the street toward his home when a man jumped out from behind the trees and struck him with a stick. He admitted having a revolver with him but denied that it was loaded.

After hearing the evidence the court ordered the complaint for assault with a dangerous weapon dismissed and two new complaints issued, one for simple assault and the second for carrying a revolver without a permit He was fined $5 on the complaint for assault and $50 for carrying a revolver. The fine of $50 was suspended for a few weeks to enable him to earn the money.

The police who searched Guseppi's boarding house found a number of cartridges but there was no evidence to show that the revolver was loaded at the time he pointed it at Tate.

BUILDING PERMITS ISSUED

Inspector of Buildings Warren S Parker reports the building permits issued in July up to date to have been as follows:

Guseppi Stallit was arraigned for assault with a dangerous weapon on Raphael Tate at Braintree. There was no evidence of assault with a dangerous weapon so the warrant was changed to simple assault and a second warrant issued for carrying a revolver. He was fined $5 for the assault and $50 for carrying a revolver.

The continued case of John F. Kenzig for assault on Lougi Santacross a Weymouth was called and he was found not guilty and discharged.

FEW MOTHS IN QUINCY.

Owing to the large expense the Gypsy Moth gang are not making a general burlapping of trees this year. Quantities of burlap are necessary to protect all trees, and as it has to be burned in the fall when taken off, the expense is considerable. Supt. Stewart says that the parasites imported to exterminate the gypsy and brown tail moth are doing good work in some parts of Quincy.

Fleet of Seventy Yachts in Annual Event Under Auspices of Wollaston Yacht Club

Plenty of Excitement and Many Thrills

Splendid racing weather greeted the fleet of seventy yachts and power boats that participated in the annual open and inter-club race under the auspices of the Wollaston Yacht club Saturday afternoon. The breeze was from the southwest and puffy which sent the yachts tearing over the course at race horse speed. There was plenty of excitement and many thrills for almost at the start the Millie and Imp locked bowsprits and rigging in a close run for the starting line, while later in the race the Pointer III, a sailing dory of James H. Farrell of South Boston, turned turtle off Long Island dumping her crew into the water. They were rescued however by a passing boat and brought back to port with their disabled craft.

The Violet sailed by H. J. McKee in Class C carried away her topmast. This held her back for a few minutes until the crew had cleared away the wreckage, after which she continued the race, finishing in second place.

The Maria L of Class A lost her mainsail early in the race, a broken gaff putting it out of commission. She limped home under a jib. In Class I the Cherot dropped half of her mast overboard when it snapped off short about twenty feet from the deck and she was towed home. The mainsail of the Winona got a rip clear across it when a short distance from Nut island, putting her out of the race and the Wawenock in Class S lost her job.

As the race drew on the wind seemed to freshen so that skippers had their hands full keeping things above water. Reefs were the rule and even with these tucked in nearly every yacht sailed with her lee rail awash, while they took aboard water enough to keep one man busy most of the time bailing out.

The course sailed was one of seven miles including a run from off the club house to the buoy off Nut island, a reach to the buoy, off Long island and a beat back to the starting point.

Only the corrected time is given in the summary.

TWO YACHTS CAPSIZED

Two Women in One Party---All Were Rescued

Five were rescued from probable drowning in Quincy bay Sunday afternoon when two boats capsized off Squantum.

A sailboat containing two women and a man overturned about a half mile from the shore. When a power boat containing Officer C. C. Nelson, C. E. Folsom and John Simpson reached the spot all were clinging to its bottom. Both women were in an exhausted condition. They gave their names as Mrs. Gertrude Ireland and Mrs. Hilda Carlson, both of Warrenton street, Boston. The man said he was Abraham Jacobsen, 43 Pratt street, Hingham, owner of the boat. The accident occured when one of the women lost her balance while reaching for her parasol which had gone overboard.

Two young men giving their names as Fowler and Chapin were in a sailing dory which capsized off Squantum during the afternoon. The accident was seen from the Squantum Yacht Club and William Hayes and William Croucher put out in a power boat and pulled both from the water. They were brought to the yacht club pier where they were given restoratives and dry clothing.

LATE TRAINS LATE.

Saturday and Sunday night, patrons of the last train to Boston were obliged to wait until far beyond the scheduled time because of unnecessary delays. Saturday night the train due at Quincy at 11.25 arrived at 12.50. The train was stalled at Quincy Adams because the coal did not produce steam. On Sunday night the last train was held at nearly the same spot on the same account. No announcement of the delay or any information was given at the station as to the time the train would pull in.

LAND LEAGUE OFFICERS.

Quincy Branch, No. 61 , Irish National Land League, at a meeting Sunday evening elected the following officers for the ensuing year:

President—Peter McConarty.
Vice president—Samuel T. Drew.
Secretary—Daniel Ahearn.
Treasurer—Enos Costa.
Sergeant-at-Arms— Frank Clinton.
Executive committee—John J. Bryan, Michael Burns, Michael Daly, Michael Coffey and Daniel Donahue.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE POPULAR

Larger Attendance on Opening Week Than Last Year

That the boys and girls of Quincy appreciate the playgrounds this season more than ever was demonstrated by the large increase in attendance over last year's figures for the opening week of activities.

Ward three as usual continues to lead all-comers by hanging up the remarkable total of 2,101; of this number 1,123 being boys and 978 being girls Last year this ward had a total of 1407. Ward Four also had a very good increase this year totalling 952 against 615 last year. Ward Two, which takes the place of Ward One this year has only been in operation one and one-half days but the children came out in large numbers as is shown by their total of 507.

The athletic sports begin tomorrow at Ward Three, when the 25 and 50 yard dashes will be run off and for the field event the standing broad jump will be the feature. On Wednesday afternoon these same events will be contested at Ward Two and on Thursday at Ward Four. The first event commences at 3.00 o'clock promptly.

Prizes will be given at the end of the season to the boys and girls who win the largest total of points in their classes and the classes will be divided as follows:

Class "A" boys and girls under 10 years of age.

Class "B," boys and girls 10, 11, and 12 years of age.

Class "C," boys and girls 13, 14 and 15 years of age.

Points will count 5 for first; 3 for second; 2 for third; and 1 for fourth in each event.

DISTRICT COURT.

There was the usual large amount of Monday business before the district court.

Fred Shaw was fined $5 for drunkenness at Milton. Timothy F. Duggan was fined $10, William A. Brown, James R. Driscoll, James A. Broghan, Edward F. Fitzgerald $5 each, George Curtis $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

William M. Connell and James F. Fogarty were fined $10 each for drunkenness at Weymouth. Peter Fallon was sentenced to three months in the house of correction for drunkenness at Braintree.

Oscar H. Olson was fined $10 for creating a disturbance on a street car at Weymouth.

Rokus Paledgus was fined $5 for disorderly conduct on the parkway at Milton.

Samuel Abraham and Abraham Hibel were fined $5 each for being present at a game of craps, and Israel Gordon, Moses Sternozel and Jacob Levine $10 each for playing craps on the Lord's day at Milton.

STRUCK BY BAR.

While crossing the street railway tracks opposite the Adams building Saturday afternoon, Louis Reidy of Cross street, was struck by an inbound East Milton car, rolled along the ground a few feet, but escaped uninjured. A few scratches to his left arm and considerable dirt on his clothing was all that showed after his narrow escape. Reidy claims that he did not see the car aproaching and that he would not have stepped directly into its path from behind another car if the bell had sounded its warning. He was able to go to his home unassisted.

TOO MUCH WIND FOR YACHTING

Run of the Interclub Association Was Postponed

A very high wind prevailed all day Sunday making it extremely hazardous for yachts and small sail boats to venture out, and for this reason the run of the Inter-club association that was scheduled to start from the Squantum and Wollaston club houses Sunday afternoon for City Point was called off and will be held at a later date to be announced.

Had it not been for the breeze that prevailed all day, the day would have been oppressively hot, but the air was tempered and the day was a beautiful one. The wind seemed to increase somewhat at night and during the night it blew almost a gale. Several times during the day the sky looked showery but it was not until 1 o'clock at night that the downpour came.

At that hour there was the roll of distant thunder and some sharp flashes of lightning but the thunder storm seemed to be some distance off. Then it rained quite hard for a time but Quincy this time was evidently on the edge of the storm zone, for as far as known no particular damage was done. The rain was much needed by vegetation and no one was sorry that the rain fell in the middle of the night.

NEW SERIAL IN THE LEDGER

"The Melting of Molly" Will Begin in Tuesday's Paper

"The Melting of Molly," a charming romance, will begin in tomorrow's Raily Ledger. The author is Maria Thompson Daviess.

This serial is described by leading critics as one that has a genuine human appeal. Molly, the heroine, tells of her own struggles with too much avoirdupois—and with her impressionable heart. For you must know, that in spite of her waist measure, which worries her considerably, she is the belle of the town.

Molly, although the relict of a staid, middle aged man who has not been dead very long, is a frisky young thing and has many entertaining adventures. Several men, young and middle aged, are in love with Molly, and they show it but Molly is not certain until the very end of the story whether she wants a judge with a "grand air" or her own harum scarum cousin, or her old flame who is now a diplomat of renown and is coming back to Hillsboro to claim her, or the other men who are only waiting for Molly to make up her mind.

Besides all these there are women and men with clear cut, splendidly drawn personalities, and a little boy, Billy whom Molly "mothers"— a dear little fellow as good, probably, as any child of his age in literature or life. Just how Billy's father comes to figure in the story will interest everyone.

Any man between sixteen and ninety who does not fall in love with Molly has something wrong with him.

Start tomorrow with the first chapter in the Daily Ledger.

REV. P. H. DRAKE IS ARRESTED

Persisted in Speaking After Being Warned He Was Violating City Ordinance

Arraigned in Quincy Court and Given Hearing

The Quincy Socialist club got just the advertisement they wanted Sunday night when Rev. Paul H. Drake was arrested in City Square by Capt. Daniel R. McKay for violation of the Street Ordinance. An attempt to obtain a permit from Commissioner Tupper to speak had been refused but the Socialists announced that the lecture would be held just the same, and that if arrested bail had been made ready to release their speaker. In fact they rather courted arrest as it would give them advertising they could get in no other way.

It was about 8 o'clock when the speaker appeared on the scene and mounted a chair which had been placed near the chains surrounding the First church on the fountain side, and a crowd of about 200 collected.

Chief Burrell, Capt. McKay and Inspector Goodhue were also present while on the outskirts of the crowd were several policemen in uniform.

The subject of the speaker was "The Brotherhood of Man" from a Biblical standpoint and he had not been speaking many minutes before the crowd had blocked the street.

Capt. McKay then called the speaker to come to the churchyard for a conference with Chief Burrell. Mr. Drake immediately left his chair platform saying to the crowd that he had been interrupted. Going to where the officers were, he was informed by Chief Burrell that he was violating Ordinance 16 which prohibited anyone speaking without a permit and with obstructing travel. That he could not permit the speaking to continue and that if he persisted in speaking he should have to place him under arrest.

Mr. Drake said that he had no desire to be arrested, but that this was a free country and that he had just as much right to speak as the automobiles had to block up the streets. Chief Burrell replied that he did not intend to argue the merits of the case with the speaker but that he could not continue to speak and that if he persisted in doing so he should place him under arrest.

"All right" said Mr. Drake and going to where his chair was he again mounted it and started his address at the point where he had been interrupted.

He had been speaking but a few minutes when Chief Burrell stepped forward and placed the Rev. Mr. Drake under arrest. The police did not submit hi m to the humiliation

THE GARDEN IN MIDSUMMER.

Back in the cool peace of April a back yard garden seemed both economic and poetic. With a family of sturdy corn, beans, and potatoes, one has some independence in dealing with the marketman. The man who raises vegetables successfully does not often pay dues to the I. W. W.

Handling the hoe on a fresh spring day is a pastime to the man tired of tinsel of theatres and clamor of the ball grounds. He dreams of Mother Nature's kind heart freely returning treasures of wholesome food for a little labor and seed.

This imaginative background has appealed to romantic hearts from Horace and Cicero down.

Amid the fierce heats of July you aren't quite so sure of Mother Nature's good will. The vegetables seem to find the soil about as sterile as Labrador, while weeds grow with tropical luxuriance and the persistence of original sin.

Only with the most patient cultivation can your plantlets acquire a foothold. Meanwhile the weeds grow again after being uprooted, if they are merely left on top of the ground.

The man who frets because his motor car fell down two or three miles an hour rarely likes gardening, nor can he wait for the fish to bite. Another type of personality, however, finds that the woods and fields and streams are full of interesting voices that beguile the time while the trout are reconnoitering his flies.

So in the garden. One man saves fret of spirit by paying his marketman to deal with the inanimate perversity of weeds. But another knows that centuries of garden practice have left behind a treasure of experience sufficient to deal with these problems. To beat out the selfish pigweed or the ruthless cutworm through wisdom and research is like snaring an old, wise, and gamy trout.

CO-OPERATIVE BANKS.

The Co-operative banks of Massachusetts are fast coming to the front, for the public as a whole are beginning to realize what a splendid method they have for saving money for members.

The assets of these institutions in Massachusetts alone are over $75,000,000.00, while the total assets of these associations in the United States (called building and loan associations outside of Massachusetts) are upwards of $1,031,000,000.00.

The assets of the two co-operative banks in this city,—the Wollaston and the Quincy have passed $1,500,000.00, and are growing faster than ever.

To increase the efficiency of these institutions there was formed twenty-four years ago, the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League, and of the 165 banks in this state 121 are members. This league has had a great deal to do with the recent recodifying of the statutes under which the various banks work, and it is at all times endeavoring to improve the system and increase the usefulness of the co-operative banks.

In most of the other states of the Union these leagues have been formed of the various local institutions, and they in their field and way are endeavoring to save money for the people, and they have met with splendid results.

Each year there meets in Boston the Massachusetts Co-operative Bank League, above referred to , and delegates are then chosen to represent Massachusetts at the National Convention of "The Local Building and Loan Associations." This meeting is held sometimes in the East, sometimes in the West, but wherever it is held, the same spirit of thrift and saving pervades the whole atmosphere.

At the convention of 1911, held in Grand Rapids, Mich., a committee was appointed to still broaden the scope of this savings idea, and correspond with kindred associations across the water and if practical, take the steps necessary to form an international congress. This committee went to work and at the meeting of 1912 at Atlantic City, N. J., reported that letters had been sent to and answers received from England, Scotland, Ireland Wales, Canada, Australia, Ontario Germany, Japan, Italy, Belgrade Switzerland and New Zealand. Representatives from these various countries will meet in London in the summer of 1914, for the first International Congress of this character, and at that time will be invited to meet at the Panama Exposition in San Francisco Cal., in 1915.

A committee of seven have had this work in hand, with L. L. Rankin of Columbus, O., as chairman the New England member being Herbert W Pinkham the treasurer of the Wollaston Co-operative Bank, who is also the secretary and treasurer of the Massachusetts State League and the Assistant secretary of the U. S. League.

This year the National Convention will meet in Milwaukee, Wis., August 7 and 8, and the old Bay State will send six delegates to represent its co-operative banks.

The motto of the U. S. League well typifies the object for which the league stands. "The American home the safeguard of American liberties."

EAST BRAINTREE FIRE.

Sunday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock box 125 at East Braintree was rung for a fire on Lisle street. The firemen responded quickly and found a small fire at the home of Lawson B Twitchell, station agent at the East Braintree depot. Mr. and Mrs. Twitchell were away but their son was at home and he discovered the fire in the basement. The fire did not make much headway but the smoke and water damage will amount to about $1000 Mr. Twitchell was spending considerable money in the house enlarging it, painting and other improvements, and he is being congratulated that the damage was so slight. There was a large gathering of spectators and the firemen took delight in giving them an occasional wetdown. The water pressure was very poor and had the fire had much headway Mr. Twitchell's house and several nearby would have burned flat. A strong breeze was blowing from the southwest.

THREE MILLION GALLONS.

The annual report of the Metropolitan Water board shows that the 1,070,256 residents of the Metropolitan Water District during 1912 consumed an average of about 3,000,000 gallons of water daily. The reservoirs have a total capacity of 80,908,900,000 gallons. The reports are now ready for distribution at the State House.

An Episode of the Balkans

By ALBERT KENYON

When the Balkan states had expelled the Turk and were anxious lest the powers should intervene and inflict their ancient enemies upon them the two powers most able to help or harm them were Germany and Russia.

At this time Prince Ferdinand of Bulgaria sent a young man in his service to the emperor of Germany to offer certain inducements for him to restrain Austria. This person was Boris Meloff, a very determined young man, who, so far as strength and bravery were concerned, was well adapted to get the message through to Berlin. Austrian spies were on the watch to checkmate any move Prince Ferdinand might make, and Meloff was liable to be attacked and his dispatch taken from him.

On the day of his departure he went to his home and told his wife that he was to go on a journey and the object of it, directing her to get out his pistols and a couple of short knives, which he intended to take with him for defensive purposes.

"Fighting is but half the defense you will have to make," said Kristina, his wife. "You will be in greater danger of losing the dispatch by stratagem. Where will you carry your dispatch?"

"Where would you suggest?" asked Boris.

"I will think it over and let you know later."

Boris gave her the dispatch that she might know its size, and before he left her she opened his valise, which she had packed for him, and showed him the dispatch, addressed to his imperial majesty the kaiser, on top of his other clothes, where every one could see it. Boris was astonished at this and was about to take the package to put elsewhere when his wife stopped him.

"Boris," she said, "leave it where it is. No one will look for it in your valise, It will be sought for on your person. Keep your weapons on your person and the dispatch in your valise."

The young husband concluded to humor his wife. He kissed her and the children goodby and sallied forth.

There is a railway running northwestward from Sofia, and Boris went by train, his route lying through Servia and Austria. There were traitors and spies everywhere, and he had not been long on the train before he knew that there were Austrians aboard who had been informed of his errand. He dare not go apart from the others lest he be attacked. So he kept his seat in the train. He had a letter in his pocket from his wife, which he was tempted to read to while away the time, but he dare not. Besides, she had distinctly charged him not to do so unless he should lose the dispatch. In that case he would find in it a suggestion.

On reaching Belgrade a man stepped up to him and whispered to him that his wife, Kristina, had sent him to say that after Boris had left her she had learned that an attempt would be made to relieve him of the dispatch in changing trains at that point. The man handed Boris a note from his wife, written in her well known hand, advising him to give the messenger the dispatch to take from the train, to be returned on the train leaving Belgrade for Budapest. Boris hesitated; but, having every confidence in his wife, he concluded to do so. Going with the man to a room in the station where they would not be observed, he opened his valise and gave the man the package.

That was the last Boris saw of the man or the package. After leaving Belgrade he looked for him through the train and, not finding him, was in agony at having been duped. His great wonder was how the fellow could have duped his wife. Remembering the letter he was to read from her containing a suggestion in case he lost the dispatch, he opened and read it.

Kristina said in the letter that she had no hope of his getting the dispatch through unless by stratagem. She had commissioned a friend to reveal to an Austrian that Boris was going to Berlin with an important dispatch, and the friend offered to get a letter from Boris' wife that would secure it for a money consideration. Kristina's object was to throw others who were after the plunder off the track. The Austrian paid the price for the note and boarded the same train as Boris.

"But," continued Kristina's letter, "if you give him the package in your valise you will not give him the dispatch. I opened the envelope, took out the prince's letter to the czar and replaced it with waste paper. The dispatch you will find sewed in the lining of your coat. If my stratagem is successful you will proceed from Belgrade unmolested, for he who thinks he has the dispatch will doubtless send it unopened to Vienna."

Never was man more delighted at receiving a letter from his wife than Boris Meloff. But he dare not give vent to his feelings lest he be watched by some of those who had followed him from Sofia. On second thoughts, however, he remembered that he was no longer shadowed, since his enemies believed that they had captured the dispatch. At any rate, he saw no further evidences of intended interference and on reaching Berlin took the dispatch from the place where Kristina had concealed it and delivered it to the foreign office.

Whether or no it had effect on the kaiser in inducing him to curb Austria is a state secret.

FELL FROM CAR.

C. J. Wade, Jr., of East Milton fell from the running board of a moving East Milton car Sunday morning, in City Square but escaped uninjured. The fall took place in view of a large number of people. Wade, who is about six years old, was on the running board when the car started and lost his hold. When he realized he was falling he commenced to yell and his shrieks continued until after the car was stopped and he was assured that he was unhurt.

—Application has been received by the government for a summer home colony on the Shohone national forest, Wyoming. The plan is to have a central assembly hall for community gatherings, and separate cottages for the several families of the communal recreation center.

CAN YOU DOUBT IT?

When the Proof Can Be So Easily Investigated.

When so many grateful citizens of Quincy testify to benefit derived from Doan's Kidney Pills, can you doubt the evidence? The proof is not far away—it is almost at your door. Read what a resident of Quincy says about Doan's Kidney Pills. Can you demand more convincing testimony?

William Farquharson, Jr., 25 Bennington St., Quincy, Mass., says: "I had severe pains in my back and my kidneys were weak. I didn't know what to take until someone recommended Doan's Kidney Pills. I used only part of a box and they completely relieved the pains."

The above statement must carry conviction to the mind of every reader. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Farquharson had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

PEACE ONLY ON BATTLEFIELD

Reply of Greece to Proposal That Hostilities Cease

HER KING SEEKS VENGEANCE

Bulgarians Accused of Having Committed Terrible Crimes—Constantine Protests to Civiliged World Against Alleged "Acts of Monsters In Human Form"

London July 14.—Inflamed by reports of the horrors of Bulgarian atrocities, the Greek government is reported to have replied to the Russian proposal for the cessation of hostilities that peace is to be concluded only on the battlefield. The Russian note was supported by Great Britain.

The Vienna corerspondent of the Central News reports that a Sofia mob stormed the offices of the government officials, and that many were killed when the troops fired on the rioters. The secretary of the Bulgarian legation here said he had received no message from Sofia indicating a revolutionary outbreak or any attempt upon the life of King Ferdinand.

It is evident that Turkey is to attempt to take back some of the territory wrested from her by Bulgaria. General Izzat Pasha, the Ottoman commander in chief, has left Constantinople for the front.

The Turkish troops at Tchatalja and Bulair are under orders to reoccupy Turkish territory held by Bulgarians. An advance toward the Ergeni line has been ordered. It is also reported that an agreement between Servia and Turkey has been arranged.

Vehian Bey, one of the defenders of Janina, a brother of Essad Pasha, has obtained the permission of King Constantine to join the Greek army and fight against the Bulgarians. So wrought up are the Greeks by the atrocities they declare have been perpetrated by the Bulgarians that it is feared heavy reprisals will be made. King Constantine has sent the following message from the front to the Greek minister of foreign affairs:

"The commander of the Sixth division reports that Bulgarian soldiers, carrying out the orders of their captain, gathered together in the courtyard of the school at Demirhissar, two priests and more than 100 notables, whom they massacred. The bodies have been disinterred to prove the crime. Bulgarian soldiers attacked girls, one of whom, resisting, was cut to pieces.

"Protest in my name to the representatives of the civilized powers against the acts of these monsters in human form. Protest also to the entire civilized world and say that, to my regret, I see myself compelled to wreak vengeance to inspire these monsters with terror and make them reflect before committing more outrages of this sort.

"The Bulgarians have surpassed all the horrors of barbaric times and have proved that they no longer have the right to be reckoned among civilized peoples."

Two hundred Greek residents are declared to have been massacred by the Bulgarians before the Greeks occupied Serres. The commander of the Seventh Greek division reports that the town was burned, with the exception of the Jewish and Mohammedan quarters. Many men, women and children, he says, were found murdered or burned beyond recognition.

BANK MISMANAGED

Department of Justice Will Consider Case of First-Second National

Washington, July 14.—"The report of special examiners as to indications of criminal violations of law found in the closed First-Second National bank of Pittsburg is now in the course of preparation by examiners and will be referred to the department of justice as soon as completed," said Acting Comptroller of the Currency Kane.

Kane added that there was no doubt the bank had been "grossly mismanaged," but that no conclusion had been reached as to who might be prosecuted.

Former Comptroller of Currency Murray, who approved the merger of the First and Second National banks, issued a statement denying that any national bank examiner had ever reported that the First National's capital, before the merger, was impaired.

TO KILL GRASSHOPPERS

Kansas Farmers Will Strew Their Fields With Poisoned Bran

Dodge City, Kan., July 14.—Farmers of western Kansas began a campaign to exterminate the grasshoppers which for several days have threatened to destroy the growing crops of that section.

A carload of bran mixed with 2500 pounds of poison was distributed among the farmers, who will scatter it over every green field in which the pests are found.

Roosevelts Off For Grand Canyon

Albuquerque, N. M., July 14.—Theodore Roosevelt and his two sons, Archibald and Quentin, left here for the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, where they will spend a week.

NAPOLEON'S PORTRAITS.

Some That Louis XVIII. Did Not Succeed In Banishing.

At the time of the Emperor Napoleon's exile to the island of Elba among other means to which the Bourbon king resorted in order to stay up his tottering throne was the passage of a stringent law that no picture, statue, statuette, figure or resemblance of "General Bonaparte," as he was called, should be allowed to remain in any place, public or private.

Mr. W., an American, then residing in Paris, owning a particularly fine and correct bronze statuette of the emperor, buried it, with other things of the kind, in his cellar. His turn for inspection by the police came. In walked the chief officer, who said, "Have you any statue, image or likeness of any kind of that upstart, that Bonaparte?"

"Certainly I have," answered the American, and, turning to his valet, he said, "Francois, bring me a bag of Napoleons." Then, pouring them out on a table before him, he said, "Here they are."

The police official said: "That gold is not what I want. You can keep it."

"Go and tell your master," said Mr. W., "that the whole specie currency of the realm must be called in before he can keep from the eyes of the people the features of the Emperor Napoleon Bonaparte."

"You are right," said the official, leaving.—Boston Herald.

COLORING DRAWINGS.

A Tip to Draftsmen That May Save Time and Trouble.

Every draftsman has had occasion at one time or another to color a drawing or a white print. The use of colored inks is unsatisfactory; crosshatching in colors obscures the details and is slow, while water colors have the disadvantage of slowness, besides being difficult to apply evenly.

A quick and satisfactory method of coloring involves the use of ordinary wax crayons and gasoline. Crayon of the color desired is applied and then rubbed with a piece of cloth wet with gasoline until the color is even and extended to the limits desired. If it overruns the lines it can be erased with a pencil eraser. Some colors, particularly the yellows, purples, greens and light blues, produce much better results than others.

It is probable that the gasoline dissolves the wax from the crayon, leaving the pigment as an impalpable powder, which when rubbed over the paper colors it uniformly. The method is applicable with equal success to eggshell and smooth drawing papers and to white prints on both paper and cloth.—Engineering and Mining Journal.

Delicately Handled.

Speaking of fitting marriages, an east side clergyman said:

"I favor healthy marriages only, to be sure. Health certificates would be an excellent thing. I have noticed that the Italians among us have a tactful way of managing that.

"The Italian father and mother ask the young man who seeks their daughter if he is insured. If he is not they urge him to take out insurance before the wedding, and sometimes they insist upon it. They put the argument for it on the usual grounds, the risk of his dying suddenly and leaving his family penniless. But what they are often most concerned about is assurance as to the suitor's good health. They feel satisfied that if he can get insurance there is nothing serious the matter with him.

"Now, that seems to me a happy way of dealing with a delicate problem to the satisfaction of all hands and the embarrassment of none."—New York Sun.

Saved the Baby.

The Chicago Historical society has a letter in which is described how Stephen A. Douglas was rescued from a fiery death on the day of his birth The letter was written by Horatio L. Wait, master in chancery of the circuit court. John Conant, one of Wait's family ancestors, who lived next door to the Douglas home in Brandon, Vt., saved Douglas' life.

"The morning Douglas was born," the letter says, "John Conant went to the Douglas house, and as he entered the room Douglas' father was sitting in an armchair before an open fireplace with the infant in his arms. Just as Conant entered the father died suddenly from apoplexy. The infant rolled down into the fireplace, and Conant snatched him from the fire."

Sandy's Criticism.

A young Scotchman went to a London school of music, where he learned to play the violoncello fairly well. On his return to his native village he gathered his friends together to hear his new instrument. When he had played one or two tunes he looked up expectantly. After a slight pause his old grandfather spoke.

"Eh, maun," he said, "it's a maircy there's na smell wi' it!"—Liverpool Mercury.

In Trouble.

"Did you go to the doctor's to be examined this morning?"

"Yes. And I was terribly disappointed."

"What was the trouble, dear?"

"I found him in."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

CARNIVAL AT BRAINTREE

To Be Held by St. Francis Church Next Saturday

Stop and reflect how easy last year we broke away from the old form of out-door church festivals. They were beginning to assume a monotonous air and the wisdom of the parish in meeting the situation as they did last year with a complete innovation was well attested by our enormous success. The spirit of the innovation was quickly absorbed by the parishioners last year and is more strongly manifested toward our coming Carnival Day, which can only mean that our last success will be repeated on a much larger scale.

Our extraordinary efforts so prominent last year to prepare a pleasing program of amusement and our generous expenditure of money in providing the best of everything in each department for the entertainment of our host of friends, as well as means for caring for their comfort and convenience, met with spontaneous approbation and support. The same policy, which was the basis of our past success, will be duplicated this season and we look for the united and determined support of our parishioners and townfolks in making the coming Carnival Day the biggest day in Braintree's history and a further endorsementment our policy and methods by an appreciative multitude of friends.

We expect an enormous crowd of people to attend our Carnival and our success in caring for them depends very largely upon you. Don't place the burden on the shoulders of a few. Let everybody give a lift and lessen the task for all.

It is especially desired that the board of managers and chairmen of Committees, together with all persons selected to assist them on. Carnival Day work, be present at the parishioners meeting Monday evening July 14, at eight o'clock.

We are pleased in this week's issue of the Bulletin to present photographs of "Smiler" the famous dog; "Whistling Jim" the musical wonder, and "Quacky Quack," all of whom will be present to greet you Carnival Day.

These novelties, together with others equally as surprising and attractive will prove to be enlivening features.

FIRST CHAPTER TOMORROW OF OUR NEW SERIAL "THE MELTING OF MOLLY" A CHARMING ROMANCE.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Gat the Guns in Race of Quincy Yacht Club

A stiff southwest breeze furnished plenty of excitement for the yachts of classes C and F of the Quincy Yacht club off the clubhouse at Houghs Neck Saturday afternoon. The course was one of four miles and in Class C of the Gleamer of Dr. H. A. Jones added another race to her long list of wins this season, for in all of the racing up to the present time she has finished in first position in all but one race.

The only accident to mar the afternoon was when the Cinderella of Class F broke her steering geer on the homeward leg and was obliged to withdraw from the race.

The order by elapsed and corrected time was the same, only the corrected time being given:

GEAR WORKS VICTORIOUS

Fore River Apprentices Did Not Score Until Seventh

Boston Gear Works won from the Fore River Apprentices at Merrymount Park Saturday afternoon, 4 to 2. The game was listless, neither side showing real base ball ambition. At times the players awakened to their fielding opportunities and shot the ball around the base in good style, but soon after they settled back to their hum drum existence.

The Apprentices were in a fair way of winning in the last part of the game and could have scored more than the two runs in the total. Frank Hoyt who covered first for the winners smashed the ball over into the right field hollow for a homer. He also poled one to the fence and ran so slow that he was caught before he reached second. Walter Williamson also made a corking drive to centre for three bases, scoring a run.

VICTORY FOR THE ORIENTS

Defeat Somerville A. C. by Score Four to Three

The Orients defeated the Somerville Athletic Club at Ward Three Saturday afternoon, 4 to 3. They came from behind in the last inning through a combination of circumstances and took the game.

Brown, in the last half of the ninth with the score against the local team, made a hit to right and stole second. A long fly of Mattson bat to centre was misjudged, putting Brown on third and himself on second. Ciardi flied out to centre.

With one out, F. Markham, batting for McVey, drove a grounder at the short stop, who fumbled in his haste to kill off Brown at the plate. The ball rolled to deep short and Mattson trotted home with the winning run.

"Bull Moose" Brown of the Quincy High school was the star of the game. Bob Mitchell did some splendid work in the field, and Bradley, the only pitcher in the city that has a batting eye, came across with the goods. Brown made three spectacular catches in centre. In the eighth with a man on first he pulled down a long drive and by a great throw doubled at first. In the ninth he reached a short fly in back of second after a long run. On a relay by him to Bradley in the same inning, a run was choked at home when a man tried to score from second on a hit.

Cremins also made a pretty throw to home and stopped a man crossing is safety. Ciardi after a long run made a sensational catch of what looked like a sure hit to deep short. The fly was poled off in the direction of left field, and Ciardi turning with the hit started after it and nailed it with his gloved hand with his back turned to the plate.

Jenson, the Somerville centrefielder, played a fine game, accepting six fly balls, one coming in from in back of second which robbed Brown of a hit.

JOHNSON NECKLACE SOLD AT AUCTION

Smuggled Gems Seized by Government Bring $2160

Chicago, July 14.—The diamond necklace which belonged to Jack Johnson's former white wife, Etta Duyrea, was sold to a jeweler for $2160 at public auction in the office of the United States marshal.

As appraised by government officials the necklace is valued at $3040. Johnson's wife wore the necklace at a party soon after their return to the United States. Its brilliancy excited comment and customs officials in Chicago investigated. Jonhson was unable to show proper entry on the jewels and the necklace was seized.

The duty on the circlet would have been about $1000.

BLAMES TARIFF MAKERS

Foss to Remove Part of His Sturtevant Plant to Canada

Boston, July 14.—In a scathing denunciation of tariff framers, Democratic as well as Republicans, Governor Foss, in a statement issued last night announces that he has purchased a manufacturing plant at Gault, Ont., and will move a large part of the Sturtevant Blower works to that part of the world.

The failure of the Democratic party to recognize the needs of expanding business and a Canadian market by incorporating reciprocity principles into the Underwood bill is given as the specific reason for joining the procession of American manufacturers across the line.

ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Officer Awaits Opportunity to Arrest Patient In Hospital

Waltham, Mass., July 14.—Recovering against his will, and making no complaints against his fate, Samuel Kalendian, a workman of the Hood Rubber company who killed a fellow workman, Andrew Saul, and shot two others Saturday, is in the Waltham hospital, guarded by a Watertown officer, whose duty it will be to carry him, when able, from the hospital ward to a cell.

The officer stationed there carries a warrant for murder, and it is this paper which will be the cause of Kalendian's arrest at the first possible moment.

"WILD MAN" IS DEAD

Stomach of "Ki Ko" Overtaxed by Extraordinary Gastronomic Stunts

Providence, July 14.—As the result of his unusual gastronomic feats, Joseph Masse, known in the Pawtuxet valley as "Ki Ko, the Wild Man," died at the Rhode Island hospital. Death was due to hemorrhages of the stomach.

Masse was a familiar character at seashore resorts, where he gave exhibitions of eating large quantities of fish and raw meat.

One of his customs was to carry small snakes concealed in his long hair and occasionally shake them out, to the consternation of spectators.

TENNIS ON LORD'S DAY

We Must Show No Favoritism Says Quincy Pastor

Tennis playing on the Lord's day came in for sharp words of disapproval from the Rev. B. A. Willmott in the course of his sermon Sunday morning at Bethany church, and he intimated that he would return to the subject later if occasion required it. He said: "This pulpit does not arrogate to itself the right to dictate to the people of Quincy, but it does claim the right to declare certain principles underlying good citizenship. If our well-to-do people can play tennis in disregard of law on the Lord's day, then we have no right to deny the young men who work in the Fore River Shipyard or the quarries the right to play a game of baseball. We must show no favoritism—nothing but even-handed justice—in the enforcement of our laws if our Republic is to endure.

"We must not have one law for the rich and another for the poor."

YACHT SINKS WITH EIGHT MEN

Overturns During Severe Squall In Boston Harbor

BUT ONE BODY IS RECOVERED

Superintendent of Sailors' Haven, Host of Fishing Party, and Second Officer of White Star Liner Among the Victims—Other Craft Damaged by Squall, but No Fatalities Result

Boston, July 14.—In a squall of wind that blew thirty-five to forty miles an hour in Black Rock channel late yesterday afternoon, a thirty-five-foot sloop yacht careened and went down, carrying with it eight men.

Six others that were aboard climbed into the rigging and were saved after more than an hour in the waters of the channel. They were brought to Boston and taken to the Relief hospital.

All of the dead, save one, the second officer of the White Star liner Cymric, resided in Charlestown, as did all who were rescued. Save for Second Officer Grafton Morgan and Albert G. Ayres, who is superintendent of the Sailors' Haven at 110 Water street, Charlestown, the dead and rescued are all employed by the Boston and Maine railroad as freight clerks or handlers.

It was an unfortunate ending to an otherwise happy day. Early yesterday the party of fourteen put off from the Boston and Maine docks in the sloop Alberta, bent on a day's fishing far from the torrid city.

Last night, just before 8 o'clock, the health officer's boat Vigilant tied up at the city wharf, Eastern avenue, with six of the party aboard shivering from their trying exposure and the body of John Holland, over which Dr. Crawford, the port health physician, had labored during the run from Deer island in an effort at resuscitation.

Some of the men were married and leave families. Others, a majority, are single and have no immediate families dependent upon them. In England a wife and three children wait for the return of a father who many times safely crossed the Atlantic.

Morgan had been on the Cymric for many years. Heavy seas and mountainous icebergs had proven without terror to him. Even when, several years ago, the great steamer was brought to a stop and small boats were ordered over the side by Captain Stivey to go to the succor of another ship that was fast settling, Morgan had no terror.

The only body recovered, that of John Holland, came to Boston as a result of the efforts of Tony Vierra, a fisherman, to lend assistance. After all those who came home alive had been placed in a boat and hurried to Deer island, Vierar sailed around in his power dory looking for others.

He found Holland's body, and on the Vigilant when it docked was Patrick Holland, well but seriously fact that on the same boat there lay the body of his brother John.

The squall that sent the Alberta and her eight men down was general and did havoc to many craft throughout the harbor. It blew a gale and for a time there was grave danger that many fatalities would be reported.

The party were the guests of Ayres. All were men about the docks that had long been intimate with Ayres. With the exception of Morgan all were neighbors in the Charlestown district. The dead are:

Martin Disken, John Rooney, Joseph Cole, Jeremiah Crowley, Michael O'Neil, John Holland, Second Officer Morgan of the Cymric, who was the guest of honor, and Albert G. Ayres, the owner of the craft.

AMERICANS IN DISTRESS

Mexican Revolution Cause Many to Face Financial Ruin

Washington, July 14.—Destitute Americans are arriving in the United States on every boat from Mexican ports. Many of them face financial ruin, in consequence of the series of revolutions which have paralyzed commercial and industrial enterprizes.

American consuls are empowered to draw upon the state department for funds to bring Americans out of the various danger zones and in some instances Ambassador Wilson has sent money to be expended by consuls and consular agents to relieve actual hunger.

MULHALL ON DECK

Interest In His Testimony Overshadows Legislation at Washington

Washington, July 14.—Martin M. Mulhall, confessed lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers, will be before the senate lobby investigating committee today and resume his revelations of alleged dealings and double-dealings with men of affairs in and out of congress.

Though legislative affairs are destined to take on new vigor during this week, interest in them just now is overshadowed by the Mulhall charges, hitting public men right and left as the probe committee digs deeper into the huge pile of correspondence carried on between this man, officials of the National Association of Manufacturers, labor leaders, congressmen and others.

BECKER'S PLEA FOR NEW TRIAL DENIED

Murderer of Gambler Rosenthal Had a Fair Trial

New York, July 14.—Charles Becker's application for a new trial on the charge of murdering Herman Rosenthal was denied by Supreme Court Justice Goff. Counsel had sought to reopen the case on the ground of newly discovered evidence.

Goff, who was the trial judge in the Becker case and in the case of the four gunmen also convicted, held that the ex-captain and lieutenant had had a fair trial before him, and in a seventeen page opinion he denied the plea.

If relief comes to Becker now, it must be through the higher courts. He is in the death house at Sing Sing.

SIX CHILDREN BITTEN

Supposed Mad Dog Beaten to Death After a Long Run

Wilmington, Mass., July 14.—A mongrel hound, thought to be mad, in a wild ran of two miles about the town, bit six children and drove a score of people, whom he chased, to seek safety in houses and doorways along the streets.

A number of men armed with revolvers chased the dog and fired several shots at the animal but none told. The animal was finally killed by Edward Haskell, who, armed with an iron bar, fought the dog many many minutes before he struck the death blow on the beast's head.

The animal's head has been sent to the state board of health in order to ascertain if the hound had the rabies and arrangements have been made at the Tewksbury hospital to give the children the Pasteur treatment.

Judge Warns Woman of Sixty-Two About Choosing Her Seventh

Los Angeles, Cal., July 14.—Mrs. Sarah J. Tuttle, 62 years old, obtained a decree from her sixth husband, Joseph Tuttle, on the grounds of desertion.

After telling of the indignities she said Tuttle had heaped upon her she was asked by Judge Willis:

"Ever married before?"

"Well—yes—I—er—have buried three and divorced two," she said.

"Well," said the judge, "I'll give you your decree, but remember that number seven is next and seven is an unlucky number. So be careful."

APPROVED BY MANY NATIONS

Bryan's Scheme to Prevent War Preparations Made Public

SUPPLEMENTS HIS PEACE PLAN

Proposes Satus Quo of Fighting Forces of Two Countries While Controversy Is Being Discussed by International Commission—Submitted to All Nations but Mexico

Washington, July 14.—A novel scheme for preventing naval and military preparations for war has been suggested by Secretary of State Bryan in a circular notice to every diplomatic representative in this city except the Mexican charge d'affairs.

In Bryan's opinion his peace plan has now gone forward far enough to justify assuring the world that it is destined to be a success.

Bryan's proposal is an amendment to his peace proposal submitted to the powers several months ago, providing for the appointment of an international commission to study questions of controversy, pending the report of which both contracting governments agree not to declare war or begin hostilities. This scheme has been accepted in principle by twenty governments.

Bryan's new proposal, however, goes a step further and is designed to maintain the status quo of military and naval forces of the two countries, while the question of controversy is being discussed by the international commission.

Here is the proposal in his new note:

"This government is prepared to consider the question of maintaining the status quo as to military and naval preparation during the period of investigation, if the contracting nation desires to include this, and this government suggests tentatively that the parties agree that there shall be no change in the military and naval program during the period of investigation unless danger to one of the contracting parties from a third power compels a change in said program, in which case the party feeling itself menaced by a third power shall confidentially communicate the matter in writing to the other contracting party, and it shall thereupon be released from the the obligation not to change its military or naval program, and this release will at the same time operate as a release of the other contracting party. This protects each party from the other in ordinary cases, and yet provides freedom of action in emergencies."

This proposal has been submitted to the foreign powers as a basis of discussion, as the original suggestions were made, and not with the intention of imposing it as a fixed condition. Bryan is willing, if the principle is accepted, to allow the details to be settled by further diplomatic discussion

The twenty countries which have already accepted the proposal for a commission of investigation, are:

Italy, Great Britain, France, Brazil, Sweden, Norway, Peru, Russia, Austria-Hungary, Netherlands, Germany, Bolivia, Argentine, China, Santo Domingo, Denmark, Hayti, Spain, Portugal and Belgium.

These countries have not yet responded to the original note: Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, Cuba, Ecuador, Greece, Guatemala, Honduras, Japan, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Persia, Salvador, Siam, Switzerland, Turkey, Uruguay and Venezuela.

The peace proposals have not been submitted to the Mexican government because the United States has not recognized the Huerta regime and will conduct no diplomatic relations with it.

HER IDENTITY UNKNOWN

Young Woman Plunges From Ninth Story of Hotel to Death

Boston, July 14.—Mystery surrounds the identity of a woman, 25 years of age, who plunged to her death from the ninth floor of the Hotel Bellevue, early Sunday morning. Not for some hours later, when an employ discovered the frightfully crushed body in the areaway at the rear of the hotel, did the tragedy become known.

"Suicide," is the opinion of Medical Examiner Magrath, and he is now endeavoring to establish an identification of the victim.

"Mrs. Straber, New York," was the inscription which the woman placed on the hotel register when she arrived on July 2. No more is known of her identity.

BACK INTO HARNESS

President Greatly Strengthened by His Trip to New Hampshire

Washington, July 14.—After a ten days' absence from the national capital, the first of any length since he was inaugurated, President Wilson arrived here early this morning.

While an accumulation of detail awaits him at the White House, the president's attention will be immediately directed to the conference which he has scheduled today with the representatives of the railroads, the trainmen and the conductors over the threatened strike on the eastern lines. Although he has not said a word for publication on any subject during his vacation, Wilson has followed the newspapers closely, and has been kept advised of Washington affairs in daily telegrams from Secretary Tumulty.

The president returns to his work physically strengthened by his trip and in far better condition to battle with Washington's hot weather than he was before.

WAGING WAR ON LIQUOR

"Saloonless United States by 1920" Is Slogan of Endeavorers

Los Angeles, Cal., July 14.—At the international Christian Endeavor convention Rev. Daniel A. Poling of Columbus, O., national superintendent of the temperance and the Christian citizenship divisions of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, outlined a program for the next two years. It is expected that his plan will be adopted as the official policy of the organization.

The feature of Poling's plan was the work to be done in the campaign which has for its object "a saloonless United States by 1920." Ultimately, he said, he hoped there would be a federal constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of liquor.

TRAINMEN'S STRIKE UP TO RAILROADS

Latter Must Withdraw From Their Refusal to Arbitrate

New York, July 14.—Whether or not a strike of 80,000 conductors and trainmen on eastern railroads shall be declared within the next few days depends upon whether the railroads withdraw from their refusal to arbitrate the wage and other differences between the companies and the men.

This declaration was made last night in statements by the men's representatives after the grievance committee from the various roads, in conference here, had ratified the strike vote of the men recently taken, and authorized President Garretson of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, and President Lee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, to issue the formal strike order to their respective organizations.

FATHER ALONE IS FREE

Six Members of One Family Locked Up on Charge of Robbery

New Bedford, Mass., July 14.—Six members of the Lemire family of this city—mother, daughter and four sons—have been arrested by the city police for their connection with burglaries in nearly a score of department, dry goods and novelty stores in the North End during the past three months.

In the Lemaire family everybody is the workhouse but father, awaiting trial, for the police have as yet failed to implicate him in the series of breaks.

The arrests of the six were brought about by their overindulgence in stolen articles. At one of the most recent breaks many cans of lobster were taken. A police inspector found several empty lobster cans in the swill pail in the rear of the Lemaire home, and the roundup of the family resulted.

WHISKEY MARKED "SHOES"

Shipment Intended For Bangor Seized Before Leaving Boston

Boston, July 14.—Boston liquor dealers who have customers in the prohibition state of Maine pulled a new one on federal officials when they tried to send a shipment of whiskey to Bangor marked as "shoes." The ruse did not work, however, as the wet goods were seized by Deputy United States Marshal Ruhl.

There were several small kegs in the shipment. The kegs were packed neatly in two big packing cases, similar to those used in shipping shoes, and the shipment looked like a consignment of footwear.

From Peddler to Millionaire

New Haven, July 14.—Nicholas W. Hubinger, who came here from Madison, Wis., almost penniless when a young man and began making and peddling starch in a small way, left an estate worth not less than $1,200,000, according to an estimate filed when his will was offered for probate.

TOOTHSOME SCONES.

THE eyes of every Scotchman or Scotchwoman will brighten when you mention scones. Scones are one of the foods which he or she has been brought up on. Scones really are worthy of all praise, and the English serve them with their afternoon tea, but to know scones at their best have a Scotch woman make them.

Mixed With Sour Cream.

There are various ways of mixing and baking scones, as follows:

Sour Cream Scones.—Take two eggs, beat them to a froth and then beat in half a pint of sour cream. Then take a pound of flour, mix with it a very little salt and a dessertspoonful of baking powder. Sift well and rub in two ounces of butter, make a hole in the center and stir in the eggs and cream gradually.

Turn the mixture on a well floured board and knead until light and smooth. With a rolling pin roll to a paste half an inch thick, divide with a pastry cutter and place the scones on a greased baking pan in the oven. Bake, then split open, butter and serve.

Tempting Tea Cakes.

Scotch Scones.—Mix while dry one quart of sifted flour with two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Then rub into it a tablespoonful of cold butter and a teaspoonful of salt. The butter should be well worked in. Add sweet milk to make a paste. Roll the paste about a quarter of an inch thick, using plenty of flour on the board and rolling thin. Cut into triangular pieces with each side about four inches long. Flour the sides and bottom of the baking pan and place the pieces on it. Bake immediately in a quick oven. When done brush over with sweet milk.

Made With Raisins.

English Tea Scones.—Take one cupful of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one-half teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of salt, four tablespoonfuls of butter, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one-half cupful of raisins, one-eighth cupful of milk and one egg slightly beaten. Mix and sift ingredients and chop in butter, add raisins, egg and milk. Divide in two pieces. Pat each in the shape of a ball and flatten to the size of a plate. Cut into eighths. Lay on a buttered baking sheet and moisten tops. Bake quickly ten or fifteen minutes. These are also delicious toasted.

SOMERVILLE COLONY.

Post Island, Quincy, is getting to be a veritable Somerville colony, says the News. Alerady seven Somerville families are summering at this pleasant and quiet seashore resort and six of those families own the cottages which they occupy. The following is the list of those forming the colony: Alderman Joseph H. Perry of 7 Kenwood street, J. Arthur Garrod of 275 Willow avenue, Howard B. Blewett of Summit street, Edmund M. Whitman of 739 Broadway, W. A. Horton of 47 Mason street, Louis Vaupel of 107 College avenue and William E. Wallace of 22 Winslow avenue.

HUTS AND HATS.

Man's Headgear Was First Fashioned After His Habitation.

It has been pointed out that the form of the hat bears a certain relation to buildings of a primitive nature—huts. A distinguished architect has invited attention to the curious resemblance that has existed and that is still to be found in many countries between headgear and habitations or other buildings. It may be that the same taste, or the lack of it, has given rise to the similarity of style, or in the beginning the designer of the hat may have taken the hut as a model.

In the Hawaiian Islands, long before the inhabitants took the trouble to clothe themselves, they built grass houses, and at the present time the characteristic Hawaiian hat is remarkably like the hut.

The turbans of the dignitaries of the eastern church are still of the shape of those worn by the high priests among the Jews of olden times, and they are extraordinarily like the characteristic domes that surmount mosques. Again, it is pointed out, the high pointed spires of Gothic churches were contemporaneous with the high hornlike headdress known as the hennin.

It is belived, too, that like results may be found after a comparison of other styles of architecture with the headgear of the period wherein they flourished.—Harper's Weekly.

GOOD LUCK IN A POSE.

Accidental Success Won Through a Gladstone Photograph.

"In literature," said a publisher, "popular success frequently comes by accident. A remarkable case was that of J. H. Shorthouse. This man, a poor chemist, spent some years writing a book called 'John Inglesant.' But the publishers would have none of 'John Inglesant,' and finally Mr. Shorthouse printed 100 copies at his own expense.

"Only forty of these copies sold, one purchaser being a photographer. The photographer took Mr. Gladstone's picture some weeks later, and the old man chose a studious pose, sitting with a volume in his hand. He bent in absorption over the work, which happened accidentally to be 'John Inglesant,' and in the thousands of copies of the photograph that were sold the book's name was plainly to be made out.

"Mr. Gladstone was regarded as a great critic, and the people thought he desired to recommend 'John Inglesant.' What was the result? Within the year 300,000 copies of 'John Inglesant' had been sold, and Shorthouse was a made man."

REV. P. H. DRAKE ARRESTED

of being given a ride in the patrol wagon but he was walked to the station.

G. B. Bates was on hand at the station and immediately went as bondsman for the preacher and he was released to appear in court Monday morning, in the sum of $1,000.

No further attempt was made to speak in City Square but the speaker and his followers went to the Finnish hall on Arthur street where the address was completed.

The episode attracted quite a large crowd in City Square, not that they were all believers in the doctrine preached but being made aware that there was likely to be an arrest were on hand to see the fun. The crowd also followed the officers and their prisoner as far as the police station to see what would happen.

Rev. Mr. Drake is a Unitarian clergyman but has no settled church and has resided in Wollaston but a short time. At the age of 20 in May, 1910 he became the pastor of the Universalist church at Beverly, where he had Ex-President Taft in his congregation. A year later he went to the First Uintarian Church of Saco, Me., but stayed there just a year. For eight months he conducted the so-called Independent People's Church at Portland, Me., but it was not a financial success. Since that time he has been engaged at various occupations and preaching Socialism whenever opportunity offered.

A year ago he brought a rather sensational suit against Rev. William Channing Brown, field secretary of the American Unitarian Association, on the ground that Rev. Mr. Brown had prevented him from becoming pastor of the Unitarian Church at Berlin, Mass.

COURT HEARING.

There was a large audience in attendance at the district court when the case of Rev. Paul H. Drake was called for violation of the city ordinances by obstructing the sidewalk on Washington street. City Solicitor John W. McAnarney represented the government and George E. E. Rower of Boston the defendant.

The government witnesses included Chief of Police Burrell, Capt. Daniel R. McKay, Inspector Alfred W. Goodhue and Officer Charles Olson, City Engineer E. C. Sargent and City Clerk Emery L. Crane.

Chief Burrell, the first witness, testified that Drake stood on a chair on the sidewalk and that at first a crowd of about 200 collected and later as many as 500 were present. That the sidewalk was blocked with people and that there were two automobiles that stopped and later a carriage. He also told of calling Drake to him in the church yard and having conversation with him after which, when Drake again began to speak, he placed him under arrest.

At the start of the cross examination, counsel for Drake asked the Chief if he had ever read the constitution of the United States. City Solicitor McAnarney objected and the question was ruled out. The counsel than asked the chief if he had read the constitution of the state of Massachusetts. This question was also one objected to.

Mr. Rowen said that his reason for asking these questions was that the Chief was intrusted with the duty of enforcing the laws. That there were certain fundamental rights in the constitution and that the ordinances of the city conflicted with these rights. The question however was ruled out by Judge Pratt.

The Chief was then shown a sketch of the City Square and asked to point out where the chair was and where the crowd had collected, the crowd being indicated by dots on the sheet of paper. City Solicitor McAnarney said that the plan was alright but that there were not dots enough.

Inspector Goodhue and Capt. McKay corroborated given by the Chief nothing new being brought out.

The City Clerk was on hand, having under one arm a bound volume of the Quincy Patriot containing the advertisement of the City Ordinance known as the Street ordinance. He also had the records of the City Clerks office showing any amendments that had been made to the Ordinance, but was not called to testify.

City Engineer Sargent produced a plan showing the church grounds and the location of the sidewalks and streets surrounding the church yard.

All of these witnesses were cross examined at length, by counsel for Drake whose plan seemed to show that the automobiles were obstructing the sidewalk and street fully as much as was the speaker, and that the Chief had not spoken to the drivers of the automobiles and told them move on. Chief Burrell said that he did not speak to the drivers of these automobiles as he could not find them. Counsel also in his cross examination sought to bring out that the presence of the Chief and officers drew fully as large a crowd as did the speaker. He also tried to get the Chief to repeat parts of the speech of Drake which he had heard. The Chief however while admitting hearing the speaker could not repeat any part of his address, although the Chief said that Drake talked in a moderate tone and had not said anything objectionable.

The first witness for the defense was J. Fred Scholfield, Washington street, who after claiming that there was no obstruction admitted that the sidewalk was blocked.

Fred Lord, a member of the party, who was appointed a committee to secure a permit to speak, testified that the meeting was held under the auspices of the Socialist party. He said he knew no permit had been issued. In answer to Attorney McAnarney, he said he knew when he placed the chair on the sidewalk that he was obstructing a free passageway. He said however that he did not know the sidewalk existed because of the absence of curbing.

David Baden, another member of the party, told the court that Commissioner Tupper had told him permits to speak on public grounds were not issued but that if arrangements could be made with the police he had no objection. After much questioning he admitted that a person walking along the sidewalk had to make a detour instead of proceeding straight ahead. He said he did not consider a chair placed on the sidewalk an obstruction, and in answer to Judge Pratt said he would so consider ten chairs.

Rev. Mr. Drake said he was an ordained minister and at present on the editorial staff of the Boston American. He spoke of the quetsion in his mind, strengthened by a doubt of Commissioner Tupper, as to whether or not the city had a clear title to the property. He related the facts of his unsuccessful attempts to secure a permit, how he commenced speaking Sunday night and continued after he had been told by Chief Burrell that he was violating the ordinances.

During the cross examination he was asked if he occupied the chair on the sidewalk, and he answered yes.

Q.—You occupied how much space?
A—It occupied about two feet.
Q—You were told you obstructed traffic?
A—Yes.
Q—By continuing you invited arrest?
A—Yes.
Q—You blocked about two feet of the sidewalk?
A—Yes.
Q—For a period of about 15 minutes you remained in such a manner as to obstruct the space?
A—The crowd did the obstructing.
Q—You were the attraction?
A—Yes.

Attorney George Rower in closing for the defense, said a grand stand had occupied the square and obstructed traffic, that the courts, bill of rights of Massachusetts, and the constitution protected his client, and that furthermore nothing had been introduced in evidence to show that the city had title to the land.

He charged that the facts of the case showed discrimination. That Roosevelt and Taft had both spoken without permits and that the reason for the arrest was that the Socialist party was giving the lecture, he asked for the discharge of his client under the rights of citizens accorded by constitution.

John J. McAnarney closed for the government and made a scathing denunciation of Mr. Drake, terming him as a discarded minister who sought to violate law when his intelligence taught him to know better, and said that he was either one of the most contemptible of men because he was false in his teaching of respect for law, or else he was a fanatic, misunderstanding the law. In either case he stands without a shred of sympathy.

Attorney McAnarney said that in asking the court to impose the full penalty, he was doing something he had never done before, in his career, and he further said that it was unfortunate that the law did not make provision for a stronger penalty. He spoke of the possibility of future menace when people could do as they pleased, and perhaps made one of the best closers ever heard in the court room.

Judge Pratt imposed a fine of $15 without making any comment. An appeal was immediately entered and bonds were set at $100 which were furinshed by Gustave B. Bates.

MIDNIGHT MARAUDERS

Terrify an Italian Baker on Water Street

A harrowing tale, of how seven Itailians entered his bakery at midnight and demanded to know "if any scabs were working for him" was told a Daily Ledger reporter this morning by Joseph Nardone who was interrupted as he was kneading his dough by their unannounced visit.

On receiving a negative answer one of the crowd whipped a revolver from his pocket, commenced talking unionism, at the same time flourishing the revolver.

According to Mr. Nardone, who with his wife conducts a bakery at 69 Water street, it was the final effort on the part of the Boston local to unionize his shop, although no bakers are now employed there and one apprentice assists in the baking.

It was shortly before midnight when the seven men roughly entered the bakeshop, in the basement of the building. They immediately asked if any scabs were working, and Mr. Nardone said no. Pointing to Alphonse Ezzigelli they asked what he was doing and was informed he was an apprentice, and not a baker.

"Well," said one, "if he is not a baker, what is he doing here." All the raiding party then indulged in loud talk, and finally one whipped a revolver from his pocket and pointed it at Ezzigelli, who fainted away.

Mrs. Nardone was sitting in the bakeshop on the street floor when she heard the loud talking. She went downstairs and seeing the man standing with the revolver in his hand she told her husband to go upstairs and avoid trouble. He did so and when he reached the street floor immediately telephoned for the police.

Several officers were immediately sent to the place but no trace of the marauders could be obtained. It is believed that they hid in several nearby houses.

Eleven days ago a man said to be Joseph Pippino, president of the Boston bakers' local, called on Mr. Nardone and asked if he intended to join the union. He said he was in business for himeslf, did not employ any bakers at the present time, and would not join because he was not satisfied with the rules and regulations of the local. Pippino, according to Nardone, left shortly after, but before leaving said, "you will be sorry if you do not join the union."

Nardone gave the matter no further thought until the midnight visit brought again to his mind the words of Pippino. Further inquiry revealed that since that time several members of the Boston local have been keeping an eye on the premises, although the pickets were unknown.

A man known as Frank Nastrelle, a former employee at the bakeshop, is supposed to have been one of the party and another known only as Matheo was also one of the visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Nardone are none the worse this morning for their night's experience and have taken steps to inform the police of the actual state of affairs as they existed up to midnight. They possess information which they believe will lead to the arrest and conviction of the Italians who tried to enforce their demands at the point of a revolver.

BOTH TIRES BURST.

Newton Jonah of Dedham died Monday night in the Marlboro Hospital as the result of an automobile accident in Northboro. Charles Macomber of Dedham, who was with Mr. Jonah in the wrecked automobile but who escaped serious injury, said that the accident was caused by the simultaneous bursting of the tires of both wheels on the right hand side of the machine. As the tires burst the automobile skidded and then capsized.

THE MELTING OF MOLLY

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

PROLOGUE.

Molly was the fairest and merriest of widows—and the plumpest! That too, too solid flesh was the cause of all the trouble. Molly loved Alfred Bennett in her girlhood days. Now he was coming home a distinguished diplomat and wanted to see Molly in the same blue muslin dress (waist measure twenty inches) which she had worn at their tender parting years before. So Molly had to grow slim as a string bean in just three months. And, as she had at least four suitors, the melting process—a fairly complicated business—was often interrupted.

The gay, irresistible Molly, all sweetness and spice and everything nice, is a most fetching heroine, and the longer one knows her the more one's admiration grows. She has wit a-plenty and a very keen sense of humor. Furthermore, no one can tell just what she will do next. To rhapsodize, she is—but wait, let the witching Molly tell her own story herself.

LEAF FIRST.

The Bachelor's Buttons.

YES. I truly think that in all the world there is nothing so dead as a young widow's deceased husband, and God ought to give his wisest man-ange special charge concerning looking after her and the devil at the same time They both need it. I don't know how all this is going to end, and I wish my mind wasn't in a kind of tingle. However, I'll do the best I can and not hold myself at all responsible for myself, and then who will there be to blame?

There are a great many kinds of good feeling in this world, from radiant joy down to perfect bliss, but this spring I have got an attack of just old fashioned happiness that looks as if it might become chronic.

I am so happy that I planted my garden all crooked, my eyes upon the clouds, with the birds sailing against them, and when I became conscious I found wicked, flaunting popples sprouted right up against the sweet, modest clover pinks, while the whole paper of bachelor's buttons was sowed over everything, which I immediately began to dig right up again blushing furiously to myself over the trowe

"Will you do just as I tell you?"

women oughtn't, or ride horseback either—no amusement left but himself and weekly prayer meetings, and—and—I just couldn't help the tears coming and dripping as I thought about it all and that awful waist measure in inches.

"Stop crying this minute, Molly," said Dr. John suddenly in the deep voice he uses to Billy and me when we are really sick or stump toed. "You know I was only teasing you and I won't stand for"—

But I sobbed some more. I like him when his eyes come out from under als bushy brows and are all tender and full of sorry for us.

"I can't help it," I gulped in my sleeve. "I did used to like Alfred Bennett. My heart almost broke when he went away. I used to be beautiful and slim, and now I feel as if my own fat ghost has come to haunt me all my life. I am so ashamed! If a woman can't cry over her own dead beauty, what can she cry over?" By this time I was really crying.

Then what happened to me was that Dr. John took me by the shoulders and gave me one good shake and then made me look him right in the eyes through the tears and all.

"You foolish child," he said in the deepest voice I almost ever heard him use. "You are just a lovely, round, luscious peach, but if you will be happier to have Al Bennett come and find you as slim as a string bean I can show you how to do it. Will you do just as I tell you?"

"Yes, I will," I sniffed in a comforted voice. What woman wouldn't be comforted by being called a "luscious peach?" I looked out between my fingers to see what more he was going to say, but he had turned to a shelf and taken down two books.

"Now," he said in his most businesslike voice, as cool as a bucket of water fresh from the spring, "it is no trouble at all to take off your surplus avoirdupois at the rate of two and a half pounds a week if you follow these directions. As I take it, you are about twenty-five pounds over your normal weight. It will take over two months to reduce you, and we will allow an extra month for further beautifying, so that when Mr. Bennett arrives he will find the lady of his adoration in proper trim to be adored. Yes, just be still until I copy these directions in this little red leather blank book for you, and every day I want you to keep an exact record of the conditions of which I make note. No, don't talk while I make out these diet lists! I wish you would go across the hall and see if you don't think we ought to get Billy a thinner set of night drawers. It seems to me he must be too warm in the ones he is wearing."

AGENT OF WINE HOUSE

Fined $50 for Soliciting Orders in Quincy

Antonio Petrenichi of East Boston who was arrested on a complaint sworn out by Inspector Goodhue for violation of the liquor law, pleaded guilty when arraigned in court this morning and paid a fine of $50. It was alleged by Inspector Goodhue that the man was the agent for a wine firm and that he canvassed among the Italian families in and about South Quincy soliciting orders for wine.

It is a well known fact that wine for use of the Italians is shipped into Quincy by the car load and is taken from the freight offices by the parties to whom it is consigned or by expressmen who have been granted permits to transport liquor in or into the City of Quincy. Much of this wine is sold by agents of wine houses who visit the Italian families. For this reason it is very difficult to catch them. Inspector Goodhue, however, has been successful in several cases in landing these agents all of whom have been convicted and paid fines.

DISTRICT COURT.

Harry Feldman was fined $10 for playing craps on the Blue Hills parkway on the Lord's day.

Henry McCullough was fined $3 costs for drunkenness at Quincy.

Antonio Petrenichi pleaded guilty to soliciting orders for liquors in Quincy and paid a fine of $50.

FEDERAL EXPRESS STOPS

Will Give the Midnight Service

Dining Car and Pullmans

At 12.26 this morning, the Federal express stopped at the Quincy station and people in City Square hurried up to see if the road signals indicated trouble along the line. Most of them had remarked that the pounding of the engine seemed more severe than is usual to make the up grade to Braintree. However it happened that in order to fulfill the promise of a midnight train from Boston to Quincy and way stations the officials had attached two day coaches to the parlor cars and in this way furnished their schedule without using an extra engine. Less than a dozen passengers rode on the train, only two leaving at Wollaston and two at Quincy.

The Federal express runs between Boston for Washington daily and consists of a dining car, and several Pullmans. Facilities at the South station yard do not permit the turning of the train and every night it is sent to Braintree where it is turned on the Y at the Braintree station.

Can a Man Be at Ease in Skimpy Underwear?

The answer is simple — he can't.

Yet many a man fumes and frets and fusses around for outer garments that will give him relief when the trouble lies nearer home, so to speak.

What he wants is underwear, cut men's sizes and counting on popularity for profit.

For example, this Balbriggan at 50c a garment.

Shirts with long sleeves, short sleeves or no sleeves at all.

Drawers of a comfortable length and long or short in seams for the small or tall man.

Other Underwear up to $2.

If you fan yourself hard enough on these hot days you should be able to get up a copious perspiration.

A Massachusetts man has sent a perfect rake for the White house lawn. Now Mr. Wilson can get up a good appetite for dinner without going out to the golf links.

The Balkan allies seem to think that a good way to show their dislike for each other would be to commit suicide all around.

The government figures of beasts killed for food omit statistics of dogs, which will no doubt cause a protest from a growing industry.

President Wilson attended church on a hot day at Cornish, but not having offered to take a Sunday school class of boys his heroism was not fully tested.

Some people felt that the veterans had so little to do at Gettysburg that on arriving home they would enjoy sitting up until midnight making speeches and holding receptions.

Some of the theaters are getting so hard up as to cater to intelligent people.

If those Congressmen who are discarding their frock coats don't look out they may be taken for successful business men.

After everybody has struck for higher pay, it is believed that the cost of things will be lower.

NATIVE AND FOREIGN BORN.

In a number of our towns we have recently witnessed somewhat disturbed relations between the native and foreign elements. No matter how considerable these disturbances occasionally become, they all start from very small beginnings.

In the past troubles have developed quickly because the foreigners had had no opportunity to learn the ideas and views of the better native element and because the best natives knew only too little of what was going on in foreign circles.

The committee controlling the Young Men's Christian Association work among immigrants in the States of Massachusetts and Rhode Island conducts many classes and meetings every year. It is not the purpose of this article to deal with the subjects treated in those classes and meetings. We confine ourselves to pointing out the great value of this work as a force bringing together good representatives of the natives and of the foreigners.

By long continued and frequent intercourse they get to know and understand each other. A friendly spirit rules. At present between four and five hundred teachers and lecturers, mostly volunteers, come into constant and regular contact with several thousands of the most desirable immigrants.

These four or five hundred men gain an insight into the immigrant situation which will help them all their lives, in whatever community they reside, to render service in dealing with difficult conditions, as they crop up, when they can be more easily coped with than after all concerned are embittered.

The knowledge of the thoughts, feelings and ways of immigrants that such social workers gain is a valuable asset which can never be lost.

On the other hand, the large numbers of immigrants, who get to know these social workers intimately, will either become immune against revolutionary propaganda altogether or will, if temporarily carried off their feet by reckless agitators, more rapidly regain their balance than their less fortunate fellow workers who never learn the safe and sane point of view of normal citizens.

The bringing together of cultured, public-spirited natives and of willing, hard-working immigrants of the right kind is a public service worthy of the attention of any who have the best interests of their neighborhood at heart.

—It seems to us that men in labor unions who work hard and economize to make both ends meet will have their eyes opened one of these days to the way they are being worked to further the cupidity and schemes of those who call themselves their leaders. No one has yet accounted for a large portion of the money subscribed to aid the Lawrence strikers. Only a few weeks ago a benefit entertainment was given in New York in aid of the Paterson strikers and $10,000 was received. An outside limit of $3000 is put on expenses. Of the $7000 left the strikers have received about $400. Who has the rest? Workingmen are being manipulated that so-called leaders may be paid large sums to prevent strikes or call them off, or that they may grab equally large sums subscribed for relief.—Waltham Free Press.

—Several gentlemen who do fancy farming in this part of the country have been interviewed by a Boston newspaper, and they all say the game doesn't pay. For the sake of the men who may be thinking of going into little farming themselves, however, it is worth while to remember that the farms conducted by gentlemen of wealth undergo the maximum of expense, and perhaps the minimum of results. Quite often the farm is conducted for the sake of making a special display on some one feature and a lot of money goes into that feature to make it bloom and shine above all other work of the farm. The finest machinery is used, and the men who use it oftentimes have a feeling that inasmuch as "the boss" does not need the profits that might be possible in a big farm there is no need of exertion one's self needlessly on a hot day.

The boss is generally a long way from the work, and his right hand man may or may not be a "driver." The fellow who does his own farming and runs his own game right on the ground, and who is bound to get a living if the thing is possible, gets along fairly well, no doubt, without all the latest and most complicated machines; he does a big day's work himself and as loss means a lot to him he is on the job and watching everybody and everything under his control.

The difference between the result on the two farms is likely to be about the same as the difference between the results attained by the common citizen with a good roadhorse and the wealthy follower of the race track with a blooded steed that he trains for racing only; in one case great fame and perhaps a big winning may result, but in the other the roadhorse will cost vastly less, will get the owner over the ground at fair speed, and will cost $200 where the other will cost $5000 and the cost of upkeep will be in about the same ratio.—Brockton Enterprise.

BOY RUN OVER BY WAGON

Fall from the Seat at the Fore River Bridge

William Thompson, who is at the Quincy City Hospital suffering from injuries received when the wagon of his uncle passed over his body at the Fore River bridge Monday afternoon is doing well this morning. Dr. W. J. Middleton, who was summoned to the scene of the accident said, that the boy had probably sustained a slight injury to the spine. Internal injuries may develop.

Thompson, who is 12 years old, was riding on the wagon owned by his uncle, Charles Allen of 7 Lawrence street Quincy Point. It was loaded with vegetables. In some unaccountable manner Thompson slipped from his seat, beneath the wheels and they passed over him.

He was removed to the hospital in the Quincy Police ambulance. Thompson has been in this country but a short time, having come here from Scotland.

AUTOIST GOES TO JAIL.

Joseph E. L. Miller about 40 years old, of East Weymouth, owner of a seamfaced granite quarry, was sentenced by Judge Pratt in the Hingham district court Monday to serve 30 days for operating his automobile while under the influence of liquor. He did not appeal, but, after arranging his business affairs and turning some money over to his family, left for the Plymouth jail by train in the custody of Deputy Sheriff Charles Spring of Hingham. He was arrested at Hull.

"JEST" COSTS MANY LIVES

Boys Said to Have Been Responsible For Collision of Trains

Los Angeles, Cal., July 15.—To meddlesome youths who played with the train whistle is attributed the loss of twelve lives and the injury of some 200 persons near here when two Pacific electric trains collided, telescoping two cars and wrecking another at Vineyard Station, near the city limits. Many of the injured will die.

Three trains loaded with excursionists had stopped at a curve where a switch is turned. The last train began moving forward while the two foremost trains remained at a standstill. The conductor of the last car of the centre train jumped to the track with his light to flag the approaching train.

Some youths, passengers say, pulled the whistle in jest. This was interpreted by the motorman of the on-coming train as the signal to go ahead. With a crash of breaking glass, splintering timbers and cries of passengers, the motor car of the last train drove into the rear of the centre train. The motorman of the moving train had given full speed.

Tariff Bill, He Says, Strips the Farmer of Every Advantage

Washington, July 15.—Senator McCumber opened the Republican assault on the Democratic tariff revision bill in the senate, defending the farmers of the country against the free listing or great reduction in tariff rates on agricultural products.

"In this year 1913," said McCumber, addressing the Democrats, "you are about to commit a greater crime against the American farmer than has ever been perpetrated by any political party against any class of people during any period of recorded history. With violent hands you are about to strip him of every advantage which the changed conditions of home supply and demand were about to yield to him.

"You have declared that he is an outcast in the land which he has made, the only one of all the classes of American people who is not entitled to any consideration at your hands. You have insulted his sense of fairness, slapped him in the face and kicked him into the gutter."

POSTMASTER GETS TWO DIRK WOUNDS

Assaulted by Brother, For Whom Police Are Searching

Barnstable, Mass., July 15.—Marcus H. Howes, the postmaster, was stabbed twice during a dispute with his brother, Bangs Howes. It is believed the wounds are not fatal.

Knowledge of the stabbing became public when the police began a search for Bangs Howes, who, according to members of the postmaster's family, has been mentally depressed for several years, his trouble at times making it necessary to keep him under restraint. He is 50 years of age, several years the senior of his brother, and is unmarried.

The postmaster's wounds are in the breast and were apparently made by a dirk.

Get In Line With Factory Employes and Grab Money

Cambridge, Mass., July 15.—Slipping quietly into line with the employes of the Ford Motor company's service plant as the men were drawing their pay, two men reached over the grating of the cashier's window and grabbed handfuls of cash.

So much excitement resulted that they escaped from the building in the confusion which followed. The men got about $40. One was later captured by employes of the Ford company.

To the police he gave his name as William Deflurin, 19, of Roxbury. He said he was a painter and paper hanger.

The police are inclined to think they have a professional crook. They found pieces of $10 bills in his pockets.

Whaler Held In Mouth of Great Mammal For Half an Hour

New Bedford, Mass., July 15.—Bringing a modern Jonah in the person of First Mate Zack de Lux, a dusky Cape Verder, the three-masted whaling schooner Ellen A. Swift, commanded by Captain Dunham of this city, returned to port after a voyage filled with an unusually large number of experiences.

De Lux, before he had been mate of the vessel and while he was boat steerer on one of the small whale boats used to approach the mammoth mammal, was held a captive in a huge mouth for nearly half an hour, his unconscious form being spit out onto the water only when the whale died and his giant jaws relaxed.

SUN'S HEAT TO BE OUR BAROMETER

Weather Forecasts Will Be Possible Months Ahead.

TESTS WILL TAKE YEARS.

Professor Frost, Director of Yerkes Observatory, Predicts That Future Scientists Will Be Able to Tell the Temperature Six Months In Advance—Observe Sun Spots.

Great interest is manifested among scientists as the result of a published statement of Professor Edwin B. Frost, director of the Yerkes observatory, to the effect that it has been determined that the "solar constant" is in fact a variable quantity and that the effect of the change is not appreciable on earth until as long as six months after the change.

For this reason Professor Frost is of the opinion that eventually it may be possible to determine general weather conditions that far ahead—in other words, that careful observations of solar conditions will indicate what conditions may prevail on the earth later.

In addition to the observations made by Professor Frost similar observations have been made by Professor H. H. Kimball for the government at the station on Mount Weather.

In his statement Professor Frost declares that careful observations indicate that the late Professor S. P. Langley placed his estimate for the amount of heat absorption by the earth at too high a figure.

Professor Langley's Devices.

Professor Frost in his statement comments on the ingenious devices invented by Professor Langley, by which he measured the sun's heat, and on the discoveries of C. G. Abbott and F. E. Fowle, who for the past ten years have been conducting their investigations at sea level and at Mount Whitney (14,500 feet) and Mount Wilson (6,000 feet), in southern California. He goes on to say:

"The most striking result of these investigations is the discovery by Abbott and Fowle that the 'solar constant' is not a constant, but a variable—in other words, that our sun is a variable star, like hundreds and thousands of others in the sky.

"It was nearly ten years ago that these investigators found evidence that the radiation of the sun was not steady from day to day, and ten years of work has been devoted to determining whether these apparent variations were really in the sun or due to errors of observation or to fluctuation in the absorption by the earth's atmosphere. They now feel justified in stating that these fluctuations are real and are in the sun itself, amounting to 5 per cent or more in a period of a week or ten days.

"Observations for sun spots have now been made long enough so that we know that they are more numerous every eleven years, slowly declining from a maximum number to a minimum number about seven years later and then rising again to a maximum about four years after the minimum.

Importance of the Discovery.

"The importance of this discovery of the variation in the sun's heat is probably obvious to the reader. The inhabitants of the earth are entirely dependent for their existence upon the results of agricultural work, and nothing is more certain than that the radiation from the sun lies at the basis of the principal weather elements in the earth's atmosphere.

"It should not be inferred that a sudden startling change in the sun's radiation produces an immediate effect in the terrestrial temperatures. The earth's atmosphere takes up these changes and gradually communicates them to the earth's surface. How soon and to what degree remain to be investigated.

"Continuous study, extended perhaps over many years, will be required to determine if these changes in radiation can be predicted in advance and if the laws can be determined which govern them. It is evidently a most practical problem, touching the interests of every inhabitant of the earth."

TRAMPS HAVE NERVE.

When Offered Work on Farm They Indulge In Merry Persiflage.

Within the past fortnight Kansas officials have had calls from twenty towns asking what to do with a surplus of tramps. At Clay Center, Kan., twenty "sons of rest" were loafing in the park. When a farmer offered them $3 a day to work in the harvest they demanded $3.50. When that figure was met they demanded $4. The spokesman for the tramps asked the farmer:

"Is your land rolling or broken?"

"Rolling," said the farmer.

"Well, roll it in here, and we'll harvest it."

Bees Kill Chickens.

Two hundred pullets belonging to W. F. Weems, a poultry raiser, near Porterville, Cal., were stung to death by a swarm of bees. The bees are brought to that district every year during the orange blossom season. After the bees had attacked the chickens they continued down the road and attacked an automobile party.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

NUT SALADS.

NUTS make nourishing and tempting salads. Almonds, walnuts and peanuts are especially good used this way.

Walnuts chopped with blanched almonds make a nice combination.

Care should be taken to select fresh nuts for salads. Hard or partially decayed ones will spoil the dish.

Appetizing Combinations.

Chestnut Salad. — Take a pint of chestnuts, remove the shells, boil and blanch them. Drain and set aside to cool. Hard boil two eggs. At serving time arrange lettuce in a salad bowl, put the chestnuts over and then a nice French dressing, using lemon juice instead of vinegar. Hold a small sieve over the bowl, rub the yolks through it, with which cover the salad lightly.

Nut Salad In Molds.—Take one quart of beef stock, place in a saucepan, season well and after dissolving and straining add two-thirds of a box of gelatin. Chop fine a cupful of English walnuts. Soak them in hot French dressing for half an hour. Wet small molds; half fill them with nuts. Pour over the dissolved gelatin mixture. Stand in a cool place to harden. Turn out on lettuce leaves and garnish with mayonnaise dressing.

For Dainty Appetites.

Celery and Nut Salad. — Take a dozen English walnuts to a large head of celery. Crisp and cut the celery in small pieces. Blanch the nut meats and chop them coarsely. Mix the nuts and celery, marinate for half an hour in a plain French dressing, arrange on crisped and chilled lettuce leaves and cover with mayonnaise dressing.

Walnut Salad.—Blanch some English walnuts and add to them a suitable quantity of the little tender inner leaves of a head of celery. Then toss them with some mayonnaise and arrange the salad in a bowl. Mask it with mayonnaise and garnish with capers and quartered olives, or heap the salad pyramid shape on a flat dish, coat it with mayonnaise and surround it with the quartered olives and capers.

BOSTONIANS AT PERU

Welcome At Lima and Speech of Col. Kincaide

The Boston Chamber of Commerce party, of which Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy is president is expected home next week. How the party was entertained at Peru is told in the May number of "Peru Today" which reached Daily Ledger today. Col. Kincaide was prominent both in the events and the illustrations, but the Ledger will reproduce only the speeches at Lima.

The evening brought the last of the formal entertainments, the banquet given by the members of the Lima Chamber of Commerce and Stock Exchange to the delegates. The affair was given at the beautiful Exposition Restaurant, the building being specially lighted and decorated for the occasion. At this banquet, as on all previous occasions, friendship, hospitality and courtesy ruled supreme and the spirit which pervaded the banquet room may be best illustrated by the speech of Pedro Gallagher and the reply of Colonel Kincaide, given in full below:

Mr. Gallagher's speech was as follows:—

"It is no new experience for Peru to welcome to her capital eminent sons of her great northern sister republic. We have had among us, on different occasions, a prominent member of the United States Government in the person of Mr. Root; an equally important representative of that party which was then the opposition, in the person of Mr. Bryan; the group of notable Americans who attended the last Pan-American Congress, held at Buenos Ayres in 1910, the distinguished commanders and officers of the various American squadrons which have anchored in Peruvian waters, and scores of other citizens of the United States, remarkable in either business, literature or science, whom it would take long to enumerate, but whose visits have left with us a feeling of cordial and pleasant friendship to swell the stream of mutual fraternity and good will which has always flowed between your shores and those of Peru.

"But perhaps none of these visits is destined to bind the two countries as closely together as the friendly embassy which the Boston Chamber of Commerce has so fittingly confided to you, for none of them is as plain a proof of the intense interest which the people of Saxon-American take in our Latin-American countries and in their possibilities and interest which I feel bound to say is most cordially reciprocated here. Only one obstacle exists to the closet commercial intercourse between our two nations the Isthmus of Panama and that obstacle is now about to be removed.

"May your stay among us be the starting-point of the intimate relations between the United States and the Republic of Peru which, thanks to that magnificent piece of American workmanship, the Panama Canal, will soon be a palpable fact.

"Senores, Os invito a brindar esta copa por nuestros distinguidos huespedes aqui presentes, los miembros de la Camara de Comercio mas importante de los Estados Unidos, la Camara de Comercio de Boston, que llegan a nuestras playas en mision de verdadera fraternidad."

Colonel Kincaide replied as follows:—

"I sincerely trust you will believe the deep appreciation of our delegation for the special honours you have shown us since our arrival in Lima, and for the signal honour you pay us tonight, in being your guests at this most delightful banquet.

"From the time our good ship Guatemala left Panama we were in constant receipt of messages of good-will, cordial greetings and a hearty welcome from your people.

"You greeted us on shipboard the moment anchor was dropped in Callao Harbour, and during every moment of our stay in your midst, you have by gracious acts and unstinted hospitality administered to our happiness, entertainment and comfort.

"You have permitted us to view the grandeur of your mountains, containing unknown wealth of hidden treasures, and your agricultural areas, merely waiting the touch of man with irrigation, to turn them into one of the greatest assets of your nation. We have been permitted to admire your charming scenery and to enjoy the sweetness of Peruvian air which has filled us with charm and admiration for your delightful country.

"We have been received by your gracious and most able President, Senor Billinghurst, your acting Mayor, Senor Canevaro, by members of both your National and local Government, your leading merchants, and authorities, of the University, your several Clubs, and we have been granted the special honour of meeting the charming and cultured ladies of Lima.

"Words of mine are inadequate to convey to you my friends the warmth of our feelings of gratitude toward your people for all you have done for us.

"We came as business men of Boston to carry to you the cordial greetings of the citizens of Boston, and those of the large number of the Boston Chamber of Commerce which we represent.

"We came to meet your business men in order that we might know them better, to learn more fully by what means the commercial interests of both people could be broadened, strengthened and developed for our mutual advantage.

"It has been wisely said that the building of the Panama Canal was the 'dividing of two continents, but the uniting of humanity.'

"Its completion will afford greater opportunity for the people of North and South America to mingle more readily, as friends and true neighbours during the present and future generations.

"Our visit, my friends, has been a fruitful one. We have learned much that will be of value to our merchants and financiers in advancing the business relations between your people and our own.

"We shall convey this information to our people with strong recommendation as to the great possibilities for the investment of American capital in your midst, and a closer relationship between our merchants and those of your country regarding the matter of credits and better service.

"I desire to pay special tribute in behalf of our delegation to Senor Manuel Montero y Tirado and Senor Pedro Gallagher for their tireless energy in our behalf and through them to thank your good people who have assisted so much to make our visit so enjoyable.

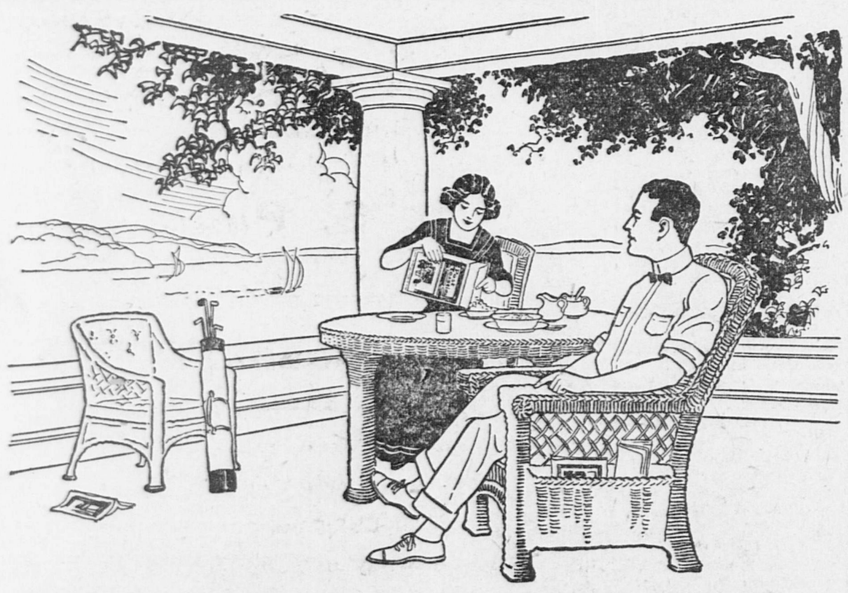

"We shall leave Lima and the sincere friends we have made with many regrets, but our hearts will continue to beat as one for one thought, one purpose, one ideal and that ideal in the fullest sense of its meaning—a friendship of the people of our two great nations—so firmly cemented that it can never break."

—The Western Pacific Railway has instructed its engineers to report fires along the right-of-way where it traverses the Plumas national forest, California. The location of fires is indicated on a card dropped by the engineer or fireman to the next section crew met after the fire is discovered. It is then the duty of part of the section crew to go back on handcars or speeders and put out the blaze.

More persons make use of the national forests in Utah than in any other state. Nearly 27 per cent of all the permits for sheep and cattle grazing on the forests are taken out in this state. This does not mean, however, that Utah carries one-fourth of all the national forest cattle and sheep; it happens that many small grazing interests make use of the forests there; and individual flocks and herds are larger elsewhere.

—Jane Addams is to establish in Illinois schools in which women will be taught how to vote. It will pay some of the political bosses of that state to secure positions as teachers.—Taunton Herald.

TRAINED PARROT FOUND THAT BEATS SCARECROW.

Polly Cries "Get Out, Get Out!" and Crows Flee.

Aaron Doughty, a farmer of Harpswell Center, lower Casco bay, in Maine, believes he has solved the problem of keeping the crows out of his cornfields. The corn that grows in that vicinity attains unusual size and sweetness. The farmers get big prices for their product and are obliged to wage continual warfare against the crows. The latter are unusually bold this year and seem to have little fear of dead members of their kind swung from bean poles or from other scarecrows of time honored type.

Driven to desperate measures, Mr. Doughty bought a parrot and for a month devoted himself to teaching the bird to chase crows away from his cornfields. Every time he saw a crow he would start running toward it, waving his arms and loudly shouting "Get out, get out!"

Poll was an interested observer and in no time was screeching, "Get out, get out!"

When the bird had learned that the farm was his home Mr. Doughty experimented in giving Poll his liberty when he chased crows. As he hoped, the imitative parrot flew after him, raucously crying its warning. It went even further.

Mr. Doughty had not expected the bird would do anything but fly toward the field, thus frightening the crows away with his mysterious human sounding words. But Poll entered into the spirit of the thing in a way that exceeded all expectations. He not only flew to the cornfield, but kept right on after the retreating crows, chasing them sometimes a quarter of a mile before returning to the cage. Poll developed a particular hatred for the crow family.

One of Poll's favorite tricks is to walk slowly through the grass until nearly in the midst of a flock. Poll certainly gives the crows a shock when he jumps into the air after them, his brilliant plumage shining in the sun, shrilly shrieking "Get out, get out!"

The crows are deserting Mr. Doughty's fields for those of other farmers where the worst they have to contend with is some effigy of a tramp they know by instinct to be harmless or, in rare instances, a barefooted country boy with a rusty shotgun.

Meantime farmers from near and far are flocking to the Doughty farm to watch Poll do his stunt.

U. S. TO ISSUE A MAGAZINE.

Journal of Research Will Replace Certain Agricultural Bulletins.

Radical changes in the publications of the department of agriculture are to be made in connection with the establishment by the department and the agricultural colleges and experiment stations of the country of the Journal of Research. This magazine, which will be issued monthly or oftener, according to the volume of scientific matter on hand, will do away with the technical bulletins which have been issued in the past. It will be edited by three representatives from the department and two from colleges and stations.

Publication of farmers' bulletins will be continued by the department, but in many instances the pamphlets will deal with problems affecting a particular section of the country. Other publications of broad general interest will be spread over the whole country.

These will continue through the three succeeding days.

NEW SERIAL IN THE LEDGER

"The Melting of Molly" Starts in Today's Paper

"The Melting of Molly," a charming romance, will begin in today's Daily Ledger. The author is Maria Thompson Daviess.

This serial is described by leading critics as one that has a genuine human appeal. Molly, the heroine, tells of her own struggles with too much avoirdupois—and with her impressionable heart. For you must know, that in spite of her waist measure, which worries her considerably, she is the belle of the town.

Molly, although the relict of a staid, middle aged man who has not been dead very long, is a frisky young thing and has many entertaining adventures. Several men, young and middle aged, are in love with Molly, and they show it but Molly is not certain until the very end of the story whether she wants a judge with a "grand air" or her own harum scarum cousin, or her old flame who is now a diplomat of renown and is coming back to Hillsboro to claim her, or the other men who are only waiting for Molly to make up her mind.

Besides all these there are women and men with clear cut, splendidly drawn personalities, and a little boy, Billy whom Molly "mothers"— a dear little fellow as good, probably, as any child of his age in literature or life. Just how Billy's father comes to figure in the story will interest everyone.

Any man between sixteen and ninety who does not fall in love with Molly has something wrong with him.

Start today with the first chapter in the Daily Ledger.

Hearn as assistant pharmacist resigned to accept a position in the chemical laboratory of the Hood Rubber Co. While here Mr. Prince was known as "Doc" Prince and enjoyed the friendship of many people. Mr. Reinhalter is the son of Mrs. Hannah Reinhalter of 116 Willard street and is a graduate of the Adams Academy, class of 1904. The articles of corporation were filed at the State House on June 30.

SYRIAN ASSAULT CASE.

There was quite a lively row Monday night in the Syrian colony Winter street during which it is alleged that clubs were freely used and that several are today nursing sore heads. Early this morning David Elhage, who claims to have been assaulted, came to court and swore out warrants against five Syrians charging them with assault. The men against whom complaints were issued are Ahamed Hasan, Hasan Sherara, Sliman Hasain, Hasan Elhage, and Hasan Kahl. They will probably appear in court Wednesday morning.

The Sewing Circle of Quincy chapter, O. E. S., will meet Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. Ada Johnson, 63 Babcock street, instead of Thursday as originally planned.

Stephen W. North of Quincy is president and treasurer of the Marinium Paint and Manufacturing Company of Boston, incorporated June 30.

City Treasurer Tilden said this morning that he expected to place the loan for street and sidewalk improvement and the general loan with bankers this week. No bids were received for these bonds but the Treasurer expects to be able to sell them at par.

QUINCY POLICE PLAY AT REVERE

The Quincy police base ball team left this morning for Revere where they will play a regular scheduled game with the force of that town. When Revere played Quincy here the game was filled with exciting incidents and the scoring was so frequent in the latter part of the game that Manager Isbester of the visitors declared that the score keeper had not credited his team with enough runs. He doped out the score as being tied at 11 but finally admitted his error. Revere is the home of the police league and President Parsons is a member of their police. Therefore it is a tough thing for them to loose and todays game promises much excitement.

NEW HARPOON AS CHALLENGER

Ellen of Boston Club Will Defend Quincy Cup

The first real test of the new sonder boats will be in the races for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge cup, which will be sailed off Marblehead, commencing Monday, July 28, two races are to be held each day, one in the morning and one in the afternoon until one of the boats has won three events.

Last year the races were held off Houghs Neck the series being won by the Ellen owned and sailed by C. P. Curtis, representing the Boston Yacht club, the defending boat being the Harpoon, owned and sailed by ex-Commodore C. F. Adams, 2d, of the Quincy Yacht club. The other boats in last year's races were the Beatrice representing the Corinthian club, the Cima, representing the Manchester club, the Beaver the Beverly club, and the Meavre II, the Hingham club.

This year there are only three challengers, the Quincy, Corinthian and Eastern clubs. Just what boats will represent these clubs is not known outside of the Quincy club which will be represented by ex-Commodore Adams in his new sonder boat, as yet not named. This boat was designed by J. R. Purdon and built at Lawleys. It has been rumored that she will also be named the Harpoon but Mr. Adams has not as yet given out her name. It is safe to say however that whatever name is selected it will have a double O in it.

The defending yacht will be the new Ellen built by Charles P. Curtis, Jr., which was picked for the defender last fall. The new Ellen is the third of that name and was designed and built at Marblehead by W. Sterling Burgess.

Aside from the winning the Quincy trophy there is an unusual interest in the cup races from the fact that they will have a bearing on the yachts to be selected for the German-American International match for the President Wilson cup and the Gov. Foss cup, which will be sailed off Marblehead, August 16, 18 and 19 and on such succeeding days as may be deemed advisable. In these races it is the intention of the committee to sail several races each day starting in the morning at 11 o'clock.

Only such boats as conform to the new restrictions will be eligible to compete in these races, and there are but few of the old boats that are eligible, but there are seven new boats built this year, among them being the unnamed boat of Mr. Adams.

Six races were necessary last year to determine the winner. The first race was sailed Aug. 26, and the series was finished the following Saturday. The Harpoon won the first two races, but on account of carrying too large a sail she had to surrender these races to the Ellen, the second boat. The result was that the Ellen by winning the race of Saturday was awarded the cup.

The elapsed time of the several races was as follows:—

FIRST RACE

*Harpoon	2	20	50
Ellen	2	21	08
Cima	2	21	15
Beatrice	2	23	40
Beaver	2	29	22

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

A CZAR IN AN ATTIC.

Room In the Winter Palace Where Emperor Nicholas I. Died.

The Winter palace of the czar surpasses any other palace in Europe. It is on the banks of the Neva and owes its existence to the Empress Catherine II., that most extraordinary woman, extraordinary in ability and in vice, the surprise of all her contemporaries and the wonder of all who have studied her character. The building is four stories high, of a light brown color and highly ornamental in architecture. It is a wilderness of halls, stairways and apartments. The Nicholas hall and the St. George's hall will never be forgotten by those who have seen them.

One of the most interesting rooms is that where Nicholas I. died. It is in the upper story of the northeast corner of the building and is approached by four doors and finally by a narrow passage. It is a small room, only about eighteen feet long and twelve feet wide, with two small windows, and is the place where the emperor spent most of his time when not officially employed. It is the room in which he died, some say by poison administered by himself in a fit of melancholy induced by the outcome of the Crimean war.

EQUAL TO OCCASIONS.

A Man of Quick Wit and Prompt Action Was Lord Whitworth.

Lord Whitworth, who held various posts of honor in English diplomatic circles, was a kindly, gracious gentleman as well as a wit and a man of the world. He had indeed almost measured swords with Napoleon at the Tuileries when that despot railed at England for not having evacuated Egypt and Malta, accused her of having violated treaties and ended by flourishing a cane dangerously near the face of the English ambassador.

Lord Whitworth put his hand on the hilt of his sword.

"What would you have done if the emperor had struck you?" he was afterward asked.

"I would have felled him to the ground," was the quiet answer.

Perhaps the best story told of him is one showing how his quick wit disposed of a rival. When he was at the Russian court, Fox sent there as a sort of ambassador of his own a man named Adair, the son of a surgeon.

One day the empress, speaking in French, said to Lord Whitworth:

"Is he a very important man, this M. Adair?"

"Not so very, madame," replied Lord Whitworth, "although his father was a grand saigneur," a remark which readers of French will recognize as a very good pun, for the word used by Lord Whitford means "blood letter," while by its sound it also meant a great lord. —London Standard.

"Discovery."

According to some wonder mongers, whenever you tell a story asserting the existence of something new and astonishing you "discover" it. But that is not the sense in which the word is used by scientific investigators. When Professor and Mme. Curie "discovered" the wonderful element "radium" they placed it, so to speak, "on the table," and every one has been able to examine it and to prove that the statements made about it are true. When Dr. Laveran of Paris "discovered" that malarial fever is due to a parasite in the blood he showed the parasite and showed how one can always find it, and thus he enabled any one and every one to see it and to examine its relation to malarial fever. Those are instances of "discovery." Mere guesses and assertions without proof are not "discovery."—London Telegraph.

Pretty Useful Shoes.

It would be difficult to realize what the Friesiander would do without his klompen, or wooden shoes, for they have a hundred uses. With them he bails out his boat, corrects his children and scoops up a drink of water wherever he may be. He places in them his worms for fishing, uses them as missiles in a free fight, digs with them, measures dry goods with them, and a hundred other things. The klompen are cheap; they cost about fifteen pence a pair, man's size, and Dutchmen's feet are not Cinderella-like by any means.—Wide World Magazine.

Used to Dodging.

"You never hear of a wealthy bachelor being run over by an auto."

"That's so. I wonder why it is."

"To a man who is used to dodging mothers with marriageable daughters dodging automobiles is merely child's play."—Houston Post.

A Stickler For Good Form.

"Of course you looked up the new girl's references?"

"How could I, dear? They were from a lot of women I don't know."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Estimating It.

"I hope I haven't kept you waiting too long," gushed the girl.

"Only about $3 worth," estimated the young man with the taxicab outside.—Pittsburgh Post.

An Incentive.

JAPAN IS KEEPING DIPLOMATS GUESSING

Gives a Loving Cup to United States Cruiser Charleston

Washington, July 15.—While diplomatic Washington is conjecturing over the voluminous correspondence between the United States and Japan, the two countries, by alternately extending courtesies to each other, are keeping the curious ones completely in the dark as to the real situation regarding the Californian controversy.

During the past few weeks the United States has officially welcomed a dozen or more eminent Japanese visitors. Now the Japanese government has presented the United States cruiser Charleston with a silver loving cup.

In August, 1910, there was a flood in Tokio and the officers and men of the Charleston and the cruisers Saratoga and New Orleans, which were near the stricken city, raised a fund which was sent ashore for the relief of the sufferers. The incident was forgotten until Ambassador Chinda sent the cup to the state department with a request that it be forwarded to the Charleston.

London, July 15.—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, the leader of the suffragettes, and Miss Annie Kenney, one of the most ardent of the militants, are again the hands of the authorities.

Against the order of the court, they appeared at a meeting of the Women's Social and Political union, where Mrs. Pankhurst announced that she would die rather than submit to the government.

Washington, July 15.—Strongly favoring a government armor plate factory, Secretary of the Navy Daniels transmitted to the senate data for the extension of navy construction so as to practically eliminate the private contractor from the making of American dreadnoughts.

Count Gets Rebate on Auto

Paris, July 15.—Count de Kergorlay was granted a rebate of $200 on the price of a motor car in the courts because the roof was too low and damaged the long plumes on his wife's hat.

London, July 15.—The bill to abolish plural voting at elections in the British Isles passed its third reading in the house of commons last night.

WILSON ACTS AS PEACEMAKER

No Strike at Present on Railroads In the East

ARBITRATION IS AGREED TO

Amendment to Erdman Act Satisfactory to Railroad Will Be Pushed Through Congress Today and Signed by President Before Nightfall—Result of White House Conference

Washington, July 15.—After a White House conference late yesterday afternoon it was announced that 100,000 trainmen and the managers of forty-two eastern railroads had agreed to arbitrate their differences.

There will be no strike at present. President Wilson gave assurance that the Newlands bill to amend the Erdman act will be passed today by the house. It has already passed the senate.

President Wilson characterized the conference as simple and satisfactory. He said:

"Both parties were willing to end their difficulties under the Newlands amendment to the Erdman act if this amendment could be passed.

"The railroads, however, felt that three arbitrators were not a sufficient number to deal with the question and it was therefore agreed that the board should be increased to six. The railway representatives also desired an independent board of arbitration.

"It is expected, therefore, that these two changes will be made in the bill today and that the measure will be passed by both houses and signed by me before nightfall.

"This, I hope, will put an end to the differences between the railroads and their employes and both sides will be able by arbitration to settle all their differences amicably."

The White House conference took place in the president's private office. In addition to the president there were present Secretary of Labor Wilson, Senator Newlands, Representative Clayton, Representative Mann, President Rea of the Pennsylvania railroad, President Willard of the Baltimore and Ohio, President Stevens of the Chesapeake and Ohio and Chairman Trumbull of the executive board of the same road, President Brown of the New York Central, President Wickersham of the Atlantic and West Point, President Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, President Carter of the Brotherhood of Firemen, President Garretson of the Order of Railway Conductors and President Lee of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen.

TURNED INTO THE STREET

Fifteen Ipswich Strikers and Their Families Evicted by Sheriffs

Ipswich, Mass., July 15.—Fifteen families of strikers at the Ipswich mills were evicted from cottages owned by the mills. The tenants had been given three months' notice to leave the cottages and the time expired yesterday.

Deputy Sheriffs Briggs and Raymond conducted the evictions. They had a strenuous time of it, as most of the families let them move the furnishings to the street, stoves, beds and all. They were hot and fagged before they were at it an hour.

What surprised the deputies most was the passiveness with which many of the evicted families accepted the edict. The Greek and Polish mothers, surrounded by children, stood around and jeered at the men who were dismantling their homes.

END OF THE GROZIER

Former Provincetown Whaler Meets Her Doom at Sea

New Bedfrod, Mass., July 15.—The old-time whaling schooner William A. Grozier, of recent years in the Cape Verde packet trade, Captain Oliveira, was wrecked at sea, according to a telegram received here from New Orleans by the agent. The crew was rescued by the steamer Osage. Other details of the disaster are lacking.

The Grozier was formerly a Provincetown whaler. She had a tonnage of 100 tons gross and 111 tons net. In her old Provincetown days the Grozier sailed many seas in command of Captain Roberts, and brought in a rich supply of oil that enriched both master and owners.

Germ Carried From Tooth to Eye

Chicago, July 15.—A speck of enamel chipped from a patient's tooth by a dentist's drill flew into the eye of Dr. Leroy Kerr and he has been advised to have the optic removed to save his life. Diphtheria germs were carried on the speck into the eye.

Lobby Gave $60,000 For Fight to Elect Littlefield

AGAINST LABOR LEGISLATION

Democrats Knocked Out With Whiskey, According to Mulhall, Who Makes Interesting Revelations on Witness Stand Regarding Political Work For National Manufacturers

Washington, July 15.—Martin M. Mulhall, professed field agent, strikebreaker, lobbyist and political worker for the National Association of Manufacturers, continued his remarkable story before the senate lobby investigating committee. Mulhall was on the stand for six hours. In that time nearly 600 letters, telegrams and scraps of memoranda were identified by him, with hardly more than a glance.

He remembered apparently the first names of members of congress, of lesser politicians, of labor leaders and underlings, of secretaries to congressmen and of all the men he had worked with through a year of most active campaigning in many parts of the country.

In the course of his testimony Mulhall declared that Boston raised $20,000 for the political fight in Maine to re-elect Charles E. Littlefield to congress and to defeat Daniel J. McGillicuddy, the present congressman.

The senate committee devoted the day largely to reading into the record the tale of Mulhall's political activities. There was an occasional reference to strikes in which the "lobbyist" had figured and an allusion now and then to the inside workings of labor unions, but for the most part it was a story of politics as Mulhall played the game.

Muhall's correspondence told of the efforts to re-elect Littlefield and defeat McGillicuddy. Littlefield was to be supported by the National Association of Manufacturers because of his stand against labor legislation.

Mulhall said on cross examination that he had been told that $60,000 was spent in that campaign.

"The plan was to have enough whiskey on hand on Sept. 10 to keep a lot of Democrats drunk," said Mulhall. "We had a hall in Rockland as labor headquarters. I myself counted twenty-three men in that hall so beastly drunk they could not get on their feet. I left because of the stench."

Mulhall told of an agreement he made with Dr. G. L. Crockett for work against the labor forces in Knox county.

Crockett was paid $500 for making a speech at the Rockland rink Sept 6, 1906, against Samuel Gompers. At that time, Mulhall said, Crockett held a sort of commission as physician to Gompers, and he was paid for turning against Gompers and making the speech at the rink. The speech did more harm than good, the witness added, because it was a "scurrilous attack" on Gompers.

Mulhall's letters went into detail concerning the campaign he made in Maryland to beat former Congressman Pearre of Cumberland. Pearre was the author of an "injunction" bill, and Mulhall and other agents went out to get his political scalp.

Just before the committee adjourned the letters began to show Mulhall's activities after Marshall Cushing, the secretary of the association, with whom he had correspondence so long, had resigned.

"Cushing resigned," Mulhall declared, "because he said no self-respecting politician could report on lobby work."

REVIEWED BY PRESIDENT

Native Troops of French Colonies In Africa Parade In Longchamps

Paris, July 15.—The presence of detachments of native regiments from the French colonies in Africa, Tonking, Annam and Madagascar, lent unwonted interest to the annual review at Longchamps of the garrison of Paris by President Poincare on the occasion of the anniversary of the taking of the Bastile in 1789.

After the presentation to the president of the colors of the forty regiments on parade and the inspection of their escorts, all the troops marched past. The native detachments were given the place of honor at the head of the column and received a tremendous ovation.

Quickly Killed by Lockjaw

Worcester, Mass., July 15.—Six hours after he suffered lockjaw from a small cut in the right foot from a rusty nail, Carl F. Fahlin, 55, a mason contractor, died at the City hospital.

Some of the letters read earlier in the day showed that Mulhall had been known to the late Vice President Sherman, who in 1907 was chairman of the national Republican congressional committee.

DEAD GIRL AND LOVER

Alice Crispell, Found Dead After Being Out With Herbert Johns

JOHNS IS FREED

No Foul Play In Drowning of Alice Crispell In Harvey's Lake

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 15.—Four reputable physicians who performed the second autopsy upon Alice Crispell, the 18-year-old girl whose body was found floating in Harvey's lake a week ago, announced last night that the girl had met her death from drowning, and that there were absolutely no marks on the body to indicate foul play.

Following the announcement Herbert Johns, the sweetheart of the young woman and the last person seen in her company, was released. While the cause of the death of the girl still remains a mystery, it gradually is being conceded that she fell into the lake following a day of wild carousing on July 4.

It was on July 4 that Johns declared she left him at the lakeside, within a few yards of where the body was found.

LANDLORD JEALOUS OF STAR BOARDER

Kills Man Whom He Says Made Love to His Wife

Lynn, Mass., July 15.—Jealousy, caused by attentions which their star boarder was said to be paying to his wife, drove Giovanni Bufalini, 39 yers old, into such a frenzy that he shot and killed Amelio Machoris, 24, while the victim was sitting at the dining table in the Bufalini home in Swampscott.

Three shots were fired. Two were imbedded in the wall and the third entered the back of Machoris' head and came out through his cheek. Death, the police think, must have been instantaneous. Bufalini is being held at Lynn police headquarters on a charge of murder.

The first news that anybody outside the Bufalini home had of the tragedy came when Bufalini gave himself up to Policeman Dunlap of the Swampscott force. He said he killed Machoris for making love to his wife.

POLICE TO INVESTIGATE

Want to Know Cause of Fire In Old Boston Building

Boston, July 15.—The historic brick building occupied as the first watch factory in America, at 161-165 Hampden street, Roxbury, was destroyed by a four-alarm fire which partly destroyed several tenements and for half an hour threatened the entire district of Roxbury.

The state police are to conduct an investigation to ascertain the origin of the fire and the conditions of the structure which permitted such a rapid spread of the flames.

Slate roofs on several old tenements and stables was all that made it possible for the firemen to keep the fire under control, to save several adjoining factories and scores of tenements. The damage to the plant is estimated at $30,000.

MUST ELECT LITTMAN

Sulzer Warns Military Company Which Turns Down a Jew

Albany, July 15.—Governor Sulzer declares that if ex-Sergeant Samuel Littman is not elected second lieutenant of company B, Forty-seventh infantry, N. G. N. Y., he will disband the company.

He made the statement while commenting on the report of Lieutenant Colonel Bendell, which found that Littman's contention that he had been denied election to a second lieutenancy in the company because he is a Jew is sustained.

ATTACKED IN ALL QUARTERS

Bulgaria Now Faces Battle From Four Nations

THE STORIES OF MASSACRES

Confirmed by London Newspaper Correspondent, Who Tells of Sacking and Burning of Seres by Bulgarians —Lamentable Condition of Those Who Escaped Death

London, July 15.—In spite of the fact that Bulgaria has thrown herself at the feet of the powers in a desperate effort to check the marching armies of her erstwhile allies it is doubtful if early peace is in sight. Enraged by the inhuman treatment of their nationals by the defeated Bulgars, Greek and Serb are not likely to be easily satisfied.

The enemies which Bulgaria has made by her arrogance and greed are closing in on her from all sides. Servia and Greece from the west and southwest, Roumania from the north and Turkey from the southeast. What the final outcome will be it is difficult to predict.

The sacking and burning of the town of Seres by the defeated Bulgarian army and the accompanying outrages on women and atrocities on men are fully confirmed in a dispatch from a well known Greek correspondent.

The retreating Bulgarian soldiers, he telegraphs, opened a cannonade with four field guns from a hill above the town on Friday. At the same time bands of Bulgarian soldiers, led by their officers, scoured the streets, first pillaging the stores and houses and then drenching them with petroleum and setting them alight until the greater part of the town was blazing.

Many people were crucified, hacked to pieces or burned alive by the Bulgarians, who committed incredible outrages on women of all ages, many of whom died from the effects.

The condition of those who escaped is lamentable. Rich merchants are dying of hunger, while wretched mothers, trembling with cold, are trying to find covering and food for their naked and starving children. The situation is desperate, as all the pharmacies were burned down and there is a total lack of medicines for the sick and bandages for the injured. The Greek authorities in Salonica are rushing foodstuffs, clothing and medicines to the stricken town.

The Bank of Athens, the Oriental bank, the palace of the metropolian, the great synagogue, all the schools, the tobacco warehouses of the American, Austrian and German companies, and the hospitals were burned after they had been pillaged. The American Tobacco company alone suffered to the extent of $1,000,000.

Ferdinand Denies Massacres

London, July 15.—King Ferdinand of Bulgaria, in a long message dispatched from Sofia, informs The Evening News:

"The stories and reports which the Greeks and Servians have been circulating in Europe concerning so-called outrages committed by my troops upon the Greek and Servian populations in Macedonia are absolutely unfounded and are published with the object of creating a bad impression."

King Ferdinand proceeds to tell of the liberties enjoyed by the people of Adrianople without regard to nationality, and closes with the allegation:

"Systematic attacks and persecutions have been directed against the Bulgarian element in Macedonia by the Servians and Greeks. The districts of Kastoria, Florina and Vodena have been cleared of all well-educated men and the prisons of Salonica are overflowing with innocent Bulgarians. Great numbers of Bulgarians have been transported from their homes in the country to Greece and to the islands in the Aegean sea.

"The same cruel regime has been applied to the Bulgarians in the regions occupied by the Servians. The purely Bulgarian town of Kukush has been completely burned by the Greek troops. Thousands of refugees," King Ferdinand concluded, "on arriving in Sofia, gave terrifying accounts of the horrible deeds committed by the Servians and the Greeks. The Bulgarian government is ready to come to an international inquiry, which will enlighten the world concerning the stories of these excesses."

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

When he speaks to me in that tone of voice I always do it. And I needed Billy badly at that very moment. I took him out of his little cot by Dr. John's big bed and sat down with him in my arms over by the window through which the early moon came streaming. Billy is so little, little not to have a mother to rock him all the times he needs it, that I take every opportunity to give it to him I find—when he's unconscious and can't help himself. She died before she ever even saw him, and I've always tried to do what I could to make it up to him.

Poor Mr. Carter said when Billy cut his teeth that a neighbor's baby can be worse than twins of your own. He didn't like children, and the baby's crying disturbed him, so many a night I walked Billy out in the garden until daylight, while Mr. Carter and Dr. John both slept. Always his little, warm, wilty body has comforted me for the emptiness of not having a baby of my own. And he's very congenial, too, for he's slim and flowery, pink and dimply, and as mannish as his father, in funny little flashes.

"Git a stick to punch it, Molly," he was murmuring in his sleep. Then I heard the doctor call me and I had to kiss him, put him back in his bed and go across the hall.

Dr. John was standing by the table with this horrid small book in his hand and his mouth was set in a straight line and his eyes were deep back under their brows. I hate him that way, too, and I would like to get up so close to him that he couldn't hit me or have a door locked between us. It's strange how the thought of taking a beating from a man can make a woman's heart jump. Mine jumped so it was hard to look as meek as I felt best under the circumstances, but I looked it out from under my lashes cautiously.

"There you are, Mrs. Molly," he said briskly as he handed me this book. "Get weighed and measured and sized up generally in the morning and follow all the directions; also make every record I have noted so that I can have the proper data to help you as you go along—or rather down. And if you will be faithful about it to me, or, rather Al, I think we can be sure of buttoning that blue muslin dress without even the aid of the buttonhook." His voice had the "if you can" note in it that always sets me off.

"Had we better get the kiddie some thinner night rigging?" he hastened to ask as I was just about to explode. He knows the signs.

"Thank you, Dr. Moore! I hate the very ground you walk on, and I'll at tend to those night clothes myself to morrow," I answered, and I sailed out of that office and down the path to ward my own house beyond his hedge. But I carried this book tight in my hand, and I made up my mind that I would do it all if it killed me. I would show him I could be faithful—to whom I would decide later on. But I hadn't read far into this book when I committed myself to myself like that!

I don't know just how long I sat on the front steps all by myself bathed in a perfect flood of moonlight and loneliness. It was not a bit of comfort to hear Aunt Adeline snoring away in her room down the dark hall. It takes the greatest congeniality to make a person's snoring a pleasure to anybody, and Aunt Adeline and I are not that way.

When poor Mr. Carter died the next day she said: "Now, Mary, you are entirely too young to live all your long years of widowhood alone, and as I am in the same condition, I will rent my cottage and move right up the street into your house to protect and console you." And she did—the moving and the protecting.

Mr. Henderson has been dead forty-two years. He only lived three months after he married Aunt Adeline and her crape veil is over a yard long yet. Men are the dust under her feet, but she likes for Dr John to come over and sit on the porch with us because she can consult with him about what Mr Henderson realy died of and talk with him about the sad state of poor Mr Carter's liver for a year before he died. I just go on rocking Billy and singing hymns to him in such a way that I can't hear the conversation. Mr. Carter's liver got on my nerves alive, and dead it does worse. But it hurts when the doctor has to take the little, sleepy boy out of my arms to carry him home, though I like it when he says under his breath, "Thank you, Molly."

And as I sat and thought how near he and I had been to each other in all our troubles I excused myself for running to him with that letter and I acknowledged to myself that I had no right to get mad when he teased me, for he had been kind and interested about helping me get thin by the time Alfred came back to see me. I couldn't tell which I was blushing all to myself about, the "luscious peach" he had called me or the "lovely lily" Alfred had reminded me in his letter that I had been when he left me.

Why don't people realize that a seventeen-year-old girl's heart is a sensitive wild flower that may be shattered by a breath? Mine shattered when Alfred went away to find something he could do to make a living, and Aunt Adeline gave the hard, green stem to Mr. Carter when she married me to him. Poor Mr. Carter!

No, I wasn't twenty, and this town was full of women who were aunts and cousins and law kin to me, and nobody did anything for me. They all said with a sigh of relief, "It will be such a nice, safe thing for you, Molly." And they really didn't mean anything by tying up a gay, dancing, frolicking, prancing colt of a girl with a terribly ponderous bridle. But God didn't want to see me always trotting along slow and tired and not caring what happened to me, even pounds and pounds of plumpness, so he found use for Mr. Carter in some other place but this world, and I feel that he is going to see me through whatever happens. If some of the women in my missionary society knew how friendly I feel with God they would put me out for contempt of court.

No, the town didn't mean anything by chastening my spirit with Mr. Carter, and they didn't consider him in the matter at all, poor man! Of that I feel sure. Hillsboro is like that. It settled itself here in a Tennessee valley a few hundreds of years ago and has been hatching and clucking over its own small affairs ever since. All the houses set back from the street with their wings spread out over their gardens, and mothers here go on hovering even to the third and fourth generation. Lots of times young, long legged, frying size boys scramble out of the nests and go off to college and decide to grow up where their crow will be heard by the world. Alfred was one of them.

And, too, occasionally some man comes along from the big world and marries a plump little broiler and takes her away with him, but mostly they stay and go to hovering life on a corner of the family estate. That's what I did.

I was a poor little lost chick with frivolous tendencies, and they all clucked me over into this empty Carter nest which they considered well feathered for me. It gave them all a sensation when they found out from the will just how well it was feathered. And it gave me one too. All that money would make me nervous if Mr. Carter hadn't made Dr. John its guardian, though I sometimes feel that the responsibility of me makes him treat me as if he were my stepgrandfather-in-law. But all in all, though stiff in its knees with aristocracy, Hillsboro is lovely and loving, and couldn't inquisitiveness be called just real affection with a kind of squint in its eye?

And there I sat on my front steps, being embraced in a perfume of everybody's lilacs and peachblow and sweet syringa and affectionate interest and moonlight, with a letter in my hand from the man whose two photographs and many letters I had kept locked up in the garret for years. Is it any wonder I tingled when he told me that he had never come back because he couldn't have me and that now the minute he landed in America he was going to lay his heart at my feet? I added his honors to his prostrate heart myself, and my own beat at the prospect. All the eight years faded away and I was again back in the old garden down at Aunt Adeline's cottage saying goodby, folded up in his arms. That's the way my memory put the scene to me, but the word "folded" made me remember that blue muslin dress again. I had promised to keep it and wear it for him when he came back—and I couldn't forget that the blue belt was just twenty-three inches and mine is—no, I won't write it. I had got that dress out of the old trunk not ten minutes after I had read the letter and measured it.

No, nobody would blame me for running right across the garden to Dr. John with such a real trouble as that. All of a sudden I hugged the letter and the little book up close to my breast and laughed until the tears ran down my cheeks.

Then before I went into the house I assembled my garden and had family prayers with my flowers. I do that because they are all the family I've got, and God knows that all his budding things need encouragement, whether it is a widow or a snowball bush. He'll give it to us.

And I'm praying again as I sit here and watch for the doctor's light to go out. I hate to go to sleep and leave it burning, for he sits up so late, and he is so gaunt and thin and tired looking most times. That's what the last prayer is about, almost always—sleep for him and no night call!

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

KINGSBURY IS READY

Open Challenge to Race J. Fay Phelan at Any Time

At the Fourth of July games at Merrymount oval, Fred Kingsbury and J. Fay Phelan of the North Dorchester A. A., according to the referee's decision, ran a tie race in the 440 yard dash. Friends of Phelan declared him the winner. An argument ensued and in view of the difference of opinion, among the judges at the finish, Dr. J. Gardiner Smith, the referee called the event a draw. Phelan forfeited his claim to the trophy, and it was later given to Kingsbury. At that time Kingsbury openly challenged Phelan. He has again stated, publicly and privately, that he will run him and all he wants is three days notice. Phelan has not given him the notice as far as is known.

STATUE OF SARMIENTO

Proposal to Honor Argentina's Great President

Following closely on the presentation July 4 by the American colony in Buenos Ayres of a statue of Washington comes a movement started by the officers and cadets of the training ship Sarmiento now in Boston harbor to raise a fund to erect in the United States, a statue of Sarmiento, South America's greatest President. It is understood that the statue will be placed in Boston as it was in this city that the great President received many of the ideas which he incorporated when becoming President of Argentina. Not only was he considered the greatest President but was more prominent than any one else in South America in the cause of public education.

WARRANT OUT FOR ICE MAN

The first arrest for violation of the law regulating the sale of ice will be made today on the complaint of James N. Cantfill, sealer of weights and measures. This afternoon he applied for a warrant for the arrest of a driver of a local company.

The violations, according to Mr. Cantfill have covered a period of two days. Most of the patrons who had been given less ice than they should have received reside at Houghs Neck, it is claimed.

Under a recent ruling of Attorney General Swift, a person is entitled to a fair value in purchasing ice and in this instance Mr. Cantfill claims that he has evidence which will show that a fair value was not given in many cases.

The name of the person for whom the warrant was issued was not stated by Mr. Cantfill but the case will be heard in court Wednesday morning.

Since the opening of the warm spell a sharp lookout on ice sales has been kept. Despite this many housekeepers have complained. The complaints cover practically every section of the city.

A vigorous campaign will be waged against all drivers who have made a practice of discriminating and actual violation will result in their immediate arrest.

MRS. KEYES WITH QUINCY FRIENDS

A Boston paper reports that Mrs. June Eaton Keyes, who went away suddenly after her mother, Mrs. Jennie May Eaton was indicted, charged with the murder of Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, is living with friends at 37 Edison park, Quincy.

While her mother is in the Plymouth County jail on the charge of poisoning her husband, the daughter insists her mother is innocent. Mrs. Keyes declares it is outrageous the way her mother is held in jail and that she should never have been imprisoned.

Mrs. Keyes was reticent on the question of her separation from her husband, Ralph P. Keyes of Somerville, a clerk in a Boston Trust Co., from whom she was separated immediately after the indictment of Mrs. Eaton.

Judge Albert E. Avery, Presiding justice of the East Norfolk District court, with Mrs. Avery is at Nantucket spending his vacation. During his absence Judge E. Granville Pratt is on the bench.

RESCUE BY THE IRIS

Commodore Crane Saves Lives of Five Men

While Commodore Harry S. Crane was cruising off Nantasket on Sunday in the Iris his attention was attracted to a dory flying distress signals, about four miles out in the harbor. He immediately made a run and rescued five men who were suffering from exposure. All wore bathing suits. They were put ashore at Kenberma where they are said to be summer residents.

They told Commodore Crane that Saturday they had purchased a canoe and that because of their lack of sailing knowledge the canoe got away from them Sunday and was carried out. They secured a dory and started a chase, but were outdistanced. Realizing they could not make the canoe they commenced the return. Not until then did they know that none could handle oars in ship shape fashion. The wind was blowing about 40 miles an hour and was very sharp.

When the Iris was headed for the party there were no other boats in sight. They were taken aboard and put ashore. When the Iris picked up an anchorage at Kenberma a large crowd was on the beach, the tidings having just gone out that five were missing. Commodore Crane neglected to take their names.

Captain Freeman and Fred E. Tupper, Commissioner of Public Works, were aboard the Iris when the rescue was effected.

SLIGHT LOSS AT MORNING FIRE

Fire broke out on the roof of the old BcLeod house on Smith street this morning and was extinguished by the department before much damage had been done. Box 441 was sounded at 10.15 and the all out followed shortly after. The damage is estimated at $25.

—Ammonia bombs are being tried out on some of the national forests for the purpose of extinguishing forest fires. They are said to have worked well in the case of brush fires where the fire-fighters find difficulty in getting near enough to the burning area to beat out the flames. Each bomb exploded will extinguish fire in a circle of about five yards in diameter.

—Two policewomen have gone on duty at Newport, R. I., one carrying a parasol and the other swinging a mesh bag—deadly weapons, both of them.

Her Feeling.

The Vicar (to the old lady, the last of whose family has married)—You must feel lonely, Mrs. Muggins, after having such a large family.

Mrs. Muggins—Yes, I so, sir. Sometimes I misses 'em and sometimes I wants 'em, but I misses 'em more nor I wants 'em.—Sketch.

SQUANTUM BREEZES.

The dance held Saturday evening at the Squantum Inn by the Squantum Women's club was one of the most successful parties held this season. About forty couples attended and enjoyed dancing to the music furnished by the Postal Clerks orchestra.

On Saturday evening a subscription party will be held at the home of Mrs. J. Loughan, Bellevue avenue under the auspices of the Squantum Women's club.

A bazaar to be held by the Squantum Women's club has been postponed from Saturday July 19 to Wednesday July the 23d. Mrs. T. F. Callahan has kindly offered to open her spacious home for this affair.

A masque ball given by Edward Carlson Saturday evening at the vacation house was a most delightful affair. Many handsome costumes were in evidence and pretty favors and confetti helped to make the party very picturesque.

City Council Can Now Fix Tax Limit for Current City Expenses

New Law of 1913 Requires a Public Hearing

Several cities of the Commonwealth have already taken action under the new law passed by the legislature of 1913 fixing the amount which the city may raise for current expenses in its budget. Under the old law the amount a city could raise for current expenses in its budget was $12 per thousand dollars on assessed valuation, based on the valuation of the previous year, plus what receipts it could get.

The result has been that every year, especially with Quincy, it has been hard work to keep the budget within the limit. The demands of the various departments every year increase but never has it been found possible to give the departments all that they desired, or in fact all that they should have.

Take for instance the School department which the present year was cut several thousand dollars from the amount which the School Committee estimated was absolutely necessary to carry on the department. Then again take the Street department. It was found impossible under the $12 limit to give the Commissioner as much money as was necessary to meet the demands of the citizens for street repair, etc.

So it was with practically every department in the city. Each year it has been a continual fight to keep the budget within the limit, even when taking all the receipts in sight, which by the way, the Assessors claim should belong to that department for the purpose of reducing the tax rate.

This year, for instance, the estimated receipts were something like $90,000 and if the Assessors could have taken this amount and applied it to the reduction of the tax rate it would make quite a difference. The City Council however, grabbed the greater part of this estimated amount to help out on the budget, and even then the amount claimed to be actually needed could not be appropriated.

As most people are well aware an appeal was made to the legislature by several of the cities for relief. The legislative committee held several public hearings at which various views were expressed. Some cities favored keeping the amount at $12 while others desired it raised to $13 and some even as high as $16.

The act as passed, however, leaves it with the cities of the Commonwealth, with the exception of the City of Boston, to fix the amount which it may raise in its budget.

Under this act it is compulsory upon the City Council to take action within ninety days from the date of the passage of the law. As the bill became a law the latter part of May, it will be seen that action must be taken some time during the months of June, July or August.

The act provides that the City Council must advertise and give to the citizens a public hearing on the question of fixing the amount which the city may raise for current expenses in any one year.

This public hearing will give an opportunity for the citizens to express their ideas, after which the City Council must pass an order stating the amount which may be raised for current expenses based on the valuation of the previous year. It may be $12 per $1000, or any amount which the Council may deem wise. Under this law it can if deemed best fix the amount as high as desired. Any increase however will increase the tax rate.

Once fixed it means similar action on the part of the City Council to change the amount.

Of course any action taken by the City Council this year will not affect the budget of 1913 as that has already been passed and the tax rate is being figured out on the amounts appropriated in the budget. Next year however the budget which is passed during the early part of the year will be made up in accordance with the amount fixed by the City Council this year.

The law is quite a complicated one, for in addition to obliging the City Council to fix the limit, it also contains other provisions as to the time when the budget shall be submitted, etc. In fact it covers several pages in the "Blue Book" and as one Councilman stated would puzzle a Philadelphia lawyer to fully understand.

It is probable that the Mayor will advertise a public hearing and call a special meeting of the City Council at an early date to take action as provided for in the act.

When fixing the limit which may be raised for current expenses, its effect on the tax rate should be considered. The higher the limit, the larger the amount to raise by taxation unless bond issues are curtailed.

FORE RIVER IMPROVEMENT

Quincy Men Before Board of Army Engineers

A Washington dispatch of Tuesday says Admiral F. T. Bowles, president of the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation and several members of the Massachusetts delegation in Congress, together with a delegation from Quincy appeared before the Board of Army Engineers for Rivers and Harbors today to urge a preliminary survey for the widening and deepening of the channel of Weymouth Fore River from Quincy to Boston.

The main arguments presented were that shipbuilding corporation and the general commerce of Fore River had grown so that an improvement of the river was necessary. It was shown that the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation employed about 4000 men and that its weekly payroll amounted close to $60,000.

The argument was made that Fore river was one of the tributaries of Boston Harbor and that the general scheme of waterway improvement in Massachusetts demanded the improvement of this river. Senator Weeks and Representatives Murray, Curley, Gilmore, Deitrick and Thacher spoke.

With Admiral Bowles, who explained the details of the situation, were F. F. Crane, Harbor and Waterways Commissioner of Quincy; F. O. Wellington and Joseph I. Kemp, trial captain of the Fore River Corporation.

The board took the matter under advisement.

JOHN RAE AND PROF. ARNOLD

Return from Europe on the Steamship Canopic

Among those who returned on the White Star liner Canopic which docked Monday were John Rae of the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation, Prof. Herbert P. Arnold and his mother, Mrs. Arnold.

Prof. Arnold left Quincy last fall to accept an important teaching position at Munich. He is a graduate of Quincy High school and Harvard college, and the appointment was in recognition of his fine ability as a linguist. Mrs. Arnold has been making her home with her son.

Mr. Rae has been superintending the installation of the engines of the new Italian scout cruiser Nino Bixio. He said a speed of 28 knots had been developed on her trial trip, although the vessel is only of 3000 ton register. According to Mr. Rae the Italian government has decided to construct two new war machines and it is his opinion that the Fore River Corp'n. will be awarded the contracts for the engines.

C. E. MEETING.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the United Presbyterian church will conduct the regular midweek prayer meeting, Thursday evening. James Ross, the vice president of the society, will lead the meeting, taking for his topic, "The Ideal Christian," which will include the different Christian virtues dealt with during the past six months, as outlined on the regular Christian Endeavor topic cards.

The church, at the present time, is without a pastor, and the Endeavorers have been working in conjunction with the elders of the church, and have put forth strenuous efforts in order to secure a larger attendance at the midweek prayer meetings, and have also endeavored to make the meetings more helpful and interesting by giving testimonies, and taking part as in their own Sunday evening meetings. The Endeavorers are endeavoring to live up to their motto, "For Christ and the Church."

VOTES FOR WOMEN

Boston Suffragettes in City Square

Are En Route to Washington

The party of suffragettes who are making the trip from Boston to Washington, to take part in the great demonstration to be held July 31 by representatives fro mevery part of the Union, in the interest of the senate bill which is to be voted on that day giving equal suffrage to women, held forth in Quincy this noon. The party arrived in two automobiles from Boston at 11.20, and stopped near City Hall.

The members of this party are Mrs. Susan W. FitzGerald recording secretary of the National Association, Miss Matilda Fraser, one of the best known teachers of the Girl's Latin School of Boston; Miss Margaret Murphy of the Women's Trade League, daughter of Michael A. Murphy, ex-president of the Boston Central Labor Union; Dr. Eliza T. Ransom, a prominent physician of Boston and Cambridge; Mr. Ricker of the Men's League, Joseph F. Kelley, secretary of the Mens League. Others in the party were Mrs. George P. Morris, Mrs. Mary A. Howe, Mrs. L. B. Russell, Mrs. C. A. Russell, Mrs. N. L. Crawford and Miss Frances Russell.

The cars were elaborately decorated on the sides with signs of various kinds and behind each there trailed a bright green flag of the association. The ladies also carried bright umbrellas to keep off the sun, these same umbrellas being decorated with words reading "Votes for women."

As the cars drew up in front of City Hall, one of the women alighted, dropping her net bag and spilling its contents of uneda biscuit, letters and a bag which evidently contained a lunch. The contents were scattered over the ground but were quickly picked up by the bunch of newspaper men, that had gathered about the car and put back into the net bag although probably not in as neat order as they were originally.

Armed with a letter of introduction to Mayor Stone one of the women hastened into City Hall. Mayor Stone was not present however and City Treasurer Tilden, who is acting Mayor during his honors absence, ducked into a big vault, leaving "Tom" Smith who happened to be in office at the time in charge. Commissioner Tupper was in the crowd in front of the hall and was not recognized.

City Clerk Crane was the only man who stood his ground and he quickly informed the women that they could speak on Depot street just around the corner of City Hall. It had been planned to have the ladies speak on the vacant lot of H. M. Faxon near the residence of Dr. Garey but this was later changed and they spoke on Depot street as stated above.

There was quite a crowd about City Hall at 11 o'clock the hour at which the party was due to arrive and when at last they did make their appearance there was a large crowd gathered. The young lady clerks at City Hall who usually go to lunch at 11 o'clock, let the lunch go that they might hear the speakers.

While the speaking was in progress other members of the party circulated among the crowd of mere men that had gathered, seeking their signatures to a petition to the Senate praying that the women be allowed the privilege of voting.

Some of the men readily signed the petition but others declined. It was noticed however that refusal to sign did not ruffle the women and that

REUNION OF PINEL BROTHERS

Thirty-four Years Since They Met Together

Five Pinel brothers, three from Quincy, one from England and another from Canada, met here in reunion on Tuesday. A similar reunion has not taken place for 34 years, and at that time five sisters who are living in England held a meeting while their brothers met in Boston. This year circumstances did not permit the sisters to hold another reunion.

Those present: Philip J. of Quincy, aged 71 years; John of the Jersey Isle, England; Alfred P. of Quincy; Rev. Joseph of Van Keek, Ontario; and Walter P. the youngest brother, aged 55 years of Quincy.

All were born on the Jersey Isle, in the English channel and the family of 10 are all alive. The father lived to the age of 79 and the mother passed away in her 84th year.

John Pinel is the only unmarried brother. The other four are the fathers of 27 children and grandfathers of 18 children.

Rev. Joseph Pinel is a Methodist minister and is the head of the Methodist church at Van Keek, Ontario. He was ordained in Canada and preached in the Hall Place M. E. church about 30 years.

John Pinel is steward aboard the Atlantic Transportation Company's liner Minnehaha and has made over 850 trips across the Atlantic ocean in his many years service.

Philip learned the trade of blacksmithing as a boy and followed it for many years. At present he has practically retired from active work.

Alfred is the head of the Pinel Tool Co., a manufacturing concern located in South Quincy.

Walter P., is the manager of the Pinel Variety store and owner of the Pinel block at Franklin and Water streets.

Miss Marion Pinel, who is 73 and the senior of the family is post mistress of a sub-station on the Jersey Isle, which position she has held for many years. Mrs. Louise P. O'Neil, 53 years and the baby of the family, lives on the Jersey Isle and is the mother of a family.

Tuesday evening they dined at the home of Walter Pinel on Franklin street. Good cheer and merriment reigned among the immediate members of the family that attended. Today a parting dinner will be tendered John at the same place who leaves to resume his duties aboard the Minnehaha. One of the most pleasing features of the day was the group picture taken by a local photographer. A picture taken 34 years ago hung on the wall of the dining room at the reunion, and no visible changes are noticable.

ROGER GARDNER RESCUED

Got Beyond His Depth Off the Reservation

Medals are due to John Mahon, organist at St. John's church, and to Peter M. Sullivan, a well known newspaper man for rescuing Roger Gardner, aged 17 years, of Franklin street, Wollaston Park from a watery grave Tuesday night. Gardner was in bathing off the Reservation when he got beyond his depth and was in danger of being drowned. His cries were heard by John Mahon, who was on the shore in his bathing suit, who immediately rushed to the lad's assistance. He was brought ashore completely exhausted. Mahon and Sullivan then gave first aid treatment to the lad until he revived.

TWO SYRIANS WERE FINED

Convicted of Carrying Loaded Revolvers in Boston

McDEVITT WILL HAVE RIVALS

Several Candidates in Field for Senator

Papers Are Now In Circulation

John J. McDevitt, the suspended Senator, who stated that he was coming before the voters for vindication, (meaning his and not theirs) will be opposed in his own ward, if the knowledge of certain people connected with the Democratic party is based on fact. It is said that the man who is to pick up the banner of Democrats in this senatorial district, this year, is one eminently qualified to fill the position with honor and trust.

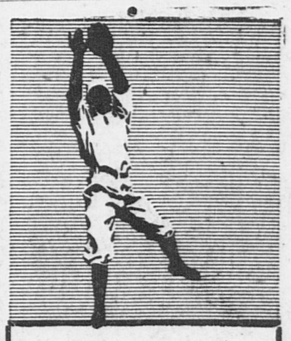

This situation was but one of the many discussed at the Tuesday evening meeting of the Democratic City Committee. The attendance was large, and in the absence of William Kelly, the president, Thomas Griffin, the vice president, presided.

Among those who attended was J. Donahue of Sharon who came here to publicly announce the candidacy of Representative Jeremiah Leary of Sharon, for County Commissioner. Mr. Donahue spent considerable time telling the committee of the record of Representative Leary.

Charles W. Guy will be the candidate for councillor in this district.

Papers placing Philip Coveney and David I. Murray, both of Hyde Park, in the Senatorial field are already in circulation in Quincy. A local paper has also advanced Leo P. Noonan as its candidate for Senator, and mentions the glorious work he did in connection with the McDevitt tragedy of last fall.

A banquet will be held by the committee in August, and it is planned to have the leaders of the party in the state make addresses. The next meeting will take place Thursday evening in the Johnson building.

The time has gone by when you can finance a best girl on a mere lemonade basis.

Mr. Rockefeller may be a "rose-bush in the garden of the Lord," but nobody has called him an American beauty.

Mr. Wilson can't expect to make his mark on the history of his country until he learns to go around the golf course in less than 95.

Postmaster General Burleson gets up at 5 o'clock in the morning. No doubt the office seekers begin to ring his bell about then.

The Commoner is coming out only once a month now. Perhaps Mr. Bryan does not enjoy getting up a column article about the weekly meeting of the county committee as well as formerly.

The returns of cotton acreage suggest that the attempts to curtail production would have been more successful if they had sent out appeals to every farmer to plant all he could.

Bad forest fires owing to drought, while campers do well to clean up on leaving for home, they need not take pains to sweep the embers of their fire out of sight in the underbrush.

How would the tax payers get the ment, if the Fourth of July did not come along to give them something to do?

Three city tax rates have been reported and all are high. Gloucester has a rate of $19.40, the same as in 1912. Medford is $19.00 an increase from $18.00, and Fitchburg is $20.00.

The valuation of Gloucester is $25,616,323 against $24,880,707 in 1912.

The valuation of Medford is $31,374,950 against $29,864,900 in 1912. The increase in real estate was $1,678,500, but personal property showed a loss of $316,200. The population is estimated at 26,415. The city has 4685 houses, a gain of 343. Polls assessed 7,630.

CONSCIENCE MONEY.

Have the American people suddenly become more or less conscientious? How account for the drop of the government conscience fund to $2814? These figures for the year ending June 30 are the lowest voluntary restitutions for 12 years.

A plausible explanation is that this fund has come largely from travellers who lied at the custom house about dutiable goods. Recent prosecutions no doubt convinced them the game is not worth playing.

Conscience must be firmly handled to be a successful sinner. If you give a child candy between meals once or twice, soon he demands a daily allowance. If conscience is dealt with firmly and as a matter of principle, it soon comes to know its place. But if handled in a temporizing fashion, it becomes very unruly, and pokes its nose into everything.

Many successful Americans have felt, when it came to a matter of buying legislatures or city councils, that this was a realm in which questions of conscience could not enter. The mere fact that it was "business," placed it outside questions of morality or immorality.

Government conscience funds came from unsuccessful sinners. They wanted to play the game, but didn't quite dare to. They temporized with conscience. They would pass the winking officer with some plausible excuse. The law was mean, or the goods sold at auction wouldn't bring the price. Given an inch, conscience took an ell, and finally forced restitution.

The fall of the conscience fund, therefore does not seem to have much significance. Let no slurs be cast at uneasy souls that returned illgotten savings. The act is highly creditable. While fear is called a low down motive, the Good Book says the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom. Would that more people entertained it!

AMONG OUR EXCHANGES.

—The fire insurance is not on a satisfactory basis in this country. It shows the effect of laxness of laws as regards official supervision, and laxness of business methods within the companies themselves. In the United States the average rate is about $1.11 per $100 of insured value. In Norway it is 45 cents, in Sweden 40 cents, in Austria-Hungary 30 cents, and in Germany 2 1-2 cents. But all is not grist that goes to the American insurance mill for the reason that losses in this country are greater than in the European countries. The loss paid on every $100 of insurance in the United States is 64 cents; in Norway, 24 cents; Sweden, 21 cents; Austria-Hungary, 16 cents, and Germany, 12 cents.

The companies are making about the same margin of profit in this country as are the companies in the foreign field, but, as will be seen, there is a tremendous waste on this side. This is almost entirely within the control of the companies. They permit irresponsible agents who, in their zeal for commissions, or because they do not take the trouble to make necessary inspections, to insure risks in which the hazard is great, and which by no chance could secure protection abroad. The result of this is that the honest purchaser of insurance must pay the higher rate. As in many other fields where there are abuses, it is the unorganized public that must hold the sack. Legislative bodies may not always get off on the right foot, but the fact that they are beginning to give attention to this great institution of insurance is a promising sign.—Haverhill Gazette.

NO PLANS FOR WIND

Ladies Unable to Enjoy a Moonlight Sail

The moonlight sail of the Wollaston Yacht club did not pan out as well as expected Tuesday evening. The moon was on hand all right as was the tide, but no arrangements had been made for wind with the result that there was not wind enough to fill the sails of the yachts which had assembled about the floats of the clubhouse to take the ladies out for a sail. It was a beautiful evening and had the wind made its appearance the sail would have been delightful. However there were a number of power boats on hand and all who desired to be pushed about the harbor by a gasoline engine were accommodated.

Power boat sailing is all right, but there is not quite as much sentimentality in a power boat neither does the moon seem to have the power to make two hearts beat as one quite as readily in a power boat as in a sail boat. For this reason many of the young people preferred to remain on shore and enjoy the concert and dancing at the clubhouse. An orchestra gave a fine concert, there was dancing and refreshments and the evening was one of enjoyment to all even if there was no wind.

800 MILE AUTO TRIP

Quincy Party Make a Tour of White Mountains

William Nash, chauffeur, for C. H. Penniman, returned Tuesday afternoon from an 800 mile automobile trip with a Wollaston party. The party left Quincy twelve days ago in a five passenger Pope-Hartford for a trip through the White Mountain region. The trip up was made via Lake Winnepesaukee and Plymouth, and most of the time was spent in automobile trips about the mountain region. The return trip was made via Rochester and Portsmouth, N. H. One of the pleasing features of the trip was that in the whole twelve days the tires did not suffer a puncture or blowout and there was not a skip of the engine, or a single thing to mar the pleasure of the trip.

COST IN DOLLARS AND HUMAN LIVES

Scientists Say Fly Costs Us Over $100,000,000 a Year.

DISEASE FOLLOWS THE PEST

Methods of Exterminating Deadly Insect Are Bringing Satisfactory Results In Nearly Every City—Minnesota State Entomologist's Report a Model For All to Follow.

Figured out in money, to say nothing of the loss in human life, the cost to the United States annually of supporting its fly population amounts to $157,800,000, say government experts who have been making a study of the results of the germ spreading activities of the insects.

It is estimated that the fly is responsible for an expenditure of $50,000,000 for the handling of tuberculosis cases, attributable to germs spread by the pests, while $70,000,000 represents the cost of typhoid fever cases, originating in the same way. As a carrier of intestinal fever and summer complaint diseases and a transporting agency of dysentery the fly, scientists say, must be charged with an expenditure of $37,200,000 for the care of these diseases.

The statistics and the realization that thousands of human lives are being sacrificed annually because no method has been devised for abolishing the fly explain why health officials generally and the health departments of practically every municipality this summer are making active efforts to arouse citizens to the importance of keeping the pests away from their food supplies and places of habitation.

Results Are Gratifying.

Satisfactory results are being obtained in nearly every city where anti-fly campaigns are in progress. In almost every one there has been a noticeable falling off in the size of the pest horde, a fact that is almost daily commented upon by the inspectors of the local health departments.

In most cities the warfare on the fly was inaugurated with a cleanup campaign. After that the method consisted principally of bringing to the attention of citizens by means of educational posters, letters and newspaper articles suggestions for fly eradication that had been tried out with success previously.

A bulletin issued by the state entomologist of Minnesota embodies most of the methods by which the deadly pest may be exterminated and is a model for cities conducting or planning an anti-fly crusade.

"In the early spring clear up all refuse heaps, filth of all kinds, manure piles, garbage heaps, old cans, trash of every sort and abolish as far as possible other places where flies may breed," states the report of the Minnesota entomologist. "Screens should be used freely on all doors and windows. The prompt disposal of garbage should be arranged for, and swill barrels and garbage cans should be tightly closed. Use some form of fly trap with the proper bait and continuously place it where it will do the most good."

Other Precautionary Measures.

Other precautions suggested by the Minnesota official and indorsed by health authorities everywhere are the following:

"Do not build a stable near dwelling house; arrange for prompt removal of stable manure from your vicinity and keep manure covered and in dark until removed. Keep your premises clean as free as possible from filth of all kinds, slop water, garbage and refuse heaps. If your neighbor allows such nuisances upon his own premises complain of him to your board of health.

"A safe and effective poison is made by adding three teaspoonfuls of formalin in a pint of half milk and half water. This is particularly useful where flies do not have access to other sources of moisture. It should be kept out of the reach of children and might be placed in a Mason fruit jar inverted in a shallow dish and so arranged as to feed the liquid into the dish as fast as needed, or it might be poured into an open dish and placed near the sink or wherever flies gather. Other sources of moisture should be kept away from them."

RELIC OF ROAD AGENT DAYS.

Century Old Express Safe Found In a Stone Wall.

While repairing the state highway at the top of Conococheague mountain, near Concord, Md., Ralph Hopple and Elias Snyder, who were tearing down a stone wall, found an express money box of heavy sheet iron, lined with wood. The lid was partly open, and the lock had been sprung with an iron hook found near the box.

It is thought the box was in the old stone wall for more than a century and was placed there by a gang of robbers that infested that section in the days of stageconches.

SERVIA READY TO TALK PEACE

Awaits Arrival of Duly Accredited Bulgarian Envoys

EXPECTS MUTUAL EXHAUSTION

Sir Edward Grey Sees No Other Way to End War—Thinks Powers Should Perfect and Maintain an Agreement—Bulgars Says Greeks Have Committed Massacres

London, July 16.—The report that Servia refuses to enter into peace negotiations with Bulgaria is without foundation. A dispatch from Belgrade says she is waiting only for the arrival of persons armed with full powers from Bulgaria to open the discussion of peace preliminaries. Hostilities will cease as soon as their signatures have been attached to a demand for negotiations.

It is officially stated that quiet prevails along the whole front except at Zayetchar, where some unimportant skirmishes have occurred.

That the Balkan struggle will end by a process of mutual exhaustion seems the only hope that Sir Edward Grey, the British foreign secretary, is able to hold out. In a statement in the house of commons, in reply to a suggestion that an armistice should be forced on the Balkan states, Grey said it was impossible to exaggerate the horror of the war, but mere words were not likely to affect the situation and it would be most difficult for the European powers to resort to force to impose peace.

Bulgaria has asked Russia to aid her in securing peace, and Servia and Greece had agreed to cease hostilities upon certain conditions. As to Turkey, no exception could be taken to her action so long as she adhered to the Enos-Midia line.

The essential thing for the powers, said Grey, was to perfect and maintain an agreement. The war was so exhaustive that it could not be of long duration, and no complications ought to arise endangering the European concert. There was every reason to believe, he concluded, that matters would be brought to a satisfactory termination.

The Bulgarian government has officially charged the Greeks with massacres and other atrocities equally as horrible as those charged to the forces under Czar Ferdinand at Ceres and other points. The government declares that on entering the town of Pravishta, the Greeks massacred practically the entire Bulgarian and Turkish population.

The Greek and Servian forces continued their advance yesterday and the Greek commanders predicted that the next engagement would be fought on Bulgarian territory. The most encouraging news to reach Sofia is that General Ivanof has effected a "splendid retreat" and the Bulgarians still have hope of a last stand on their border.

LOCKED IN ICE BOX

Waiter Found Unconscious After Being Prisoner Three Hours

Haverhill, Mass., July 16.—Trapped in a big refrigerator at the Hotel Cushing at Salisbury Beach, when another employe noticed the door open and closed and fastened it, believing it had been left open by accident, Harry E. Atwood, a waiter at the hotel, was imprisoned for three hours and was nearly suffocated.

When preparations were being made to serve supper last evening Atwood was missed and a search was instituted but no traces of him were found on the beach.

Later the refrigerator was opened and one of the waiters entering to secure food stumbled over Atwood's body. Atwood was unconscious. A pulmotor was brought into use to revive Atwood and no serious effects of the accident are feared.

QUICK TREATMENT NEEDED

Eight Children Bitten by Dog Found to Have Been Mad

Boston, July 16.—The state board of health reported last night that the dog which bit eight children in Wilmington and Andover last Sunday was suffering with rabies. To the authorities of Wilmington and Andover this means that to save the children who were bitten from hydrophobia they must at once undergo the Pasteur treatment.

The children are under the care of physicians in Boston, Wilmington and Andover. Most of them were severely bitten about the face. Face bites, physicians say, require the quickest and fullest treatment.

NEW HAVEN'S LOBBY BILL

Railroad Company Paid $8500 to Legislative Counsel and Agents

Boston, July 16.—It cost the New Haven road $8500 for legislative counsel and agents this year, according to the returns which have just been made to the secretary of state's office.

Of this outlay Counsel Arthur P. Russell received $5000; the firm of Coolidge and Hight received the remaining $2500.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

LIMA BEANS OUT OF SEASON.

If you like lima beans you may enjoy them in midwinter as well as summer, thanks to the admirable varieties of canned beans on the market. If you wish to economize you can substitute dried lima beans for the canned ones. If the dried legume is soaked before using it will be soft and palatable.

Beans are rich in protein, so it is not necessary to have meat as a part of the meal when they are to be used. To eat beans or peas and meat and eggs at the same time is to eat about three times as much muscle making food as the blood can take up, and what it cannot utilize is so much waste.

A Rich Stew.

When boiling or stewing the beans, into a half pint of liquid from the beans drop two tablespoonfuls of butter braided with two of flour and stir constantly, adding enough milk to make a sauce of the right consistency. Into this put the beans, which have been drained, and let them cook long enough in it to be thoroughly seasoned by it. At the last moment add another good tablespoonful of butter.

Browned Lima Beans.—Put lima beans that have been kept simmering until well done into a baking dish. Stir together one cupful of boiling water, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls of molasses, one of sugar, one of mustard and one of vinegar. Pour over the beans, cover them and bake for one hour. Take off cover, add one tablespoonful of butter and allow to brown before removing from oven.

A Simple Process.

Lima Beans With Butter Sauce.—Take large lima beans, either dried or canned. The best way to prepare the dried ones is to place the desired amount of beans in a pan of cold water, allow the water to become warm—not hot—stand aside, cover and let the beans soak until ready to cook. At luncheon time add salt to taste and enough water to cook them until they are tender. Dress with melted butter.

Cream of Lima Bean Soup.—Take a cupful of dried lima beans, wash and soak them overnight in a quart of cold water. Boil slowly until tender, adding a little more water if needed while cooking. Mash through a sieve, season with a teaspoonful of salt, a dash each of cayenne and white pepper, two tablespoonfuls of minced celery; return to the fire. Add a pint of fresh milk, an even tablespoonful of butter creamed with one scant tablespoonful of flour, to be stirred in and cooked for five minutes before soup is taken from fire.

GRANITE FIRM FAILS.

The granite manufacturing plant of Jellyman & Jones of Montpelier, Vermont is closed and the firm is in voluntary bankruptcy, with liabilities of about $11,000 and assets of about $7,000, it is said. The firm employed about a gang and a half of men.

The firm has met with hard luck during the past few years, its chief trouble dating from the time when the plant was burned out three years ago, at which time the firm had considerable finished work in the plant and lost much property on which it is said full insurance was not realized.

They then purchased the Lillie stone shed in Montpelier and then on top of the fire setback came more financial trouble when the Willison wholesale monumental firm failed. Then, to cap all, Mr. Jones, a member of the firm, broke one leg last November and was unable to attend to business for a long time. There are said to be about twenty-five creditors, among whom are several in Barre and Montpelier.

For senator and for members of State committee nomination papers must be signed by at least 65 voters in the district.

For members of ward committee and for delegates to state convention nomination papers must be signed by at least five voters in the ward.

No nomination paper shall contain the name of more than one candidate except in the cases of delegates to the State convention and members of ward committee.

No nomination paper except for a delegate or delegates to a convention shall be valid in any respect to any candidate whose written acceptance is not thereon.

Nomination papers must be submitted on or before five o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday, August 16, to the registrars of voters at the city clerk's office in City Hall for certification of the number of signatures thereon, and must be filed on or before five o'clock in the afternoon of Tuesday, August 19, with the secretary of the commonwealth.

Every nomination paper shall state in addition to the name of the candidate, his residence, with the street and number thereof, if any, the office for which he is nominated, the political party which he represents, and except for candidates for ward and town committees and delegates to conventions the paper may state in not more than eight words, the occupation of the candidate, the public offices which he has held, or that he in a candidate for renomination, provided he is at the time an incumbent of the office for which he seeks renomination for another term, but not otherwise.

The following is a list of offices for which candidates are to be nominated or elected by each political party at the primaries to be held September 23:—

To be nominated:—Governor, lieutenant-governor, secretary, treasurer, auditor and attorney-general of the commonwealth, councillor, senator, representatives in General Court, district attorney, register of probate and insolvency, county commissioner and two associate commissioners.

To be elected:—Member of state committee, members of ward committees, delegates to state convention.

—There ought to be encouragement for the plan to save for the food of the people the 48,000,000 eggs cracked, and made unsalable on that account alone, each year in New York city. The plan under consideration involves the organization of a company that shall equip a plant for the exclusive purpose of taking the broken stock as it is segregated by receivers and distributing it in such a way as will restore it to the general food supply. To do this there will have to be some modification of the health regulations now in force, and this is what will be first sought for." The success of the plan should tend to cheapen the cost of living.—Springfield Republican.

WOMEN WARRIORS.

Amazons of Old Appear to Have Been Dames of High Degree.

For a long time it was held that the story of the Amazons, the valiant race of women warriors, so great a favorite with the Greeks and other peoples of antiquity, was a mere poetic myth, but within recent years archaeological researches have indicated that there were indeed women fighters of high rank in those remote days.

A couple of years ago there was unearthed a sepulcher in that part of Italy known as Etruria in which was discovered a war chariot of bronze and iron, wherein was crouched the skeleton of a woman. About this skeleton were the remains of rich robes and ornaments of gold and ivory, such as in the old traditions the Amazons wore in battle. The bronze work and the terra cotta vases fixed the date of the tomb as about 800 B. C.

The first stories of the Amazons assigned them to the northeastern part of Asia Minor, but Etruria was peopled from Asia Minor and had attained a high degree of skill in certain of the arts long before Rome was founded. Such evidence as this tomb affords is, in the opinion of more than one authority, more convincing than the pictures of Amazons on the old vases or such legends as that of Queen Penethesilea, who was said to have led 5,000 women fighters to the aid of Priam during the Trojan war.—Harper's Weekly.

BLACK SEA DEAD LINE.

The Black sea, which in some parts has a depth of more than 6,500 feet, is poisoned by sulphureted hydrogen wherever the water is deeper than 1,200 feet. This accounts for the curious fact that there is no organic life below that depth, excepting perhaps some bacteria of very low order, impregnated with sulphur.

The causes for this phenomenon are explained by the quick outflow of the fresh water through the Bosporus, while salt water coming from the Mediterranean enters through a deeper current into the depths of the Black sea. The waters on the surface are, therefore, controlled absolutely by horizontal currents of considerable force, and vertical currents which might carry the noxious gases from the bottom to the surface and fresh oxygen from the surface to the bottom are hardly ever noticeable.

The water at great depths is so saturated with sulphuric gas by the disintegration of organic matter sinking to the bottom by reason of its weight that no fish or other living being which needs oxygen for its organic system can exist beyond a stated depth.—London Standard.

Made In Glasgow.

It was a long and tedious train journey, says the Glasgow News, and the other two occupants of the compartment had exhausted several other topics and were now "on" about cock-fighting. "When I was a lump o' a laddie in Blant're," said one of them, "I had a wee bantam that could bate ony bird ye could pit before him. Weel, this Sunday mornin' he bate twa cocks, yin efter the ither, but he wis that sair torn that to pit him oot o' pain I thrawed his neck and threw him on the midden. Then we took oot anither pair o' birds, and yin o' them crawed his challenge, when up me wee bantam staggered tae his feet, gied a cock-a-leerie-law, and drappit doon deid at the midden." "Ye're an awfu' man, Wully," said the other man solemnly. "Are ye no' feart ye drap doon deid yersel'?"

Not Sufficiently Explicit.

"I think we met at a summer resort two or three years ago, didn't we?"

"Perhaps we did. Your face looks very familiar to me."

"It ought to. I proposed to you one evening and you accepted me."

"Did I? Do you remember where it was?"

"It was on a hotel veranda, behind a lot of palms and rubber plants."

"Oh, you will have to be more explicit than that. Nearly half of my engagements have taken place with that kind of a stage setting."—Chicago Record-Herald.

Not an Uncommon Experience.

"I don't know whether or not it's because they have a personal grudge against me," said the smiling cynic, "but I know when I ride in full daylight on a street car with which I'm perfectly familiar the conductor calls every cross street loudly and clearly, but when I'm trying to find my way on a dark night in an entirely new neighborhood he's silent as a church on a Monday morning."—Milwaukee Sentinel.

Jumbled Wrong.

Manager—My dear madam, your complaint is a very foolish one. The stage director did not slander you because he gave your role to another actress. Actress—Of course he slandered me. Didn't he take away my character?—Baltimore American.

INEZ MILHOLLAND

Secretly Becomes Bride of Wealthy Hollander

INEZ MILHOLLAND MARRIED

Amsterdam Man Captures Heart and Hand of Noted Suffragist

London, July 16.—Miss Inez Milholland, famed on two continents for her great beauty and her work for woman's suffrage, announced that she was secretly married last Friday to Eugene Boissewein of Amsterdam. They are spending their honeymoon in Holland.

The bride made the announcement in a message given out by her sister at the family residence in Prince of Wales terrace.

Eugene Boissewein is the son of a wealthy planter of Java and a member of an old Dutch family. He is connected with the Marconi wireless company.

The marriage of Miss Milholland, who is wealthy, created a profound surprise in the American colony. She had frequently declared to her friends that she would never marry.

STILWELL LANDS IN SING SING PRISON

Ex-Senator, Convicted of Bribery, Still Protests Innocence

New York, July 16.—Ex-State Senator Stephen J. Stilwell went to Sing Sing without making his oft-predicted statement involving state legislators in grafting.

Justice Seabury, in the supreme court, signed the commitment papers, and a deputy sheriff took Stilwell up the river to begin his four to eight years' term for soliciting a bribe.

On leaving the Tombs, Stilwell gave out a signed statement denying that he was to make a confession. "I am entirely innocent," the statement added, "and, therefore, have no confession to make."

CHILD'S SKULL FRACTURED

Worries Over Lost Shoe After Being Struck by Train

Boston, July 16.—While playing around Harbor View station, East Boston, 7-year-old Peter Zaccone was struck by a Narrow Gauge train as he lifted his head above the trestle. When he was found after the accident he was sitting on the mud flats, twelve feet below, crying for his mother and bewailing the loss of a shoe, saying he feared he would get a whipping if it was not found.

After an operation on his head, the doctors at the relief station stated that he was in a fair way to recover, although he had a compound fracture of the skull.

EUROPE FORCES AMERICA'S HAND

Disturbed by Our Lack of Policy Toward Mexico

LIVES OF FOREIGNERS UNSAFE

State Department Asked What It Proposes to Do About It—Powers May Take Steps to Restore Peace Should We Fail to Do So—Our Battleships Are on Guard

Washington, July 16.—Already one of the great European powers, through its diplomatic representatives here, has called the attention of Secretary Bryan to the chaotic conditions in Mexico and the effect upon the welfare and safety of its citizens there, with a polite inquiry as to what the United States proposes to do about it.

Whether the inquiry was part of a concerted movement on the part of European powers to bring the state department to a declaration of its purpose toward Mexico did not develop. Reports from the City of Mexico, however, would appear to warrant that conclusion.

Secretary Bryan was asked if any foreign power had made representations to him regarding the situation in Mexico. His reply was a flat declination to discuss the situation in any way. The diplomatic circle here has its own ideas of which power the inquiring one is, but in the absence of an announcement from the state department none of the diplomats will make any statement which can be quoted with authority. No official of the state department will discuss the situation in view of Bryan's declination to talk about it.

Until very recently President Wilson has attached little importance to rumors of outside influences being brought to bear to cause the United States to recognize the Huerta regime. It is beginning to be apparent now that there must be very soon some official declaration on the subject to reassure the European powers of the protection of their citizens and subjects against pecuniary loss by the continuance of present conditions. Failing such a declaration, some officials fear European powers may feel themselves free to take steps to restore peace.

American warships continue to stand guard over American interests in Mexican gulf and Pacific ports. The battleship South Carolina swings at anchor in the harbor of Tampico, and the battleships Minnesota and New Hampshire are at Vera Cruz. The battleships Michigan and Louisiana arrived yesterday at Vera Cruz to relieve the Minnesota, which will return north.

Three vessels will remain on duty constantly in the two gulf ports, while the fourth will serve as a relief, giving officers and men of the several vessels opportunity for shore leave at Galveston. On the Pacific side the cruiser Pittsburg is at Guayamas and the Denver is at Tobolobampo.

England Admits Note

London, July 16.—It was officially stated here that the statement from Mexico City regarding the representations made to their respective governments by the European diplomats there on the subject of the position taken by the United States towards Mexico is correct. The British foreign office, however, declines to discuss the matter in any form, or to express any opinion on the subject, on the ground that it is too delicate.

TRUCE AT IPSWICH

Strike Leaders and Mill Owners Reluctant to Force Matters

Ipswich, Mass., July 16.—Despite threats by the officials of the Ipswich mills, no more families were evicted yesterday, but those families forced into Mill lane Monday were compelled again to seek shelter beneath the temporary refuge offered by the I. W. W. leaders, and the mill officials promise more drastic measures.

As the aftermath of the strike now stands, there are thirty-seven families living in mill-owned tenements who may be forced to leave today, though both the I. W. W. leaders and the mill officials are reluctant about pressing matters too strongly.

NEW TRIAL FOR CAPPS

Children of Preacher Say They Testified Falsely Against Him

Fort Smith, Ark., July 16.—Marion Capps, a preacher convicted of burning his three children to death, has been granted a new trial by the supreme court.

The jury's failure to state the degree of murder of which Capps was guilty, and the alleged affidavits of his 15-year-old daughter, Bertha, and his 12-year-old son, Ellis, that they had testified falsely against him at his trial, were stated as the grounds for granting the new trial. The testimony of the children convicted their father.

BOYS AND GIRLS EVENTS

Much Interest in Playground Sports

List of Prize Winners

Nearly four hundred children packed the Ward Three playground, Tuesday afternoon to witness the opening contest of the all-round group games for children, under the auspices of the City playground instructors. The events were in charge of L. F. LaRose of the Y. M. C. A. and Frank Tirrell, Jr., supervisor of the field and Miss Arnold and Miss Lucy Elwell of Sargent gymnasium.

The large list of entries was one of the most attractive features of the meet. Children from all sections of the city contested in the various events, and in the standing broad jumps the distance between the marks set by the boys and girls was not very far apart.

A large number from Ward One were on hand, since no playground has been equipped this year in the centre of the city and the children have been going to the different ones throughout the city in an effort to find amusement.

The supervised playground was introduced into Quincy but a short time ago but immediately became very popular. The supervisors are all picked with an eye to character and disposition and several of the Sargent gymnasium pupils spend considerable time here for the purpose of practical work.

GIRLS' SPORTS.

The girls' events and the winners were as follows:

Standing broad jump, under 10 years, won by Lillian Beaton, Mary Curtin, second, Effie Mattson, third, Celia Cremmins and Alice Leino tied for fourth. Distance 5 ft. 8 1-2 inches.

Standing broad jump, 10 to 12 years Martha Pyyny and Beatrice Medlin tied for first; Theresa Zacchini, third; Marion Kerr, fourth. Distance, 5 ft. 10 in.

CARRIGAN SUCCEEDS STAHL AS MANAGER

Man Who Piloted Red Sox to Victory Last Year is "Fired"

Chicago, July 6.—William F. Carrigan, the veteran catcher, is manager of the Red Sox. Jake Stahl, who piloted the team to a world's championship last year, was given his unconditional release yesterday by President McAleer, "for the good of the club," and retired from the club as soon as yesterday's game was over.

His contract, which calls for $10,000 a year, does not run out until October, and he will be paid in full. Stahl pays the penalty for the nonsuccess of the team this year.

It is evident that the interview between Stahl and McAleer was stormy. Both seemed flustered and embarrassed. Stahl particularly seemed to be resentful.

OUT OF LORDS' HANDS

Home Rule Measure Is Certain to Become Law Next Spring

London, July 16.—The house of lords last evening defeated the home rule bill for Ireland by a vote of 302 to 64.

This second rejection of the Irish bill by the lords ends the power of that house over the measure. It will not be sent up to it again for action of any kind.

The house of commons will now keep possession of the home rule measure until next spring. Premier Asquith will then bring in the bill for the third time, pass it through the commons as he has twice already, and then will carry the bill to the king for his signature. This, constitutionally, cannot be refused, even though the sovereign were personally opposed to the measure, which he is not.

DECREE NISI GRANTED

Cornwallis-West Divorced by Former Lady Randolph Churchill

London, July 16.—A decree nisi was granted by the divorce court to Mrs. George Cornwallis-West, formerly Lady Randolph S. Churchill, a daughter of the late Leonard Jerome of New York.

The grounds for the granting of the decree were statutory, desertion and misconduct.

Mrs. Cornwallis-West gave her evidence on the witness stand apparently unmoved by the great crowd which had been attracted to the court by the case. It is understood the plaintiff will resume her former name, and be known as Lady Randolph Churchill.

Mrs. Chivington Gets Divorce

Chicago, July 16.—Mrs. Rosalie Chivington, wife of President Chivington of the American Association of Baseball clubs, won a decree of divorce and $5000 alimony in the local courts, alleging desertion.

GOVERNMENT MEDIATION

Bill to Adjust Railroad Men's Dispute Is Signed by President

Washington, July 16.—New federal machinery for the adjustment of railroad disputes was authorized when the house and senate passed and the president signed the Newlands-Clayton bill just as it was agreed upon at the White House conference between President Wilson, congressional leaders and representatives of the big eastern railways and their employes.

This law creates the board of mediation and conciliation, headed by a commissioner, to which the eastern railways and employes' brotherhoods have declared their willingness to submit the wage dispute on account of which 80,000 conductors and trainmen have voted to strike.

The union officers agreed to an armistice pending action by congress, and officials here expect them now to make ready to lay their case before the federal mediators as soon as the president makes the appointments.

KING ALFONSO'S WINDFALL

Court Sustains Bequest of $500,000 Made by Ardent Royalist

Saint Gaudens, France, July 16.—King Alfonso of Spain will soon be able to enjoy a windfall of $500,000 bequeathed to him by Albert Sapene, formerly mayor of a small town near Tollon, who died in an asylum some time ago.

The civil court here pronounced judgment upholding the Sapene will, which his sister and other next of kin had sought to have set aside on the plea that he was insane when he made a will in which he disinherited his sister.

The court held that while Sapene had suffered from the mania of persecution, he had shown that he was fully able to conduct his business and had a valid reason in an old family quarrel for disinheriting his sister.

It was because he was an ardent Royalist that the testator chose King Alfonso as a beneficiary.

NINETY-SECOND OF DEPARTED LEADER

Christian Scientists Observe Eddy Birth Anniversary

Boston, July 16.—Christian Scientists all over the world are today celebrating the ninety-second anniversary of the birth of Mrs. Mary Baker Glover Eddy, founder of the Christian Science faith.

In the opinion of her followers, Mrs. Eddy is as much alive today as ever, though in a spiritual form, her mortal body having temporarily disappeared from earthly view. It is the firm belief, however, of many of her followers that she will be reincarnated in her earthly form and appear once more on this earth.

This view is advanced by Mrs. Augusta E. Stetson of New York, who has proclaimed herself the successor of Mrs. Eddy and is leading a fight to gain control of the sect.

FOR KILLING RALPH SHEA

Patrolman Miller of Boston Is Charged With Manslaughter

Boston, July 16.—An indictment charging manslaughter was returned by the Suffolk grand jury against Patrolman Charles W. Miller for killing Ralph P. Shea in "Kerry Village" early on the morning of June 17.

Patrolman Miller was at once arraigned and in a shaky voice pleaded not guilty. He was admitted to the same bail, $1000. No date was set for his trial.

Miller's spirit is said to have been broken by the death of Shea. His comrades say he thinks of it night and day. He has a wife and children. He was formerly a fireman.

Miller claimed when arrested that he had been brutally beaten by a crowd of toughs before he fired in self defense the shot that killed Shea.

Slayer Surrenders to Police After Dispcsing of a "Vampire"

Toledo, July 16.—Mrs. J. Berrington, aged 25 years, of Detroit, was murdered on Madison avenue by John McBrine, aged 23, also of Detroit.

While scores of persons were passing McBrine fired three revolver shots through the woman's head and then turned the weapon towards his own head and fired, the bullet, however, only passing through his hat. He then gave himself up to a policeman.

McBrine said the woman was "a vampire" who had married three men and deserted them. Mrs. Berrington, who is said to have left three children in Detroit, was employed in a restaurant here.

FRATRICIDAL WAR IN BALKANS BLOODIEST IN WORLD'S HISTORY

Upward of 50,000 Men Killed Since Beginning of Hostilities.

Horrible Atrocities and Wholesale Massacres by Bulgarian Army, Reported.

BULGARIA and its former allies, Greece, Servia and Montenegro, are now engaged in a death grapple over the spoils wrested from Turkey, after one of the bloodist wars in history. Dispatches, which are undoubtedly authentic, state that upward of 50,000 men have lost their lives since the beginning of hostilities, which commenced at least ten days before a formal declaration of war was made. This is a greater slaughter than any recorded in the war against Turkey.

Roumania, having swiftly mobilized 500,000 troops, is already embrolled in the struggle and Austria, Russia and, in fact, all Europe is waiting fearfully on the result. So terrible has been the slaughter that it is reported Czar Ferdinand, King Peter and King Constantine are already anxious to agree upon an armistice, if satisfactory terms can be arranged by the powers.

Meanwhile horrible atrocities and wholesale massacres are reported from various towns and villages in the Balkans. Some of the worst of these occurred at Kilkisch, Planitza and Rayovo, where men, women and children were burned alive by Bulgarians. At Kirkut the Bulgarian irregular troops, who are little more than brigands, burned to death 700 men by imprisoning them in a mosque, under which they exploded bombs, which set the building on fire.

No Quarter Given.

These outrages against the usages of civilized warfare resulted in reprisals by the Greeks and Serbs, when brought in contact with the Bulgars. Practically no quarter is given or demanded. A correspondent in Macedonia cables that the battles have been the most sanguinary in history, the attacks frequently being made at night, the soldiers fighting corps-a-corps, shooting at each other at a distance of thirty yards and then resorting to the bayonet.

CZAR FERDINAND OF BULGARIA.

In some instances both sides have advanced so densely that they had no room to use their bayonets, but taking them off, utilized them like sabers. When even these weapons failed them they seized each other's throats and fought like wild beasts, strangling and biting each other ferociously.

At Kotchana and Istip, in Macedonia, a terrible battle was fought. It was practically a drawn battle, although the Bulgarian general, Kovatcheff, was forced to withdraw owing to the failure of his re-enforcements to arrive. Close to 40,000 men were killed or wounded in the three days' engagements, the Bulgarians losing upward of 20,000 men and the Servians nearly as many.

Cholera Breaks Out.

To add to the other horrors of the war, cholera has broken out among the Servian wounded at Belgrade and is now raging fiercely, the death rate rising daily. It is also decimating the Red Cross camps for the wounded on the field.

A terrible picture of the extent and effect of the war fever in the Balkans is given by Francis McCullaugh, the London Daily News correspondent, in Belgrade. McCullaugh states that the mutual hostility of the allies is intense and that the hatred which they now have for each other is far worse than that which they had for the Turk. "The natural consequence," he says, "is that manners have greatly degenerated and the peoples have become brutalized. Even the higher officials are boorish and unshaven. Their treatment of foreign diplomats and newspaper correspondents has never been equaled since the days of that drunken grand seigneur who used to hit ambassadors between the eyes.

"In the light of recent revelations the great common crusade against the Turk, which so moved the heart of Christendom nine months ago, sinks to the level of a robber confederacy for the purposes of loot. The territorial greed which now displays itself naked and unshamed is not only disconcerting; it is hideous and awful."

Success of the Bulgars.

The ultimate success of Bulgarian arms depends upon quick action. Unless she can speedily bring Servia and Greece to subjection she is lost, for the Roumanian army, now on the move,

KING PETER OF SERVIA.

TYPICAL SERVIAN SOLDIERS.

KING CONSTANTINE OF GREECE.

which has already engaged in several minor skirmishes, will be thrown in the balance against her.

In the beginning the strategic aim of the Bulgarian movements was to cut off the Servian army operating in northern Macedonia from Belgrade and Saloniki. To do this seven bridges on the Servian railway north of Vranje were destroyed by the Bulgars, thus isolating the Servians on the north, while the recapture of Bjevgeis by the Bulgarian arms, which is forty-five miles northwest of Saloniki, cut them off from the Greeks on the south. These advantages, however, were minimized by the Greek successes in southern Macedonia and by the sturdy defense of the Servian armies at Kotchana and Istip.

At present a great part of the Bulgarian army is cut off from supplies, except such as it can obtain on the enemies' land and by road, a Greek force under King Constantine at Doiran having severed their railroad connections with Demirhissar and Serres. Late dispatches indicate that the Greeks now hold the latter city. A large amount of the Bulgarian army's provisions has also been captured by the Greeks, and this may cause a complete change in the Bulgar plan of campaign, even necessitating making terms of peace.

Beginning of Hostilities.

The steps that led to this bitter warfare between the aforetime allies, even after the congress of the powers at London had definitely settled the apportionment of the territory of the defeated Turks among them, are curious. Summed up briefly they are as follows:

Servia demanded the revision of the Serbo-Bulgarian treaty, which defined their respective spheres in the conquered territory. Bulgaria absolutely refused to agree to such revision.

Overtures were made by Servia that both nations should partially demobilize their forces pending a settlement, but in view of the military dispositions of Servia and Greece Bulgaria could not agree.

The czar warned both Servia and Bulgaria as to the course that Russia would take toward the side which first started war and invited the allies to send their premiers to St. Petersburg to arrange a settlement.

Servia accepted, believing that the treaty would be modified. Bulgaria, however, refused to accept, requiring first an assurance that the treaty should be respected.

Not receiving this assurance, Bulgaria refused to enter into any agreement with the other "allies." Instead, she actively prepared for war.

In the meantime her armies in the field and those of the other Balkan states came into conflict, the commanding generals of all acting without authority from their respective governments. Naturally this extraordinary situation could not long exist without a formal declaration of hostilities being made, and these were finally issued, but only after fighting had been going on for nearly a fortnight.

Feeling at Vienna.

The czar's invitation to the allies to send their premiers to St. Petersburg to arrange a settlement aroused much feeling in Vienna, the Austrian capital, where it was regarded as leading forward to a Russian protectorate over the Balkans, an event which might embroil Russia and Austro-Hungary in war also. But with the formal declaration of war, between the states, this danger was averted.

KING CHARLES OF ROUMANIA.

A dramatic feature of the internecine war fever, which has been sweeping over southeastern Europe since the disagreement over the division of spoils arose, was the ultimatum forced upon King Charles of Roumania, giving him the choice of signing an order for the mobilization of the great Roumanian army of 500,000 men or abdicating. He had determined that Roumania should remain neutral in the fratricidal struggle that is now going on, but the head of the war party, Prime Minister Titus Majoresco, at the head of a mob of wildly shouting supporters, coerced him into signing the order.

According to the latest dispatches, Europe will now make no move to interfere in the struggle between the Balkan states. The problem which the powers now face is to localize hostilities and keep the Turk from entering the arena also, as the porte seems inclined to do.

OCEAN CANAL FOR CANADA.

Will Connect Canadian Great Lakes With St. Lawrence River.

Arrangements for the construction of a new canal between the Canadian great lakes and St. Lawrence river have advanced rapidly during the past few weeks, and having obtained official support to the extent that the Canadian government will guarantee any issue of bonds necessary in connection with this matter, it is proposed to commence construction work practically at once.

The canal is intended to assist the Canadian wheat growers who at present have to break bulk as soon as the great lakes have been traversed, before the crop can be loaded into ocean going vessels. If this difficulty could be overcome, a vast amount of time, labor and money would be saved. It is, therefore, anticipated that the enterprise will pay for itself without much difficulty.

It is stated that the entire financing of the scheme will be carried out in Canada.

THE Melting of Molly

LEAF SECOND.

A Love Letter, Loaded.

THE very worst page in this red—red devil—I'm glad I've written it at last—of a book is the fifth. It says:

"Breakfast—one slice of dry toast, one egg, fruit and a tablespoonful of baked cereal, small cup of coffee, no sugar, no cream." And me with two Jersey cows full of the richest cream in Hillsboro, Harpeth valley, out in my pasture!

"Dinner—one small lean chop, slice of toast, spinach, green beans and lettuce salad. No dessert or sweet." The blue grass in my yard is full of fat little fryers, and I wish I were a sheep if I have to eat lettuce and spinach for grass. At least, I'd have more than one chop inside me then.

"Supper—slice of toast and an apple." Why the apple? Why supper at all?

Oh, I'm hungry, hungry until I cry in my sleep when I dream about a muffin! I thought at first that getting out of bed before my eyes are fairly open and turning myself into a circus actor by doing every kind of overhand, foot, arm and leg contortion that the mind of cruel man could invent to torture a human being with, would kill me before I had been at it a week, but when I read on page sixteen that as soon as all that horror was over I must jump right into the tub of cold water I kicked, metaphorically speaking. And I've been kicking ever since, literally to keep from freezing.

But, as cruel a death as freezing is, it doesn't compare to the tortures of being melted. Judy administers it to me, and her faithful heart is so wrung with compassion that she perspires almost as much as I do. She wrings a linen sheet out in a caldron of boiling water and shrouds me in it for the agony—and then more and more blanket windings envelop me until I am like the mummy of some Egyptian giantess. I have ice on the back of my neck and my forehead and murder for the whole world in my heart. Once I got so discouraged at the idea of having all this hades in this life that I mingled tears with the beads of perspiration that rolled down my cheeks, and she snatched me out of those steaming grave clothes in less time than it takes to tell it, soused me in a tub of cold water, fed me a chicken wing and a hot biscuit and the information that I was "good looking enough for anybody to eat up alive without all this foolishness," all in a very few seconds. Now, I have to beg her to help me, and I heard her tell her nephew, who does the gardening, that she felt like an undertaker with such goings on. At any rate, if it all kills me it won't be my fault if anybody has to lie in saying that I was "beautiful in death."

But now that more than a month has passed, I really don't mind it so much. I feel so good and strong and prancy all the time that I can't keep from bubbling. I have to smile at myself.

Then another thing that helps is Billy and his ball. I never could really play with him before, but now I can't help it. But an awful thing happened about that yesterday. We were in the garden playing over by the lilac bushes, and Billy always beats me, because when he runs to base he throws himself down and slides along on the grass on his little stomach as he sees the real players do over at the ball grounds. Then all of a sudden, before I knew it, I just did the same thing, and we slid to the flowerpot we use as a base together, each on his own stomach. And what did Billy do but begin right there on the grass the kind of a tussle we always have in the big rocking chair on the porch! Over and over we rolled, Billy chuckling and squealing, while I laughed myself all out of breath. I'm glad I always would wear delicious petticoats, for there, looking right over my front fence, I discovered Judge Benton Wade. I wish I could write down how I felt, for I never had that sensation before, and I don't believe I'll ever have it again.

I have always thought that Judge Wade was really the most wonderful man in Hillsboro, not because he is a judge so young in life that there is only a white sprinkle in his lovely black hair, that grows back off his head like Napoleon's and Charles Wesley's, but because of his smile, which you wait for so long that you glow all over when you get it. I have seen him do it once or twice at his mother when he seats her in their pew at church and once at little Mamie Johnson when she gave him a flower through their fence as he passed by one day last week, but I never thought I should have one all to myself. But there it was, a most beautiful one—long and slow and distinctly mine—at least I didn't think much of it was for Billy. I sat up and blushed as red all over as I do when I first hit that tub of cold water.

"I hope you'll forgive an intruder, Mrs. Carter, but how could a mortal resist a peep into the garden of the gods if he spied the queen and her faun at play?" he said in a voice as wonderful as the smile. By that time I had reefed in my ruffles around my feet and pushed in all my hairpins. Billy stood spread legged as near in front of me as he could get and said in the rudest possible tone of voice:

"Get away from my Molly, man!"

I never was so mortified in all my life, and I scrambled to my feet and came over to the fence to get between him and Billy.

"It's a lovely day, isn't it, Judge Wade?" I asked with the greatest interest, which I didn't really feel in the weather, but what could I think of to say? A woman is apt to keep the image of a good many of the grand men she sees passing around her in queer niches in her brain, and when one steps out and speaks to her for the first time it is confusing. Of course I have known the judge and his mother all my life, for she is one of Aunt Adeline's best friends, but I had a feeling from the look in his eyes that that very minute was the first time he had ever seen me. It was lovely, and I blushed some more as I put my hand up to my cheek so I wouldn't have to look right at him.

"About the loveliest day that ever happened in Hillsboro," he said, and there was still more of the delicious smile, "though I hadn't noticed it so especially until"—

But I never knew what he had intended to say, for Billy suddenly swelled up like a little turkey cock and cut out with his switch at the judge.

"Git, man, git, and let my Molly alone!" he said in a perfect thundertone of voice, but I almost laughed, for it had such a sound in it like Dr. John's at his most positive times with Billy and me.

"No, no, Billy, the judge is just looking over the fence at our flowers! Don't you want to give him a rose?" I hurried to say as the smile died out of Judge Wade's face and he looked at Billy intently.

"How like John Moore the youngster is," he said, and his voice was so cold to Billy that it hurt me, and I was afraid Billy would notice it. Coldness in people's voices always makes me feel just like ice cream tastes. But Billy's answer was still more rude.

"You better go, man, before I bring my father to sic our dog on you," he exploded, and before I could stop him his thin little legs went trundling down the garden path toward home.

Then the judge and I both laughed. We couldn't help it. When two people laugh straight into each other's eyes something feels dangerous and you get closer together. The judge leaned farther over the fence, and I went a little nearer before I knew it.

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

VOTES FOR WOMEN

they made no comment and did not urge the party to change his mind, but simply passed on to the next man. Quite a number of signatures however were obtained.

The meeting in City Square lasted about thirty minutes after which the party left for Weymouth which was to be their next stopping place.

The party expect to reach New York July 30 in time to take part in the great mass meeting to be held in that city on that date and will reach Washington, July 31.

Mrs. FitzGerald opened the meeting She said the reasons for not granting suffrage were not because the government was not run for women, not that the women were not directly concerned in it, but because they were women. Voting is only the tool through which women can accomplish what they desire. It is not a function. The only function for man is fatherhood and the only function for women is motherhood. Work and suffrage is no longer a matter of sex. It is a custom and they have changed. Men do not arduously pursue their livelihood because it is a native born right of men or women.

In speaking of the present English situation she said it was an English and not a suffrage question. She advised all to delve into histories and there find that every accomplishment in England by the people was accompanied by a great upheaval.

"Why," said Mrs. FitzGerald, "Why should we adopt anything but peaceful mehods when we have been granted suffrage in nine states. No, we are too tactful as politicians to advocate militancy when it is absolutely foreign to our cause. We are going to hold to American methods and American ways, the ballot. It is not for us to criticise the English militants for what they think is right, and when we succeed in Massachusetts Parliament will give the women in England a vote and their militant movement will directly cease.

Mrs. FitzGerald urged each one present to personally write his favorable view of the question to the senators who are not too keen on the suffrage question but who will notice the desire of their constituents if enough letters are received.

Mrs. Morris gave her point of view on the question. She said that two years ago she was one of those who stood and listened to the Suffragettes but now she had awakened to the real joy of life since she had become familiar with the question. She spoke of the three mothers in the party who left for Washington with the blessings of their children as a farewell and told the youths to tell their parents that a full realization of living will come with a true exposition of women suffrage.

A rousing cheer was given the party as they left the square and many invited them to come again.

Mrs. Walter Packard of Hancock street was operated on at the Quincy City Hospital Tuesday afternoon by Dr. Lund and is doing well today. Tuesday afternoon she had an attack of general acute peritonitis. She was immediately removed to the hospital.

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

As forecasted "A Manager's Troubles," the latest musical comedy by the Kincaide Players, was a hit of hits, and the same spot was reached by the Players in the public estimation as heretofore, only it hit harder, as there was a tremendously large audience present Monday and Tuesday night and for some time after the performances had started there were many trying to get tickets, but it was the same answer to all from the box office, "all tickets sold."

The feature picture "Shenandoah" was one of intense interest, which kept the audience in rapt attention from the start to finish. The fighting of thousands of soldiers, capture of prisoners, and Sheridan's ride, depicts the story of the terrible battle that raged at Fort Sumter. If one has never seen the play they need but to witness this three-reel picture, to have an idea of the fiercest battles ever fought.

The 4th of July parade pictures of Quincy and Atlantic came in for a splendid reception, as many well known characters were represented. Mayor Stone and Capt. Wardwell were prominently featured and came in for round after round of applause. The evening's entertainment was of excellent character and its interesting features brought the approbation and unstinted applause of all.

CAUSED BY OIL STOVE

Noon Alarm was for Blaze at Frank Sullivan's

The alarm from box 138 at 12.41 this noon was for a slight fire in the house of Frank Sullivan at 19 Brooks avenue caused by an oil stove taking fire. Rebecca, the 12 year old daughter of Mr. Sullivan started to get dinner on the oil stove when it suddenly burst into flames. The other children ran out of the house shouting fire, and some one pulled in the alarm. In the meantime the men in the house rushed to the scene, and grabbing the blazing stove threw it out of doors.

The burning oil filled the house full of suffocating smoke but the fire was confined to some sheathing in the kitchen near the stove. Although immediately in the danger zone Rebecca fortunately escaped without her clothing taking fire. The fire was practically out by the time the department arrived, although a chemical stream was put on the woodwork in case there were any smouldering sparks. Chief Litchfield estimates the loss at not over $5.

REFINING SUGAR.

Process by Which the Best White Products Are Obtained.

The method used by the best sugar refineries is subtsantially as follows: The raw sugar is dissolved in large cisterns on the ground floor, enough hot water being added to produce a specific gravity of 1.25. The solution is then drawn through a connecting pipe having a coarse wire strainer into large pumps, by which it is pumped into the highest story of the building, usually the seventh or eighth. It there passes into vessels heated by steam coils to a temperature of about 210 F. Milk of lime is added to the solution in these pans for the purpose of neutralizing any acid which it may contain.

From these pans the liquid passes down to the next floor, where it is filtered through a series of bags, each made of two thicknesses of cloth, an outer one of coarse and an inner one of fine cotton. The bags are inclosed in boxes to prevent cooling. After leaving these the sirup is run through filters of boneblack, which absorbs all the coloring matter left in it. After leaving these it is pumped into vacuum pans—large vessels heated by steam and exhausted by air pumps. The pressure being thus reduced, the liquid is boiled at a lower and lower temperature until, at 140 degrees, evaporation is complete and the sirup rapidly crystallizes into sugar.

This is the process by which the best white sugar is made, while poorer qualities are prepared by a method less complete.—St. Louis Republic.

NAMING A JAPANESE BABY.

Sometimes It Is a Rite as Solemn as a Bishop's Election.

Often the naming of a Japanese baby is a simple matter, for the father or grandfather speaking before the company the name of some famous man, if the child is a boy, or of some favorite flower, if it is a girl. For girls, Hana, flower; Yuki, snow; Ai, love, are the favorites of parents with a poetical strain.

The sterner country folk choose for their daughters Matsu, pine; Take, bamboo (if the bamboo joints are exact, hence the exactness of virtue); Ume, plum, since the plum bears both cold and snow bravely. For boys, Ichiro, first boy; Toshio, smart; Iwao, strong, and Isamu, brave, are very popular.

Where belief is strong in the power of a name the family in holiday dress often assembles in a large room. Each writes a name upon a slip of paper and lays it reverently before the house shrine. From the group a very young child is chosen and led before this shrine, and the fate of the name is decided by the small hand which reaches out for a slip. Though it is a festive occasion, the selection of a name is made with a seriousness worthy of the election of a bishop. Many believe devoutly that this rite influences the baby's entire future, and therefore the one whose slip is chosen incurs from the moment of choice great responsibility for the child's welfare.—Frances Little in Century Magazine.

The Name Saratoga.

The original name of Saratoga was "Serachtague." About the middle of the eighteenth century it was "Saraghtoge." During the administration of Governor Leisler it was "Sarachtoge." Isn't this quaint—from 1689:

Upon ye news yt three People should be kild at Bartel Vromans at Sarachtoge by ye Indians,—

Resolved by ye Convention yt Lief Jochim Staets forwith goe with ten men to Sarachtoge to see how ye matter is, & bring us an accompt with ye first, & yt he Cito send a Post hither with ye tidings.

Spelling reformers would be delighted with "kild." And "ye" is shorter than "the," and "yt" is shorter than "that." "Goe" is expansive, but "forwith" for "forthwith" is a contraction. Schoolcraft thinks that Saratoga is derived from the Indian words "assarat," sparkling, and "oga," place.—New York Press.

A Riming Will.

Perhaps the most peculiar will ever written was probated in England at Doctors' Commons July 17, 1789. It ran as follows:

I give and bequeath,
When I am laid underneath,
To my two loving sisters, most dear,
The whole of my store,
Were it twice as much more,
Which God's goodness has granted me here.

And, that none may prevent
This my will and intent
Or occasion the least of law racket,
With a solemn appeal
I confirm, sign and seal
This the true act and deed of Will Jacket.

The Way It Felt.

"Here's something queer," said the dentist. "You say this tooth has never been worked on before, but I find small flakes of gold on my instrument."

"I think you must have struck my back collar button," replied the victim.—Philadelphia Ledger.

All the Difference.

"Society dropped the De Lacys because they had a skeleton in their closet, I understand?"

"No—because they didn't keep it there."—Cleveland Leader.

Domestic Science Applied.

Demosthenes was practicing oratory with pebbles in his mouth.

MULHALL STILL BEING GRILLED

Tells More About Political and Strikebreaking Activity

LOBBYISTS HAD BLACK LIST

Four New England Congressmen Were Under the Ban—Large Sum Raised In Indiana to Defeat Watson—Interesting Letter From Maine Man Who Worked With Mulhall

Washington, July 16.—Representatives Gardner of Massachusetts, Hinds of Maine, Foster of Vermont and Reilly of Connecticut were New England members of congress on the so-called "black list" of the National Association of Manufacturers, according to the testimony given by Martin M. Mulhall, former agent of the association, at yesterday's session of the senate lobbby investigating committee.

The committee continued its examination into Mulhall's correspondence. Mulhall identified 410 letters, telegrams and memoranda put in the record by the committee. Mulhall's attention was directed almost exclusively to the last half of the year 1907 and the first part of 1908.

He was jumped from Maine to Missouri; from Baltimore to Indianapolis and up to Cleveland in those few months. He told, or his letters did, of an effort to aid politically former Congressman James E. Watson of Indiana, and of how well he knew former Senator Beveridge. He told of another visit to Maine and of another effort to give political assistance to former Congressman Littlefield of that state.

He mentioned again former President Taft, the late Vice President Sherman, the late James W. Van Cleve of the National Association of Manufacturers and other men prominently connected at one time or other with that organization.

Senator Reed introduced a memorandum which Mulhall said was a "black list" of congressmen. Mulhall thought it had been prepared by former Representative Watson. It contained a large number of names, among which were the four New Englanders previously mentioned.

The witness thought about $22,000 had been raised in Indiana for the Watson campaign and a letter read just before adjournment last night told of "three millionaires" in the state, one of whom was willing to spend $100,000 to defeat Watson. The letter did not identify the millionaires and the committee did not ask who they were.

Mulhall told of how he broke a strike of shoe workers in St. Louis. He swore that $3000 had been turned over to him by F. C. Schwedtman, secretary to Van Cleve, to pay to the strike leader to end the difficulty.

Senator Reed read a letter a letter to Mulhall from Dr. G. L. Crockett of Thomaston, Me., dated July 4, 1913. Crockett was one of the men who worked with Mulhall in the fight to re-elect former Congressman Littlefield. The doctor's letter was in part:

"I have just read your confession in the New York World. I believe it all excepting your statement that you are doing it for the good of humanity. This humanity business of yours I cannot swallow. Whether you do any good or not, time alone can tell; but you surely have kicked up a stink in this neck of the woods. Now, I want the whole story. Will you not send it to me? I hope you are getting a good thing out of this, for you surely bedaubed yourself.

"On the whole the people down here believe it. I know it is true. Oliver Otis is clamoring for me to be taken to Washington and there be pumped dry. I am ready to go. I hope you are getting a good thing out of it or are you putting the knife into some of the pirates who did not like you? You and I know they were an ungrateful bunch.

"Now, don't back down! Stand by your colors! If you need me, just call on me. I don't care if you sold my letters, but if just gave them away it is mean of you. If you get enough out of it and need the price why all right. Anyway we will not quarrel."

FOR WEARING SLIT SKIRT

Richmond's Mayor and Chief of Police Arrest a Young Woman

Richmond, July 16.—On a warrant charging indecent exposure, Mayor Ainslee and Police Chief Werner made the first arrest here for the wearing of slit skirts.

Blossom Browning is the name of the young prisoner gave. Women friends bailed her out for appearance in police court.

The girl contends her dress was the fashion, was bought in a licensed department store, and suited her taste. She has retained counsel to defend her.

Canal St. Woman Has Man Arrested

On Warrant For Threat

Two revolver shots fired in quick succession startled the residents in the vicinity of 72 Canal street Wednesday afternoon. The shots came from the house and were fired into the air, by Mrs. Rosa Bruno to frighten away Rosario Cuombo, who the woman alleged had been annoying her.

According to the story she told in court this morning she had known Cuombo for some time and as long ago as last February he had urged her to leave her husband and fly with him, which she had stoutly refused to do.

Tuesday noon when she arrived from Boston she met Cuombo near City Hall, where he again urged her to elope with him. She again refused, and told him if he did not keep away from her she would have him arrested. She then alleges that he turned and said if you have me arrested when I get out of jail I will cut you up. This caused her to become frightened and later she swore out a warrant against him for threats.

Wednesday afternoon, about 3.30, her attention was called to the man walking toward her door with a revolver in his hand. Fearing that he intended to do her bodily harm and thinking to frighten him away she ran up stairs and got her own revolver, and to show him that she also could shoot she fired two shots out of the window. The man remained about the house for a time still holding the revolver in his right hand and later left.

He was arrested at 10 o'clock that night on the warrant for threats and was arraigned in court. A second complaint was also sworn out against him charging him with carrying a revolver.

On the stand he denied threatening the woman and that he had a revolver. He also claimed that the woman was the one that wanted him to elope.

J. J. McAnarney appeared for the government and F. A. Tirrell for the defendant. After hearing the case Judge Pratt ordered Cuombo to recognize in $200 to keep the peace toward all the world, but more especially toward Rosa Bruno for the term of three months. The complaint for carrying a revolver on the request of his counsel was continued until Saturday.

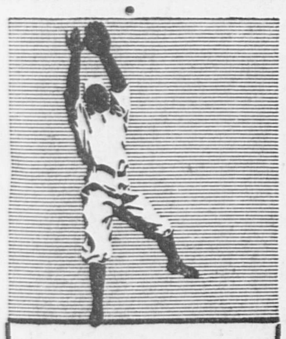

A grey horse of the Andrews Express Co., was badly bruised by slipping on the oiled surface of Washington street, near Pond street, Wednesday evening.

MAYOR TO GIVE HEARING

Relative to Shooting of Francis Gilraine

Did Officer Intend To Hit

The hearing before Mayor Stone in the case of Officer John J. Avery in the matter of shooting Francis Gilraine on the night of June 25, will be held tonight. The hearing will not be a public one as has been announced by some papers but will be private as far as the general public is concerned. The Mayor stated Wednesday night, however, that reporters would probably be allowed to be present.

Gilraine was shot by Officer Avery the night of the High school graduation. There had been a disturbance in front of the school building between one McDonnell and Gilraine. Officers Avery and Canavan who were at the High school ran out and the two men separated. McDonnell started up Bridge street with Officer Canavan in pursuit, who captured his man near the President's bridge.

Gilraine started down Butler road with Officer Avery in pursuit. The officer called upon him to stop but he kept on running. The officer then drew his revolver, and according to his own statement he fired toward the ground to frighten Gilraine and make him stop. The bullet however took an upward course and lodged in Gilraine's hip bringing him to the ground. Gilraine was taken to the City Hospital where he now is, not having recovered from the fractured bone.

The following morning Mayor Stone suspended Officer Avery pending an investigation, which investigation will be held tonight. A few days after the shooting, Lawyer O'Connell of Boston counsel for the Gilraine family, applied to Judge Avery for a warrant against Officer Avery for assault with a dangerous weapon. Judge Avery advised that counsel wait until after the investigation of the Mayor which was agreed to. In the meantime Officer Avery has not been on street duty.

No one thinks that the officer intentionally shot Gilraine, the general belief being, that while running he drew his revolver and pulled the trigger that it flew up and the bullet instead of entering the ground as intended, struck Gilraine.

Motorman Corcoran Receives Two Shocks in Few Days

For the second time within a few days, James Corcoran, of Cochituate, a motorman employed by the Bay State street railway, was thrown from his car by receiving a shock and escaped injury. Wednesday evening, while attempting to throw the signal at New Downers Landing, Corcoran ran his hand up on the metal under the box, kept his other hand on the controller and completed a circuit. The shock threw him over the controller box to the street.

A few days ago while attempting to tighten a feed wire leading to the headlight of his car he neglected to remove his hand from the controller and was thrown to the street. The only evidence of his electric adventures is a blackened hand. Fellow employees claim that Corcoran is the only man in the barn who has made two circuits successfully in the short time employed.

BAD PLACE TO BREAK DOWN

Accident to Trolley at Water Street Crossing

Patrons of the car from East Milton due in Quincy at 8.10 this morning received quite a scare on the Water street railroad crossing when the trolley pole snapped as the car was crossing the tracks. Just as the tracks were reached the passengers heard the pole crack and the car came to a stop. There was no train in sight but several fearful that a train would bear down upon them jumped from the car.

The car was pshed off the crossing and as it cleared the crossing the pole broke off and fell into the street. No one was injured although some of the more timid were a little frightened.

Everybody admits that this is a most dangerous crossing and the street railway riding public will be glad when the crossing is abolished, which it is expected will be some time.

HEN CASE IN COURT

Houghs Neck Woman Promises to Get Rid of Fowl

A case of interest to many families was heard in the district court this morning when Emily Pennington of Rockland street was arraigned for keeping poultry on her premises after having been notified that the Board of Health had decreed that it was detrimental to the public health and had forbidden her to continue to keep foul in the place where she had been doing so.

The case dates back to April 9, which was the first time that she was officially notified. Later she was called upon by Inspector of the Board of Health when she agreed to move or rather get rid of the fowl, but had not done so.

City Solicitor McAnarney who represented the Board of Health stated that the board did not desire the woman fined but simply wanted her to obey the rules and to get rid of the fowl. After some arguing the woman agreed to do this and case was continued until July 26. At that time if fowl have disappeared the case will probably be placed on file.

WHO FOR MAYOR

Several Candidates Are Mentioned

Mayor Stone has Opposition

The political situation in Quincy is commencing to take on an interesting aspect and although it is not known that any aspirants for the Mayor's chair have formally announced their candidacy it is generally understood that several will be in the field.

It seems to be accepted that Mayor Stone will be a candidate for re-election and he will probably be opposed by Charles H. Johnson. Both will run on the Republican ticket.

Mr. Johnson, who was a former assessor, has been giving much time and study to the problem of taxation and claims to have worked out a well defined equalization which will materially decrease the tax rate of the city and be to the advantage of the small as well as the large tax payer. For a year or more he has been giving his views on this topic at the invitation of different clubs and his hearers seem to believe that the remedies proposed are worthy of more than passing attention.

Mayor Stone, if rumor is correct will run up against opposition in different parts of the city. The movement at present centers in Houghs Neck and is based on the attitude of the Mayor toward the granting of licenses for public dance halls.

The wide spread publicity given his opposition and the conditions under which he finally granted the licenses has, in the opinion of many Houghs Neck people had a marked effect on the population. It is absolutely known, according to residents of the Quincy summer resort that many prospective cottagers refused to consider the beach as a summer residence after the hostilities of early spring between two factions, one butting the other on the dance hall privileges.

John L. Miller, who has formally announced that he will not again be a candidate for the School Committee, will be the Progressive candidate this fall. Shortly after the birth of the Progressive movement Mr. Miller crystalized a sentiment which was favorable to himself and made a hard fight for election. Close friends say he intends to again be in the running.

While nothing definite has been ascertained regarding the attitude of William T. Shea, many people claiming to be in touch with the situation openly state that he will be a candidate for the office which he held for four years.

Other sources of information divulge the names of Joseph L. Whiton, president of the council, and ex-Mayor Charles M. Bryant as likely to enter the race. For the past five years at least one section of the city has been more than favorable to Joseph L. Whiton, and at one time it gave Mr. Bryant a flattering vote. Mr. Whiton, it is thought would willingly consider filling the mayors chair and from the time he entered public life he has had valiant supporters in at least four of the wards in the city.

If Mr. Bryant decides to jump into the fray a battle royal will probably ensue since there is no man better qualified to discuss the affairs of Quincy and the reputation of the Ward Five councilman is such that all agree that he is a man who carries out his policies in the face of the sternest opposition.

Dr. John H. Ash who was brought into the political field last year as the Democratic candidate has not openly stated his preferences this year and James H. Penniman who was the regular Democratic nominee said a short time ago that he would certainly be on the ballot.

Henry L. Kincaide, who made Congressman Gilmore step some in the last congressional campaign, has been mentioned a candidate for every political office on the calendar. Several of the Bull Moose party commenced talking in his interest shortly after the votes were counted, and throughout the winter there was a movement afoot which connected him with the mayor's office. Col. Kincaide is at present conducting a Chamber of Commerce party on a business getting trip through South America and his successful business career is a strong argument in his behalf.

He has also been mentioned as the candidate for Senator to fill the position vacated so ingloriously by John J. McDevitt who accepted suspension rather than publicly apologize after he had failed to prove charges of bribery made against Senator Buckley.

All in all the contest promises to be a merry one and although most of the attention will be given the state ticket in the coming two months there are several in the city who will continue the work of sounding sentiment for candidates favorable to them.

GRANITE CITY CLUB OUTING

The entertainment committee of the Granite City club has announced that no ladies' night at Nantasket will be held at the present time. An outing for members however will be held at Nantasket on Wednesday evening, July 30. The plans as arranged by the committee are that the members will leave the club rooms in atuomobiles about 7 o'clock and after a run through picturesque South Shore will go the Villa Napoli where a special dinner will be served at 8 o'clock. After dinner some of the party, or in fact any who so desire, will probably go to Paragon Park or other places along the beach.

ESCAPED FROM ASYLUM.

John Hanson who made his home in Quincy previous to his committment to the Taunton Insane Asylum on March 6, 1912, escaped from that institution Wednesday afternoon and the police of Quincy have been asked to keep a lookout for him. Up to this noon no trace of the man had been picked up in this city although it is thought that he is headed this way. Hanson is a Norwegian by birth.

MUST GO TO STATE HOUSE

Civil Service Examinations to be Held There

The Local Board Is Abolished

Important action was taken by the Massachusetts Civil Service Commission at its meeting Tuesday, when it voted to do away with the positions of local examiners in the cities outside of Boston, and to appoint instead a local representative of the commission in these cities. The local examiners in Quincy were appointed when the city accepted the civil service act and placed its firemen, policemen, clerks, janitors, etc., under the civil service rule. They practically served without pay, their main duty being to meet once a year and mark some of the examination papers for which they received a small remuneration.

Up to this year all examinations have been held in Quincy, but this year with new members on the Civil Service commission a change has been made, and all examinations this year, have been held at the State House, Boston. The books showing the standing of persons for local positions is kept in Quincy, and while as a rule requisitions to fill vacancies should have been made through the local secretary, many of the heads of departments made requisition directly to the State office, although a record of these requisitions was immediately forwarded to the local examiners.

The local examiners will go out of office as soon as the examinations

INJUSTICE BY SOCIALISTS.

The Daily Ledger has received from D. Baden, secretary of the Socialist club of Quincy, a communication relative to the case of Rev. P. H. Drake. No address is given, or the letter would be returned to Mr. Baden.

No further comments would be necessary, but Mr. Baden adds the following P. S. to his letter:

"P. S.—The editor will please not to discriminate my ungramatical writing or many other errors. I have never been to a college, nor have I ever graduated the grammar school, or better say that I have never visit one."

Here is a man who is proud to say that he has never attended or visited a grammar school who assumes the responsible position of censuring the law makers, courts, police and other officials of Quincy.

Many of the statements in the letter are libellous and knowing them to be such the editor of the Daily Ledger cannot print the letter.

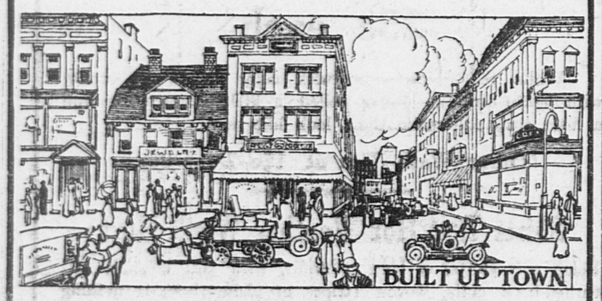

We are sorry to say that Mr. Baden and the Socialists generally, have many mistaken ideas relative to American institutions. Conditions are not the same in this country as they are in some of the foreign countries. There are many individual cases of injustice by corporations to employees but there are also cases of injustice by employees to their employers, and many people show gross ingratitude for all that is being done for them by industries, by the State, by the city, by the schools and by the taxpayers.

There are many injustices that should be corrected and they are being corrected. But, Mr. Socialist, it is not justice to array employees against employers. We take exception to such statements as that by Rev. P. H. Drake in his address on Sunday, that employer and employee could not be at ease in the same pew in a Quincy church. Generally speaking it is not a fact.

—Considerable fun is being poked at the efforts of the Cape Cod Board of Trade to hold an exposition in 1915 commemorating the opening of the canal, but those who are doing it can scarcely realize the ability of Cape Codders to make a success of whatever they undertake.—WarehamCourier.

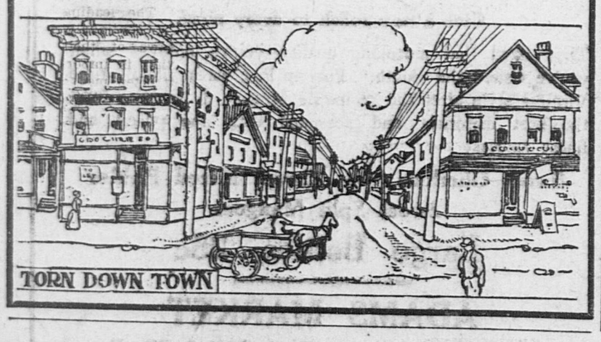

—There is a war against poison ivy and it is being eliminated from various places. The work of generally removing this dangerous plant in Quincy has never been commenced yet to our knowledge, but we hope the time will come when at least such plants as exist in the immediate center are destroyed. There is considerable ivy along the sidewalk on Goffe street and various places on Presidents hill. Several have been poisoned badly and many, not knowing the plant, are liable to come in contact with it unknowingly.

MULHALL ASKS PROBE OF N. A. M.

Secret Work Financed by Inner Body, He Testifies

HAS A $700,000 LOBBY FUND

Says It Is Put Up Yearly to Oppose Legislation Unfavorable to Organization—Lobbyist Declares He Was Endorsed and Helped by Late Vice President Sherman

Washington, July 17.—That the late Vice President James S. Sherman, as chairman of the national Republican congressional committee, was a party to the defeat of several representatives who were obnoxious to the National Association of Manufacturers, was the most significant development of the senate lobby probe yesterday.

A batch of correspondence which was identified by M. M. Mulhall, ex-lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers, showed that he operated in various sections of the country under direction of Sherman, carrying letters of introduction to party leaders. Mulhall emphatically asserted that the National Association of Manufacturers had been "ruthless" in defeating all persons who favored the bills indorsed by organized labor.

Mulhall swore to the authenticity of nearly 400 letters which brought in the names of such men as former Presidents Roosevelt and Taft, former Speaker Cannon, former Senators Aldrich, Hemenway, Foraker and others, Arthur I. Vorys, Ohio manager of the Taft campaign in 1908, and Frank H. Hitchcock, one-time chairman of the Republican national committee and postmaster general in Taft's cabinet.

Mulhall also launched into a sensational attack on the National Council of Industrial Defense, an organization formed within the National Association of Manufacturers, and designed to finance strike-breaking and lobbying. "Its income amounts to nearly three-quarters of a million a year," he declared, "and this money is paid out for work with which the National Association of Manufacturers does not want to be publicly connected.

"When I left the National Association of Manufacturers," he said, "it had 240 central bodies affiliated and I have been told that its revenues are between $500,000 and $750,000 a year. This money has been used for political work.

"I am now trying to have it investigated by the postoffice authorities or some other branch of the government. I know, if it is ever investigated, the gentlemen connected with it will have a hard time accounting for the funds collected by them. These people paid me for my work from the funds raised by this organization."

Mulhall also told of labor leaders in his employ who accepted money to betray their comrades and the plans of their organization.

Mulhall brought the story of his lobbying activities for the National Association of Manufacturers down to 1908 and testified about the work of the association in promoting a tariff commission. "The association wanted Miles and Schwedtman on it and wanted to control it themselves," Mulhall testified. He did not explain who Miles was. Schwedtman was secretary to President Van Cleave of the association.

A letter Mulhall wrote at Indianapolis on June 17, 1908, to Schwedtman at St. Louis, reported how "Mr. Watson has a large majority of the machine under his control. The convention of the miners will be held here on the 21st. They certainly expect Gompers, Duncan and others. Three of the district presidents from the anthracite districts are my personal friends. I feel I might be able to do good work through those gentlemen, and it is too bad we are short of funds when the convention is coming with the opportunities for use."

Mulhall said he met Van Cleave and Schwedtman on a train passing through Indianapolis Jan. 19, 1908; told them of the Waston campaign, and spoke about $100,000 being needed. On Jan. 19 Mulhall wrote Schwedtman:

"Mr. Watson told me that if there was any danger of any class legislation being brought up while he was absent from Washington to have Mr. Emery (counsel for the manufacturers) see Senator Hemenway. He also told me to write Emery and say Speaker Cannon would receive him at any time and he could talk freely and fully to the speaker and that everything would be all right."

MYSTERY OF THE PLAGUE.

How and Why Did It Disappear From England In 1667?

Why did the plague disappear from England? Mr. Bernard Shaw incidentally asks this deeply interesting question in a letter to the Nation, and we cannot say that we are satisfied with his answer. He says he "knows" that plague has been "extirpated" by "common sanitation."

Until the recent sporadic imported cases, the last recorded cases of plague in England occurred at Nottingham in 1667. In that year plague vanished utterly from England for two and a half centuries. No one who has examined the records of the seventeenth century can believe that it was "extirpated" by sanitation. Very gradually in the succeeding century and a half plague withdrew from Europe also.

The date of its disappearance from Constantinople has been fixed at about the year 1841. It remained endemic only in a few lonely places in the world, such as the highlands of western Arabia, Yunnan in China and Mesopotamia. Sanitation, though an excellent palliative, certainly never drove the plague from Stamboul and Cairo and the southern Mediterranean, any more than it did from England.

The shrinkage of plague is as great a mystery as the recent outburst which infected the whole world. Perhaps the explanation is that in a few years bacteria may go through the myriad transforming processes of evolution which in the case of humanity take eons to complete.—Pall Mall Gazette.

HIS VISIT TO MORGAN.

There Wasn't Much Said, but It Was All Right to the Point.

A well known insurance official said the other day at the Auditorium, in Chicago:

"In the beginning of my career, when I was only a humble insurance agent, I gained access one morning to the august and formidable presence of J. Pierpont Morgan."

"No!"

"Yes," the official insisted—"yes, it's a fact. Don't ask me how I did it, though, for that's a secret. But at 10 o'clock one morning behold me, a young insurance agent, standing before the desk of the great J. Pierpont with my big envelope of life and death statistics, twenty year endowments, and so forth, in my hand. I was, I have since learned, the first and only insurance agent who ever managed to meet Mr. Morgan face to face."

"Well, what happened?"

"'Mr. Morgan,' I began hurriedly, 'you ought to carry more life insurance. You see, sir'—

"And lucidly and cogently and briefly, wasting no words, I laid my insurance proposition before the great financier.

"He listened in silence. Those fierce blue eyes of his bored through me like lances. When I stopped at last all he said was:

"'How did you get in here?'

"'I walked in,' I answered.

"'Well,' said he, 'walk out.'"—New York Tribune.

Why Elephants Fear Mice.

It seems incredible that so small and harmless an animal as a mouse is able to frighten an elephant almost out of its senses. One little mouse in the hay on which they are feeding will stampede an entire herd. In their native land there are little animals, known as chacanas, which feed on a small, sour berry of which elephants are very fond. They live in settlements, something after the manner of prairie dogs, under the berry bushes. When feeding, the elephants trample the little towns, and the chacanas, in their fright, run up the tubes of the elephants' trunks. Their long, sharp claws catch in the flesh, and they cannot be ejected. The more violently the monster blows through its coiled trunk the more firmly the hooked claws of the little animal become imbedded in the flesh. Inflammation and death are the result. In captivity the elephants think they are in danger of the deadly chacanas when they see a mouse.

Malaria.

Malaria has been recognized since the days of Hippocrates as one of the most formidable and destructive of maladies, the more formidable because it was supposed, in accordance with the name which Macculloh adapted for it from the Italian less than a century ago, to be caused by a pervasive venom in the air. But since the epochal observations of Laveran, the labors of Golgi and his colleagues and the experiments and discoveries of Ross it has lost much of its mysterious terror, and the sure way to its prevention and extirpation has been revealed.—New York Tribune.

Making a Choice.

"Don't you love the merry prattle of the children?"

"Yes," replied Mr. Growcher, with some hesitation—"that is to say, I'd rather hear Freddie and Willie prattle than learning to play the bugle and the snare drum."—Washington Star.

Comparisons.

"Those old warriors must have looked grotesque in their elaborate armor."

"Yes; almost as grotesque as a man in a baseball catcher's outfit or a football suit."—Exchange.

FORE RIVER IMPROVEMENT

Not Only Desirable But Necessary Says Boston Paper

Terming the petition for the widening of the Fore River as really meritorious the Boston Transcript comments as follows:

"Our Massachusetts delegation in Congress is faithfully reflecting the sentiment of the people of this State in actively supporting the movement to secure a preliminary survey for widening and deeping of the Fore River channel from Quincy to Boston. The case was strongly and impressively presented this week before the board of army engineers for rivers and harbors. The shipbuilding interests at that point make such an improvement not only desirable but necessary, and the relations of Fore River to Boston Harbor are so close and intimate, that the project may very appropriately be included in the scheme of waterway development for this section. The board has consented to give the proposition consideration and we trust that it will be favorable. Few more meritorious petitions of this character have been presented to the Federal authorities.

WITH NAVAL BRIGADE.

James L. McDonald, assistant clerk at the district court, returned this morning from a two weeks' vacation. Mr. McDonald is a member of the Massachusetts Naval brigade and part of his vacation he spent with that command on the U. S. S. Chicago on its annual tour of duty. The trip took them to the cape and thence to Portland, Me., and they were given a practical training during the tour of duty.

The Kitchen Cupboard

SPRING RHUBARB.

THE acid in rhubarb stimulates the appetite and acts wholesomely on the blood. This plant is an ideal spring food, and it should at this season appear on the table as often as possible.

Jellied Rhubarb.—Take one pound of rhubarb cut fine and put in a granite dish with one cupful of sugar, the grated rind of a lemon and a small piece of ginger root. Cover and bake till tender. Add one-half ounce of gelatin softened in cold water and stir over hot water till thoroughly dissolved; then add one tablespoonful of lemon juice and pour into a fancy mold which has been dipped in cold water. Keep on ice until time to serve; then turn out on a glass dish, fill the center with whipped cream and put small mounds of it around the jelly.

With Custard and Meringue.

Rhubarb Custard.—Take slices of stale sponge cake and place them in a deep glass dish in alternate layers with stewed rhubarb. Just before serving cover with a cold boiled custard made as follows: Beat the yolks of three eggs with three tablespoonfuls of sugar and pour over them two cupfuls of boiling milk. Put the custard in a pitcher placed in a pan of boiling water. Cook over the fire till the mixture will coat the spoon. Flavor with one teaspoonful of lemon extract. Make a meringue with the whites of the eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar and spread over the top. Bake fifteen minutes in a moderate oven. The rhubarb must be very cold before the custard is poured over it.

Rhubarb Sponge.—Take about a dozen stalks of red rhubarb and cut into small pieces. Stew with about half a pound of crushed loaf sugar. Line a small pudding dish with slices of sponge cake and fill with alternate layers of rhubarb and cake. Put on a cover and small weight and set aside till cold. Turn out on to the serving plate, spread thickly with a meringue of the whites of two eggs and two tablespoonfuls of sugar beaten stiff and place in the oven to set the meringue.

Handsomely Molded.

Rhubarb Mold.—Peel and cut up two and a half pounds of rhubarb, put it in a basin with a little cold water, not enough to quite cover it. Place a plate over the top and cook it in the oven till soft.

Dissolve one heaping tablespoonful of powdered gelatin in half a cupful of boiling water, add strained juice from rhubarb to it and stir till quite dissolved.

Rub the cooked rhubarb through a sieve; then add it to the gelatin, with seven tablespoonfuls of whipped cream and eight heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar. Set this on the fire to reheat, but on no account to boil, and stirring it all the time. Pour into a wet mold, turn out when firm and serve with custard round it.

AUTO ACCIDENT AT MILTON

Dorchester Woman and Her Son Have Fractured Skulls

The heavy coating of oil on Centre street, Milton, is supposed to have been the cause of an auto turning turtle there Wednesday afternoon. FRUIT IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Never before in all recorded history of fruit raising in eastern Massachusetts, has fruit appeared to be in such perfect condition as today in the second week in July, 1913, where spraying trees has been done. Notwithstanding the fearful heat of the past month yet as a whole it has been a wet season, and more wet than I ever knew before, so that our climate in Massachusetts in that respect is not unlike that of Oregon, Washington State and some parts of California, where I have been.

The fruit here is perfect in form this year and not disfigured by insects, hence the horticulturist, if sufficiently experienced, will discover, if he takes notes, that this year is a cherry year, and trees that formerly gave little or no fruit have this year given us fruit superior to any ever raised before in this section. I believe, and think I know, that cherries can be raised in Massachusetts just as easily as we raise strawberries. Cherries must be cared for and fed, just the same as one would feed any other valuable fruit or vegetable. The expense is not great, and the work is light for six or eight years, when they will begin to bear, and after that they will give results according to care.

Seventy-five and eighty years ago cherries were raised and enjoyed largely in what is now Ponkapoag, Canton, Mass. This was as early as 1825, and several acres were planted to cherries alone, and this for many years in connection with a fine hotel, known extensively as the "Cherry Tavern," and to this haven of rest, enjoyment and satisfaction came men and maidens about July 4 in each and every year, in stylish carriages, for a good time. The pursuit of pleasure in that direction did not cease until shortly before the rebellion in 1861. This patronage came from all directions of from 25 to 30 miles.

THE BEAUTIFUL

It Is Dwarfed or Enhanced by Comparison

By ARTHUR TOWNSEND

There was once a man on whose walls hung a picture that he did not think in keeping with the other works of art in his house. He concluded to replace it and thought that while he was on the job he might better buy something of real merit. So he consulted a connoisseur, who selected a painting that cost a hundred dollars. When the picture was hung the others looked so cheap that he spent a thousand dollars more in replacing them with others up to the standard of the first. Soon after that he went abroad, where he saw a great many beautiful works of art, and brought two or three that he especially fancied home with him. When he got them hung the others looked so poor that, despairing of keying up the standard to his foreign specimens, he made a bonfire of the whole lot.

This story is the keynote to another which I am about to tell. When I went out to Colorado a good many years ago I found in the mining districts on Clear creek, up in the mountains west of Denver, few women in comparison with the number of men. I had not been there long before I noticed that when I met a woman she looked refined and some of the women comely.

One day I approached a man "washing" for gold on the margin of the creek and fell into conversation with him. While doing so a couple of young women came and looked at him rocking his pan and taking out the little particles of gold left in the sediment.

"Pretty girls, those," I remarked as the women went away.

"Purty enough outside."

"What do you mean by that?"

"Stranger," he said, pausing in his work, "don't you never trust your judgment on women folks except when there is a lot o' them together—anyway, as many as there are men. It's like what you buy in a store, if it's only a brass candlestick. It isn't much to look at among the other candlesticks even if it's one o' the purtiest, but jist you get it home by itself and it'll shine for all it's worth."

"Are you a married man?" I asked.

"Married! Not on your life. I had an awful narrow escape onct, though."

"Tell me about it."

"My experience cost me some dust, I can tell you, but it was wo'th it, and I've never regretted buyin' it. When I first come out here there wasn't a woman nearer than Denver. We miners didn't have nobody to look at except each other, and we was the most freckled faced, slab sided, dod rotted set you ever see. We didn't none of us wash oftener than onct a week, and some of us didn't wash at all. Them as didn't wear beards was the wo'st lookin' of all. Their faces was always covered with stubble."

"Do you know," I interrupted, "why you became so slovenly?"

"Why, stranger?"

"Because you were not subject to the refining influence of women."

"The refinin' influence o' women! That's what I'm goin' to tell you about. We got refined all of a sudden. There was a gal come up here from som'ers—Kansas City or St. Joe or Omaha, I reckon—with her father, who was a minister or an evangelist or somepin o' that kind, and said he'd come to look after our souls. Before he come we was lookin' for gold, and after he come we was lookin' for his daughter. Her hair was like the sun shinin' on red sandstone. She said it was auburn. Her complexion was what she called olive, and her eyes was—well, I don't remember the color of her eyes, but they was beautiful.

"The parson—Woodbridge was his name; his daughter's name was Lillian—he went into a cabin where the two lived together, the father distributin' tracts, the daughter doin' his cookin' for him. When night come on the cabin was crowded with us men callin' on Lillian, jist like musketers in a room with a light in it. So her father said we'd better come one at a time, and Lillian laughed and give us all an evenin'. There bein' six o' us, we jist took up the week, all except Sunday, when her father wouldn't allow no visitors. On that evenin' from 7 to 8 he used to give us a Bible lesson.

"My evenin' was Tuesday. The first Tuesday I went to see Lillian I got spoony and was goin' to put my arm around her when she stopped me.

"'You'll tell,' she said.

"'I swear by all that's holy I won't.'

"'There's five other men comin' here,' she said, 'and I like you best of all, but if I grant you favors it'll make 'em all mad.'

"'Jist you trust me to keep mum.'

"I succeeded in convincin' her that I was reliable, and she soon got enough confidence in me to let me kiss her once every Tuesday evenin' when I was goin' to my cabin. I kept mum, and in a few weeks I got ahead of the whole lot of fellers, and Lillian admitted that she loved me. But when I asked her to marry me she told me her father wanted her to marry some one else and she couldn't go back on the dear old man, and there we was.

"Them cases where two young hearts is beaten together and some old curmudgeon of a father or a mother or both opposes 'em, don't have no sympathies, seems mighty hard. I've never been so worked up over anything in my life as I was over that. Lillian was as sorriful about it as I. She wouldn't marry me in spite of her father, and she wouldn't run away with me. I only had one evenin' in the week with her, and the rest of the time I was thinkin' that another feller was tryin' to git her away from me.

"The whole lot of us was affected by the gal. The other five fellers, not knowin' that I'd got ahead of 'em, went on makin' their calls, and I didn't doubt that every one of 'em was tryin' to git the gal, for when a man sets his heart on a gal he won't let her alone. We'd all been good friends before the parson and his daughter came among us, and now, instead of his makin' us better, he'd made us worse. Every one of us was ready to put lead into every other one.

"At last I told Lillian I couldn't stand the racket any longer and she must do one of three things—she must part with me forever, or she must marry me in spite of her father, or she must run away with me.

"This broke her all up. She said she couldn't part with me nohow, she dare not defy her father, and the only thing she would think of doin' was to run away and be married som'rs else. She asked me how we was goin' to git on for a livin'. I told her not to worry about that; I'd been washin' for gold all summer and hadn't any way to spend money in such a place, so I had saved nearly all of it. I had enough gold to make up $1,000 or $1,260. This seemed to make her feel easier, and by a good deal o' coaxin' I at last got her promise to clope.

"I proposed to light out when it was dark, walk down the road and take the stage for Denver when it came along. She didn't seem to like this plan very much; she said she'd sounded her father about her marryin' me and since then he'd been mighty suspicious of her. She'd told him that she must go down to Denver to do some shoppin', and the old man had consented to have her go. I could follow her there in a few days.

"I agreed to this plan, but there was a hitch. She said she couldn't be married without a trussoo. If she waited for me to come and buy it for her it would be too late, for as soon as I left the creek her father would suspect somepin and we'd have to light out of Denver on my arrival there. I asked her why she couldn't buy the trussoo before I came, and she said she hadn't any money and her father would give her only enough to buy a few things. He was dead against the sinfulness of vain decoration of the body. I fixed it all right by tellin' her that I would give her the money for the trussoo and asked her how much it would cost. She said she didn't know; the best way would be for her to carry the dust with her, spend what was necessary and we'd have the rest when I got there in cash ready to pay our expenses to the east. She said she must be economical, for we'd need all we had to begin life together after we was married.

"When the day came around for Lillian's departure on her supposed shoppin' trip she was mightily broken up. She said I wasn't to see her off, but go right on with my daily work. And so I did. It seemed to me that every man besides myself had somepin on his mind that day. I reckoned some of 'em would be waitin' for the stage to say goodby to her. But every man went on washin' gold. If any one said anything about Lillian's trip to Denver nobody seemed to notice it, or if they did they'd say, 'Oh, she'll be back for the old man's Sunday exercises,' or somepin like that.

"Lillian and I had agreed that she was to have three days to buy the trussoo, and I was to go down on the third day after she left us. The first mornin' after she'd gone I heard some one say: 'I wonder what's become o' the parson? His cabin's deserted.' I pricked up my ears at this. If he had suspected the real object of his daughter's goin' to Denver and had gone after her the game was up. And if the game was up where was the dust I had given her? I tell you I felt on easy.

"Before noon I heard one of the men say to another: 'She socked the whole six, all except me. I backed out at the last minute.' This was too much and I asked what he was talkin' about. He told me that the gal had taken the money of five different men to buy a trussoo with. Her father had likely joined her, and together they had left for parts onknown."

The speaker turned from his story to his pan, which he rocked in a melancholy fashion, but presently concluded:

"It all came from seein' a gal alone by herself without any other woman around. I drifted east after that, where I saw lots of women together, and there was hardly one of 'em that looked especially purty. One day I went into a restaurant, and who do you suppose one of the hash slingers was? She was Lillian.

"I pulled my hat down over my eyes so she couldn't see my face, and when I paid my check, pointin' to the hash slinger, I asked the proprietor somepin about her. He said her name was Mag Doolan. He'd never heard of her havin' a father, but knew little about her, since she'd come in and asked for a job off the street when he was short of help.

"Stranger, you'd ought to seen that gal with the eyes I did. Her auburn hair was a fiery red; her olive complexion was a freckle tan; her eyes was a kind of green. She was the worst lookin' thing you ever saw."

SUMMER GAIETIES.

Society Assembles from Various Centers—Motor Fashions and Fussy Get-ups.

While all the fashionables are by this time located out of the city, so many are lingering in the nearby resorts, and motor cars make a run to town, or from one centre to another an easy matter. The Long Island contingent are well represented at Westchester, Tuxedo and the Jersey Shore places whenever the events are sufficiently attractive.

THE CENTRE.

Long Island has rather held the centre of the social stage lately. The Polo games where the visiting English team so nearly "Lifted the Cup" drew an immense and exceedingly well dressed crowd and various other events have been more or less related to the horse, bringing him prominently to the fore as a social magnet just when it seemed that the automobile had extinguished equine prestige. The sporting contingent of society, numerically greatest on Long Island, is taking full advantage of the reaction.

FLOWING LINES.

It must have surprised many of the women who still cling to the skin tight bodice and skirt, to see how completely the smart set abandoned that fad. Not that skirts are wide at the foot, far from it, but the looseness that prevails from the knee up, and the extremely easy lines of the waists of all fashionable costumes, are almost slouchy in effect unless they are well worn. Certainly, whatever the reason, women are gowned to be thoroughly comfortable in torrid weather. The thinnest of supple silks, crepes, and cottons are worn for all occasions.

FLOUNCES POPULAR.

Flounced skirts in two, three or more rows are especially liked, but the flounces are all floppy and clinging, except those that form peplums, and these often set well out from the narrow skirt beneath, some of them even stiffened at the hem to give the only flare that fashion permits. Very tall, slender women find this mode becoming, and it accords well with the Medici ruffs, and sweeping lines obtained in headwear by the aigrette like arrangement of paradise plumes attached to just enough hat to give them a base.

SHADOW LACES.

Waists, gowns, ruffs and garnitures of all sorts are all built of shadow lace which was never more popular, though it has long ceased to be novel. Tulles and nets have quite left chiffons behind, though this soft fabric still plays an important part as a lining and backing that brings out the pattern of the lace webs delightfully. Dance and dinner frocks are especially dainty in the laces, the flounced skirts and fichu lines of the newest bodices being exactly right for development in this filmy weave.

DOUBLE SKIRTS.

Double skirts in which two or more materials are used are growing in favor, and one sees very smart models in tailored skirts where the double effects are stimulated cleverly by various cuts and empiecements.

The most worn skirt of the season for general use is the Shepard's check in black and white, quite small blocks being reckoned smartest. Worn with a black or blue cloth coat built on loose cut away lines these make a trig and becoming rig. Waists of cotton voile, crepe or the washable silks made on loose simple lines with turned back collars and frills finishing the front complete these get-ups which are as practical as they are stylish.

RIBBON TRIMMINGS.

Ribbon trimmings that show through the outer material of lace or net on both waist and skirts, are losing none of their vogue though one sees such effects everywhere. Shirred ribbons are used as well as gold and silver ones, and contrasting colors are often employed. For instance if a broad satin ribbon of geranium red is worn around the waist, there will be a higher one of light blue or old green tied at the side in a full bow.

BLACK VELVET BRACELETS.

The narrow neck band of velvet ribbon with or without its slides and ornaments of rhinestones or diamonds is often accompanied by velvet bracelets tied about the wrist in a careless bow on the outside of the arm. The same arrangement is often worn over a lace sleeve. A fad in line with the liking for upstanding neck ruffles is to finish the velvet neck band with a butterfly bow of tulle at the back of the neck, that shows becomingly at either side.

She was directly in path of the machine and was struck on the side. Miss McDonald was taken to her home. She was injured about the legs and suffered some from the shock.

Advertisers Ask Only A Fair Trial

By HOLLAND.

ADVERTISERS do not attempt to make you agree to buy their goods for the rest of your life. They only want you to give their wares a trial, to subject them to actual test by actual use, and then be guided by experience.

Could anything prove more clearly that the advertiser has supreme confidence in his product, that he is absolutely certain that it will please you, that it will be all he says it is?

It would indeed be foolish to spend money to induce you to buy an article that would prove unsatisfactory and would result in your telling friends and neighbors of your experience. Advertisers spend millions making their trademarks known, and in order to make their trademarks valuable they must stand for a certain standard of worth. Having made their trademarks known, manufacturers exert every effort to keep the goods up to the expected high grade.

YOU CAN'T GO WRONG IN FOLLOWING ADVERTISEMENTS.

Important News In Advertisements

By HOLLAND.

THE valuable news of the day is not confined to the news columns. It is also seen in the advertisements. Of course it is important to know what President Wilson is doing, what the latest developments are in China or what baseball club leads the league. But it is also important to know where a bargain in boys' waists, garden hose, breakfast food or straw hats may be found.

These bits of commercial news are among the advertisements. Wise persons look for them and take advantage of them when they are doing their buying. The leading merchants are continually telling you news of their stores, news that is important because it often means a real saving and always means something new and worth while.

Read the advertisements if you seek important news. Read them regularly and always with the thought that back of each advertisement are the reputation and business standing of the merchant. He could not afford to deceive you even if he were so inclined.

ONLY TRUTHFUL ADVERTISING PAYS.

SOCCER FOR DEWAR SHIELD

Fore River Five Entered at Caledonian Games

Much interest is being taken by local soccer football enthusiasts in the coming five-to-a-side competition for the Dewar challenge shield and medals at the Caledonian club games on August 2, The contest this year promises to be even more keen than ever, as many new clubs have been formed and a large number of entries are expected, although the contest is limited to eight teams. The winning team will receive six medals instead of five as in the previous years' contests the sixth medal going to the manager of the winning team.

Up to the present time the Dewar challenge shield has been won once by the Boston American team and twice by the Fore River team of Quincy. The Fore Rivers will enter the contest this year and are already in practice for the event and they are confident that they will again land the shield.

NOT DIFFICULT TO SWIM

Dog Paddle and Breast Stroke and Their Advantages

No form of exercise is better suited to improve mind and body than swimming, says an article on "Up to date methods for success in swimming in the August St. Nicholas." Swimming gives courage, self-reliance, control; and it develops the muscular system in perfect uniformity. As a pastime it has no equal. Most boys love to bathe and the pleasures of a dip are increased tenfold when one is an expert waterman; then, too, such proficiency opens the path to the thrills of aquatic contests, and to the enjoyment of such splendid games as Rugby and Association water polo, aquatic basket ball, pushball, water baseball, and other popular sports.

It is really not difficult to become a good swimmer, if one goes about it in the right manner. The quickest and straightest road to success is undoubtedly to find a competent instructor, and let him do the leading; but it is quite possible to learn unaided.

I have found it most useful to give the beginner a course of so-called "dry swimming," which entails land drill in the various parts of the stroke, before passing to work in the water. Once the arms and legs have become accustomed to the movements, they will come naturally when one graduates to actual swimming. Indeed, both the novice and the more advanced waterman will find preliminary work beneficial as they progress to the racing stroke.

There are two ways, generally recognized, of learning to swim; first, through the dog-paddle; second, through the breast-stroke. The former is the method of primitive man, and has the double merit of coming instinctively and of being closely related in its main features to the crawl, which is nowadays the aim of every young man; the latter is more complicated, requires considerable study, and has no exceptional value. In my opinion, the dog-paddle will in most instances give better results, but in view of the fact that many of our experts adhere to the breast-stroke, I will explain both.

No elaborate instruction is needed for the dog-paddle. The arms are rotated in the manner that every boy has seen a dog use his front paws in the water, and the legs are just flapped alternately back and forth, much as one does in walking. Find some place where the water is about up to the chest, and go ahead. Do not thrash away too fast, though; try to make every motion slow and effective. You will soon discover that the simple efforts will keep you afloat for a few feet, and you can increase the distance little by little. If you go too rapidly, you will tire immediately, and retard progress. Have in mind always that ability to stay on top is merely a question of balance, for the body is lighter than the water when the lungs are functioning normally, and, if you assume the right position, you cannot possibly sink. To prove this to yourself, just attempt in shallow water to lie down on the bottom, and note how you are forced irresistibly upward.

The elementary crawl is similar to the dog-paddle inasmuch as the arms are swung above water in recovering that is, in moving from the end of the drive to full reach.

If you tackle the breast stroke, begin on shore. Stand upright, with arms outstretched in front, and hands together, back to back. Divide the stroke into three parts, counting as you go, and using the legs one at a time, in succession. At count one pull the arms back parallel to the ground, until they are in line with the shoulders, and take a deep breath as they circle, simultaneously drawing up one foot, toes down and knee out; at two, lower the elbows to the body, carry the hands to the chest—palms down, fingers closed and pointing forward—lift the toes and straighten the leg so that the foot is about eighteen inches from the other; at three, thrust the arms to full reach bend down the toes, snap leg to starting position and expel the air from the lungs. Repeat this cycle, alternating with either leg, until you are familiar with every detail; then stretch across a narrow couch, or some other comfortable support and go through the movements, using both legs.

You are now ready for the water.

WIDOW OF COLLIS HUNTINGTON WEDS

Becomes Bride of Nephew of Her Dead Husband

Paris, July 17.—The marriage took place here of Mrs. Arabella D. Huntington, widow of the late Collis P. Huntington of New York, to Henry E. Huntington of New York and Los Angeles.

Collis P. Huntington, who died in August, 1900, left an immense fortune, estimated at many millions, which he bequeathed to his wife, his adopted son, Archer M. Huntington, his nephew, Henry E. Huntington, and his adopted daughter, Clara Huntington, who married in 1889 Prince Francis of Hatzfeldt-Wildenburg, who died in 1910 in London.

WALSH ESTATE SHRINKAGE

Estimated at $15,000,000 In 1895, It Is Now Valued at $45,000

Chicago, July 17.—The estate of John R. Walsh, whose fortune was estimate at $15,000,000 before the failure of his banks in 1905, has shrunk to $45,000, according to the attorney for the administratrix, who appeared before the board of review.

The estate had been assessed at $150,000 but the lawyer asserted that more than two-thirds of the property is insolvent and $105,000 was cut from the valuation.

End of Lexington Strike

MASSACRES CONTINUE

Austrian Official Confirms Story of Awful Atrocities by Bulgars

London, July 17.—Full confirmation of the reported sacking and burning of the Macedonian town of Seres by the fleeing Bulgarian troops and of the crucifixion, hacking to death or burning alive many of the inhabitants has been sent to the Austro-Hungarian government by Consul General Kral of Salonica.

Three-fourths of the formerly flourishing town of about 30,000 inhabitants is a mass of smoking ruins, says Kral, who has just returned to Salonica from Seres, where he thoroughly investigated the situation.

Another horrifying story of massacre reaches Salonica from Dioran, forty miles northwest of Salonica. Mussulmans there made a written declaration, countersigned by three local Bulgarian priests, stating that the Bulgarians slaughtered thousands of Mussulmans who had sought refuge in Dioran from the surrounding districts.

Unconfirmed reports have reached Constantinople of a massacre of the Armenian population at Rodosto, on the Sea of Marmora. Turkish forces under Enver Bey are supposed to have occupied Rodosto Tuesday.

MOTHER SELLS DAUGHTER

Conscience Smites Her and She Has Purchasers Arrested

Milwaukee, July 17.—Accused of buying Anna Gorzo, 16, from her mother for $30, and then shipping her to Phillipsburg, N. J., Henry Herzog, 34, and Paul Boy, 28, were arrested, charged with contributing to the delinquency of a minor. In district court the case was continued until July 23, and the men are being held under bonds of $500 each.

Mrs. Margaret Gorzo, the mother, is the complainant. She asserts that the men, who boarded at her home, so poisoned her mind against her daughter that she was willing to sell the girl, who was shipped east last Sunday night. Later she was sorry she sold the girl and went to the police.

A message from Phillipsburg says the girl is at the home of her godparents there. She has not been detained and will not be unless the Milwaukee police give some satisfactory reason for such action.

The police said they believe the girl's story, that the mother put the daughter out of the house because she objected to the mother marrying a man much younger than herself.

LOSES LIFE TRYING TO WIN WAGER OF $2

Waiter Jumps Into Water Fully Dressed and Is Drowned

Boston, July 17.—A $2 bet cost the life of Harry Andrews, a negro waiter employed at the Point Shirley club, Winthrop. A wager with another waiter that Andrews could jump into the water fully dressed and get back to shore safely again was made, and in an endeavor to win the money, Andrews plunged off the pier in front of the clubhouse.

A moment later he sank from sight and an hour later his body was recovered from the water about thirty feet distant from where he jumped in.

Medical Examiner Magrath said death was probably due to heart failure, believing that Andrews was stricken the moment he struck the water. Andrews leaves a wife and three children.

JOHNS IS FREED

Police Run Out of Clues In the Crispell Death Mystery

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 17.—Herbert Johns, who was being held in connection with the death of Alice Crispell, whose body was found in Harvey's lake, was discharged from custody last evening and those in charge of the investigation of the girl's death say they have no further clues in the mystery.

After the commonwealth had presented all of its evidence at the hearing, counsel for Johns argued that not only had Johns not been connected as a principle or accomplice in the death, but that it had not been shown that a murder had been committed.

AN UNWELCOME VISITOR

Freight Car Smashes House and Stops at Girl's Bedside

Chicago, July 17.—Miss Clara Marsske was sleeping the untroubled sleep of a carefree schoolgirl when suddenly something entered the room. It was a railroad train.

The Marsske home stands at the foot of a railroad embankment. On this elevation a freight train left the rails and several cars tumbled down from the tracks.

One of them tore through the front of the house and stopped directly in front of Miss Marsske's bed. She escaped from the wrecked house without injury.

BYRNES PASSES OUT OF CONTROL

Mystery Surrounds Retirement From Boston and Maine

NAME DROPPED OFF DIRECTORS

Mellen's Right-Hand Man, as Well as Vice President Horn, Get Out When McDonald Takes Charge of Office—New President Does Not Expect to Perform Miracles

Boston, July 17.—Timothy E. Byrnes, who said, upon his election to the vice presidency of the Boston and Maine railroad: "I shall assist Mr. Mellen in the management of that railroad as I have in the New Haven management," passes from all connection with the Boston and Maine management on the same day that its control by Mellen ceases.

At a meeting of the directors of the Boston and Maine yesterday, the names of Byrnes and Vice President Horn disappeared from the list of officials of that road, their retirement to become effective not later than Aug. 1, when Morris McDonald, who was elected to succeed the late J. P. Morgan as a director, will succeed Mellen in control of the affairs of the road.

Horn resigned, but mystery surrounds the dropping of Byrnes, the news of whose retirement is made public only through the noncommittal report of the directors, which omits the name of the chief Mellen lieutenant without comment.

By the passing of the Mellen regime from the management of the Boston and Maine, optimistic railroad men predict the ultimate independence of that road from all control by the New Haven management.

The reorganization of the Boston and Maine, which has given hope to the opponents of the New Haven merger, will go into effect Aug. 1.

Upon the election of McDonald to the presidency, he issued a statement in which he said:

"I am at the head of the Boston and Maine railroad because the acceptance of the presidency, with its necessary duties and intricate problems, was the thing for me to do. While I cannot perform miracles, I shall give the best that is in me to this work.

"I am, of necessity, unfamiliar with the problems of the road in detail, and wish it might be possible for me to have at least six months—twelve months would be more to my liking—in which to work undisturbed. It is obvious that I cannot at this time discuss any of the intimate features of the road's management.

"As to my plans, let me say only—it is my intention, so far as is practicable, to move the offices of the Boston and Maine to the North station."

PRONOUNCED ILLEGAL

Wearing of Slit Skirt Costs Woman $25 Fine In Richmond Court

Richmond, July 17.—Blossom Browning paid a $25 fine in Judge Crutchfield's court here for wearing a slit skirt, and declared she intended to go to New York at once, "where people are not prudish." She was charged with indecent exposure.

The skirt, slit knee high, and held by the police as evidence, was restored to Miss Browning on her promise to sew up the slash or not to appear again in the streets of Richmond without a petticoat.

Miss Browning's lawyers argued that the sale of the skirt by a licensed department store permitted her to wear it. Crutchfield replied that a city license for the sale of firearms did not authorize murder.

The justice, after an inspection of the offending skirt, blushingly fined the defendant, who paid, with the retort that "Richmond is a most illiberal city."

GUILD IN WASHINGTON

Tells President Our Relations With Russia Are Satisfactory

Washington, July 17.—Curtis Guild of Boston, former ambassador to Russia, came to Washington to pay his farewell call upon the president and Secretary of State Bryan and make a final report on relations between this country and Russia.

Guild said that in spite of the abrogation of the commercial treaty between the United States and Russia relations between the countries were on a satisfactory basis.

NOT WANTED IN LONDON

Vaudeville and Sporting World Bar Jack Johnson, "at Any Price"

London, July 17.—Both the vaudeville and sporting world in London refuse to have any dealings with Jack Johnson, who, it is reported, has been seeking an engagement here.

While one house which was rumored to have engaged his services refused to affirm or deny the report, other managers declared they would not take Johnson on "at any price."

Death of Jackson Tinker

Washington, July 17.—Jackson Tinker, one of the best known newspaper correspondents in the national capital, died here from appendicitis.

LEE AND GARRETSON

Two Labor Chiefs Who May Order Big Railroad Strike

W. G. Lee, president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen (on top), and A. B. Garretson, president of the Order of Railway Conductors, are making every effort to adjust the present differences between forty-two railroad companies east of the Mississippi and their employees. Over 100,000 men and 50,000 miles of railroad are involved in the dispute.

NEW LAW SATISFACTORY

Railroads and Trainmen Ratify Plan to Settle Their Differences

New York, July 17.—Representatives of the eastern railroads and of their trainmen and conductors, in joint meeting here, formally ratified the agreement to settle their differences under the Newlands bill and sent a telegram to President Wilson requesting him to inform them whom he would appoint as a board of mediation and conciliation.

No announcement was made concerning the status of the Erie railroad, which recently withdrew from the proceedings, nor did either side issue a statement concerning the new phase of the situation, the intention of the roads to insist that their grievances against the men be aired along with the latters' request for higher pay.

REFLECTS GREAT BUSINESS GROWTH

United States Treasury Handled $7,071,520,000 Last Year

Washington, July 17.—The United States treasury handled in actual cash during the fiscal year ended June 30 the sum of $7,071,520,000, breaking all previous records and stamping the federal treasury as the greatest banking institution in the world.

Reflecting the tremendous growth of the government's business, this high record, including income, outgo and operations within the treasury, exceeded the cash transactions of the previous year by $469,769,000 and those of three years ago by $1,478,826,000.

MRS. CAUKIN'S DISTINCTION

First Woman to Get Post of Receiver In Land Office

San Francisco, July 17.—With the affixing of President Wilson's signature, Mrs. Grace Caukin of Sonoma, Cal., will become the first woman receiver of a United States land office.

Mrs. Caukin, who was an active member of the woman's committee of the Democratic state central committee during the last presidential campaign, received word from Washington that her appointment had been confirmed by the senate. The income from the office is $4500 a year.

BOY DASHES FROM COURT

Says He Preferred Death by Poison to Going to Reform School

Malden, Mass., July 17.—Paul Boyce of Stoneham, 15 years old, made a dash for liberty from the Malden district court just after Judge Sweetser had sentenced him to the Lyman school for boys. When captured, after an exciting chase through the business district, he declared that he had just taken poison tablets.

Although the police hardly believed his story, they called in a doctor, who administered an emetic. The boy was taken to the Lyman school last night.

SUMMONED FOR A CONFERENCE

Ambassador Wilson Is Called Home by the President

ACTUAL SITUATION IN MEXICO

Executive Seeks First Hand Information Previous to Announcing Attitude Toward Huerta Government—Action Believed to Forecast Important Step by Administration

Washington, July 17.—President Wilson, after conferences with Secretary Bryan over the latest aspects of the Mexican situation presented by the inquiries of foreign powers as to the attitude of the United States, ordered Ambassador Wilson at Mexico City to proceed to Washington immediately for a conference.

The ambassador will hurry north on a battleship from Vera Cruz, if any delay would be entailed by waiting for a commercial steamer. Officials here believe that the almost total interruption of railroad traffic between Mexico City and the United States will force the ambassador to make his trip by water. He is not expected here before July 23 at the earliest.

It is believed in official and diplomatic circles that an important announcement of the attitude of the United States in the pending situation will follow the ambassador's conference with the president and secretary of state. The president's action, following closely the unofficial announcement that some of the foreign powers which have already recognized the Huerta government were pressing for some indication of this government's attitude toward the continued disorders in Mexico, leads to that belief.

Bryan positively declined to add any information to his brief announcement of Wilson's call to Washington. However, it is assumed that the administration desires to learn from the ambassador directly what influences actuated the foreign diplomatic representatives in Mexico, when they jointly agreed to address their governments with what amounted to a formal complaint against the attitude of the United States in its relations with the Huerta regime.

President Wilson has kept an open mind on the subject and is thought to feel himself bound to adhere to the policy he announced early in his administration of leading moral encouragement only to such governments in Latin-America as were founded upon constitutional law and practice. It is understood, however, he is ready to give due weight to any representations Wilson may care to make.

Pressure on the president and the secretary of state to show a firmer hand in dealing with the Mexican situation has increased lately to a marked degree. They have stood firm, however, taking the position that the United States government had no right to interfere between the contending factions and that its duty was fulfilled in seeking to protect the interests of American citizens through diplomatic means.

This is what in diplomacy is termed a correct attitude, but its correctness is not approved entirely by certain American citizens who have property interests in Mexican territory.

SEVEN BULLETS IN HEAD

Even at That Aged Would-Be Suicide May Not Die

Fall River, Mass., July 17.—The condition of John T. Graham of Methuen, who shot seven bullets into his head on the grave of his first wife in Oak Grove cemetery, is unchanged.

Graham, who is 68 years old, came to this city with the avowed intention of committing suicide. He went to his firs wife's grave, and there shot himself seven times with a .22 calibre revolver.

Officer McCloskey heard the shots, and approaching the grave met Graham staggering towards him with blood pouring from wounds in his head. His only statement was "I guess I made a bad job of it."

He was rushed to the City hospital and the surgeons got to work on him. Five of the bullets were located, but the other two are as yet undiscovered. He has a chance for recovery.

RAILWAY COMPANY BLAMED

Responsible For Wreck In Which Fourteen Lives Were Lost

Los Angeles, Cal., July 17.—Blame for the Pacific Electric railway wreck last Sunday night, when fourteen persons were killed and 150 injured in a collision of trains running from Los Angeles to the ocean, was declared by a coroner's jury to rest with the railroad company.

The verdict charged that the trains were operated too closely together; that the cars were overcrowded and that the employes were unacquainted with the traffic rules.

Yantic Mills Bankrupt

Hartford, July 17.—The Yantic Woolen company has met with disaster because of the uncertainty of the Democratic tariff bill, according to what was said in the United States court, where a voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"You don't need to keep a personal dog, do you, Mrs. Carter?" he asked with a twinkle that might have been a spark in his eyes, and just at that moment another awful thing happened. Aunt Adeline came out on the front porch and said in the most frozen tone of voice:

"Mary, I wish to speak to you in the house," and then walked back through the front door without even looking in Judge Wade's direction, though he had waved his hat with one of his mother's own smiles when he had seen her before I did. One of my most impossible habits is when there is nothing else to do I laugh. I did it then and it saved the day, for we both laughed into each others' eyes a second time, and before we realized it we were within whispering distance.

"No, I don't—don't—need any dog," I said softly, hardly glancing out from under my lashes because I was afraid to risk looking straight at him again so soon. I could fairly feel Aunt Adeline's eyes boring into my back.

"It would take the hydra headed monster of—may I bring my mother to call on you and the—Mrs. Henderson?" he asked and poured the wonder smile all over me. Again I almost caught my breath.

"I do wish you would, Aunt Adeline is so fond of Mrs. Wade!" I said in a positive flutter that I hope he didn't see, but I am afraid he did, for he hesitated as if he wanted to say something to calm me, then bowed mercifully and went on down the street. He didn't put on the hat he had held in his hand all the while he stood by the fence until he had looked back and bowed again. Then I felt still more fluttered as I went into the house, but I received the third cold plunge of the day when I reached the front hall.

"Mary," said Aunt Adeline in a voice that sounded as if it had been buried and never resurrected. "If you are going to continue in such an unseemly course of conduct I hope you will remove your mourning, which is an empty mockery and an insult to my own widowhood."

"Yes, Aunt Adeline, I'll go take it off this very minute." I heard myself answer her airily to my own astonishment. I might have known that if I ever got one of those smiles it would go to my head! Without another word I sailed into my room and closed the door softly.

I wonder if God could have realized what a tender thing he was leaving exposed to life in the garden of the world after he had finished making a woman? Traditionally, we are created out of rose leaves and star dust and the harmony of the winds, but we need a steel chain netting to fend us. Slowly I unbuttoned that black dress that symbolized the ending of six years of the blackness of a married life, from which I had been powerless to fend myself, and the rosy, dimpling thing in snowy lingerie with tags of blue ribbon that stood in front of my mirror was as new born as any other hour old similar bundle of linen and lace in Hillsboro, Tenn. Fortunately, an old, year before last, white lawn dress could be pulled from the top shelf of the closet in a hurry, and the Molly that came out of that room was ready for life—and a lot of it quick and fast.

And again, fortunately, Aunt Adeline had retired with a violent headache and black Judy was carrying her in a hot water bottle with a broad grin on her face. Judy sees the world from the kitchen window and understands everything. She had laid a large thick letter on the hall table where I couldn't fail to see it.

I took possession of it and carried it to a bench in the garden that backs up against the purple sprayed lilacs and is flanked by two rows of tall purple and white iris that stand in line ready for a Virginia reel with a delicate row of the poet's narcissus across the broad path. I love my flowers. I love them swaying on their stems in the wind and I like to snatch them and crush the life out of them against my breast and face. I have been to bed every night this spring with a bunch of cool violets against my cheek, and I feel that I am going to flirt with my tall row of hollyhocks as soon as they are old enough to hold up their heads and take notice. They always remind me of very stately gentlemen, and I have wondered if the fluffy little butter and eggs weren't shaking their ruffles at them.

A real love letter ought to be like a cream puff with a drop of dynamite in it. Alfred's was that kind. I felt warm and happy down to my toes as I read it, and I turned around so old Lilac Bush couldn't peep over my shoulder at what he said.

He wrote from Rome this time where he had been sent on some sort of diplomatic mission to the Vatican and his letter about the ancient city on her seven hills was a prose poem in itself. I was so interested that I read on and on and forgot it was almost toast-apple time.

Of course anybody that is anybody would be interested in Father Tiber and the old Coliseum, but what made me forget the one slice of dry toast and the apple was the way he seemed to be connecting me up with all those wonderful old antiquities that had never even seen me. Because of me he had felt and written that poem descriptive of old Tiber, and the moonlight had lit up the old Coliseum just because I was over here lighting up Hillsboro, Tenn., with Mr. Carter dead. Of course that is not the way he put it all, but there is no place to really copy what he did say down into this imp book. Anyway, that is the sentiment he expressed when it is boiled down and sugared off.

That's just what I mean. Love boiled down and sugared off is mighty apt to get an explosive flavor, and one had better be careful with that kind if one is timid, which I'm not. As I said, also, I am ready for a little taste of life, so I read on without fear; and, to be fair, Alfred had well boiled his own last paragraph. It snapped, and I jumped and grasped both. I almost thought I didn't quite like it and was going to read it over again to see when there came a procession from over to Dr. John's, and I laid the bombshell down on the bench.

The Most Subdued Billy I Ever Saw.

First came the red setter, that is always first with Dr. John, and then he came himself, leading Billy by the hand. It was Billy, but the most subdued Billy I ever saw, and I held out my arms and started for him.

"Wait a minute, please, Molly," said the doctor in the voice he always uses when he's punishing Billy and me. "Billy came to apologize to you for being rude to your—your guest. He told me all about it, and I think he's sorry. Tell Mrs. Carter you are sorry, son." When that man speaks to me as if I were just any old body else I hate him so it is a wonder I don't show it more than I do. But there was nothing to say, and I looked at Billy, and Billy looked at me.

Then suddenly he stretched out his little arms to me, and the dimples winked at me from all over his darling face.

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

IS ANXIOUS FOR A RACE

But Phelan Is Not in Condition to Meet Kingsbury

J. Fay Phelan who tied with Fred Kingsbury in the 440 yard dash at the Fourth of July games and then accepted second prize, contends that he did so only to put an end to the discussion that had developed as to the winner and that he is willing to meet Kingsbury at a future date.

Several challenges have been issued by Kingsbury to Phelan, but owing to blood poisoning in his leg, contracted in June, Phelan cannot accept. When Dr. C. J. Lynch advises that he can run without doing himself any injury he states he will meet Kingsbury.

Kingsbury is captain of the High school track team and Phelan is a member of the North Dorchester A. A. relay team. The showing of Kingsbury in the holiday race was unexpected. Some of the South Quincy supporters of Phelan declare Kingsbury has been aware of his condition and feel that he is rather hasty in issuing a challenge under such conditions.

Both men show a disposition to run and the contest promises to be a merry one since it is believed that Phelan will soon be in condition.

SENT TO STATE FARM.

With this morning's sun reflecting through the bars of his cell at the police station, William Tate of Milton awakened from a sound slumber. Rattling the door he called loudly for chicken, and the negative answer given him had a weakening effect. So weakening in fact that he could not walk from the detention room to the patrol wagon to be taken to court. He reached it by crawling the entire distance.

He was arrested by Officer Fallon after he had stopped several women and cars opposite the St. John's church. While undergoing the formalities of booking he acted in a peculiar manner, but voiced no objection to the cell assigned to him.

In court this morning he pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and was sentenced to the State farm. Clerk Lyons informed him he had the right to appeal from the sentence to the Superior court. He looked at the clerk, passed his hand over his face, and asked "would you appeal?" Because of his physical condition he was advised to accept the sentence and he did so.

ON TOUR OF THE CITY

Visit Shipyard, Birthplaces and Dorothy Q. House

Nearly one hundred members of the Harvard summer school and Lynn Historical society, visited Quincy on Wednesday, on a pilgrimage to some of the many historical spots in the city. The party came from Boston by boat landing at the Fore River yards in the late afternoon and after a brief inspection of the yard took electric cars for South Quincy where they visited the birthplaces of Presidents John Adams and John Quincy Adams.

After a delightful hour at these two old houses where they were shown every attention by Benjamin King, cars were taken for the Dorothy Q house, near the High school where the good part of an hour was passed in examining the many articles of an antique nature with which this house is stocked.

It was planned to make the return trip to Boston by boat but the hour was so late before the inspection of the Dorothy Q house had been completed that many of the party returned to Boston on the trolley cars.

FOYS MEN AT BASE BALL

Water Street Store Defeat City Square Aggregation

In a spirited base ball game at the Ward Three playground Wednesday afternoon the employees of the Water street store of R. E. Foy beat his Adams Market team of City Square 11 to 4. The game was the first of a series of Wednesday afternoon contests which will be held throughout the summer.

The Littlewood brothers did the battery work for the Adams market. In the fifth innings Frank Foy relieved brother George after he started out for an altitude record. The utility pitcher worked hard but the game was beyond control.

Tinney and Caddy performed for the winners and did good work. The feature of the game was Ed Smith's home run in the fifth when he gave the ball an unmerciful clout to the outer garden. Gus Ackerstrom after a long run grabbed a long fly, which Littlewood had driven to deep centre, for the most sensational play of the game.

The Water street manager is more than pleased with the showing and challenges any strong store team in the city. The defy should be addressed to William Kane.

MOTOR BOAT MUFFLING.

Complaint was made by Capt. James T. Grady of the motor boat "Palm" against the owners of two motor boats in the Nahant District Court last week, the result being that Horace F. Perrigo of Malden, and Charles V. Block of Revere, were each fined $10 for not having their boats muffled in a reasonable manner.

The "Palm", the motor boat turned over to the District Police by the Motor Boat Muffling Association, has gone into commission this week and will take up an active campaign against unmuffled motor boats or motor boats not muffled in a reasonable manner in accordance with the law.

Agassiz and the Girls.

Concerning Louis Agassiz, naturalist, when a professor at Harvard, this story is told by James Kendall Hosmer in his "The Last Leaf:" "As he strode homeward from his walks in the outer fields or marshes we eyed him gingerly, for who could tell what he might have in his pockets? Turtles, tadpoles, snakes, any old monster, might be there. He was on the friendliest terms with things ill reputed, even abhorrent, and could not understand the qualms of the delicate. He was said to have held up once in all innocence, before a class of schoolgirls, a wriggling snake. The shrieks and confusion brought him to a sense of what he had done. He apologized elaborately, the foreign peculiarity he never lost running through his confusion. 'Poor girls, I vill not do it again. Next time I vill bring in a nice, clean leetle feesh.' Agassiz took no pleasure in shocking his class. On the contrary, he was most anxious to engage and hold them."

The Unsociable Little Fellow.

At dinner during a voyage to Corsica, to which my father invited the passengers who included some officers of his regiment and two Corsicans, he requested an officer, M. de Belloc, to call a young man who was wearing the uniform of the military school and reading at the end of the boat. The young man refused. M. de Belloc came back irritated and said to my father: "I should like to throw the unsociable little fellow into the sea. He has an unpleasant face. Will you grant me permission, colonel?"

"No," said my father, laughing, "and I am not of your opinion. His face shows character, and I am sure that he will be heard of some day."

The unsociable fellow was the future Emperor Napoleon.—From Memoirs of Comtesse de Boigne.

The Rosetta Stone.

The Rosetta stone was found in 1799 by a French engineer officer in an excavation made near Rosetta. It has an inscription in three different languages, the hieroglyphic, the demotic and the Greek. It was erected 195 B. C. in honor of Ptolemy Epiphanes because he remitted the dues of the priestly body. The great value of the Rosetta stone lies in the fact that it furnished the key whereby the Egyptian hieroglyphics were deciphered.

Hardly Worth While.

Eleanor was the little daughter of a musician whose first oratorio, according to a writer in Harper's Magazine, was to be given at a musical festival in a city some distance from their home. Eleanor had never been away from home, and her parents thought that she would regard the journey and concert as the greatest experience of her life and decided to take her.

The oratorio was pronounced highly successful. But when Eleanor was being put to bed that night she looked so unhappy that her mother asked her if she had not had a good time. Eleanor looked up tearfully and said:

"Did you bring me all this way from home just to hear that thing that's been coming up through the register for the last six months?"

—The disciples of the experimental marriage plan will have to seek some other city than Reno to make practical the carrying out of their ideas. A law has been recently passed making a year's residence in the place a necessary precedent to obtaining an unscrambling of matrimonial eggs and that will be found altogether too long a time to wait. Reno got a world-wide fame on account of its divorce colony, but it will have to look to other sources for further advertising.

OFFICER AVERY GIVEN A HEARING

Tells His Version of the Shooting of Frank Gilraine Near High Schoolhouse

Other Witnesses Tell of What Transpired That Night

Mayor Stone gave a hearing in his office Thursday evening on the shooting of Frank Gilraine by Officer John J. Avery. Gilraine was shot in the hip as he was running away on the evening of June 25 and is still in the hospital. James E. O'Connell, attorney for Gilraine, was present and subjected those who appeared to some cross examination. John W. McAnarney, city solicitor, was present only in an advisory capacity.

Officer Avery gave his version of the affair as follows. "This happened on Wednesday night, June 25, at about 8.45. I was in the High school, to see my sister graduate. A boy stepped in and told Officer Canavan who was on duty that night at the school, that two men were in a fight outside. We ran out and saw a crowd of men and boys, about 15 or 18 or more watching a disturbance at Bridge and Hancock streets.

"We saw a car, a team and an auto stop there. On running around the car, the end along Bridge and Hancock streets on being told that there was one man killing another on the sidewalk, I saw some of the crowd standing around a man lying on his back.

"We both ran to the prostrate form. When we were about 10 or 15 feet from the form someone said 'there is the man you want to get running away.' Officer Canavan went for the man on his back while I started for the fleeing man. He had a start of about 20 feet, and was headed toward Butler road. I called on him to stop or I would shoot, three or four times. He continued running, and as he was in the middle of the road, and as I had reason to believe from the condition I saw the man in that a murder had been committed, I kept on running As he started for the rear of the High school where he would soon disappear from sight, I pulled out my revolver and fired toward the lawn to the right of him.

"As soon as I fired he ran three or four steps, fell near the gutter and said his leg was broken. I summoned the auto patrol, went with him to the City Hospital and did what I could to make him comfortable."

"I chased him from where his apparent victim was, to a point about 150 feet."

Mayor Stone asked:—"Had you reason to believe the man was dead?"

A. Yes sir.

Further questioning brought out that Patrick Connolly had told him where to go and that someone was killing another. Officer Avery said that he glanced at the man on the ground and thought a murder had been committed, that the man was dead since there was not a move in him. In his opinion Gilraine could not have been drinking because of the speed with which he ran.

Mayor Stone—Why did you shoot at the man?

A. "I was led to believe a serious assault had taken place. The man was apparently dead and I saw Gilraine getting away. While on my way down Butler road some one in the rear said, 'fire on him Joe, you will lose him.' I commenced to wonder what kind of a man I was chasing."

Mayor Stone—Did you know who he was then?

A. No sir.

Mayor Stone—Did Gilraine give you any explanation why he did not stop?

A. I went to the hospital with him and he said I had no right to shoot. I don't remember, I think it was the Chief, that told me that he said had he known I would shoot he would have stopped.

Mayor Stone—When you shot did you shoot at the man?

A. I shot at the ground, at the sidewalk, at the lawn near the sidewalk to scare or stop him.

Mayor Stone—It was not your intention to shoot him?

A. No.

In answer to Attorney O'Connell he said he had been connected with the force since July 1908; and had been a regular officer about a year, and possessed a Colt automatic revolver holding nine cartridges which the chief had given him. He said he had practiced some in the woods and had fired it about 15 or 20 times.

Report of the cross examination follows:

Q. Your attention was called to the row outside.

A. Yes sir.

Q. You didn't go to see what was the matter?

A. As near as I got was 15 feet when I was told "there is the fellow."

Q. How far did you chase him.

A. About 150 feet.

Q. How far was he ahead of you when you fired?

A. About 20 or 25 feet.

Q. And in that 50 yards you had ordered him to stop three or four times?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Was there plenty of light?

A. We were running toward an incandescent light.

Q. Did you deliberately shoot at him?

A. No, at the lawn.

Q. You fired this revolver when you were on the dead run?

A. Yes sir.

Q. No matter where the bullet was going to?

A. I fired at the lawn.

Q. How can you account for the bullet hitting him?

A. I don't know.

Q. Did the conductor you spoke of run with you?

A. He was the first man that came up.

Q. Have you talked this matter over with Connolly?

A. Yes, the next morning.

Mr. O'Connell asked Officer Avery if he had been coached in any way and where he got the words "reason to believe" and was told that he had written a statement at the station next day, while the Chief was there, but that he dictated no part of it.

Q. When you left the building didn't some say two men were fighting?

A. Yes, two conductors.

Q. You went out on the presumption of a fight?

A. Yes.

Q. Since a member of the force have you ever been given any instruction in the use of a revolver.

A. No sir.

Q. By an officer used to using one, or an expert?

A. No sir.

Q. So, it was like putting a danger-

QUINCY DAY IN HISTORY

Seventeen Historical Societies to Send Delegates

At the annual meeting of the Quincy Historical society held some weeks ago it was voted to hold a historical day in Quincy in the near future and a committee was appointed to carry the plan into effect. This committee has been hard at work and it is announced that the date for the affair has been set for Sept. 17.

Invitations will be sent to seventeen historical societies in the state, each of which will be requested to send ten delegates to Quincy on that date. While the full plans have not as yet been completed it is expected that the program will include a trip about the city to inspect some of the historical places and later the delegates will be served tea at the house of the Historical society.

MORE MOVING PICTURES.

Manager Wardwell of Kincaide's theatre is arranging to take a moving picture of the ladies day scenes of the Quincy Yacht club next Thursday. He plans first to take a picture of the club house and then have the moving picture camera in a power boat opposite the flagship of Commodore Crane and to take every yacht as it passes by in review and salutes the Commodore. Mr. Wardwell is also having a colored slide made of the Mayor's party on board the battleship Michigan the day before the Fourth when the Mayor and reception committee returned the call of Capt. Capehart. This picture was taken by one of the jackies and is a fine picture showing all of the reception committee, standing in a group with Capt. Capehart and officers of the battleship.

TODAYS RAIN VERY BENEFICIAL

This morning started in with a much needed rain. Thursday night the weather looked threatening but it was not until late in the night that any rain fell and it was not until this morning that it apparently settled in for a rainy day. The rain is not a heavy one but one that will do gardens vastly more good than a short heavy shower. An all day light rain allows the water to settle into the ground, and will do an enormous amount of good.

The body of Mary, widow of John O'Connell, of 28 Summer street, was sent to Lewiston, Maine, Wednesday, for burial. Services were held in St. John's church by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan. Mrs. O'Connell died in her 85th year.

NIGHT BEFORE AT ATLANTIC

Fourth of July Celebration Number Two

Another "night before the Fourth celebration" was held in Atlantic Thursday evening by the Fourth of July Association, who tendered their lady friends, officers and honorary members a reception at headquarters and later on the lawn of Charles Cherrington, Clive street. At headquarters a "get together meeting" was held in which the practical side of the celebration was reviewed at length.

The grounds about the residence of Mr. Cherrington were decorated with lanterns, colored lights, bunting and flags. Tables with eatables were set in different corners and several bowls of punch, the product of Mr. Cherrington's genius, were conspicuously placed on the grounds.

President Frank Badger presided during the evening. Among the speakers were Charles Cherrington, Louis L. F. Langelier, Herbert F. Beeman, the heads of the committees, and a long list of invited guests. Refreshments were served.

ANNUAL OUTING OF GROCERS

Will Go to Newport, Rhode Island, This Year

The twenty-first annual outing of the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers' association will be held Wednesday, July 30, and this year Newport R. I., that well known summer resort will be the objective point.

A special train will leave Quincy that morning at 8.18 making stops at Quincy Adams 8.20, Braintree 8.23, South Braintree 8.28, South Weymouth, North Abington, Abington, East Bridgewater, Whitman, Bridgewater, arriving at Fall River wharf at 10 A. M. Here the steamer Warwick will be boarded for a beautiful sail to Newport which will be reached at 11 o'clock. Electric cars may be taken at the wharf for the beach if desired although the walk is but ten minutes.

There are amusements of various kinds at the beach such as merry-go-round, dancing, roller coaster, etc., which will afford the excursionists plenty of amusement until noon when dinner will be served. For the dinner the party has a choice of a regular dinner for 60 cents, with lobster for 80 cents or a dinner a la carte.

Plans are also being arranged so that those who desire may take the ten mile shore ride at reduced rates. There will be a band concert in the afternoon and an orchestra will furnish music on the boat.

Returning the party will leave Newport at 5.15 for a delightful sail around Newport Harbor with its torpedo stations, and Naval Academy in view, arriving at Fall River at 7 o'clock when the special train will be taken for home.

The price of the round trip tickets on the train and steamer is $1.50 but this does not include dinner, trolley car rides or sea shore drive.

The committee of arrangements are O. A. Bridgham, of South Braintree, A. W. Ames, of Rockland, Everett Loud of East Weymouth, J. A. Radcliff of Rockland, W. H. Sims of Braintree and H. W. Mansfield of South Braintree.

GAS EARNINGS ON THE INCREASE

The net earnings of the Citizens Gas Company of Quincy available for dividends for the year ending June 30, 1913, were $22,619, which is a good gain. In the year ending June 30, 1912, they were $19,970, and in the preceding year $21,438.

GRANITE DAY PLANS

Committees All Report Progress

More Automobiles Needed

The committee of the Granite Manufacturers' Association having in charge the arrangements for the reception and entertainment of the delegates of the National Retail Dealers' association, to be held in Boston in August, who are expected to visit Quincy on Aug. 22, met Thursday night at the rooms of the association in the Adams building.

It was expected that the committee of the Board of Trade would also be present but none of them appeared.

At the meeting held last week subcommittees were appointed to arrange for the various features planned for the day, such as automobiles to bring the party from Boston, the clambake, at New Downers Landing and the steamer to take the party for a sail in the harbor and trip back to Boston.

All of these committees reported progress, although full plans have not as yet been completed. Up to the present time the committee has the promise of more than fifty automobiles but this will not be near enough. Then again there are so many people away this month that the committees are finding it hard work to reach the people it desires to see. However plans are progressing favorably and unless all signs fail the outing will be a successful one.

Mayor Stone has promised to make a good contribution toward entertaining the delegates from his contingent fund, and it is expected that the Board of Trade will also make a contribution and of course the Manufacturers' Association will not be found wanting when the question of money is raised.

Arrangements for a steamer are being made through the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Chairman Miller visited the Chamber on Tuesday but was unable to connect with the parties desired, as many were out of town this week. However no trouble is anticipated from this score.

Another meeting of the committee of araringements will be held next Tuesday evening, at which time it is expected that plans will assume more definite shape.

AMMUNITION AT HINGHAM

Cruiser Washington Arrives at New Magazine

The armored cruiser Washington has arrived in Weymouth Back River for the purpose of delivering ammunition to the new government magazine at Hingham. This is the first visit of the cruiser to this port and in addition to delivering ammunition she will also take on some. The Washington is commanded by Commander F. L. Chadwick.

Up to the time of the completion of the new bridge over the Back river between North Weymouth and Hingham it was impossible for a vessel of the size of the Washington to pass through the draw, although the channel was deep enough to accommodate her. Now however she will have no difficulty in passing through the draw and tying up at the government wharf near the bridge from which wharf a railroad track connects with the magazine proper.

The public is not allowed anywhere near the magazine, the large tract of land in which it is located being guarded by soldiers night and day.

Passengers on the Nantasket line of street cars, however, can see the low dark colored powder boats tied up to the wharf and it will also be possible for passengers to get a fine view of the cruiser Washington while she is tied up at the wharf.

There is also a spur track from the main line of the railroad, which branches off near the West Hingham ham depot which enters the magazine and it is by this that some of the supplies are delivered.

BRIEFS

Inteersting features will be found today on page two of the Daily Ledger.

There are five articles on "How to build up or tear down this community" which will appear in the Ledger on successive days. Don't miss one of them.

Rev. Fr. J. P. Scannell of St. John's parish who was so impressed with a visit of a year ago to Ireland and could not forego the pleasures of a second visit this summer, arrived on the Cunard S. S. Laconia at East Boston on Wednesday. The voyage was the fastest of the season and took just seven days, one hour and 54 minutes.

The funeral of Mary Flood, widow of Frank Flood, who died Tuesday, was held Thursday afternoon from her home, 288 Fayette street, Wollaston. Services were conducted by Rev. F. StSeenstra of St. Chrysostoms Church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston ceemtery. There was a profusion of floral tributes.

While the lobby committee is covering a pretty wide field, it is denied that they will investigate the Bulgarian war and the Congo atrocities.

Although the President's motor was driven about 10 miles an hour on his trips through the hills, none of the villagers complained of him for exceeding the speed limit.

While the Bulgarians are a very smart people, they need not feel that their brains are so large as yet that they need secure wash-tubs to serve as hats.

The fact that John R. Early, the suspected leper, has gone crazy while quarantined, must be a great relief to the officials, as now they know what to do with him.

Senator Works is preparing a bill to prevent public offices from being used as political rewards. No Congress will ever pass it, as it would require candidates to fit themselves for their duties before being appointed.

ADVANCE OR ARBITRATION.

Apparently the controversy between trainmen and Eastern railroads will be settled through Erdman act changes. Disputes with engineers and firemen have already been similarly adjusted. An enormous advance has been made in New York garment trades through the "white protocol." A great strike has just been averted through arbitration on the Boston Elevated railway. The peace movement in industrial life has made a great march in six months.

Perhaps the United States could not adjust itself to the compulsory arbitration system of Australia and New Zealand. In that country it is theoretically agreed by all that a strike is barbarous and must not occur. The American workingman values his individual liberty at a figure much above par. He would not take kindly to a court order compelling him to report at the bench.

As respects public service corporations, practically the same results are being secured through public opinion. A general railroad strike would mean death to infants deprived of milk, it would close factories and threaten famine. Both sides realize that the public would take radical reprisals against either party responsible.

In street railway operation, arbitration has not proved fully successful yet. While the public is inconvenienced if street cars stop, yet its positive suffering does not go so far. If the public will insistently demand peaceful settlement, no more street car strikes need occur.

The worst troubles occur in mills and factories. These do not stop the people's food supply, they do not make the public walk. Their worst effects are not immediately obvious. They cast a blight over general prosperity. The public should demand, just as it demands on the steam roads, that some settlement be found other than war and battle.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

The Menace of the Mail Order Houses.

THAT the mail order houses in the large cities have BECOME A MENACE to the smaller cities, towns and communities is proved by the large patronage they enjoy from all over the entire country and further substantiated by the number of packages carried by transportation companies, which under the law must bear the name or some mark of identification by which the shipper is known.

This mail order business got its inception from men who made a habit of buying up secondhand goods, stocks from bankrupt firms and fire damaged or salvage goods from fire losses. To these were added goods that were culled by manufacturers and graded seconds and thirds, etc.

These were shrewd business men, men who believed in advertising, and, realizing the possibilities of advertising, commenced their business entirely along these lines, and to PROVE THE SUCCESS OF ADVERTISING no better evidence could possibly be offered than the fact that every weekly paper—farm, industrial, social or religious—carries their advertisements and also that they send out catalogues of enormous sizes, beautifully illustrated and embellished, costing hundreds of thousands of dollars to publish.

Today they have grown to such enormous size that they own and control factories, while they contract to sell the entire output of other factories.

However, the plants they control and operate manufacture what is termed in commercial parlance as competitive goods—something that every merchant can sell at a low price to meet the demands for cheap merchandise.

BUT AS TO STANDARD AND HIGH CLASS GOODS MADE BY LARGE AND RELIABLE FIRMS YOU NEVER SEE THESE GOODS ADVERTISED BY MAIL ORDER HOUSES, OR IF YOU DO THE PRICE IS JUST THE SAME AS FIXED BY THE MANUFACTURERS FOR ALL DEALERS.

Therefore when one orders articles of the low priced and cheaper kinds HE IS SURE TO GET JUST WHAT HE BUYS—cheaply made goods and seconds and no cheaper than he can buy right at home when freight charges, money order fees and postage are added.

Thousands of dollars annually are being sent to these mail order houses from this vicinity, thus DEPRIVING THE HOME MERCHANT OF HIS RIGHTFUL PATRONAGE. And yet, no matter how much the merchant may be dependent on the patronage of members of his community, he is supposed to give and to aid in every work undertaken for the material betterment of his town, and he does, being often coerced into giving by the demands of his customers, fearing to offend them because of the fear of loss of patronage

THERE CAN BE NO QUESTION BUT THAT ALL OF OUR PEOPLE ARE IN DUTY BOUND TO PATRONIZE HOME MERCHANTS. TO THEM YOU OWE ALLEGIANCE AND SUPPORT, AND I NOW ASK YOU CANDIDLY, ARE YOU GIVING IT TO THEM?

If you are buying goods out of your home town—more particularly from mail order houses and merchants in other cities—I say to you that you are UNDERMINING THE HOME MERCHANT and likewise the very foundation of your own well being. Every dime that you send to a mail order house makes that much harder the success of your home merchant and likewise retards the growth of your town. The money you send to mail order houses is taken entirely out of local circulation—is gone forever.

WHEREAS, IF YOU SPEND IT WITH A HOME MERCHANT HE IN TURN WILL SPEND IT WITH SOME ONE ELSE—PERHAPS PAY IT BACK TO YOUR FATHER, YOUR SON OR BROTHER, SISTER OR DAUGHTER AS SALARY, AND THUS IT COMES BACK INTO THE FAMILY, DOING A UNIVERSAL GOOD.

That many of our home people are ordering goods from mail order houses is a well known fact. One has but to visit the depots and express office to find therein daily many packages addressed to them and likewise bearing the name or address of certain mail order houses. These people are known to our merchants, and that's a fact. These packages consist of clothing, dry goods, groceries, drugs, toilet articles, furniture, hardware, carpenters' tools, farm implements and what not, ALL OF WHICH COULD BE PURCHASED FROM OUR OWN HOME MERCHANTS, QUALITY CONSIDERED, FREIGHT CHARGES ADDED AND TIME IN TRANSPORTATION, JUST AS CHEAPLY AS FROM ANY MAIL ORDER HOUSE IN THE COUNTRY

Supposing the merchants should band themselves together and refuse credit to those who patronize these mail order houses and further refuse to employ members of families who do this or refuse to buy the wares of these people? Wouldn't they find living mighty hard?

To be continued under the title, "THE HOME MERCHANT HAS EARNED SUPPORT."

REGENERATION OF NEW YORK BEGAN WHEN MAN SAW "41313"

Actor's Quick Eye After Rosenthal Murder Started Many Reforms.

Civic Pride and Anger Aroused and Police "System" Smashed.

WHAT'S in a number?

That is the question New Yorkers are asking just now. For a number—and a simple arrangement of digits at that, being merely "41313 N. Y."—furnished the clew that led to the unraveling of the mystery of the murder of Herman Rosenthal, gambler, and to the most sensational expose of police graft methods in the history of the nation's metropolis.

Had not a passerby noted that fateful combination of a 4 and a double 13 on the gray touring car that carried the assassins of Rosenthal in the early morning of July 16, 1912, it is probable that they would never have been apprehended, their identity, even if suspected, would never have become known and the later revelations of official corruption and criminality never brought out. Again, it may be said that only the foolhardy carelessness of the murderers themselves in failing to change the number of their car is, in the ultimate analysis, responsible for their apprehension and the events that have followed.

Both of these happenings, however, give the number 41313 N. Y. a peculiar significance in the history of New York life. In a sense it marks the beginning of the city's regeneration.

Because of it five men are now awaiting death in Sing Sing prison. Seven, including four former police inspectors, are convicts. A former police captain is dead of worry and remorse. Other policemen, trapped and disgraced despite the power of the system for which they looted and lied, are counting the hours before the doors of the penitentiary close behind them. And others still enjoy liberty only because of the procedure which permits a district attorney to protect informers.

Sixteen convictions or pleas of guilty obtained already for murder, bribery, extortion and conspiracy and at least six other convictions regarded as probable represent only the concrete results of the contemptuous carelessness of Rosenthal's murderers in raiding the Hotel Metropole with the number of their car flaunting through a brilliantly lighted street.

The larger but more intangible accomplishment which traces back to 41313 N. Y. is the shattering of the power of the arrogant and rapacious combination of policemen and panderers, a combination loosely called "the system," that blackmailed unfortunate women and lawless men with a greed and hypocrisy and wickedness unrivaled even in New York's experience.

"System" Really Routed.

Within a year from the murder at the Metropole the people and the courts have put the fear of justice into the hearts of the masters and the tools of "the system," have punished many, have driven others from the city or into legitimate occupations and have accomplished all that the Lexow, the Mazet and other spectacular inquiries failed in twenty years to do. Within a year more has been done to reform the police department than had been accomplished in a generation.

That is one outcome of the killing of the little, complaining east side gambler, one phase of the public gain that came of the forgetfulness or the bravado of the killers in publishing their identity through the glare of the Tenderloin. That is the side of reputations destroyed and of lives disgraced, of detection and punishment.

How much some men of courage, nbility and energy owe to 41313 N. Y. only the future can reveal.

District Attorney Charles S Whitman is a leading candidate for mayor because he found and seized his opportunity for extraordinary public service by first dragging the number of the gray car from reluctant lips. Frank Moss for his work with Whitman, Emory R. Buckner for his labors with the Curran aldermanic committee, which grew out of the first revelations made, and more than one other young man owe enhanced reputation and nation wide prominence to the number 41313 N. Y.

The One Clew.

It is not fancy or imagination that ascribes so much to the fortunate circumstances of an automobile number murderers did not trouble to remove or to falsify. The crime and the flight were so cunningly planned by experts in assassination that it is doubtful if the gun men ever would have been identified or Becker, their employer, exposed had not they been guilty of unbelievable stupidity in a trivial matter. District Attorney Whitman has said more than once that the case would have been hopeless if the car number had not been obtained.

The whole work of a year was based on that. If the number had been lost there would have been no arrests hot after the murder; no confessions by Rose and Webber and Vallon and Schepps; no conviction of Lieutenant Becker and of the gun men; no Curran committee revelations, with the consequent convictions of Inspectors Sweeney, Hussey, Murtha and Thompson and of their tools and collectors; no probing of the relations between treacherous policemen and their vile business partners; no such awakening of public conscience and spirit as forced effectual betterment and instigated a series of confessions.

Rosenthal himself, an unpleasant specimen of an unpleasant class, always a trouble maker and a "squealer," always snarling and clawing at the police and his own kind, was hardly to be believed when he made an affidavit on Saturday, July 13, 1912, that Lieutenant Charles Becker, the strong arm squad celebrity, was his gambling partner and promised to reveal to the grand jury the secret relations of police crooks with the protected gamblers.

Rosenthal's Revelations.

Whitman rather shook his head over the credibility of this east side gambler transplanted to the Tenderloin. In the line of duty, but not hoping for much, he directed Rosenthal to appear on Tuesday, July 16, to give the names of gamblers who could clinch the accusations against Lieutenant Becker and other policemen. On Sunday and Monday Rosenthal's story swept over the city. Most people, perhaps, doubted its truth. A few believed it and predicted for Rosenthal a sudden and unhappy death. In gambling houses and saloons patronized by gamblers some who had reason to know Becker whispered that he would certainly kill the squealer.

On the night of Monday, July 15, 1912, Rosenthal took supper in Considine's Metropole, in Forty-third street, just west of Broadway, and nervously detailed his troubles with Becker and his plans for getting even to half a dozen half bored and cynical frequenters of the cafe. He was there until shortly before 2 o'clock on Tuesday morning, when he was told that somebody wanted to speak to him outside. He walked out and was shot to death as he stepped over the threshold. It was exactly 1:57 a. m.

A little was revealed then and much later as to how a gray car had stopped by the south curb across from the cafe, how four men lounged across the street and waited by the door, how the street was unguarded by policemen, how the four rapidly slew Rosenthal and then escaped in the gray car, going east through Forty-third street.

There was no policeman to block the flight. No policeman secured accurately the number of the automobile. There was nothing but blundering confusion until the district attorney appeared at the West Forty-seventh street station, obtained the release of a vaudeville dancer who had been locked up as a witness and from him secured the correct number, 41313 N. Y.

The First Disclosures.

Promptly, then, the driver of the car was caught at his home and arrested. From his admissions it became known that "Bald Jack" Rose, a gambler, had knowledge of the murder. "Bridgey" Webber, a friend of Rose's, was arrested. Presently Rose, sick and moneyless, surrendered and told part of the truth—that he had hired the murderers. A day or two later Harry Vallon, an associate of Rose and Webber, surrendered jauntily.

The case began to unroll. It was found that Sam Schepps, a shrewd gambler, had fled from the city after playing a part in the crime. The district attorney obtained the names of the murderers—Frank Cirofici, Harry Horowitz, Louis Rosenzweig and Frank Muller, known generally as "Dago" Frank, "Gyp the Blood," "Lefty" Louie and "Whitey" Lewis. They had got out of the city.

On July 29 Rose, Webber and Vallon made a full confession to Whitman, admitting that at Lieutenant Becker's order they had hired the murderers and had planned the murder and that Becker was completely informed of the progress of the conspiracy, that he went to the station house to gloat over Rosenthal's body and that he paid $1,000 to the gun men. That night Becker was arrested and arraigned on a charge of murder.

Arrest of Murderers.

The arrest of the murderers followed quickly. Cirofici was caught in New York, "Whitey" Lewis was found in the Catskills, and "Lefty" Louie and "Gyp the Blood" were finally located in Brooklyn, where they had been hiding comfortably. Schepps was brought from Hot Springs, Ark.

On Oct. 24 at midnight Becker was convicted after a dramatic trial, in which the four informers told convincing stories. On Nov. 19 the four gun men were convicted. Rose, Webber, Vallon and Schepps were released as the reward for informing. An attempt to kill Webber was made only a short time ago.

Meanwhile the board of aldermen had appointed a committee, headed by Henry H. Curran, with Emory R. Buckner as counsel, to investigate the police department. The first important testimony was given by Mary Goode, who told how she had conducted a resort for years and had paid policemen for protection. Her story was the opening wedge of a long series of prosecutions. These are too recent to necessitate describing in detail. One after another persons of evil life testified against grafting police officials and policemen and laid the groundwork for grand jury indictments and criminal trials.

It was brought out that Inspectors Sweeney, Hussey, Murtha and Thompson had collected graft in Harlem and that they had raised a fund to get witnesses out of the state. They were convicted of conspiracy, largely on the testimony of former Police Captain Walsh, an admitted grafter, who has since died. The series of prosecutions was marked by the determined refusal of policemen to save themselves from prison by informing against their superiors.

Later Revelations.

Here is the list of convictions and pleas of guilty that resulted from the revelations brought out by the Curran committee:

Former Inspectors Dennis Sweeney, James E. Hussey, John J. Murtha and James E. Thompson, convicted of conspiracy, sent to prison for one year; Captain Thomas W. Walsh, confessed to extortion, dead; Sergeant Peter J. Duffy, convicted of extortion; Patrolman Eugene Fox, convicted of extortion; Patrolman Thomas F. Robinson, convicted of extortion; Patrolman John J. Hartigan, convicted of extortion; Edward J. Newell, lawyer, confessed to bribery, sentence suspended; Ashley Shea, confessed to bribery, awaiting sentence.

The trials of four policemen and of four others named as extortionists are yet to come.

The best work of the Curran committee was in bringing out facts for the district attorney to work on. The committee's report on its inquiry was not well received because of evidences contained in it of hostility to Mayor Gaynor and Police Commissioner Waldo and because the document had a strong partisan tinge.

Reviewing the accomplishments of a year since the murder of Rosenthal, it is difficult for any one not to become impressed with the singular part played in the whole astonishing business by the number of the gray car, 41313 N. Y.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

Misses Gladys and Myrtle Phelps of Huntington road are the guests of W. B. Batchelder at his summer home at Plum Island, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lathrop who are at Five Islands, Maine, are expected to return to their home on Milton terrace next week.

East Milton voters expressed genuine surprise when they learned that John J. McDevitt, the suspended Senator was a candidate for reelection. Sentiment is decidedly against his again entering the race. John J. Gallagher, representative from Milton and Canton is prominently mentioned as a candidate.

Roger Pierce, Harvard '04, who was general secretary to President Emeritus Eliot during the trip around the world in 1911-12 and who since that time has been in the employ of a Boston publishing company, has been appointed general secretary of the Harvard Alumni Association, succeeding Edgar H. Wells, '97 whose resignation took effect July 1. Mr. Pierce lives in Milton, and his wife, who was Miss Ruth Eliot, is the granddaughter of President Eliot.

John C. Cobb of Milton announced a few days ago that his interest in Hyde Park boys was equivalent to the gift of 50,000 feet of land which they had been using for out of door sports. The City of Boston will immediately commence what improvements are necessary and place a supervisor in charge. A few weeks ago the Hyde Park boys called on Mr. Cobb and asked if they could use the land for base ball. He assented and following close observation he made the presentation. The land is located at Davison and Pierce streets and is the only vacant land in the immediate vicinity. It is near the Milton line.

THE BOSTON CUSTOM HOUSE

Quincy Granite Will Be Used in 500 Foot Tower

At last says a Boston paper, steel columns and beams are being placed within the old granite custom house at the foot of State street and there is every reason to believe that before many weeks there will be visible evidences of the materialization of the 502-foot tower that is to rise from the center of the old building and to furnish the additional office room so long needed.

For that portion of the structure within the old building Quincy granite like that of which the old building is constructed will be used. Later the walls of the old building will be thoroughly scoured to make them match as far as possible the stone of the new structure.

That portion of the tower above the roof of the old building will be built of Rockport granite, the difference between the two varieties of stone being so slight as not to attract attention at the height of four stories. The finish of the old granite is said to be a kind that renders it inadvisable to attempt to clean it by means of the sand blast, so often employed of late years.

The new contract requires that in the construction of the tower the steel frame shall not be built more than four stories ahead of the granite walls, a departure from the usual practice in building skyscrapers.

The change of method was made with a view to having a flooring on which to handle the heavy granite blocks as they are hoisted, but experience on the present contract has shown that it may be found expedient to change the contract with a view to allowing more than four stories of steel above the granite walls.

ALDEN KINDRED.

An event of considerable interest to many in this locality is the thirteenth annual reunion of the Alden Kindred of America which will be held on Wednesday, Aug. 6, at the "Old Homestead" in Duxbury. Special trains have been provided and a most interesting entertainment has been arranged. The Adelphi quartette will sing and a ladies' orchestra will furnish instrumental music. Judge Robert O. Harris who has been closely identified with Colonial societies and affairs will address the Alden Kindred. A collation furnished by Westover and Foss will be served.

Mrs. Flora S. Mathewson of Washington street, South Braintree, is the secretary of the organization.

The Manufacturers' Association Aided In Shaping Plank

SWUNG IN BEHIND SHERMAN

President and Executive Board of N. A. M. Attended Convention and Brought All Resources Into Play to Aid Republican Ticket — Inner Workings to Be Laid Bare

Washington, July 18.—A remarkable story of how the National Association of Manufacturers had a hand in shaping the drafting of the platform of the 1908 Republican national committee and swung in behind James S. Sherman for the vice presidential nomination was unfolded to the senate lobby probe committee.

Scores of letters and telegrams, arranged in chronological order, were identified by M. M. Mulhall, lobbyist and strike breaker for the association for many years, and read into the record.

They showed that officials of the association were in constant touch with the Republican leaders before and through the convention. Lawyer James E. Emery was "in touch" with the chairman of the resolutions committee ten days before the convention actually assembled. The president and executive board attended the convention, and when its ticket was selected all of the resources of the N. A. M. were brought into play to aid the ticket nominating Taft and Sherman.

The exhibits also indicated that the association fought hard in 1909 to save Judge Jenkins in the Eleventh Wisconsin district from defeat at the hands of the Progressives.

Some of the letters introduced yesterday dealt with former President Roosevelt's indorsement of the candidacy of Mr. Taft, then secretary of war. In a letter to Schwedtman, secretary of the manufacturers, in April, 1908, Mulhall quoted the late Vice President Sherman as saying that the fight then raging on Speaker Cannon was a "dirty deal by the White House against the speaker."

"Watson states," wrote Mulhall, "that the president (Roosevelt) is moving heaven and earth to nominate Taft, and he is willing to sacrifice the Sherman law and every law to please the trusts and please Wall street so that he can get their support for his candidate."

The former workings of the National Council of Industrial Defense, the "paper" organization which has financed legislative lobbying under the direction of the N. A. M. and allied organizations, are to be shown to the public. The names of every person and organization contributing to its expenses are to be revealed.

The senate lobby probe committee, incensed at the manner of J. B. Bird, general manager of the N. A. M., and treasurer of the council, when called to the stand, has decided that all facts regarding this organization, which Lobbyist Mulhall says has an income of between one-half and three-quarters of a million dollars yearly, shall be revealed.

An accountant went to work yesterday on the books of the organization and of the N. A. M., which were turned over to the probers by the officials of the twin organizations under a subpoena, and it is expected the committee will have a summary of the accounts ready to introduce as soon as Mulhall completes his story.

Inasmuch as it has been practically decided that cross examination of Mulhall shall be limited to members of the committee, it is hoped his examination will be concluded by Tuesday of next week. He will be followed on the stand by the officials of the N. A. M. The committee is especially anxious to get Emery on the stand so that he can explain just what he did to earn his salary of $1000 a month and an unlimited expense account.

BOXING MADE LEGAL

Ten-Round, No-Decision Contests Are Allowed In Wisconsin

Madison, Wis., July 18.—Governor McGovern signed the Hedding boxing bill, making ten-round, no-decision contests legal in Wisconsin. Under the provision of the new law there will be a boxing commission consisting of three men selected by the governor and a secretary selected by the commission. These four will have charge of all boxing contests held in the state.

The Hedding bill was passed by the house and senate after hard fights and close votes.

OFFICER AVERY

ous toy in your hand?

A. I don't say so.

Q. Who told you how to fire a revolver?

A. Common sense will show you how to pull a trigger.

Q. Who told you where the trigger was?

At this point Officer Avery was excused from further examination.

Patrick Connolly who was on the scene corroborated the story of how the police were called and how a man was lying on the ground while some one hollered "men are killing each other over here." One man ran around the auto and Avery chased him about 125 feet from where they were fighting. He said, "stop or I will shoot," and I heard the shot and saw the man fall and I called for the ambulance. I saw the fight, saw one strike the other who fell to the ground. The man did not stop when told to do so but was gaining.

Mayor Stone—Did you hear anyone say the man he had been fighting with was dead?

A. No sir.

Q. How far was Avery from the man when he fired?

A. About 25 feet.

Q. When he fired the shot was it dark or light there?

A. There was a light there.

Mr. Connolly told Attorney O'Connell that at Avery's request he had given the Mayor a written statement of the affair. He was cross examined in part as follows:

Q. When you came from the High school you saw the men fighting and using their fists?

A. Yes sir.

Q. You followed Avery chasing the man?

A. Yes sir.

Q. And you told him to shoot?

A. Yes sir.

Q. And you had seen the men fighting with their fists and you told him to shoot?

A. Not then, a short time after.

Q. Where were you when you told him to shoot?

A. About 15 feet back of Avery.

Q. Did Avery have the gun in his hand when you told him to shoot?

A. Yes sir.

Q. How far from Avery was he when he started to run?

A. Eight or nine feet.

Q. He turned and saw Avery?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Was there plenty of light for you to see the man fall?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Did Avery go anywhere near this man on the ground?

A. No sir.

Q. Could Avery have seen his face?

A. It was shaded by trees where he was.

In answer to Mayor Stone as to what would have happened if Avery had stopped to investigate, Connolly said the man would have escaped.

OFFICER CANAVAN.

M. Frank Canavan, the officer who was summoned with Avery told practically the same story of the call from the High school. He said "As we were crossing the street some one said something about two fellows killing each other. I started to run and got a little ahead and I saw a fellow who proved afterward to be Gilraine getting up from over a fellow and he saw me and ran around an auto and headed for Butler road. I started after him, saw Avery and the conductor take up the chase and then went after the other man."

In the direct examination by Mayor Stone, Officer Canavan told of his arrest of McDonnell, the other man.

Q. Did you hear Avery notify the man to stop?

A. I heard some one say, 'stop or I will shoot.'

Q. How many times?

A. Once.

Q. What would have happened if Avery had stopped to investigate the man's condition?

A. I would probably have chased him if I didn't see Avery start chasing him.

Q. Did you hear any man say 'the man was dead?'

A. No sir.

On cross examination Officer Canivan testified in part as follows:—

Q. You had an equal opportunity of hearing everything as did Avery?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you see two men fighting?

A. I don't know whether they were fighting or not. Both were on the ground.

Q. Did you see them fall?

A. No sir.

Q. What did Gilraine do?

A. He whirled and ran.

Q. Did you ever have instructions about shooting a man for committing a misdemeanor?

A. I never received any instructions.

Q. You heard some one say, stop or I will shoot?

A. Yes sir.

Q. Did you hear some one say shoot him Joe?

A. Yes.

Q. How soon did it follow?

A. Several seconds.

Q. Did you see them fighting?

A. Gilraine was getting up. I didn't see them fighting.

Mayor Stone—Was Gilraine getting the best of him in the fight?

A. He was on top.

JOHN J. GILRAINE.

John J. Gilraine of 234 Adams street a brother of the wounded man was called by Lawyer O'Conneil. He said he was present at the start of the affair. He said he was talking with James Colligan when his brother Frank Gilraine came along from work and stopped to talk. Shortly after Thomas McDonnell came over and an argument followed about roofing tools. Frank told him to shut up and McDonnell said he wouldn't for him or anyone else. Both commenced to fight and Frank knocked him down two or three times. While the fight was on a conductor came across and said 'cut it out.' I saw a young fellow run to the school building.

When the officers arrived McDonnell was in a sitting position, with his hands behind him and Frank was leaning against the wall. The chase followed.

Q. The minute some one said, 'shoot, Joe,' the shooting followed?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you hear him say, 'stop, or I will shoot?'

A. No sir.

Q. Positive about it?

A. I am positive.

Mr. Gilraine was turned over to Mayor Stone for questioning.

Q. You heard the man say shoot?

A. Yes, I heard it distinctly.

Q. You did not hear the officer say stop?

A. No sir.

Q. You could have heard it if it had been said?

A. I think I could. Avery has a loud voice and I think I could have heard it.

The hearing adjourned and will be called again on the evening of July 30 in the Mayor's office.

IMPROVEMENT AT ATLANTIC

Regret That City Did Not Accept Ocean Street

The Atlantic Improvement Association had its last meeting of the season Wednesday evening at the rooms of the Ward Six Patriotic Association.

Reports were given by the different committees. The float committee of the Fourth of July was especially commended for its work.

The street committee reported on the failure of the finance committee of the city to pass on the acceptance of Ocean street. This was a disappointment to the association as several of the men have homes on these new streets and find it very difficult to get the ordinary household goods delivered on account of the condition of the roads.

The association is composed of men from all parts of Atlantic and some of the old residents and former councilmen felt that the actions of the finance committee rather discouraged the development of this part of the city.

C. E. Carlson of Squantum outlined a plan that if the right men could be elected to carry it out would systematize the finances of the city and allow each section their proportion for improvements.

Ex-Councilman Cherrington gave a brief history of how the city had come to its high taxation and present indebtedness.

Attorney John Duggan answered several questions in regard to the business of the city, and by appearances the sentiment was that at the next election most of the members will drop party lines and concentrate on men of ability and action.

Messrs. Davison, Mosses, and Miles were appointed a committee to meet with the other associations of Quincy and Boston in conference with Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston and protest against Spectacle island nuisance.

AMUSEMENTS

KINCAIDE THEATRE.

This has been a record breaking week in attendance at Quincy's pretty playhouse, largely due to the side-splitting comedies of the Kincaide Players. These clever artists are now presenting a very funny skit entitled "Unwritten Justice." It depicts a court room scene and the cases that come up for trial, and sentence, keep the audience in a perfect uproar of laughter for over an hour.

Vaudeville attraction include Sam Davis, the Etheopian entertainer, who dances his way into a storm of applause. Ezra Kendall, Jr., gives some splendid impersonations of his illustrious father, Ezra Kendall.

The Photo plays are very interesting throughout. Of especial interest is the Quincy 4th of July Parade Picture which was taken for this theatre. It shows all the features of both Atlantic and Quincy Parades, and is much enjoyed by all. 'Twill be shown this week only. Beginning Monday the Kincaide Players in response to hundreds of requests, will repeat their musical comedy, "On the Banks of Lock Lomond." This Merrie Scotch Musical Comedy was their opening selection seven weeks ago and was so well liked that a steady stream of requests to have it repeated have been received by the management. So now you have the opportunity to enjoy it Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next. All new vaudeville and pictures will be seen.

PLYMOUTH THEATRE.

Beginning next Monday Eleanor Gordon and her associates will enter upon the farewell week of their engagement at the Plymouth Theatre, Boston. To say that Miss Gordon and her excellent company have been showered with esteem and praise during their Boston engagement is really putting it mildly. From the very beginning Miss Gordon won the unanimous verdict, from both press and public, for having corraled the "best stock organization Boston has witnessed since the days of the famous Museum stock company." Those who have had the pleasure in witnessing this extraordinary company will readily agree to the verity of this statement. For the coming week Miss Gordon will stage "The Truth," a comedy by the late Clyde Fitch. The play is one of the best works of this eminent author and easily ranks as one of the biggest successes in years. As usual Miss Gordon will appear in the leading role. In this particular instance however the part will be one of those that may be truthfully referred to as "admirably suited to her versatility." The usual Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday popular-priced matinees will prevail.

PARAGON PARK.

The feature about the ever popular cabaret shows at Paragon Park in the palm garden is not so much the fact that there is no other cabaret within excursion distance of Boston, but that the only cabaret within twenty miles of Boston so far excels even the most pretentious cabaret shows in the most pretentious cafes of New York. Rivalry in entertainments of the same class within reasonable proximity tend to give amusement seekers a better show than they would have without competition, but here is Manager George A. Dodge, with absolutely no competition at all putting New York to shame with expenditure made on his capital cabaret programs. Bertha Rich will be a new feature the coming week with still another style of dancing. A well known cabaret favorite of the last season at Paragon park, Clara Ballerina, will give the coming week her sensational trapeze act over the heads of the diners. In the free open air circus the new features are Lynn and Miller, in head and hand balancing, and Todezo and Todesco in eccentric bicycle stunts. There will be a grand Italian illumination every Sunday evening and big fireworks displays will be given Wednesday and Saturday evenings the coming week as usual.

Fear That Explorer McMillan's Ship May Be Total Loss

St. Johns, July 18.—The Newfoundland revenue cutter Stella Marie is rushing north to the Strait of Belle Isle to render assistance to the McMillan exploration party on board the steamer Diana, bound for Crokerland, which, it is feared, will be a total loss, she having gone aground of Barge Point.

The Diana sailed from Boston on July 5 and after a stop at Sydney, N. S., sailed for the north on July 12.

The expedition was sent out by the American Geographical society and the American Museum of Natural History of New York. The explorers are under command of Donald B. McMillan. They planned to remain three years in Crokerland.

LONG STATE BOULEVARD

New Hampshire to Have Highway to White Mountains

Manchester, N. H., July 18.—Governor Felker and his council yesterday completed all arrangements for the construction of a state boulevard that will reach from the base of the White mountains to the Massachusetts line and will be one of the finest highways in the country when completed.

The course of the road will be over the Mammoth road, so-called, that was the old stage coach road line in the days before the steam cars, and that has been the most direct line between Boston and Manchester and the north since the Revolutionary days.

State Engineer Hooker says the work of construction will begin next week.

SCIENCE AND RELIGION

Atheists and Believers Seek to Reconcile Difference

Paris, July 18.—Representatives of all sects and no sects gathered in convention here in an endeavor to reconcile the differences between science and religion. The congress was presided over by Emile Boutroux of the Academie Francaise, one of the best known philosophers in France, and delegates were in attendance from all over the world.

The common ground upon which the religious and atheist delegates hoped to reach an understanding was philosophy. In his opening address Boutroux declared the principles of religion and of philosophy are not incompatible.

JOE PHELAN WILL ACCEPT

Will Run Kingsbury or Any Other Man

Editor of the Ledger:

I see Mr. Kingsbury has openly challenged me to a race through the Daily Ledger. I accept that challenge and I am willing to run any man in Quincy from 100 yards to 440 yards for the championship of Quincy. It will be impossible for me to run this month, as I am suffering from blood poison in my legs. I have been in bad condition for five weeks and was operated on the week before the Fourth of July. This is the cause of my poor showing.

Mr. Kingsbury states in his challenge that I forfeited the race. This is not true. One of the judges informed me that after a lengthy discussion the referee was about to reward the race to me. In the meantime I had examined the prizes and on finding them of such poor value I became disgusted and gave Mr. Kingsbury first prize and took second prize.

My friends know the real condition of things, but some people do not. Mr. Kingsbury with the help of Dr. Smith may be able to win a few more races.

Joseph F. Phelan.

WILLARD ST. PETITION

All Efforts to Get Hearing Unsuccessful

West Quincy people are anxiously inquiring what has become of the petition to the Highway Commission to take Willard street as a State highway. Some months ago the City Council passed an order petitioning the Highway Commission to take and build Willard street and similar petitions were presented by towns south of Quincy, the idea being to have the Highway Commission make Willard street a State highway through to Brockton.

These petitions as well as that of the City Council were referred to the Highway Commission and from what can be learned are now reposing quietly in the pigeon hole of some desk in their office.

Mayor Stone has been to their office several times in the endeavor to get something definite about the petition but has been unsuccessful up to the present time, although he has been told that a public hearing would be held. When said hearing will be held is a mystery which any amount of calls has failed to solve.

Today City Solicitor McAnarney is to advance in the Highway Commissioners office to see what luck he can have in bringing the matter to a head.

From unauthentic sources it is learned that the trouble is that this is the vacation season and some of the board are not in Boston at the present time, and that later in the season the matter will be taken up and a hearing held.

If Willard street is taken as petitioned it will give a direct and good street from West Quincy way through to Bockton and make an ideal trip for the thousand of automobiles that pass between Boston and Brockton, and will also make a direct route from Brockton, Avon, Randolph and Braintree to Quincy, Milton and Boston. That part of the street now in Quincy controled by the city is not thickly populated as a good part of the street is controlled by the Park Commission having been taken by that Board some years ago, and borders on the Blue Hills Reservation.

DISTRICT COURT.

John Klabe and Guy C. Ambuy were fined $10 each for exceeding the automobile speed limit at Milton.

Hasan Elhage, Hasan Kahil, Hasan Sherara, Sliman Hasain and Ahamid Hassan were arraigned for assault on David Elhage at Quincy. Satisfaction was acknowledged and the cases were placed on file on payment of costs. But there were no costs so that the defendants got off free.

Helen Peterson was arraigned for assault on Laura Hoffanan at Quincy Case continued until Saturday.

POISONS A WOMAN IN SUICIDE PACT

Invalid Then Ends Own Life by Plunging Into Lake

San Jose, Cal., July 18.—After feeding Mrs. Olive J. Smith, 86 years old, a drug for seventy-two hours, and writing down the story of her lingering death, Stephen Mastick, a tuberculosis invalid, threw himself into a shallow lake at Monterey.

Letters signed by the pair said they had arranged a suicide pact and told of a celebration of their intentions in Monterey last Friday, when they had ice cream, pie and milk.

The woman has been supporting Mastick on a pension of $12 a month for several months. Mastick was 29 years old.

PLEDGED TO THE "CAUSE"

Inez Milholland's Husband In Favor of Votes For Women

London, July 18.—Eugene J. Boissewein, huband of Inez Milholland, the American suffragist, confided to his friends that he had pledged himself to work for the "cause."

"My wife has convinced me that things will not be right until women are on an equal footing with men in every respect," said he. "She is very enthusiastic about votes and I am getting that way myself. I believe that the Englishwomen are justified in using violence. Mrs. Pankhurst is the finest 'man' in England."

A Sadly Afflicted Couple

Worcester, Mass., July 18.—With the funeral of Amedee N. Florent, aged 18, who was drowned while canoeing, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Florent buried the last of eighteen children who have been born to them.

Would Sell First Wife's Grave Plot

New York, July 18.—George Stone, former policeman, drawing a pension of $100 monthly, asked permission to sell a valuable plot in which his first wife is buried. He says he is "hard up" since remarrying.

Double Drowning Accident

Lowell, Mass., July 18.—Guy Coleman, 32, and Marie Turner, 20, both members of a negro picnic party of Everett, Mass., were drowned in Lake Mascuppic when their canoe overturned.

THE HISTORY OF THE FAN.

From the Leaf Fan of the Savage to the Modern Electric Breeze. Pre-Historic Men Well Knew the Value of Fans in Hot Weather.

The inhabitants of almost every country have used fans for thousands of years. The American Indian utilized for this purpose the wings of the wild turkey and other large birds. The fans of the Aztecs of Mexico and the Incas of Peru were made of highly colored feathers and most elaborately decorated. The fans of the wild and semi-civilized nations of Europe and Asia varied greatly, from tiny hand fans to huge feathered devices operated by slaves and attendants. Reproductions of fans in the shape of leaves attached to long handles have been found in ancient monuments in Asia. These are called talapat, which signifies palmtree leaf. The talapat is still used by Buddhist priests in the kingdom of Siam. Ancient miniatures show that some of the earliest fans were made of peacock feathers or an elaborate combination of feathers. The plumage of birds and the different colored grasses doubtless stimulated the primitive artist, so, after a while, the fans began to be decorated.

The "punkah," was the Indian name of the fan. This term is also used to designate the huge fan or frame covered with cloth which is suspended from the ceiling and worked by slaves.

Proofs have been found that three thousand years ago Asyrians had contrived some method of refreshing the air by artificial breezes. In China and Japan the bamboo leaf became transformed into a marvel of workmanship. The Japanese god of happiness in the seventh and eighth century, A. D., is represented with a folding fan in his hand. Chinese artists were probably the originators of the pictorial decorations on fans. The Japanese have a special kind of fan, for every use. They have a court fan, a kitchen or a water fan, a dancing fan, tea fan, war fan and a kind of bellows fan. In ancient time the war fan was quite a formidable weapon. It was made of leather with a heavy iron handle. All kinds of souvenir fans with views and scenes originate in China or Japan. Artists and poets have embellished these fans with wonderful carvings in ivory or mother-of-pearl and with many kinds of precious wood inlaid with gold and silver. Little figures are sometimes wrought in silk embroidery with delicately carved faces of ivory. The varied pictures of nature supplied material to these early artists aided by their own marvelous imagination. Fantastic animals, mythological gods, curious figures, served to adorn Celestial fans, and much previous material and careful labor have been lavished upon them. Dreadful dragons with surprising lines and curves in combinations of glowing colors, birds, insects and flowers, were all utilized and portrayed upon these early fans.

The first fan mentioned in Chinese poetry was that of the Princess Pan, A. D. 550. She was for a time the favorite of the Emperor Chi'eng Si, but when she found that she was gradually being forgotten and neglected, she sent to the Emperor a circular fan with some verses written upon it in which she described herself as an autumn or neglected fan. Since that time, in China, a neglected wife is often called an autumn fan.

Some study into the early history of the fan reeval the fact that in China and Japan the fan was an indispensable weapon against the hot climate and the annoying swarms of insects. It was not, therefore, a mere feminine accessory, as it later became in England. In the far east, prince and priest, soldier, day laborer, mistress and maid carried the fan for the sake of coolness. It also had its ceremonial uses. It was used in the salutation and carried by all classes.

The fan was a royal emblem in Egypt and signified authority, happiness and repose. The fan bearers were generally persons of royal birth and were initiated into their office with elaborate ceremony. Frescoes on an ancient palace of Thebes represent fan-bearers carrying a semicircular screen attached to a long handle. The Grecian ladies preferred fans made of peacock feathers, as the peacock was the bird of Juno and symbolized splendor and luxury. As the Romans were chiefly engaged in conquests of a military nature, art industries did not flourish as in times of peace. The Romans used the fan, as did the earlier nations, to enhance their splendid festivals. At banquets, slaves stood behind the guests and waved enormous fans made of peacock feathers, gorgeously colored and further enriched with ostrich plumes. In the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, ladies of the chief Italian cities carried fans, in which a little mirror was set. According to a charming Spanish legend, Psyche was asleep one day on a bank of flowers and Zephyr kept hovering near her. This made Cupid jealous and to punish the intruder Cupid plucked off one of Zephyr's wings and gave it to Psyche that she might always have cooling breezes. This is the Spanish story of the origin of the fan.

Early in the eighteenth century the fan was in general use among the ladies of England, and Addison wittily wrote: "Women are armed with fans as men with swords, and sometimes do more execution with them."

At this time the fan was a fascinating trinket in the hands of powerful beauties and figured in many a political intrigue. Social events and politics, the follies and fashions of the time were depicted upon them. Scenes from popular plays were painted upon them, while others had the rules of various games. Some bore records of royal marriages; others were inscribed with verses or contained caricatures on social and political events. After the French Revolution the cupids, roses and rustic idyls disappeared entirely from the fans.

Up to the early eighties the palm leaf fan and other inexpensive fans of oriental make were in general use. Fans to be operated by mechanical power were hardly possible until the discovery and development of electricity. While experimenting with an electrically-driven propellor for a small boat an electrical engineer conceived the idea of the electric fan. This was before the perfection of the electric generator, and electric service for the home and office. Consequently the new fan had to be operated from battery current. Little advance was made until 1888 when a successful attempt was made to connect the fan with the electric lighting circuit in place of a lamp. The electric fan became popular at once and the manufacture of fans began in earnest. A couple of years later the ceiling fan was introduced and since that time production of desk, bracket, ceiling and oscillating fans had grown with each succeeding year until American made fans are now in use throughout the civilized world. Modern electric fans can be operated four hours for a cent, or as cheaply as a small electric lamp.

MELLEN'S FIRST BACKWARD STEP

Severs All Connection With New England Transportation

QUITS NEW HAVEN PRESIDENCY

Resignation Will Take Effect Not Later Than First of Next October—Four-Line Typewritten Announcement All That Is Supplied to the Press—Elliott May Succeed Him

New York, July 18.—Charles S. Mellen tendered his resignation as president of the New Haven road and all its subsidiary companies at a meeting of the directors in this city. It is expected that Howard Elliott, who succeeded Mellen as president of the Northern Pacific railroad in 1903, will succeed him as head of the New Haven.

The directors adjourned the meeting at 5:40 last evening. The first intimation of what had happened inside came with this announcement from Mellen, given out by Edward G. Riggs, his executive assistant:

"Mr. Mellen, at a meeting of his board of directors today, offered his resignation of the presidency of the New Haven road and all its subsidiary companies, to take effect at the pleasure of the board, but, in any event, not later than Oct. 1, 1913."

The four-line typewritten explanation of what had happened was handed to the newspaper men about 6 o'clock. The reporters at once besieged Mellen's private office in the Grand Central treminal building. His secretaries came back, saying Mellen would have no further explanation of his withdrawal.

When it was explained that, in view of his own statement issued last week that he would not get out of the New Haven, some statement from him as to his reasons for resigning were looked for, Mellen sent for Riggs. After a five-minute conference Riggs came out and said Mellen had flatly refused to add anything to what he had already authorized him to give to the press.

After slipping out of his office by a private exit, in order to avoid interviewers, Mellen went to the Hotel Belmont, where he took a room for the night. He took every precaution to save himself from adding a syllable to his laconic statement.

He gave instructions to the office downstairs to bar all newspaper men and careful orders were left with the telephone operator to censor all the 'phone calls.

All efforts to find out what directors were at the meeting were unsuccessful. It was said, however, that "practically the full board" was present. There are twenty-three directors. Mellen, it is said, presided. The meeting of the directors will be continued today.

Mellen's resignation from the presidency of the Maine Central, Boston and Maine and New Haven roads marks the first backward step which he has taken since he started in the railroad business forty-four years ago.

His action of yesterday brought to an end a ten-year service as president of the New Haven road which opened with great promise of hope for the development of New England.

A New England man, his election to the presidency of the New Haven was expected to bring back to New England the control of a great railroad which was at that time rapidly passing into the hands of the Pennsylvania railroad interests. Mellen wrested that control from the Pennsylvania interests, but New England gained little.

Mellen turned control of the road over to the New York firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., and throughout his administration he has been recognized as the representative of that New York firm.

With the presidency of the New Haven in his grip and with the Morgan interests at his back, Mellen sought to bring about complete control of the entire transportation interests of New England.

In an effort to realize his one great ambition laws of the state of Massachusetts were violated or disregarded. In direct opposition to the established policy of the state, a majority of the stock of the Boston and Maine was acquired by Mellen as the representative of the Morgan interests and transferred to a citizen of Connecticut, to be put out of the reach of the laws of Massachusetts.

Trolley lines were purchased, steamship lines were taken over, and later the Boston and Albany, with its through route to the west, came under the control of the New Haven and the master hand of Mellen.

In spite of continued protests of governors, legislators and men of affairs, the personal ambition of Mellen to bring within his control the entire transportation system of this section of the country triumphed.

With the taking over of the Albany his mastery of the situation was made complete. And then, with "no more worlds to conquer," the final and complete disintegration of his powers came swiftly.

VALUABLE GEMS STOLEN

Reward of $50,000 Offered For Clue Which Will Lead to Recovery

London, July 18.—A reward of $50,000 has been offered for a clue leading to the recovery of a pearl necklace stolen between Paris and this city. It is insured for $675,000. A diamond dealer who has been thirty years in the business says it is the finest necklace he ever saw and is worth more than the sum for which it was insured.

The owner of the jewels is Max Mayer, a diamond merchant of this city. Mayer has an office in Paris and the necklace was sent from there Wednesday night. A postman delivered a registered package at Mayer's home yesterday. The package bore the Paris postmark and French stamps and on the back Mayer's initials were stamped. The housekeeper took the package in Mayer's absence and placed it in the safe. When Mayer arrived at his house two hours later he opened it and found only pieces of sugar of the same weight as the necklace. The seals showed no sign of having been tampered with.

CONFESS EMBARRASSMENT

Administration Officials Want Light on Mexican Situation

Washington, July 18.—The administration will make no move in the Mexican situation and will reserve announcement of its future policy toward the Huerta government until after President Wilson and Secretary Bryan have conferred with Ambassador Wilson, now en route to Washington from Mexico City.

Upon the advice and report of conditions which the ambassador himself presents will depend whether he will return to the Mexican capital.

No answer will be made to the note of one of the European powers about conditions in Mexico until the Washington government has had an opportunity to learn the true state of affairs.

Administration officials, in stating these facts, confessed their embarrassment and difficulty in obtaining trustworthy information at long range about Mexican politics and its ephemeral changes.

BAD SALMON THROWN INTO THE OCEAN

Seven Hundred Cases Found Below Pure Food Standard

Boston, July 18.—Seven hundred cases of canned salmon from Alaska, consigned to a Boston concern, were dumped overboard outside the three-mile limit by United States officers because it was below the standard set by the pure food laws.

Deputy United States Marshal Ruhl with two bailiffs took the salmon, which consisted of 33,600 cans, on a tug outside the Brewsters, where it was thrown overboard.

Last week several hundred cases from the same lot were burned, but the salmon did not burn very well.

RAILROADS' GRIEVANCES

Trainmen Declare Consideration of Them Must Be Delayed

New York, July 18.—The 80,000 trainmen and conductors who threaten a strike against the eastern railroads will not agree under any circumstances to have the roads' grievances arbitrated at the same time as the men's demands for better wages under the Newlands amendment to the Erdman act, according to a statement issued last night by W. G. Lee and A. B. Garretson, presidents respectively of the Trainmen's and Conductors' brotherhoods.

The attitude of the trainmen and conductors was declared to be that the roads are honorably bound to dispose of the employes' demands for better wages and leave to a later time the settlement of the roads' grievances.

ENTOMBED MINERS SAVED

Tapping on Pipe Leads to Excavation and Rescue of Five

Eveleth, Minn., July 18.—The five men who were entombed at the Spruce mine here Wednesday as a result of a coludburst were rescued last night.

The imprisoned miners were located by tapping on a pipe which had been drilled forty feet into the mine. After the first signals were heard, the work of excavating was resumed with double energy, and the men were soon located and brought to the surface.

While they had suffered greatly, it is believed all will recover.

IS SPARED HUMILIATION

Aged Murderer Goes Without Guard to Begin Term In Prison

Little Rock, July 18.—Thomas Tiner, 60 years old, convicted of murder in the second degree and sentenced to twelve years' imprisonment, came to Little Rock from Randolph county, unaccompanied, to begin serving his sentence.

To spare the aged man the humiliation of leaving his home under guard the Randolph county authorities appointed Tiner his own custodian on the journey to prison.

THE Melting of Molly

LEAF THIRD.

Billy's Apology.

"MOLLY, Molly," he said with a perfect rapture of chuckles in his voice, "now you look just as pretty as you do when you go to bed—all whity all over. You can kiss my kiss spot a hundred times while I bear hug you for that nice not black dress." And before any stern person could have stopped us I was on my knees on the grass kissing my fill from the "kiss spot" on the back of his neck, while he hugged all the starch out of the summer before last.

And Dr. John sat down on the bench quick and laughed out loud one of the very few times I ever heard him do it. He was looking down at us, but I did not laugh up into his eyes. I was afraid. I felt it was safer to go on kissing the kiss spot for the present, anyway.

"Bill," he said, with his voice dancing, "that's the most effective apology I ever heard. You were sorry to some point."

Then suddenly Billy stiffened right in my arms and looked me straight in the face and said in the doctor's own brisk tones, even with his cupid mouth set in the same straight line:

"I say I'm sorry, Molly, but d——n that man, and I'll git him yet!"

What could we say? What could we do? We didn't try. I busied myself in tying the string on Billy's blouse that had come untied in the bear hug, and the doctor suddenly discovered the letter on the bench. I saw him see it without looking in his direction at all.

"And how many pounds are we nearer the string bean state of existence, Mrs. Molly?" he asked me before I had finished tying the blouse, in the nicest voice in the world, fairly crackling with friendship and good humor and hateful things like that. Why I should have wanted him to huff over that letter is more than I can say. But I did, and he didn't.

"Over twenty, and most of the time I am so hungry I could eat Aunt Adeline. I dream about Billy, fried with cream gravy," I answered as I kissed again the back of the head that was beginning to nod down against my breast. Long shadows lay across the garden, and the white headed old snowball was signaling out of the dusk to a Dorothy Perkins down the walk in a scandalous way. At best spring is just the worst's matchmaking old chaperon and ought to be watched. I still sat on the grass, and I began to cuddle Billy's bare knees in the skirt of my dress so the chigres couldn't get at them.

"But, Mrs. Molly, isn't it worth it all?" asked the doctor as he bent over toward us and looked down with something wonderful and kind in his eyes that seemed to rest on us like a benediction. "You have been just as plucky as a girl can be, and in only a little over two months you have grown as light footed and hearty as a boy. I think nothing could be lovelier than you are right now, but you can get off those other few pounds if you want to. You know, don't you, that I have known how hard some of it was, and I haven't been able to eat as much as I usually do thinking how hungry you are? But isn't it all worth it? I think it is. Alfred Bennett is a very great man, and it is right that he should have a very lovely wife to go out into the world with him. And as lovely as you are I think it is wonderful of you to make all this sacrifice to be still lovelier for him. I am glad I can help you, and it has taught me something to see how—how faithful a woman can be across years—and then in this smaller thing! Now give me Billy and you get your apple and toast. Don't forget to take your letter in out of the dew." I sat perfectly still and held Billy tighter in my arms as I looked up at his father, and then after I had thought as long as I could stand it I spoke right out at him as mad as hops, and I don't to this minute know why.

"Nobody in the world ever doubted that a woman could be faithful if she had anything to be faithful to," I said as I let him take Billy out of my arms at last. "Faithfulness is what a woman flowers, only it takes a man to pick his 'posy.'" With which I marched into the house and left him standing with Billy in his arms. I hope dumfounded. I didn't look back to see. I always leave that man's presence so mad I can never look back at him. And wouldn't it make any woman rage to have a man pick out another man for her to be faithful to when she hadn't made any decision about it her own self?

I wonder just how old Judge Wade is? I believe I will make up with Aunt Adeline enough before I go to bed to find out why he has never married.

Men are very strange people. They are like those horrible sums in algebra that you think about and worry about and cry about and try to get help from other women about, and then, all of a sudden X works itself out into perfectly good sense. Not that I thought much about Mr. Carter, poor man! When he wasn't right around I felt it best to forget him as much as I could, but it seems hard for other women to let you forget either your husband or theirs.

I know now that I really never got any older than the poor, foolish, eighteen years child that Aunt Adeline married off "safe," all the time I was the "refuge" sort of wife. I would sit and listen while the other wives talked over the men in utter bewilderment and most times terror, then I would force myself to a little more forgetting, and poor Mr. Carter must have suffered the consequences. But all that was a mild sort of exasperation to what a widow has to go through with in the matter of—of, well I think hazing is about the best name to give it.

"Molly Carter," said Mrs. Johnson just day before yesterday, after the white dress-Judge Wade episode that Aunt Adeline had gone to all the friends up and down the street to be consoled about, "if you haven't got sense enough to appreciate your present blissful condition somebody ought to operate on your mind."

I was tempted to say, "Why not my heart?" I was glad she didn't know how good that heart did feel under my tucker when the boy brought that basket of fish from Judge Wade's fishing trip Saturday. I have firmly determined not to blush any more at the thought of that gorgeous man—at least outwardly.

"Don't you think it is very—very lonely to be a widow, Mrs. Johnson?" I asked timidly to see what she would say about Mr. Johnson, who is really lovely, I think. He gives me the gentlest understanding smile when he meets me on the street of late weeks.

"Lonely, lonely, Molly? You talk about the married state exactly like an old maid. Don't do it—it's foolish, and you will get the lone notion really fastened in your mind and let some fool man find out that is how you feel. Then it will be all over with you. I have only one regret, and it is that if I ever should be a widow Mr. Johnson wouldn't be here to see how quickly I turned into an old maid, by the grace of God." Mrs. Johnson sews by assassinating the cloth with the needle, and as she talked she was mending the sleeve of one of Mr. Johnson's shirts.

"I think an old maid is just a woman who has never been in love with a man who loves her. Lots of them have been married for years," I said, just as innocently as the soft face of a pan of cream and went on darning one of Billy's socks.

"Well, be that as it may, they are the blessed members of the women tribe," she answered, looking at me sharply. "Now I have often told Mr. Johnson"— But here we were interrupted in what might have been the rehearsal of a glorious scrap by the appearance of Aunt Bettie Pollard, and with her came a long, tall, lovely vision of a woman in the most wonderful close clingy dress and hat that you wanted to eat on sight. I hated her instantly with the most intense adoration that made me want to lie down at her feet, and also made me feel like I had gained all the more than twenty pounds that I have shaved off me and doubled them on again. I would have liked to lead her that minute into Dr. John's office and just to have looked at him and said one word—"string bean!" Aunt Betty introduced her as Miss Chester from Washington.

"Oh, my dear Mrs. Carter, how glad I am to meet you!" she said as she towered over me in a willowy way, and her voice was lovely and cool almost to slimness. "I am the bearer of so many gracious messages that I am anxious to deliver them safely to you. Not six weeks ago I left Alfred Bennett in Paris, and really—really his greetings to you almost amounted to steamer luggage. He came down to Cherbourg to see me off, and almost the last thing he said to me was, 'Now, don't fail to see Mrs. Carter as soon as you get to Hillsboro, and the more you see of her the more you'll enjoy your visit to Mrs. Pollard.' Isn't he the most delightful of men?" She asked me the question, but she had the most wonderful way of seeming to be talking to everybody at one time, so Mrs. Johnson got in the first answer.

"Delightful, nothing! But Al Bennett is a man of sense not to marry any of the string of women I suppose he's got following him," she said. Miss Chester looked at her in a mild kind of wonder, but she went on murdering Mr. Johnson's shirt sleeve with the needle without noticing the glance at all.

"Well, well, honey, I don't know about that," said Aunt Bettie as she fanned and rocked her great, big, darling, fat self in the strong rocker I always kept in the breezy angle of the porch for her. "Al is not old enough to have proved himself entirely, and from what I hear"—

She paused with a big, hearty smile that she always wears when she begins to tease or matchmake, and she does them both most of her time.

But at whom do you suppose she looked? Not me! Miss Chester! That was cold tub No. 2 for that day, and I didn't react as quickly as I might, but when I did I was in the proper glow all over. When I revived and saw the lovely pale blush on her face I felt like a cabbage rose beside a teabud. I was glad Aunt Adeline came out on the porch just then so I could go in and tell Judy to bring out the iced tea and cakes. When I came from the kitchen I stepped into my room and took out one of Alfred's letters from the desk drawer and opened it at random, as you do the Bible when you want to decide things, and put my finger down on a line with my eyes shut. This was what it was:

"—and all these years I have walked the world, blindfolded to its loveliness with the blackness that came to me when I found that you"—

I didn't read any more, but shoved it back in a hurry and went on out on the porch, comforted in a way, but feeling some more in sympathy with Mrs. Johnson than I had before Aunt Bettie and her guest from Washington had interrupted our algebraic demonstration on the man subject. You can't always be sure of the right answer to X in any proposition of life: that is, a woman can't!

And, furthermore, I didn't like that next hour much, just as a sample of life, for instance. Aunt Bettie had got her joining together humor well started, and right there before my face she made a present of every nice man in Hillsboro to that lovely, distinguished, strange girl who could have slipped through a bucket hoop if she had tried hard. I had to sit there, listen to the presentations, watch her drink two tall glasses of delicious tea full of sugar and consume without fear three of Judy's puffy cakes, while I crumbled mine in secret over the banisters and set half the glass of tea out of sight behind the wistaria vine.

It was bad enough to hear Aunt Bettie just offer her Tom, who, if he is her own son, is my favorite cousin, but I believe the worst minute I almost ever faced was when she began on the judge, for I could see from Aunt Adeline's shoulder beyond Miss Chester how she was enjoying that, and she added another distinguished ancestor to his pedigree every time Aunt Bettie paused for breath. I couldn't say a word about the fish, and Aunt Adeline wouldn't. I almost loved Mrs. Johnson when she bit off a thread viciously and said "Humph!" as she rose to start the tea party home.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

THE SYRIAN ASSAULT CASE

David Elhage Acknowledged Satisfaction in Court

The assault case in the Syrian colony early in the week, during which it was alleged that one man was badly beaten by a club, did not pan out much when the case came up in court this morning. There were five defendants who answered to the names of Hasan Elhage, Hasan Kahil, Hasan Sherara, David Hassain and Ahamid Hassan. They ware all charged with assaulting David Elhage.

When the cases were called David, the assaulted party, said that he was willing to acknowledge satisfaction, and the defendants cases were then placed on file on payment of costs. There were no costs however as even the interpreter refused to accept the usual fee of $2 for his services.

After court the bunch gathered near City Hall and talked the matter over. It did not appear what inducements if any were offered the assaulted party to acknowledge satisfaction.

ON VOYAGE UNDER WATER

House Naval Committee at Bottom of Narragansett Bay

Newport, R. I., July 18.—A submarine trip under the placid surface of Narragansett bay was made by the members of the house committee on naval affairs, who are here for an inspection of the Narragansett naval station.

The committee was divided into three squads, each of which was assigned to one of the submarine craft in port. The underwater fighters were put through all their paces. First they were run on the surface, then partially submerged, and finally depths were reached, the operation of submerging and rising being varied by demonstrations of the submarines' diving abilities.

The committee also inspected the naval training station, and made a visit to the naval war college, where they heard some of the instructions given to naval officers.

WOMENS CASE IN COURT

Transfer of Property Followed by an Assault

A peculiar court case was heard this morning when Helen Peterson was arraigned for assault on Laura Hoffanan. The case grew out of the sale of a house on Cranch hill. From what could be gathered from the affair, it appears that the house which is now occupied by the Hoffanan woman was sold some weeks ago to another party, and the deeds were passed, but the new purchaser had been unable to get the Hoffanan family but. It is also said that through some misunderstanding the new owner of the house signed a paper giving the Hoffanan family permission to occupy the premises until July 24 although she supposed that she had signed a paper warning them to get out in 24 hours.

Thursday the Peterson girl went to the house and attempted to enter believing that she was entering her own property. The Hoffanan woman however objected and put her out. It is then alleged that the Peterson woman stood up for her rights and in the mixup which followed the Hoffanan woman got hit on the jaw. The result was a warrant and Saturday the court will try and straighten out the tangle.

CUT OFF FROM FOOD SUPPLY

Bulgarian Army Now Running Risk of Starving

EMEMIES' FORCES CLOSING IN

Roumanian Advance Continues Unopposed, While Greeks and Serbs Are Active—Ottoman Troops Beyond Turkish Boundary Established by Treaty—Christians In Flight

London, July 18.—Greek, Servian and Roumanian armies are rapidly closing in on Bulgaria. From Belgrade came an official report that the Serbs stormed Julikamik, Karkustendili, yesterday, routing the Bulgarian right wing. The casualties were enormous, it was stated.

The advance of the Roumanians continues unopposed, and the Bulgarians sank two torpedo boats and their steamers in the Danube to prevent the Roumanians from capturing them. King Charles, the 74-year-old monarch of Roumania, has gone to the front.

Roumania has made no official declaration as to how far her troops will advance, but the powers believe the line bounding the territory King Charles claims as a reward for neutrality in the Turko-Balkan war will not be crossed.

The Roumanians yesterday took possession of the cable station at Varna on the Black sea, and thus control communication with Sebastopol. As the railway between the coast and Sofia also has been cut, Bulgaria cannot communicate with the outside world except through Servia and Roumania. The railway is the only route over which provisions can be brought to Sofia from abroad, and the Bulgarian army, therefore, runs the risk of starving.

Advices from Sofia declare Thracian Christians are fleeing toward Bulgarian territory before the advance of Turkish troops. The Ottoman troops are advancing in three columns and reports say one division is already seventy miles beyond the Enos-Media line, the new boundary of Turkey established by the London treaty.

As a result of a conference between a Greek and Roumanian officer at Salonica, it was reported that the Greek, Servian and Roumanian armies all planned to march on Sofia and force Bulgaria to sue for peace. Should this occur, however, an immedite protest is expected from Russia and it is not believed the powers would countenance the complete crushing of Bulgaria by the three forces.

King Ferdinand has personally telegraphed to King Charles that Bulgaria is ready to negotiate terms of settlement with Roumania.

Roumania has addressed a note to the powers explaining that in invading Bulgaria she is neither pursuing a policy of conquest nor aiming at crushing the Bulgarian army. Her action is due to the necessity of procuring a new southern frontier, which shall include Turtukai, Dobritch and Baltchik, and the conviction, in view of the Bulgarian tendencies toward hegemony, that such a strategic frontier is needful to make pacific relations between Bulgaria and Roumania possible.

LOVES HER ABDUCTOR

Girl Wants to Run Away With Him When He Leaves Prison

Sharhood, who took the girl to Utica, N. Y., and married her, was found guilty of abducting the schoolgirl by a jury in the Suffolk county superior court yesterday afternoon.

Judge Quinn sentenced him to one year in the house of correction.

WILL MEET TOURISTS

South American Party Expected Tuesday

Most Successful Tour

William H. Bain of Bain Brothers is chairman of a committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, which plans to meet the returning South American tourists in New York.

The tourists, headed by Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, who have spent three months visiting countries in the Southern continent, will reach New York harbor on the Vasari Tuesday morning next, one day ahead of time. A delegation of Chamber of Commerce members and wives and other relatives of the members of the party is being organized to go over to New York to meet the tourists and will probably leave on the midnight train Monday. Any one who wishes to join the party is requested to communicate with the secretary of the Chamber immediately.

The party left Boston, April 24 on the S. S. Metapan and after a visit to Panama and inspection of the Canal, took another ship for Peru. The countries visited have been Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentine, Uruguay and Brazil and it is estimated that in their tour the party will have covered more than 12,000 miles before they reach Boston.

From all the reports it is apparent that the tour has in every way realized the most sanguine expectations of its sponsors. The commercial interests and the authorities of every city that the party has visited have vied with each other in hospitality and the extension of every facility for inspecting the industries of the country.

NEW SCHEDULE FOR CAR MEN

Some Motormen and Conductors Not Satisfied

The new 9 in 11 hour schedule for employees of the street railway goes into effect tomorrow, and from what can be learned some of the employees are not going to be as well satisfied with it, as was expected. The reason for the dissatisfaction is that in some cases the men find that their weekly pay envelope will not contain quite as much of the wherewithal as at present. In some cases the men find out that their wage will be reduced from 75 cents to a dollar each week which is not just to their liking.

The new hours of labor necessitated a new drawing for runs which have been made up so as to comply with the law, and the result is, some will not work full time.

The labor leaders fought hard for the bill, and they were backed up by the Carmen's Union, many of whom did not, and perhaps could not fully understand at that time just how it was to work out. The bill however has been passed and become a law, and now the men, finding out how the new scheme is to work out they do not like it. Although some of the men may be benefitted by the new law, some of the local street railway men will lose from 75 cents to a dollar a week in wages.

A conference on the new schedule was held today by Thomas Gammons, superintendent of the Quincy division of the Bay State street railway, and the executive board of the Quincy Branch of the Street and Electric Car Employee's Union.

Some cars are run for a period of 19 hours, but with changes of men. The shorter the run the more difficult it is to place the men so that they can work under agreeable conditions and within the law.

The board of the union consists of John Faircloth, president; William Kelly, William Gould, all of Quincy and James Ford, Patrick Kearns, Arthur Blanchard all of East Weymouth and J. Belyea, John McManus of Braintree.

Plans were completed at the Fairbanks house at Dedham on Thursday for the annual reunion of the Fairbanks family, to be held at the Fairbank's house, August 21.

GASOLENE CAUSES FIRE

Close Call for Messrs Sandberg and Fallon

The Central station apparatus responded on a still alarm Friday for a slight fire in the scow of Councilman Edward J. Sandberg which was tied up to the wharf in Town River. The fire was caused by some gasoline taking fire and Mr. Sandberg and Peter T. Fallon had narrow escapes from being burned. From what can be learned, Mr. Sandberg and Mr. Fallon were aboard the scow, and Peter being of an inquisitive mind wanted to see where the wheels went round. Ed lighted a match to show him, but that did not seem to furnish sufficient light and a second match was lit which was held a little nearer to the machinery, when puff and some gasoline was blazing. Thinking to put out the burning fluid, water was poured upon it. This however only served to spread the flames and the fire station was notified by telephone.

A quick run was made by the apparatus to Brackett's wharf and the firemen quickly had the fire out. The fire did but little damage and according to Councilman Sandberg there was no damage and no insurance.

It is very fortunate for the two gentlemen that the gasoline which took fire was not confined or there would have been an explosion and someone would probably have been hurt.

The gasoline which took fire was some that had saturated the flooring and was not confined in sufficient volume to cause much of an explosion.

AMBULANCE CASES.

The ambulance of the Quincy police was called into service Friday and Saturday. Friday afternoon they transported Angelo Nicodemo from his home, over the Quincy Adams station to the Quincy station where he was placed aboard a train and taken to the State Farm for treatment. He has been in this city but a short time, coming here from New York. He is suffering from a form of paralysis.

This morning they removed Alexander Greer of 96 Glencoe place to the Quincy City Hospital where he will be treated for a severe case of rheumatism with which he has been afflicted for some time. Mr. Greer is married and a blacksmith by trade.

FOURTH OF JULY CASH

Only a Little Needed to Square Accounts

More Collectors Necessary

All bills that have been presented to the Quincy Fourth of July Association were approved at the meeting Friday evening and a trial balance shows that there will be a small amount left in the treasury. A few minor bills have not as yet been presented but will be paid as soon as they reach the association.

In checking up the collection list it was found that several who put their name down, with the amount contributed opposite, failed to give the money to the collector. While this amount due is not as large as the previous year it is nevertheless a tidy little sum. The executive board feels that the promise should be fulfilled and hope to receive all outstanding amounts without further delay.

An analysis of the situation clearly demonstrates that each succeeding year brings more supporters to the association. The only handicap to a bigger, better and busier celebration is the lack of collectors. This year, as in past years, the work rested with men actually connected with the association, and it is the feeling of the board that since they have demonstrated for what purposes the money will be expended more collectors should be willing to serve regardless of whether they hold office or not.

An enlarged photo of the Association party which visited Captain Capehart on the U. S. S. Michigan was shown and Captain Wardwell is having a colored slide made for use at his theatre.

The celebration this year was the best the city ever held, and was an example of what a safe and sane Fourth means. As far as the committee have been able to learn there were no accidents of any kind. The fires were few and the loss but very small, while the arrests made by the police department were for no more serious offense than drunkenness and there were but few of these.

Aside from that it kept people at home and drew thousands to Quincy from neighboring towns and cities and everybody had a good time, so that as a whole the money was well expended.

EDE T. PLAISTED.

Ede T. Plaisted, a real estate dealer of Norfolk Downs, died suddenly at his home, 66 Channing street, Thursday, from blood poisoning. He was in his 57th year and unmarried. He has been a builder and real estate dealer in Norfolk Downs for five or more years.

While sawing a board some weeks ago he injured his hand and contracted blood poisoning. He was taken to a hospital where a slight operation was performed. Apparently recovering he was removed to his home on Channing street and was alone on the piazza of his home with his sister when he had the last attack from which he never recovered.

Services will be held at his home this afternoon and Sunday afternoon the Masonic services will take place in Masonic hall, Thompson square, Charlestown.

REGISTRY REPAIRS.

The Norfolk County Commissioners have awarded to Forbes L. McKenzie of No. 7 Waters street, Boston, the contract to rebuild the roof of the Registry building at Dedham. His bid was $6300. He will begin the work immediately.

GRANITE AVE. NEW BRIDGE

Trustees Considering the Needs of the Traffic

A meeting of the trustees of the new bridge over the Neponset river at Granite avenue was held Friday at the office of Judge Flint in Boston. The proposition was discussed at length, and in order to obtain a better idea of what is necessary for a bridge, the heaviness, etc., a record will be made of the traffic over the bridge.

It is also to be determined by this record whether or not it will be advisable to build a temporary bridge for use during the construction of the new bridge. Plans for the new bridge will be obtained and bids for the same advertised for as soon as it is determined how heavy a bridge it will be necessary to build to accommodate the traffic.

BATTLESHIP RECORD.

The new German battleship-cruiser Seyditz, at her trials on Friday, made a record speed of 29 knots. The vessel displaces about 25,000 tons and was estimated by her constructors to attain a nominal speed of 25 1-2 knots.

She was built at Hamburg and has turbine engines, developing horsepower in excess of 50,000. She was launched last year and is 610 feet long.

BOSTON HARBOR.

The Directors of the Port of Boston at the suggestion of Congressman William F. Murray, have invited the Rivers and Harbors committee of the National House of Representatives to visit Boston this summer and investigate conditions. Gov. Foss, Mayor Fitzgerald and Boston Chamber of Commerce have been asked to co-operate in the entertainment of the committee. The directors acted quickly on Congressman Murray's suggestion. He is a member of the committee which has supervision of channel and harbor improvement.

President Wilson would not have got lost in the New Hampshire woods the other day if those tardy newspaper chaps had not let his machine get out of sight.

The modern boy cannot be expected to keep his shoes looking well unless Dad gives him allowance enough to pay the bootblack.

Latest dispatches from the other world indicate that some congressmen having arrived, a committee was promptly appointed to investigate Heaven.

After President Wilson got back, the Congressmen buckled down to work and got up to the Capitol for an hour or two a day.

There have been rapid accessions to the peace party in the Balkans consising of the thousands daily killed in battle.

Secretary Bryan is going out lecturing for six weeks, but John Bassett Moore is said to be an intelligent office boy who can answer questions.

That Ithaca girl student who lived on 50 cents a week ought to receive plenty of attention without having to call up the boys at the office every day.

Even though every one may have to walk a month or two while the railroads and labor leaders are quarreling, it is hoped the public will not butt in while their betters are talking.

New York stock exchange seats are down to $38,000. Perhaps some families on straitened circumstances can be persuaded to take them in place of opera boxes.

AMONG THE HOPIS.

Colonel Roosevelt went to the Southwest, say the dispatches, to see the Hopi Indians dance. But while a frowzly headed chief hopping around with a live rattlesnake in his mouth is picturesque, this is only an incident of the unique Hopi traditions that will interest the ex-president.

The Hopis are unlike the typical nomadic Indians, who neither used the land nor permitted the others to use it. The nomad's roving life made possible no serviceable arts. They had no place in the national life. There existed the obligation to treat them kindly, to help them learn self support—obligations too often ignored.

The Hopi's case has been absolutely different. He built towns, acquired traditions and crafts. He loves peace, respects woman's dignity. He did not block civilization. What he needed was not to be turned into an imitation white man, as some have seemed to think, but taught to improve his basketry, pottery, wood carving, weaving, farming and herding.

The civilizers once determined that the Hopis must have their hair cut. Manifestly such bushy heads mean hostility to society. So the creature underwent a tonsorial operation, though it took several men to hold them. The Hopi's hair protected him in heat and cold. He brushes it carefully, and it has religious significance to him.

A people with such tenacious traditions are entitled to more respect. You can't put them in the civilizing hopper and turn out sleek pale faces in store clothes. Mr. Momsen, the Hopi authority, says the only instance of crime he ever knew among them was when an educated Hopi raised a check.

One foresees that Colonel Roosevelt will make some sharp remarks on the folly of many past efforts to "civilize" this people.

STATE CROP REPORT.

The Massachusetts Crop Report for the month of June, published by the State Board of Agriculture has just been issued. Copies of this bulletin may be had for the asking by applying to Wilfrid Wheeler, secretary, State Board of Agriculture, 136 State House, Boston. Those who desire to receive the Crop Report regularly may have their names placed upon the free mailing list upon request. Through this bulletin people may keep informed in regard to all other publications of the Board of Agriculture. The appropriation of the board is insufficient to maintain a regular mailing list, but the different publications will be sent postpaid upon request, unless otherwise noted.

Heretofore the Crop Report has contained only notes and a summary of general crop conditions. A new and valuable feature has this year been added. In addition to the general summary and notes the bulletin contains a summary and notes of the condition and prospect of the following agricultural specialties:—fruit growing, market-gardening and cranberry growing. In addition to this crop conditions for the whole country are discussed, a comparison of wholesale and retail prices is printed and weather reports for the month of June are presented. Notices of public meetings of interest are also given.

The special article in this number is entitled "Peach Growing in Western Massachusetts." This was written by Mr. L. W. Rice, of Wilbraham, one of the most practical growers in the state. Mr. Rice says in part:

"First choose the site of the orchard. This should be a place of good elevation with good air and water drainage, which sometimes is hard to find and purchase. The land should be cleaned of all trees and rocks. This can be accomplished best, and with least expense, by using dynamite. An orchard can be raised if the stumps and rocks are not all cleared away, but in the end the cost of clearing is saved in broken tools, loss of time and unpleasantness while spraying and cultivating."

In regard to selecting the varieties Mr. Rice has the following to say:

"In selecting varities it is best to choose such as will ripen in succession, so as to hold the market and distribute the labor over as long a period as possible. A good succession covering the period from about Aug. 1 to Sept. 15 is as follows: Greensboro Waddell, Carman, Hiley, Belle of Georgia and Elberta. Chairs Choice comes later than the Elberta, but has been nearly a failure here. Don't plant it. A few years ago it would have been very desirable to get something later than the Elberta, but now so many peaches are put into cold storage and held until after the bulk of the crop is marketed that later ones do not bring as high prices as formerly."

Speaking of cultivation of the orchard, he says:

"The writer used to raise a crop of corn or potatoes in the orchard the first year and give clean cultivation to all the land every year after until the last of July or first of August. Experience has taught that it is mighty hard in this locality to raise a cover crop, after the trees are three or four years old, that will add much humus to the soil. So now I am trying to raise some legumes the first few years to store up humus for the orchard later."

HOUGHS NECK

James Lyons of Brockton and family are at their summer home on Darrow street.

Mrs. M. Miller and daughter Minnie of Brockton are spending the summer at Houghs Neck.

Dennis J. Driscoll and family of Boston have opened their home on Atlantic avenue for the summer. Mr. Driscoll is penal commissioner of the City of Boston and well known in Boston labor circles.

Mrs. J. J. Keniley of Manet avenue who is touring Scotland is expected home within a few weeks.

The season at Houghs Neck opened with a rush but soon quieted and a large number of cottages are still unrented. This year there has been a marked decrease in the number of clubs at the beach. Beyond doubt the most attractive feature this season is the Quincy Yacht club where socials are held weekly. Business is quieter than last year.

Commencing about August first a large number of Boston residents will open their homes.

With their coming new life is injected into the community.

The summer population has been estimated at about 10,000.

The increase in attendance at religious services at the Church of St. Frances-by-the Sea and the Union chapel has been large.

BETTER BABIES CAMPAIGN.

The "Better Babies" Show has at last reached New York, and awakened the greatest interest. This is not confined to the East Side Mothers, whose babies were contestants for the prizes awarded, nor to physicians and specialists who most fully realize the educational importance of such shows. The general public eagerly perused the news of the new form of baby contest, where all are measured up to the same scientific standard, and mere prettiness scores few points. Pictures of the winning babies and their mothers were printed, and interviews reporting the methods used to rear them to such high standards were presented prominently in all the leading papers.

What is now known as the "Better Babies" Movement began in agricultural regions, as a feature of state and county fairs, and was inaugurated to induce farmers to see that their children were reared at least as scientifically as their live stock. Well known physicians were the judges, and the scores employed for marking points were similar to those used for passing on prize horses, cattle and dogs.

When a farmer's baby scored lower than his live stock his pride rose in arms, and the child was placed under the care of a baby specialist, and brought up to standard. Granges discussed child life, and better babies began to count as items in the farmer's standing.

Physicians and agencies that deal with children in the cities at once saw the value of this movement for the education of city parents, and it is being used with telling effect in many centers of population. Municipal authorities, pure milk committees, child welfare associations and woman's clubs all co-operating in holding better baby contests where all classes and conditions are judged by the same standards.

THE DENVERS SHOW.

Early in January of this year a Better Baby Show was held in Denver under the auspices of the National Western Live Stock Association. Three hundred babies were entered, representing many walks of life, and many different nations in their ancestry. The show lasted five days, and five thousand persons turned out to do homage to the winners, when Col. Cody ("Buffalo Bill") rode round the open arena of Denver's famous stock yards with the two prize winners perched on the saddle in front of him.

Beneath all the ceremonies ran a mighty undercurrent of parental pride and anxiety. The wife of the White Wing was just an anxious to secure a practical education in motherhood as the wife of the lawyer, civil engineer or shopkeeper. "Better Babies" had become a slogan alike on farm, ranch and in city dwellings, though the more intelligent mothers entered their children for the purpose of securing a score card and profiting by the advice of experts rather than for honors and prizes.

IN NEW YORK.

Realizing the value of the wide interest excited by the New York Better Babies Show, a prominent department store arranged a reception for the winning babies and their mothers, where all who were interested were welcome, and throngs of people took advantage of the opportunity to see what experts pronounced a perfect baby.

One of the most encouraging features of this movement for better babies is that children counted out as unfit for entrance at one contest frequently qualify as winners later on when intelligent care and feeding have developed the lacking points. The need for a standard score card, uniform everywhere, has at last been supplied by the co-operation of leading specialists.

ESSENTIALS.

Cleanliness of surroundings, fresh air and food that properly nourish the little growing bodies, are the primary essentials for babies as they are for other young animals, coupled with constant intelligent care. That many luxuries are unnecessary, or even harmful, and that nothing takes the place of motherly, human coddling is proved by the fact that the majority of the prize winners come from plain homes. Institutions filled with every scientific appliance, and run by trained experts, have shown such an appalling mortality, that other means of caring for their charges has been found necessary. Placed in the care of poor mothers, under a certain amount of supervision from the nurses the babies thrive. Italians proving especially successful in raising the "bambinos" entrusted to their care.

As summer advances, and the milk that in some form must be given to the youngsters, is so easily contaminated that only the most careful and scientific handling makes it fit for the child's use, all the various agencies in the cities co-operate to reduce that appalling slaughter of the innocents which results from every hot wave. Mothers in all circumstances are apprehensive at this season of the year.

Cow's Milk, while the nearest thing to the natural food, needs to be properly modified, pure, perfectly fresh, and to be obtained only from inspected healthy cows. Condensed milk of the best grade is favored by leading specialists, as a safe baby food that has many points in its favor. No preservatives are employed for the best brands of this product, and only the purest high grade milk goes into the condenser, as any taint would result in ruining the whole product. The natural fluid is heated in a vacuum, which makes it perfectly sterile, and carries off the extra water, leaving the thick, creamy residum, which sealed in air tight cans, remains sweet and wholesome under all climatic conditions fit to nourish the most delicate digestion either at the tropics or the poles.

COMMISSARY SUPPLIES.

Eagle Brand Condensed Milk which went with Peary to the North Pole, is specified for governmental use, in camps, hospitals and army posts as well as for forestry stores, and forms an important part of the commissary outfit of travellers and explorers all over the world.

Properly diluted this makes a safe, inexpensive and nutritious baby food, obtainable everywhere. The formula for dilution can be had on request from the manufacturers or obtained from any trained nurse or recognized standard work on infant feeding.

One of the most vital things for a baby's welfare is the avoidance of sudden changes of temperature, diet or surroundings. When it is necessary to travel the baby's food should be unchanged either in kind or quality, and the little body carefully protected from excess of heat or cold, or undue excitement. If these precautions are observed even a long journey can be safely undertaken.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

The Home Merchant Has Earned Support.

WHY are communities, towns and cities? Have you ever asked yourself this question? Did you think they just happened, or had you ever thought that there was a special need for them? In the beginning of time—as far back as history takes us—we find that MEN HAVE BANDED THEMSELVES TOGETHER FOR MANY AND OBVIOUS REASONS, chief among which are the benefits to be gained from organized society as a social, intellectual, spiritual and commercial center.

Collectively we are strong, forceful and aggressive and possess power and means to attain a growth which will give to us and our progeny opportunities for better living—to develop our moral, spiritual and intellectual life, the things for which we were created.

THEREFORE THE SUCCESS AND HAPPINESS OF EVERY CITIZEN OF ANY COMMUNITY LIES IN THE INTEREST HE TAKES IN THAT COMMUNITY AND THE GOOD WORK HE CAN DO TO ASSIST IN ITS UPBUILDING.

Now, then, if we are to succeed as individuals and as a community we must not only strive for our own personal success and welfare, BUT MUST GIVE OF OUR WORK AND SUBSTANCE UNSELFISHLY TO HELP THE OTHERS.

Everything we do to help in the upbuilding and advancement of our city we do just that much toward our own personal success. No man can live and prosper unto himself alone, FOR WE ARE INTERDEPENDENT, and realizing this, if we as citizens will all unite and pull together for the common good we will prosper as a city and consequently as individuals.

Well paved streets and sidewalks, good sewerage system, thoroughly enforced sanitary laws, well regulated and energetic police force, competent fire fighting equipment and rigid building regulations are economic necessities and therefore they more largely affect us as a community than as individuals. But beyond this and underlying it all and upon which rests the foundation of the whole is THE SUCCESS OF THE BUSINESS MAN. This man makes an investment, goes into some kind of business—to manufacture or sell goods—puts his money at stake, employs labor and begins his work to build better. THIS MAN IS THE CORNERSTONE OF THE COMMUNITY—the man you should rally around and support.

THE SUCCESS OF A TOWN DEPENDS ON THE SUCCESS OF ITS BUSINESS MEN, WHILE THE SUCCESS OF THE BUSINESS MEN DEPENDS ON SUPPORT THEY RECEIVE FROM THE PEOPLE AT LARGE, EACH BEING, HOWEVER, DEPENDENT ONE ON THE OTHER

No merchant can succeed without the patronage of the public. He is absolutely and entirely dependent on the custom of each and every individual who has a penny to spend, the little mite of each, taken in the aggregate, making the volume on which he runs his business. The merchant, having plenty of competition, must, in order to get the people's patronage, figure his prices close and offer to them the very best inducements possible.

The merchant pays large rentals, taxes, privilege licenses, insurance, besides employing many clerks and assistants, in order to maintain and conduct his business in such a manner as to meet your approval, and to succeed let me emphasize it again—HE MUST HAVE YOUR PATRONAGE TO MAKE HIS BUSINESS PAY.

This community has some as fine stores—every kind—and conducted by as fine a set of men as you will find anywhere on the face of the globe—liberal, big hearted, progressive men. No better retail stores, no better wholesale or jobbing houses, no better banks, no better mills, no better schools, no better churches, no better municipal or public utilities, can be found anywhere than right here in your home town, all—absolutely all—made possible only by and through the co-operation and generous giving of the business men.

But, my good friends, with all of these extraordinary accomplishments, there are some things being done today which are STUMBLING BLOCKS IN THE PATH OF OUR GREATER GROWTH and further development—differences, if you please, which we must reconcile and overcome if we are to continue to grow and prosper.

To be continued under the title, "HELP YOURSELF BY HELPING YOUR TOWN."

WHY HE QUIT THE NEW HAVEN

Statement Says It Was Only Way In Which Condition Full of Disquieting Possibilities Could Be Met—Real Reason Behind Secret Pact—Committee to Select Successor

New York, July 19.—The resignation of Charles S. Mellen as president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad was accepted by the directors yesterday afternoon, to be effective upon the appointment of a successor, whose selection was left in the hands of a special committee.

J. P. Morgan, Theodore N. Vail, Samuel Rea, William Skinner, Edward Milligan and Robert Taft were appointed a committee to select Mellen's successor.

A statement issued by a committee of the board of directors explaining Mellen's resignation and its acceptance, follows:

"At the meeting of the New Haven directors practically no business was transacted beyond the discussion occasioned by Mr. Mellen's resignation and the declaration of the dividend payable Sept. 30, which is always declared at his time of the year, the August meeting always being omitted.

"No discussion whatever was had of the Prouty report. Further consideration of that matter was referred to the executive committee, which will meet to consider these things on Friday of next week, when a draft for a reply to the report will be submitted by Mr. Mellen to the executive committee for its consideration.

"In a conference between a committee of the board and Mr. Mellen, Mr. Mellen stated that in his opinion a condition existed that was full of disquieting possibilities for the New Haven railroad and its allied property; that it was useless to discuss the reasons for, or the cause of that condition; that it had to be met and the only way it could be met, having proper consideration of the property, was by his resignation; that he felt that everything that he had done was and would be in time justified, but that there was a question whether, if he remained to work the problem to that justification, the company would not be still further embarrassed. Therefore he resigned.

"The committee after considering Mr. Mellen's statement accepted his conclusion with great reluctance and at the same time with full appreciation of his work.

"The resignation of Mr. Mellen was accepted by the board to take effect upon the appointment of his successor, and the committee was instructed to consider the election of such successor.

"The directors declared the quarterly dividend of 1½ percent on each share of the capital stock of the company, payable on and after Sept. 30, 1913, to stockholders of record at the close of business on Sept. 9."

The real reason for Mr. Mellen's quitting is being hidden by a secret pact. None of the directors would speak about it.

It is rumored all is not harmony on the New Haven board and a general reorganization of the managing officers is one of the steps which is likely. The selection of a board of directors more representative of New England (not Connecticut) is another.

BIG ENGINE DERAILED

Escaping Steam When Driving Rods Break Puts Passengers In Panic

Meriden, Conn., July 19.—A big Pacific type locomotive, hauling the Boston express on the New Haven road, due here at 7:11 last night, was derailed near Holt's bridge when both driving rods broke.

The thrashing of the driving rods struck a valve, causing steam to escape, which drove both fireman and engineer from the cab. The steam escaped through the train and caused a panic among the passengers, most of whom ran from the cars, some going out of the windows. No one was hurt.

The princesses had rejected a compromise proposed by the minister of justice.

TO ABIDE BY DECISION

Railroads Will Allow Board to Decide Questions at Issue

New York, July 19.—The eastern railroads engaged in a wage controversy with their 80,000 trainmen and conductors indicated last night their willingness to leave with the board of mediation and conciliation, appointed by President Wilson, the decision as to which questions are to be submitted for arbitration under the Newlands amendment to the Erdman act.

The managers in their letter of July 16 setting forth their eight grievances referred to them as the ones which the railroads "intend" to have incorporated in the agreement to arbitrate. The roads, in their letter to the men last night, while describing their posititon as unchanged, expressed themselves as "willing" to refer their demands to the mediation board.

ALLIES TO DICTATE TERMS TO BULGARIA

Blood Must Pay For Awful Atrocities In Macedonia

Athens, July 19.—"According to our present plans the armies of Greece, Servia and Roumania will march into Sofia and we will dictate terms of Bulgarian peace in Czar Ferdinand's own drawing room."

This statement was made here by Premier Venizelos, who has just returned from Salonica . Venizelos declared that one of the principal reasons why the allies were determined to humble Bulgaria in the dust is that the Bulgarians have been guilty of unspeakable atrocities in Macedonia.

"No armistice will be accepted if our agreement is carried out," said Venizelos. "King Constantine is determined that blood must pay for the savagery of the Bulgarians."

AMERICA'S BEST CUSTOMER

Russia Heads the List In Purchase of Agricultural Machinery

Washington, July 19.—Russia is the largest purchaser of American agricultural machinery, export figures of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce showing that $10,000,000 worth of such machinery was sent to Russia during the fiscal year just ended, against $7,000,000 to Canada, $6,500,000 to Argentina, $4,000,000 to Germany and $3,500,000 to France.

The exports of this class of manufactures to Russia exceeded those of any previous year. This country exported $21,000,000 worth of agricultural machinery in 1903 and $12,000,000 worth this year.

FIRE ON CITY OF BANGOR

One Man Burned to Death and Damage of About $50,000

Boston, July 19.—One man was burned to death, several others suffered injury and nearly a score escaped death from either burning or drowning yesterday afternoon, when the steamer City of Bangor was badly damaged by a fire which caused an approximate loss of $50,000.

The fire was one of the most sensational the waterfront has known. Heroic rescues were effected in sight of hundreds on shore and along the various wharves near Foster's, where the burning steamer was tied up.

The dead man has not been identified. The assumption is that he was a friend of some member of the crew and had been aboard to visit him.

BOSTON MEN FORCE GWYN'S RESIGNATION

Editor of Churchman Favored Changing Church's Name

New York, July 19.—Rev. Herbert B. Gwyn, editor of The Churchman, the religious weekly of the Episcopal church and published in this city, has been asked to resign his $5000 position. Two months ago he left a rectorship in Chicago and took up his editorial work. Boston Episcopalians forced his resignation.

He was hired by the board of directors to oppose in his editorials the proposed change in the name of the Protestant Episcopal church to "American Catholic church."

Gwyn surprised everyone by advocating that the name of the church be changed at the forthcoming general convention in New York in October and in so doing struck a hornet's nest.

SAFE AEROPLANE SOON A REALITY

Air Craft Won't Upset or Drop When Engine Stops.

PUBLIC EXHIBITION SOON.

Christopher Lake, the Inventor, Makes Announcement That He Has Solved Problem of Making Flying Safe. Practical Model of Multiplane Type Has Worked Well, It Is Asserted.

Christopher J. Lake lately announced to the Aero club that he had solved the problem of making aeroplanes safe and that he would give a public demonstration of his machine in August at his aerodrome in Bridgeport, Conn.

It is impossible, he said, for his machine to plunge to the earth, as the present type of aeroplane so frequently does, even when the engine stops. It will glide to the earth slowly and keep an even keel.

The inventor is vice president of the Lake Torpedo Boat company, manufacturers of the Lake submarines, and is father of Simon Lake, the inventor of the submarine which bears the family name. He says that in his aeroplane he has applied the same principles which were used in creating stability in the submarine and adds that the problems of under water and air navigation are much the same.

Has Tried It and It Works.

Mr. Lake has already taken out certain patents for the new aeroplane, and others are pending, both in this country and abroad. Until these patents are assured he is unwilling to describe just how he has solved the problem, but he asserts that he has demonstrated the practical efficiency of his device with a full size machine which he has been using at Bridgeport.

If a gust of wind strikes one side of the Lake machine, its inventor says, or if one side falls into an "air hole" the aeroplane will tip slightly and then recover its balance of itself. Because of its even keel in descending the new machine presents a broad surface to the air continually and comes down like a parachute, except that it takes a long glide.

In his experiments with models Mr. Lake suspended a model from a considerable height, bottom upward, and cut the string. The machine righted itself, he says, like a cat and glided down a long air incline to the earth. Dropped sideways also, the machine righted itself and sailed down safely.

No Need of High Speed.

Mr. Lake places strong emphasis on the ability of his aeroplane to take the air and stay in the air at reduced speeds. The driver of the type of machine now in use has to have his engine going very fast before the plane will leave the earth at all. Mr. Lake says that his machine will rise at a speed of only a few miles an hour—an easy driving gait. This machine is of the hydroaeroplane type and is a "multi" with the planes arranged like steps, but his new method will work just as well with monoplanes or biplanes.

COOK STOVES LEFT TO POOR.

Bequest of $10,000 Fifty-nine Years Ago Will Be Looked Up.

A hearing on a petition under the will of Thomas W. Sweetser, who died fifty-nine years ago, will be given in Boston the latter part of this month, when an unusual provision, that of providing the poor of Salem, Mass., with cook stoves, will get close attention.

The will stipulated that $10,000 be paid to his native city, that this be put on interest at 6 per cent forever and that $600 be spent annually in buying stoves and utensils for the poor if his estate amounted to $30,000 or more.

Trustees, to be elected, must supervise the administration of the charity and must keep on hand a supply of stoves of different sizes. Then, too, the trustees must keep on hand enough pipes for all the stoves.

If the will was made public fifty-nine years ago no official notice was taken and the gift was forgotten.

BERIBERI FROM EATING RICE.

Berlin Physician Proves Cause by Experimenting on Himself.

The Medical association of Berlin reports that Dr. Max Moszkowski, who has been investigating the causes of beriberi, shares the contention of Dr. Ellis Fraser and Professor Fletcher of the Malay states that beriberi is an assimilation disease caused by the use of rice.

Dr. Moszkowski experimented on himself. He subsisted on rice for 138 days, after which all the symptoms of the disease manifested themselves. The injection of a serum containing extract of rice resulted in his complete recovery.

First Aid to Chickens.

Following a rain twelve little chickens at the T. J. Ritner home in Atchison, Kan., apparently had been drowned. Mrs. Ritner felt very bad about it, and her husband told her to resuscitate them by working their legs and wings back and forth as they do in life saving stations. Mrs. Ritner did so and brought ten of the chickens back to life.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Vermont Village Shows the Hub How to Interest Children in Museum Work—Model Collections for the Little Ones are Started at Franklin Park—Swarms of Portuguese Pass through the Port—Later They will be Seen on the Cranberry Bogs of the Cape—A Thrifty, Intelligent People—Hubbites at Last are Properly Oriented—Vane on Historic Old South was Thirteen Degrees off.

Boston, July 18, 1913—At last Bostonians may know a little better where they are at. In the course of certain alterations now being made in the historic Old South Meeting House it was noted that the weather vane was set, and apparently for a long time had been set, about thirteen degrees off true north. The contracting firm in charge of the work quietly put the vane right. Then there began the customary protests from Bostonese who in case of indifference between the North Star and the Old South would be inclined to side with the local institution. They insisted that an act of vandalism had upset the points of the compass. But scientific experts climbed the steeple, made close observations and returned to state that the new pointing was almost precisely correct.

Boston has a new aquarial garden, which is about three miles long and half a mile wide at the broadest. Seals from the harbor have invaded the Charles River basin, and like those of the pool at the aquarium, they are amusing children and others with their antics. The vast sheet of water, impressive as it is, has long looked bare and lifeless to the man in the street. It is suspected that the park commissioners may have introduced the seals to forestall complaints about the unused water park.

St. Johnsbury, Vermont, has come to Boston to show how to run a children's museum. At least the former director of the Fairbanks Museum of that progressive village, where more has been done than perhaps anywhere else to interest little people, has been engaged to manage a brand new children's museum at Franklin Park. Miss Delia Griffin, out of her years of experience with youthful Vermonters has very definite ideas of the conduct of such an institution. "The expense of a children's museum," she says, "is bound to be a little heavy in the matter of varnish and glass-polishing. On the other hand the expense of exhibits is much lighter than for a scientific grown-ups' institution." The present start in the picturesque Refectory building is encouraging, even though the number of exhibits is small These will grow, largely through the the children's own efforts. There is nothing which Boy Scouts and others will like better than to do field collecting for such a museum. That the location of the new diversion place of the youngsters is almost ideal will be understood by any one who is familiar with the charms of Boston's leading urban park. Close by is the zoological garden with its alluring bears' dens and the largest bird cage in the world. Near, too, is the wonderful herbaceous garden, brilliant all summer and fall with flowering plants of every description. A short distance away is the plastead where of fine afternoons a galaxy of amateur nines cross bats. Franklin Park is the children's best recreation ground in the New England capital and the children's museum is designed to be one of the most popular attractions of the park.

Manuel da Costa, wife and five children all eagerly watched the steamer as she edged up to the Charlestown shore. Presently from one of the steerage landings white handkerchiefs fluttered from a group of about equal size. The newcomers consisted of Manuel's brother and family from Fayal, led to come out to America by word that in this better country the poor man is not obliged to give up half his substance to the tax gatherer. Such scenes, it is reported, are witnessed at each coming of one of the Mediterranean boats which stop at the Azores. A great swarm of the island Portuguese are welcomed by their compatriots. The dark skinned islanders have long been overtaxed, but it is said that under the republic so many important works of improvement have been undertaken all at once that the government is obliged to squeeze the last penny from the unwilling peasant's purse. Consequently more of these peasants than ever before are coming out to the new Portugal which is growing up within the confines of New England. Already more than 75,000 of them are here. It is an interesting, thrifty, frugal race as any one who has summered at Provincetown can attest. Throughout the Cape district the Portuguese are everywhere, in the fishing villages, the cotton mills and on the cranberry bogs. Up to now it is mostly the islanders who migrate to the United States, but one hears that now the "Lisbons," that is, the continental Portuguese are beginning to come. That means further progress in the Latinization of New England.

SHARP NOTICE SENT TO MEXICO

United States Demands That Troops Guard Americans

WILSON'S POLICY UNCHANGED

President Will Not Recognize Huerta, Who Is Suspected of Being Involved In Anti-American Demonstrations—Not Depending on Our Ambassador, Whose Attitude Is Astonishing

Washington, July 19.—In response to Consul Hamm's request for protection for Americans in the Durango section, the state department has demanded action from the Mexican federal authorities. The department went further than usual in that it requested the federal government to dispatch troops from Torreon.

Hamm has previously reported foreigners, irrespective of nationality, being held by revolutionists for ransom in Durango. The prisoners at one time included the archbishop of Durango.

Nothing has occurred of late to render recognition of the Huerta government more imperative than at any time since Huerta assumed the provisional presidency of Mexico, according to confidential advices upon which the administration is relying in its treatment of the Mexican situation. Neither has any official representation hinting at the advisability of recognizing the Huerta government been made to the United States by any foreign power.

These two facts are made public semi-officially at the White House to clear the air with respect to the Mexican situation and to indicate why the administration sees no reason for changing its Mexican policy.

The suspicion that Huerta himself has been a party to, if not a promoter of, the efforts of foreign ministers resident in Mexico to influence their governments to bring pressure on the United States to recognize the Huerta government is entertained in Washington and has not helped the Huerta cause with the administration.

It is certain that the Wilson administration is profoundly suspicious of the whole recognition campaign, as it has been exploited in the press of late, beginning with a sensational dispatch from Mexico City, which announced the intention of the foreign legations there to memoralize their governments to press the United States for recognition. It is true, also, that such pressure has not been exerted by any foreign home office, and it may be assumed that the administration would be much surprised if such pressure should follow.

The administration is doing its utmost to ascertain from all sources the facts relative to alleged anti-American demonstrations in Mexico City and elsewhere. It would hardly do this if it were depending upon the office of the American ambassador alone for information to guide it in its conduct of one of the most delicate situations with which it is confronted.

The administration so far is silent as to what it had in mind when it called Ambassador Wilson to come to Washington at once for a personal conference with the president. It was said by one person in authority that the administration already has all the information the ambassador will be able to furnish, and has it from unbiased sources.

The assumption is that the ambassador's action in participating in the meeting of foreign diplomats which urged the United States to extend recognition was not to the liking of the administration.

It will be recalled that in his report detailing the story of the murder of Madero and Suarez, or immediately thereafter, Ambassador Wilson proffered the advice that the Huerta government should be recognized. This suggestion was not only ignored by the Taft administration, to which it was made, but was regarded as exceedingly embarrassing to the United States government, whether under Republican or Democratic control.

President Wilson followed this policy and has consistently declined to entertain any suggestion of recognizing the de facto government in Mexico and has insisted that action by the United States should await the national election to be held in the Mexican republic Oct. 26.

AS CROWD LOOKS ON

Youth Smashes Store Window and Makes Off With $1500 In Gems

East St. Louis, Ills., July 19.—In broad daylight and only a block from the police headquarters, a well-dressed youth broke the window of a jewelry store, put $1500 worth of diamonds in his pocket and escaped. The crowd of spectators stood amazed until the youth disappeared into an alley.

Most of the diamonds belonged to Mrs. E. H. Cooke, the jeweler's wife, and were only on exhibition.

Alderman Indicted For Bribery

Salem, Mass., July 19.—The Essex county grand jury reported a true bill against Alderman William Blaisdell of Beverly, charging him with bribery. Blaisdell refuses to discuss the case.

PERSONALITIES IN SENATE

Bitter Discussion Arises Over the Bryan Lectures

Washington, July 19.—Secretary Bryan's policy of lecturing in his vacation time involved the senate in a bitter controversy. It began when Senator Bristow, ignoring the defeat of his resolution directed at Bryan's action, insisted upon being heard in severe criticism of the cabinet officer.

Before the debate ended, charges and counter charges between senators on the two sides of the chamber had brought the senate to a high pitch of excitement. Senator Ashurst produced an old letter of Bristow's, which he declared indicated that Mr. Bristow in 1906 had been perfectly willing to take a federal position and devote only part of his time to it.

Bristow retorted with the charge that Ashurst had spent over $100 of public funds sending private telegrams that should have been paid for from his own pocket, a charge denied by Ashurst, but which Bristow agreed to prove.

From these personal accusations the debate went into the general field of public lecturing and writing.

SINKS LIKE A STONE

Submarine Subsequently Rises From Depth of 200 Feet

Stockholm, July 19.—A terrifying accident to a Swedish submarine, which sank with her crew like a stone in 200 feet of water, became known, despite official efforts to keep the affair secret.

The submarine was practicing outside the harbor, when, by mistake, all of her tanks were filled simultaneously and she sank to the bottom. The pressure was enormous and the water began to dent the hull.

Desperate measures were necessary and Lieutenant Beckman, in charge of the boat, ordered the lead keel detached. When this was removed the boat rose to the surface and the shaken crew drew in great draughts of air.

It is stated here that never before has a submarine risen to the surface after sinking to such a depth.

BANK OFFICERS SAY RUMORS ARE ABSURD

Run Is Started on Large Institution in New Haven

New Haven, July 19.—Rumors which were denounced as absurd and ridiculous by officers of the bank, started a run on the New Haven Savings bank, the second largest savings institution in the state, with deposits Jan. 1 last of $17,858,278.20.

Many depositors, mostly foreigners, called for their money, and while many were satisfied with the explanation of the bank officials concerning the financial condition of the institution, a number withdrew their accounts.

RESULT OF FEDERAL PROBE

Sealed Indictment Reported Returned In the Lamar Case

New York, July 19.—It has become known that a sealed indictment has been returned to the United States court charging a violation of the federal law in connection with certain transactions of David Lamar, the Wall street manipulator, who admitted impersonating members of congress to further his stock schemes.

For several days a federal grand jury has been hearing evidence how Lamar impersonated congressmen in furtherance of some of his schemes, notably the one to have Edward Lauterbach made counsel for the Union Pacific.

MAKES THIN MEN FAT

Uncle Sam Has Mysterious Emulsion to Help Army Candidates

Chicago, July 19.—The government will make you fat if you will join the army. This is the promise of Lieutenant Colonel Kenly, supervisor of the army recruiting service and resident of the field artillery examining board, who has come to Chicago.

With him he brought a bottle, the first anti-thin emulsion ever introduced by the United States government. Its purpose, the colonel explained, is to get into the army the thousands of men who, otherwise fit, are barred by reason of their light weight.

MISSING FROM HOME

Police Think Girl Tipping Scales at 327 Pounds Was Kidnapped

Galesburg, Ills., July 19.—What has become of Marie Hart, Galesburg's 327-pound schoolgirl? This question worries Galesburg police and relatives of the girl. The police believe she was kidnapped.

The girl left home, telling her folks she was going to the motion pictures, and has not returned. It is thought the girl was taken away by theatrical persons who want her for exhibition purposes. She is 16 years of age.

Monument or Trousseau?

THAT night I did so many exercises that at last I sank exhausted in a chair in front of my mirror and put my head down on my arms and cried the real tears you cry when nobody is looking. I felt terribly old and ugly and dowdy and—widowed. It couldn't have been jealousy, for I just love that girl. I want most awfully to hug her very slimness, and it was more what she might think of poor dumpy me than what any man in Hillsboro, Tenn., or Paris, France, could possibly feel on the subject that hurt so hard. But then, looking back on it, I am afraid that jealousy sheds feathers every night so you won't know him in the morning, for something made me sit up suddenly with a spark in my eyes and reach out to the desk for my pencil and check book. It took me more than an hour to figure it all up, but I went to bed a happier, though in prospects a poorer woman.

It is strange how spending a man's money makes you feel more congenial with him, and as I sat in the cars on my way to the city early the next morning I felt nearer to Mr. Carter than I almost ever did, alive or dead. After this I shall always appreciate and admire him for the way he made money, since, for the first time in my life, I fully realized what it could buy. And I bought things!

First I went to see Mme. Courtier for corsets. I had heard about her, and I knew it meant a fortune. But that didn't matter. She came in and looked at me for about five minutes without saying a word, and then she ran her hands down and down over me until I could feel the flesh just crawling off me. It was delicious!

Then she and two girls in puffs and rats came in and did things to a corset they laced on me that I can't even write down, for I didn't understand the process, but when I looked in that long glass I almost dropped on the floor. I wasn't tight and I wasn't stiff and I looked—I'm too modest to write how lovely I really looked to myself. I was spellbound with delight.

Next I signed the check for three of those wonders with my head so in the clouds I didn't know what I was doing, but I came to with a jolt when the prettiest girl began to get me into that black taffeta bag I had worn down to the city. I must have shrunk the whole remaining pounds I had felt obliged to lose for Alfred and Ruth Chester from the horror I felt when I looked at myself. The girl was really sympathetic and said with a smile that was true kindness: "Shall I call a taxi for madame and have it take her to Klein's? They have wonderful gowns by Rene all ready to be fitted at short notice. Really, madame's figure is such that it commands a perfect costume now." Men do business well, but when women enter the field they are geniuses at money extracting. I felt myself already clothed perfectly when that girl said my figure "commanded" a proper dress. Of course Klein pays Mme. Courtier a commission for the customers she passes right on to him. The one for me must have looked to her like a real estate transaction.

I spent three days at the great Klein store, only going to the hotel to sleep and most of the time I forgot to eat. Mme. Rene must have been Mme. Courtier's twin sister in youth and Mme. Telliers in the hat department was the triplet to them both. When women have genius it breaks out all over them like measles and they never recover from it; those women had the confluent kind. But I know that old Rene really liked me, for when I blushed and asked her if they had a good beauty doctor in the store she held up her hands and shuddered.

"Never, madame, never pour vous. Ravissante, charmante—it is to fool. Nevair! Jamais, jamais de la vie!" I had to calm her down, and she kissed my hand when we parted.

I thought Klein was going to do the same thing or worse when I signed the check which would be good for a house and lot and motorcar for him, but he didn't. Only he got even with me by saying, "And I am delighted that the trousseau is perfectly satisfactory to you, Mrs. Carter."

That was an awful shock and I hope I didn't show it as I murmured, "Perfectly, thank you."

The word "trousseau" can be spoken in a woman's presence for many years with no effect, but it is an awful shock when she first really hears it. I felt funny all afternoon as I packed those trunks for the 5 o'clock train.

Yes, the word "trousseau" ought to have a definite surname after it always and that's why my loyalty dragged poor Mr. Carter out into the light of my conscience. The thinking of him had a strange effect on me. I had laid out the dream in dark gray blue rajah, tailored almost beyond endurance, to wear home on the train and had thrown the old black taffeta bag across the chair to give to the hotel maid, but the decision of the session between conscience and loyalty made me pack the precious blue wonder and put on once more the black rags of remembrance in a kind of panic of respect.

I would lots rather have bought poor Mr. Carter the monument I have been planning for months to keep up conversation with Aunt Adeline than wear that dress again. I felt conscience reprove me once more with loyalty looking on in disapproval as I buttoned the old thing up for the last time, because I really ought to have stayed over a day to buy that monument, but, to tell the truth, I wanted to see Billy so desperately that his "sleep place" above my heart hurt as if it might have prickly heat break out at any minute.

So I hurried and stuffed the gray-blue darling in the top tray, lapped old black taffeta around my waist and belted it in with a black belt off a new green linen I had made for morning walks down to the drug store on the public square, I suppose. That is about the only morning dissipation in Hillsboro that I can think of, and it all depends on whom you meet how much of a dissipation it is.

The next thing that happens after you have done a noble deed is, you either regard it as a reward of virtue or as a punishment for having been foolish. I felt both ways when Judge Wade came down the car aisle, looking so much grander than any other man in sight that I don't see how they stand him ever. At that minute the noble black taffeta deed felt foolish, but at the next minute I thanked my lucky stars for it.

It is nice to watch for a person to catch sight of you if you feel sure how he is going to take it, and somehow in this case I felt sure. I was not disappointed, for his smile broke his face up into a joy laugh. Off came his hat instantly so I could catch a glimpse of the fascinating frost over his temples, and with a positive sigh of rapture he subsided into the seat beside me. I turned with an echo smile all over me, when suddenly his face became grave and considerate, and he looked at me as all the men in Hillsboro have been doing ever since poor Mr. Carter's funeral.

"Mrs. Carter," he said very kindly, in a voice that pitched me out of the car window and left me a mile behind on the track, all by myself, "I wish I had known of your sad errand to town so I could have offered you some assistance in your selection. You know we have just had our lot in the cemetery finally arranged, and I found the dealers in memorial stones very confusing in their ideas and designs. Mrs. Henderson just told my mother of your absence from home last night, and I could only come down to the city for the day on important business or I would have arranged to see you. I hope you found something that satisfied you."

What's a woman going to say when she has a tombstone thrown in her face like that? I didn't say anything, but what I thought about Aunt Adeline filled in a dreadful pause.

Perfectly dumb and quiet I sat for an awful space of time and wondered just what I was going to do. Could a woman lie a monument into her suit case? It was beyond me at that speaking, and the Molly that is ready for life quick didn't want to. I shut my eyes, counted three to myself as I do when I go over into the cold tub, and told him all about it. We both got a satisfactory reaction, and I never enjoyed myself so much as that before.

I understand now why Judge Wade has had so many women martyr themselves over him and live unhappily ever afterward, as everybody says Henrietta Mason is doing. He's a very inspiring man, and he fairly bristles with fascinations. Some men are what you call taking, and they take you if they want you, while others are drawing, and after you are drawn to them they will consider the question of taking you. The judge is like that.

In the meantime it tingles me up to a very great degree to have a man use his eyes on me, as it is the privilege of only womankind to do, and I feel that it will be good for his judgeship for me to let him "draw" me at least a little way. I may get hurt, but I shall at least have an interesting time of it. I started right then and got results, for he stopped under the old lilac bush that leans over my side gate and kissed my hand. Old lilac shook a laugh of perfume all over us, and I believe signaled the event at the top of his bough to the white clump on the other side of the garden. I'm glad Aunt Adeline isn't in the flower fraternity or sorority. Suppose she had seen or heard!

And it didn't take me many minutes to slip into old summer before last—also for the last time inside of those buttons—and run through the garden, my heart singing "Billy, Billy," in a perfect rapture of tune. I ran past the office door and found him in his cot almost asleep, and we had a bear reunion in the rocker by the window that made us both breathless.

"What did you bring me, Molly?" he finally kissed under my right ear.

"A real baseball and bat, lover, and an engine with five cars, a rake and a spade and a hoe, two blowguns that pop a new way and something that squirts water and some other things. Will that be enough?" I hugged him up anxiously, for sometimes he is hard to please and I might not have got the very thing he wanted.

"Thank you, Molly; all them things is what I want, but you oughter brung more'n that for three days not being here with me." Did any woman ever have a more lovely lover than that? I don't know how long I should have rocked him in the twilight if Dr. John's voice hadn't come across the hall in command.

"Put him down now, Mrs. Molly, and come and say other how do you does," he called softly.

It was a funny glad to see him I felt as I came into the office where he was standing over by the window looking out at my garden in its twilight glow. I think it is wrong for a woman to let her imagination kiss a man on the back of his neck even if she has known for some time that there is a little drake tail lock of hair there just like his own son's. I gave him my hand and a good deal more of a smile and a blush than I intended.

He very far from kissed the hand; he held it just long enough to turn me around into the light and give me one long looking over from head to foot.

"Just where does that corset press you worst?" he asked in the tone of voice he uses to say, "Poke out your tongue." So much of my Tennessee shooting blood rose to my face that it is a wonder it didn't drip, but I was cold enough to have hit at forty paces if I had had a shooting iron in my hand. As it was, the coldness was the only missile that I had, but I used it to some effect.

"I am making a call on a friend, Dr. Moore, and not a consultation visit to my physician," I said, looking into his face as though I had never seen him before.

"I beg your pardon, Molly," he exclaimed. And his face was redder than mine, and then it went white with mortification. I couldn't stand that.

"Don't do that way," I exclaimed. And before I knew it I had taken hold of his hand and had it in both of mine. "I know I look as if I was shrunk or laced, but I'm not. I was going to tell you all about it and show it to you. I'm really inches bigger in the right place and just—just 'controlled,' the woman called it, in the wrong place. Please feel me and see." And I offered myself to him for examination in the most regardless way. He's not at all like other people.

The blood came back into his face, and he laughed as he gave me a little shake that pushed me away from him. "Don't you ever scare me like that again, child, or it might be serious," he said in the Billy and me tone of voice that I like some, only—

"I never will," I said in a hurry. "I want you to ask me anything in the world you want to and I'll always do it."

"Well, let me take you home through the garden then, and, yes, I believe I'll stay to break a muffin with Mrs. Henderson. Don't you want to tell me what a little girl like you did in a big city and—and read me part of that London letter I saw the postman give Judy this afternoon?"

Again I ask myself the question why his friendliness to Alfred Bennett's letters always makes me so instantly cross.

(To be Continued.)

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MILTON TAX RATE

Gain on personal	$1,774,610.00
Gain on real estate	792,845.00
Total gain	$2,567,455.00

The total levy was $500,941.20. It includes $7,000 for the new Granite avenue bridge, and $27,000.00 for bonds maturing in 1913. No tax was necessary for interest.

The increase in valuation has not been as marked in Quincy as will be seen by these figures:

Year	Personal	Total
1899	11,660,886	20,683,586
1900	11,582,598	20,849,980
1901	11,799,350	21,428,700
1902	11,501,911	21,451,336
1903	10,811,030	20,976,080
1904	10,476,920	20,791,195
1905	11,122,760	21,762,932
1906	11,266,065	22,222,040
1907	11,357,715	22,769,100
1908	12,115,415	23,864,970
1909	12,610,940	24,641,225
1910	14,375,565	26,689,650
1911	15,980,763	28,681,073
1912	14,322,424	27,359,789
1913	16,026,859	29,927,244

The valuation, which last year fell off over $1,000,000, has this year made up that loss and gained still more, the total valuation of $29,927,244 being $2,567,455 larger than last year, and the largest valuation the town has ever had on the spring assessment. This satisfactory gain in valuation prevented a much greater jump in the tax rate.

Both personal and real estate show a gain. Last year personal valuation dropped off about $1,700,000. This year it gained $1,774,610 and is now the largest in the history of the town Real estate gained $792,845 an unusually large increase. Last year the gain was $412,255.

All the requirements for money are greater this year than last. The town appropriations were about $23,500 higher, the State tax has jumped nearly $11,500, the county tax about $3600 while the Metropolitan taxes are all higher.

LOBBY WANTED GOMPERS' HELP

Would Have Him Desert Labor Cause, According to Mulhall

PLANS OUTLINED BY BROWNELL

Witness Says Van Cleave Left New York In a Hurry When Plans Fell Through—Declares Witnesses Have Been Intimated Since They Have Been Brought to Washington

Washington, July 19.—Martin M. Mulhall yesterday gave the senate lobby investigating committee his story of the alleged effort in 1907 and 1908 to bribe Samuel Gompers to desert the cause of labor and support the policies advocated by the National Association of Manufacturers. He admitted he had no positive information that an attempt to bribe Gompers had actually been made, but he said Atherton Brownell of New York had outlined the plans to him and had told him of what was to be done.

Mulhall was excused late yesterday afternoon until Monday on the ground that he was tired after a week of continuous testimony.

The committee opened the Gompers incident when newspaper clippings appeared showing that Gompers had made the bribefy charges before a court in 1908, and that President Van Cleave of the manufacturers' association had denied all connection with them. Mulhall said he had been referred by Van Cleave and Schwedtman to Brownell in New York, who claimed to be conducting a publicity bureau for the association.

Brownell told him, he said, that a man named Brandenberg was following Gompers; that they had a plan fixed up by which they expected to "get" the labor leader; and that they were positive they could not fail. Mulhall said he warned them they would not succeed and later advised Van Cleave to the same effect.

Van Cleave left New York suddenly, the witness said, after telling him that he had nearly "fallen into a trap."

"He said they wanted him to go down town to meet those people, but he got a tip not to go," said Mulhall. "He told me he thought Brownell had more sense than to go into a trap of that kind."

This was the extent of Mulhall's knowledge of the matter, but he insisted that from the previous information he had he knew the plan that had been on foot to force Gompers into signing a document that would insure his future action.

The Gompers story and an unexpected outburst from Mulhall, who complained that officers of the National Association of Manufacturers were trying to "stare him out of countenance," were the enlivening features of a day in which the self-confessed "lobbyist" identified several hundred more of the letters relating to campaign and legislative activities.

Proceedings were running smoothly when Robert McCarter, attorney for the manufacturers' association, tried to interrupt and ask Mulhall a question. The committee has thus far permitted no questioning by outside attorneys.

"I refuse to answer any questions from that man," shouted Mulhall. "Further, I want to tell the committee that those men at that table have kept some one there continually to stare steadily at me while I have been on the stand. I think it is a contemptible trick. The ex-president (John Kirby, Jr.) relieved Mr. Emery at the job a little while ago."

Members of the committee tried to soothe the witness and Acting Chairman Bankhead mildly suggested that Mulhall look at him instead of at his antagonists. Mulhall admitted he was somewhat nervous, but insisted that witnesses have been intimidated since they were brought to Washington "outside as well as inside this committee room."

CREATES STIR IN MAINE

District Attorney Takes Notice of the Crockett Revelations

Rockland, Me., July 19.—Maine politicians are in an uproar over the revelations of bribery and crooked politics revealed in the sensational confession of George L. Crockett of Thomaston. An exposure of the plans which Martin M. Mulhall had made for the control of the political offices in Maine, together with his half deal with Governor Haines in the nomination fight against Fernald, are further sensations.

Philip Howard, district attorney of Knox county, said he would invite Crockett and all others to tell their stories of bribery to the next grand jury.

Crockett does not regret a thing he has said, insisting that he would have broken no confidences unless Mulhall, now testifying in the senate bribery hearing at Washington, had not lied about him.

MOOSE HOME FOR QUINCY

Members Form Organization to Secure Funds

The members of the Quincy lodge, L. O. O. Moose, have organized a Moose Club Associates for the purpose of subscribing a fund to build a Moose Home in or near City Square. George Leighton of Weymouth has been elected president and William J. Knott of Quincy secretary.

The organization met with an immediate welcome on the part of the members and contributions to the $1,000 necessary before the body can be incorporated as a building association are being rapidly received.

The question of a clubhouse arose shortly after the Moose attained an 800 membership and has been eagerly agitated by the majority. Literature on the subject has been prepared and will be distributed.

HOSPITAL REMEMBERED.

Because of rain yesterday the outing of the Rice Hutchins office employees in Boston was postponed. Frank Harriman, the new proprietor of the Squantum Inn had made arrangements for about 200 and therefore found himself overstocked with good things to eat. Very thoughtfully Mr. Harriman sent today the greater part of these eatables to the Quincy City Hospital, including ducklings, peas, mashed potatoes, lettuce, ice cream and cake.

WARRANT FOR ROSA.

As a sequel to the case against Rosario Cumbo for threatening to assault Rosa Bruno, and for carrying a loaded revolver, Rosa found hereslf this morning charged with assaulting Cuombo with a dangerous weapon.

After the hearing on this morning's case, and Cuombo had been discharged, he swore out a warrant against Rosa charging her with assault with a dangerous weapon. The man denied that he flourished a revolver at the time or that he owned a weapon.

A fine day after a day of helpful rain. The storm of Friday, while at no time violent did an enormous amount of good to vegetation. A similar storm about once a week would keep everything in good condition.

W. M. FRENCH REUNION

Hose Associates Will Meet on August 9

The annual reunion of the Washington M. French Hose Association will be held Saturday August 9, at Norteman's pavilion at Houghs Neck. These reunions are usually held in September but this year the association believed a larger attendance could be assured by holding the affair earlier.

A special car will leave City Square for the beach at 1.40 and from that time until 5 o'clock at which hour the dinner will be served, the old vets will amuse themselves as each individual taste dictates. Some will sport on the verandas of the Yacht clubhouse and watch the yacht race while others will lounge about the easy chairs and tell over once again of the fires of Quincy's early days when they ran with the machine, and did fully as good work as the modern departments considering the apparatus they had to work with.

At 5 o'clock sharp all will assemble around the festive board in the pavilion and partake of one of Norteman's famous shore dinners.

The committee in charge of the outing includes, Fred F. French, the first and only president, the association ever had, Frank C. Packard, James E. Maxim, Asa A. Pope and Jesse F. Curtis, the genial secretary of the association.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 167 QUINCY MASS., MONDAY EVENING JULY 21, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

BRAINTREE CARNIVAL DAY

Annual Outdoor Event of St. Francis Church

Attractions were Numerous

"Bigger and better than ever" with something doing every minute and everybody happy the grand carnival conducted under the auspices of the clergy and parishioners of the St. Francis Catholic church of South Braintree was held on French's common last Saturday afternoon and evening. Th affair which has become established as Braintree's big annual out door event was carried through with no hitches, accidents or other unpleasant happenings. The weather conditions were perfect and the various attractions called out an enormous crowd of people each and all of whom seemed to be enjoying the show to the utmost.

A detail of police in charge of Chief Horace F. Hunt resplendent in his new uniform, together with several state detectives in plain clothes were on duty to check any disturbance or nab pickpockets but they had little to do except to look dignified.

Carnival day was an unqualified success and all kinds of compliments are due to the hustling, efficient and energetic chairman of the executive committee, Mr. W. H. J. Fitzgerald, for the very able manner in which he engineered the great task in his charge. He was ably assisted by Dr. C. A. Sullivan, active treasurer and Miss Celia B. McCabe, secretary, together with a long array of committees.

The keynote of the great success of the carnival is the fact that there are never any fakes or catch penny schemes, everything is always carried out exactly as advertised and every man, woman and child receives full value for whatever money they spend. In addition to this is the splendid co-operation of the townspeople who gather one and all to enjoy the day and help on the good cause.

The common resembled a huge fair, pleasure park and athletic meet all rolled into one, ever shifting, changing scene of life and color, and surely must have convinced the throngs from the surrounding towns that Braintree is on the map in big black letters.

In the middle of the field, was the bandstand from the center of which rose a lofty flag pole with "Old Glory" floating proudly from the peak. From the pole there radiated like spokes in a wheel, ropes 80 feet in length from which were suspended Japanese lanterns and the flags of all nations. The circumference of this great 160 foot wheel was thickly set with electric bulbs and more lanterns which when lighted as soon as darkness fell transformed the place into a fairy bower. Grouped on all sides of the circle were the various booths, tents and other attractions while in the grove was the dance board, all these joy spots being lighted by scores of vari-colored electric lights.

At the entrance, for a nominal sum, the pleasure seeker received a souvenir lapel button and a ticket, the latter being exchanged if he so wished for a coupon entitling him to participate in the drawing of a building lot at Sunset Point. A large candy booth tended by charming young ladies tempted everybody to buy the sweets accompanied as they were by the smiles of the vendors.

Further on, a mammoth lunch tent with quick service and good food at most reasonable prices was the mecca for hundreds of hungry ones.

There were numerous wheels of fortune where holders of the lucky number received novelties imported from Europe and very droll. One of them was a doll called "Whistling Jim," which when pressed for remarks emitted a delightful whistling sound. Others were the doy "Smiler" with his wonderful ears and shifty eyes, giv-

BOY OF NINE DROWNED

Was Bathing at Quincy Shore Reservation

In Water But Few Minutes

A sad as well as one of the most peculiar drowning accidents took place Saturday afternoon at the Quincy Shore reservation when Paul Whelen, the 9 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. M. F. Whelan of 161 Arlington street, Wollaston lost his life.

The boy with his sister Jeannette had gone to the beach to go in bathing. There was a large crowd of bathers at the beach at the time and the movements of the boy were not noticed and he was not missed by his sister until his dead body was found beneath the water near the shore by A. E. Linnell.

Mr. Linnell was coming in from the raft, when he stumbled over what he first thought was a log of wood. He started to pass it by and then thought that he would pick it up and carry it ashore so that some other bather should not stumble over it. He stooped to pick it up, and was horrified to find that it was a human body.

He rushed to the shore with it, and steps were immediately taken to get the water out of the boys lungs. There were no appliances of any kind at the beach and those who rushed to Mr. Linnells assistance were obliged to use crude methods. William F. Murray, a swimming instructor, was at the beach and assisted by John Haley, William Avery and Officer James C. White of the Metropolitan force worked hard to revive the boy.

A mounted park officer was implored by the women standing about to telephone for the police ambulance but he told them that he was capable of handling the matter without their assistance. He then rode to the police station at the Quincy end of the beach and telephoned for physicians.

In response to this call Medical Examiner Fred E. Jones, Dr. George M. Sheahan and Dr. W. J. McCausland responded. Dr. McCausland was in Braintree and as he came through City Square he thought about the pulmotor at the police station and going into Hearn's drug store he called up the police station and asked if the pulmotor had been sent down. This was the first information that the Quincy police had of the accident and the apparatus was rushed to the beach in the auto patrol which made a record breaking trip.

The doctors with the pulmotor worked over the boy for over an hour but without result, although at one time they thought that he would be revived.

In the meantime the sister, Jeannette, had been taken home in an automobile, and later the Medical Examiner turned the body over to the family undertaker.

It was said that the boy had been sick, and was not very strong, but no one can account for the accident, or determine whether he had a fainting spell or dove and struck his head and was stunned and drowned. There was a small cut on the head and it is thought possible that he may have struck his head on a rock and become unconscious and was drowned.

According to all accounts the time from when the boy was last seen until his dead body was found was not over ten minutes, and many believe had proper apparatus been available that his life might have been saved. It was reported that application for life saving apparatus had been made for the beach and had been promised but had not been received.

MAYOR CHARLES FRENCH

Concord's Executive Formerly of Quincy

Here on Official Visit

Quincy was honored Saturday by a visit from a former townsman, who has made good in Concord, N. H., which city he is at present serving for the fifth consecutive year as mayor. The gentleman in question is Charles French who when he resided in Quincy was employed as a granite cutter by McDonnell & Sons. He left Quincy 27 years ago and turned up in Concord, N. H., where after a time he entered politics.

Six years ago he was the Democratic candidate for mayor but suffered defeat. The following year he came out as an independent candidate and stumped the city. His platform was a reduction in the debt and tax rate and increase of wages for the workmen. On this platform he won out by a large plurality, and so successful was his administration that he has been reelected every year since, and says that he is out for the nomination and election next fall and that he is going to win again.

He immediately started in by giving the city a business administration and during his reign as chief executive he has not only raised the wages of the firemen, police and city laborers but has steadily reduced the indebtedness of the city, and what is more, has succeeded in reducing the tax rate from $25 per $1,000 to $15 per $1,000.

His visit Saturday was to inspect the auto chemical apparatus, as his city is agitating the purchase of similar apparatus. He was accompanied by Chief Green of the fire department and by two of the members of the council.

They came from Concord by automobile and first called on Chief Litchfield who took them to Atlantic to see the apparatus there. From here they went to the Central sation and made a thorough inspection of the apparatus.

Postmaster Hammond an old friend of Mayor French learned that he was in town and lost no time in connecting with him. Postmaster Hammond entertained the party for several hours, after which they were entertained at the home of Chief Litchfield, leaving late in the afternoon in their automobile for Boston where after dinner at one of the hotels they intended to motor back to Concord.

LAND LEAGUE INSTALLATION.

Content with the immediate prospects of home rule the Quincy branch, No. 61, Irish National Land League, which enjoys the distinction of being the oldest branch in the United States held what they think will be their last installation on Sunday evening. The conditions, according to reports furnished the league by interested workers, in England, point to the acceptance of the bill before another set of officers can be installed. On that account an unusual program was rendered and the time honored robes of office which have not been used for years, were worn by the ones chosen to pilot the league through the final dash to the coveted glory of their sireland.

Past president John J. Byron, who held office shortly after the organization of the local branch, did the installing. After the ceremonies the members were the guests of the newly elected officers. Those installed were:

President—Peter McConarty.
Vice president—Samuel T. Drew.
Secretary—Daniel Ahearn.
Treasurer—Enos Costa.
Sargeant at arms—Frank Clinton.

BOY FALLS INTO QUARRY

Second Adventure for Paul Reddington This Month

Paul Reddington, the 11 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Reddington of Crescent street, who was taken to the Quincy City Hospital, Saturday after he had fallen 20 feet into the Badger quarry, is doing well this morning. He is suffering from a slight concussion of the brain. It was thought for a time that a fractured skull would be found but such was not the case.

The boy was playing on the ledge when he lost his balance. Striking on a rock he lay there unconscious until playmates brought him to the bank. He was carried to the West Quincy station and police ambulance took him to the residence of Dr. J. T. Reynolds who ordered his removal to the hospital.

A slight cut in back of the ear was all the injuries that were visible. No scratches were received on the hands or body.

About a week ago the boy was found on the banks of Braintree pond after he had been missing for many hours.

TIMELY RESCUE BY FRIENDS

Archie Baird was rescued from the waters of Quincy Bay Saturday afternoon in an exhausted condition. A few seconds after he had plunged into the waters at the base of Great Hill, just below the cottage, he had a shock due to the chilled waters. Friends who were swimming nearby noticed his plight and going to his assistance managed to bring him ashore. Dr. John H. Ash was called and he was afterward taken to his home. Saturday evening he seemed to have entirely recovered.

Mr. Baird is a permanent resident of Houghs Neck and is a past president of the Associates. A few weeks ago he returned from an European business trip. Mr. Baird is a strong swimmer and never before was affected while in the water.

Rev. B. A. Willmott had large congregations at Bethany church on Sunday, his last services here until September. Miss Agnes Ruggles the organist and the choirs are also having a vacation and on Sunday Mrs. Charles Sampson was organist and A. L. Hayden the soloist.

FATALITY AT THE SHIPYARD

Allen B. Spiers the Victim

Accident Caused by Fall

Allen B. Spiers, 40 years, of 58 Chubbuck street, died from injuries received in a 30 foot fall at the Fore River yard this morning.

Spiers, an iron worker by trade, was hoisting pipe on the battleship Nevada when the accident occurred. A scaffolding to which he had rigged a block and tackle spread and he was thrown over the side. He landed on his head and received a fractured skull at the base of the brain. Death was practically instantaneous. Dr. Fred E. Jones medical examiner, was called. He ordered the body removed to the Hall undertaking rooms.

Spiers has been a resident of Quincy Point for about 12 years. He is well known there, and is survived by a wife.

BRIEFS

Everett A. Barber of Billings street has returned from a six months' business trip which took him through western Canada to Van-Couver, down the Pacific coast and back through the western and middle states. He says Quincy looks good to him.

A break in the water main occurred opposite the Durgin and Merrill block this noon. The break was evidently in the service entering the block. The ground was considerably honeycombed before the break was discovered.

Charles W. Laing, rear commodore of the Quincy Yacht club, left this week in his power boat "Micmac," for a two weeks' cruise along the coast of Maine. His party included Mr. and Mrs. David Kidd of Edison street, Miss Elizabeth Gibson of Lowell, James Morrison of Spear street and Misses Jennie and Elizabeth Laing of Atherton street.

Spencer Apollonio of Botolph street, spent the week end with his family at Nahant.

The government is sending college professors to inspect the packing establishments, and dinner will taste lots better if they don't say too much in the papers about what they see.

Reports of Cabinet crisis and downfalls of ministries are stirring Europe, while this country is in turmoil on account of shake-ups in several of the league teams.

Ambassador Page is paying more than his salary for house rent. Can the neighbors be depended on to bring in food?

John D. Cobb of Dedham has declined to be a candidate for reelection or register of probate, and Norfolk county will lose the services of a valuable official. One who was certainly an expert in probate business, always courteous and painstaking. For thirty years one of the Cobb family has held this position. In 1883 Jonathan H. Cobb was named register. He was succeeded by his son, Jonathan, who held the office until the present register, a brother of Jonathan, was named several years ago. He has earned a vacation. J. Raphael McCoole of Dedham has been assistant register for ten years and is a candidate for the nomination.

SUMMER ACQUAINTANCES.

Your neighbor may have passed you in the street for years without a smile because you were never introduced. But on the railroad train or at the summer resort he often loosens up to men he never saw before.

There are sudden friendships, followed by equally hasty coolings at the summer resort. The woman who told you all about her love affairs, may not respond to your harmless remark about the weather the next day. Perhaps you "got in bad" by talking to the wrong people the night before.

When people really take to each other at a summer resort, their vows of friendship are ardent and binding. Their houses are to be thrown open to each other at all times. Afterwards they send each other a post card with scenery colored green and pink, inscribing thereon "Well, how are you!" And that ends it. Friendship is a plant that grows through only the association of years.

THE POWER OF INITIATIVE.

In his remarks at the Perry's victory centennial at Erie, Pa., Secretary of the Navy Daniels called attention to the marvellous initiative shown by the hero commemorated. Mr. Daniels truly remarked that in this time of machinery, it may be forgotten that personal initiative, alertness, and will power are vital to success.

The historical painters and mural decorators always picture a leader like Perry in the act of waving a flag, brandishing a sword, or boarding a ship. Yet no doubt Perry's victory and many other military triumphs were due quite as much to thorough efficiency of preparation and attention to detail.

When Perry arrived at Lake Erie, he found gunboats nearly built, but it had not seemed to occur to anyone that guns, muskets, ropes and sails would be needed. With Perry hustling, the ship timbers of an afternoon had been standing trees of the morning.

To fit himself out with iron he scoured the country for barndoor hinges and cart-wheel tires.

Perhaps military skill did not count Perry as much as certain qualities called "initiative"— the refusal to be daunted by difficulties that stop other men, the facing and analyzing these difficulties, and persistent action until obstacles are removed. These qualities which flow not so much from genius as from a resolute heart, may in a degree be the gift of any young man who is not satisfied with the rut of mediocre success.

Like the muddle headed old government that was building gunboats without guns, most men do not see the needs of their work until they actually happen. Another fellow comes along who looks ahead, sees defects in a situation, schemes to meet these defects. He finds the world is full of helpful forces, whose service can be had by the wide awake, persistent seeker.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

Help Yourself by Helping Your Town.

THE attitude you maintain toward your home town—its business men and its institutions—is reflected in the success or failure of the same.

The success and happiness of every citizen in any community lie in the interest he takes in that community and the good work he can do to assist in its upbuilding. EVERYTHING YOU DO TO HELP IN THE ADVANCEMENT OF YOUR OWN COMMUNITY YOU DO JUST THAT MUCH TOWARD YOUR OWN PERSONAL SUCCESS. No man can live and prosper unto himself alone, for you are interdependent, and, realizing this, as good citizens, you should unite and pull together for the common good, and, doing this, you will prosper as a community and as individuals.

NO TOWN CAN STAND STILL. IT MUST EITHER GO FORWARD OR DECLINE, AND IT IS UP TO YOU TO SAY WHICH IT WILL BE.

Some towns hustle and grow—that is, the people hustle and the town grows. They get the habit of boosting until every citizen becomes a booster, and pretty soon its reputation spreads and it becomes known far and wide as a good town, while others lapse into a state of innocuous desuetude—an easy rock along manner—that soon classes that particular place as a dead one.

If you are knocking and complaining stop it. Nothing hurts a town more. If you cannot say something good don't say anything, and, above all, don't knock. If you are not a booster become one.

The success of the retail merchant depends on the patronage of his home people, the home jobber is largely dependent on the patronage of his home retailer, the banks are dependent likewise on the success of all, while the success and happiness of the people depend on the success of the business men.

Now, one of the greatest injuries you can do your home town or community—to the business men who are dependent on your patronage—is to order your goods from mail order houses or patronize merchants in other towns. Every dime sent from your community to a mail order house is removed entirely from local circulation. Its principal and interest are both gone, whereas the money spent with the home merchant goes immediately into circulation and in due course comes back to you.

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS ANNUALLY ARE BEING SENT TO MAIL ORDER HOUSES FROM THIS COMMUNITY, THUS DEPRIVING HOME MERCHANTS OF THEIR RIGHTFUL PATRONAGE.

And yet, no matter how much the home merchant is dependent on the patronage of his home people, he is supposed to give and to aid in every work undertaken for the material betterment of the town, and he does, being often coerced into giving by the demands of his customers, fearing to offend them because of the fear of loss of their patronage.

UNLIKE YOUR HOME MERCHANT, MAIL ORDER HOUSES PAY NO TAXES OR PRIVILEGE LICENSE TO DO BUSINESS IN YOUR COMMUNITY. NEITHER DO THEY CONTRIBUTE TO YOUR CHURCHES, SCHOOLS, PUBLIC ROADS, CHARITIES OR ANYTHING ELSE, AND, ABOVE ALL, THEY GIVE NO EMPLOYMENT TO ANY ONE IN YOUR FAMILY OR HOME TOWN.

You want your schools kept up, your churches supported, your streets kept in repair, your town properly policed and protected by a good fire fighting equipment, etc. In other words, you want your town to prosper, be well run and the people to be happy and contented. YET IF YOU ARE SENDING YOUR MONEY TO OTHER INSTITUTIONS IN OTHER CITIES AND TOWNS YOU ARE DEFEATING THE VERY OBJECT FOR WHICH YOU STRIVE.

Now, this town building is a serious matter—a great big proposition—and if you are not treating it—its business men—fairly you are not treating yourself fairly. You are undermining the very foundation of your well being.

To be continued under the title, "THE FARMER AND THE MERCHANT."

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

The Importance of Selecting, Combining and Proportioning Food.

THERE are three common laws that govern all forms of animal life—namely, nutrition, motion, oxidation, or, in other words, eating, exercising and breathing. Both exercising and breathing are automatic processes; therefore they are done in accordance with nature, but it is different with our food.

Man has put into his stomach in some form or other nearly everything on the face of the earth, and his efforts have been crowned with a series of mistakes that are largely responsible for a condition of universal disease and a woeful shortening of life.

As this series of articles will deal largely with these mistakes and how to correct them, I will first take up the subject of nutrition—man's food. I will subdivide this subject into three parts—selecting, combining and proportioning.

In order to get the best results the diet must be selected so as to contain all the elements of nourishment the body needs. It must be combined so as to be chemically harmonious when mixed in the stomach, and it must be proportioned so that one is not overfed on some things and underfed on others. In other words, the diet must or should be balanced.

Man's Life Is Too Short.

Man has existed a long time on this earth, and he thinks he has done fairly well without knowing or caring anything about these laws, but when we examine the mortality tables of all civilized countries we realize that there is something radically wrong.

The life period of mankind, reckoning from an age of six, is only a little over thirty-eight years, and if we take him from his infancy it brings his period of existence down to less than thirty-four years. He barely gets grown before he drops into his grave.

THE GROWING CHILD NEEDS SULPHATE OF LIME.

Nature does not demand exactness in eating. If one eats a little too much or the wrong proportions the surplus can be worked off, but the work must be done or the penalty must be paid. The penalty is some form of congestion in the body which we are pleased to call disease.

Three Other Laws of Diet.

When we learn how to select, combine and proportion our food it should be partaken of according to our age, climate (time of the year) and the work we do.

If we wish the best results we must select and proportion our food according to age, because the growing child or youth needs much structural material—sulphate of lime—with which to build bone, teeth and cartilage. This is found in cereals and all starch foods. The middle aged person needs but little of these, just enough for repair, and the aged person needs practically none.

In selecting and proportioning our food we should observe the laws of temperature or time of the year. We should not partake of foods of a high caloric or heating value at a time when the sun is giving us this heat direct, thus building a fire inside while the sun is giving us the same heat outside. The violation of this simple law is the cause of all sunstroke and heat prostrations. On the contrary, if we are going to be exposed to zero weather we should build the fire inside by partaking of foods of a high caloric value.

Balanced Diet Essential.

We should select and proportion our food according to the work we do, because eating is a process of making energy, while work is a process of expending energy, and we should make these two accounts balance. When they are balanced we are healthy; when they are unbalanced we are diseased.

Health is our natural condition, and the nearer we obey the laws of nutrition as above subdivided the more perfect our health will be and the more automatically all functions of the body will work. Correct eating, exercising and breathing, therefore, cure disease by establishing normal conditions, by removing its causes, thus permitting nature to give us our birthright, which is health.

Results of Wrong Food Combinations.

There are hundreds of chemicals so opposed to each other that they produce violent action when mixed together, and so it is with food. Every article of food we eat is composed of a definite chemistry; therefore to get the best results or the highest value (energy) out of what we eat our meals must be composed of things that are chemically harmonious.

The stomach serves two purposes—first, a mixing and testing crucible; second, a storehouse or depot.

It is estimated by the highest authorities that about 90 per cent of all human disease originates in the stomach; therefore if people knew how to select and combine their food so that every article composing the meal would be both nutritious and chemically harmonious it would do more to promote health and raise the standard of life than any other one thing known to science.

When several foods are eaten at the same meal that are not chemically harmonious nature pours into the stomach a large amount of hydrochloric acid, which produces fermentation. This is nature's way of neutralizing and getting rid of these opposing elements. Then we say the foods did not agree with the stomach when the facts are they did not agree with themselves.

Cause of Heart Trouble.

When there is too much hydrochloric acid in the stomach foods digest too quickly. This causes congestion in the upper intestines. The food, being supercharged with acid, undergoes a process of fermentation which generates gas. This gas accumulates in the transverse colon, and the pressure in this distended colon often causes an insufficient blood flow into the heart; hence the faint heart action, now and then skipping a beat. At other times it causes an excessive blood flow or arterial overflow, and then we have palpitation, dizziness and sometimes complete heart failure and death.

In addition to congestion and irregular heart action the excess acid causes irritation of the mucous membrane or intestinal lining, and the millions of little nerve fibers that lead out from these irritated surfaces to every part of the body also become irritated and cause what we call nervousness.

The brain and the stomach bear the same relation to each other that a balloon bears to a basket. They are connected by thousands of nerves and capillary vessels; therefore when the stomach becomes irritated by acid the brain is the first organ to suffer. Then we have insomnia, nervousness, melancholia, lack of concentration, etc.

Results of Autointoxication.

These are only a few of the conditions caused by the wrong selections and combinations of food. The general physical trouble is described by the word autointoxication, which means that we have eaten more food than the body could use, and nature has decomposed or changed it into alcohol and carbon dioxide poisons.

Autointoxication causes innumerable symptoms, such as anaemia, languor, drowsiness, impure blood, indicated by pimples or acne; melancholia, a lack of interest in things. That is, where we should be normally cheerful we are melancholy. Instead of being mentally bright and quick to comprehend, our mind is disturbed, wandering and dull, and we undergo a sort of general mental and physical let down.

There are a number of other conditions caused by the wrong selections and combinations of food which, named in the order of their importance, are rheumatism, Bright's disease, gout, lumbago, diabetes, hardening of the arteries, enlargement of the liver, etc.

Inasmuch as the true remedy for all diseases must be found in the field of their cause, it is obvious that the cure for these disorders lies in food. When I say cure I mean that scientific feeding will remove the primary causes, and nature will do the curing.

Disease Is the Penalty.

Just as the state punishes people who violate her criminal laws, so all disease is merely the penalty for violating natural laws. Nature, however, is more merciful than the state. She will forgive and cure if you will turn and obey her laws. This is the reason why the greatest living scientists are gradually turning toward the food question to find the causes as well as the cure for a majority of human disorders.

In this series of articles I shall endeavor to point out the various combinations of food that cause many common diseases and show how their causes can be removed and cures made by the scientific use of food.

Health is the one thing we all desire, and, as this great prize is a matter of obeying or disobeying natural laws, let us examine man with some care and if possible ascertain some of these cosmic rules.

Scientific feeding does not mean difficulty, deprivation or dieting. It means simplicity, good living, delicious food; it means knowledge of and obedience to the natural laws of building up and maintaining the human body, which are overlooked probably on account of their simplicity.

ELECTRIC LIGHT SWITCHES.

Placing the switch for electric lamps is all important when electricity is being installed in the home. If they are correctly placed it saves stumbling over the furniture in the dark and groping along the walls to turn on the electric light. It is now quite the general custom to install small wall switches for turning on and off the electric lamps. The lamps can be located anywhere about the room, either on the walls or ceiling, and the switch can be placed near the entrance of the room where it will be convenient at all times. If the switch is placed near the entrance the room can be illuminated before you enter; a wonderful convenience which eliminates stumbling against misplaced furniture. Furniture is easily marred or broken in this way.

With the advent of so many electrical devices for the home this question of suitable outlets, sockets and switches needs special attention. The living rooms should have receptacles for chafing dishes, portable lamps and other conveniences built in the walls The chambers and bath-room should be constructed with baseboard receptacles to attach a plug for the electric fan, heating pad and curling iron.

Beginning with the porch light, it is generally wise to have the switch either in the vestibule or the wall of the hall at the right of the front door. This permits the light to be turned off and on quickly if the porch light is not allowed to burn all the evening. The hall or reception room light should also be controlled by a switch on the side wall, but perferably removed from the switch belonging to the vestibule light, for if the two switches are together there is danger of using the wrong one. Another switch for the downstairs hall or reception room should be at the head of the stairs. It admits of entering a lighted hall on descending the stairs.

Most living-rooms connect with the hall and with the dining room. For this reason two switches are desirable---one on the wall near the door to the hall and the other on the wall near the door entering into the dining-room. This allows of instant illumination of the room on entering from either direction. In this room it is preferable to have central fixtures with one or more side lights to read under. Dining room lighting is provided by a central fixture holding several lights. So many artistic and beautiful electric fixtures now come for use over the dining room table that the light is an ornamental feature of the room. The switch for this room should be on the wall at the right of the kitchen door or that leading to the butler's pantry. This is convenient for the servants, and as a rule one switch suffices for this room.

There are now over two million farmers using the telephone. Over a hundred thousand farmers installed the telephone last year.

METROPOLITAN DISTRICT.

The reason for abolishing the local board of civil service examiners, which was noted a few days ago in the Daily Ledger, was because of the fact that early in the spring the Civil Service Commissioners voted to form a Metropolitan district, comprising the following cities and towns, Brookline, Cambridge, Chelsea, Everett, Lynn, Malden, Medford, Melrose, Milton, Newton, Quincy, Revere, Somerville, Waltham and Woburn, so that at the meeting held July 10, owing to the proximity of these cities and towns in the Metropolitan district their civil service business could be better handled directly from the main office at the State House, better than through local representatives. It is for this reason that the board of local examiners is to be abolished as soon as the examinations pending are completed.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ing him a ferocious, foolish or wise expression at the will of his owner.

Besides these there was the cane board with the German steins as an added inducement to try the rings, the hoop-la with big boxes of candy as souvenirs and the circle board with more fascinating gifts.

Two clowns in strange and fantastic garb roamed the grounds engaging in outlandish antics to the great amusement of beholders. The attendants at the "tonics" enclosure were rushed to the limit, and it is no exaggeration to say that these temperance thirst quenchers were consumed by the barrel.

The fun was uproarious around the Virgina Kid or African dodger and he sustained many a hard rap on the "coco." A popular place for the tots was the nursery where young children were well cared for by Miss Anna Dwyer the trained nurse and a corps of willing assistants.

One of the most popular places was the ice cream pavilion where ices of various kinds were sold in enormous quantities.

More prosaic but very necessary was the administration tent where the official business incident to the day was transacted and where were located the offices of the secretary and treasurer. At the Hop and Sing booth, beautiful baskets were presented to holders of lucky numbers on the wheel while near by was a novelty tent where were offered for sale, ticklers, balloons, whips, pompons and the grotesque image "Quacky-Wack," another European novelty.

On the band stand, Milo Burke's band of Brockton assisted by a troupe of megaphone vocalists furnished music of sufficient variety to please all tastes. The popular songs of the vocalists, especially "Snooki-ookums" and "My Harem" caught the crowd and many encores were in order.

The work of the band was a musical treat, the artistic rendering and beautiful harmonies thrilling all who listened. Worthy of especial mention were the cornet solos played by the leader Mr. Burke and also the beautiful duets for cornet and baritone horn.

There was a long list of athletic events run off near the bleachers and this part of the program attracted a throng of interested on-lookers. The events and the winners names are as follows:

Fifty yard dash for boys between 10 and 15 years old: John Howland, first, Lawrence Canfield, second.

Fifty yard dash for boys between 5 and ten years of age: Howard Dunkerly first, William Hollis second.

50 yard dash for girls between 10 and 15 years: Hazel Hull 1st, Gladys Dacey second.

50 yard dash for girls between 5 and 10 years: Mary Branley, Mary Brennan.

Potato race 1st heat—Daniel Reardon. 2nd heat—Howard Dunkerley. Final heat won by Howard Dunkerley.

Egg race for girls: Marion Collins first, Helen Messerli second.

Sack race for boys: 1st heat, Clifton Harlow, 2nd heat, Charles Mullen, final heat Clifton Harlow.

Pipe race: Daniel O'Connell, F. Sullivan.

Three legged race for boys: David Kilander and mate, first; Frank Sanderson and mate second.

Standing broad jump: Frank O'Rourke first, Harold Wood second.

Running broad jump: Harold Wood first, George Carver second.

Hop, step and jump: Harold Wood first, George Carver second.

100 yards dash: Harold Wood first, Frank O'Rourke second, Time, 11 1-5 seconds.

The officials for these events were:
Chief Judge—Urban Landrey.
Starter—John Frazier.
Judge at finsh—Alfred DeCoste.
Scorer—Albert F. Hollis.

As the day wore on, the crowd increased tremendously and at eight o'clock there was a record attendance the common being literally packed and jammed with humanity.

At 9.30 o'clock on the band stand, the building lot was awarded, the holder of the winning ticket being Miss Mary Maloney of East Braintree with number 2114. The drawing was done by the judges, Ralph L. Wiggin Daniel Potter and John Hazelum. The lot is No. 38, situated at Sunset Point, Nantasket, and contains 6750 square feet.

The last feature of the day was the grand display of fireworks at 10 o'clock. They were much more elaborate than last year with some wonderfully beautiful effects. One ambitious pin wheel became detached from its standard and ran amuck like a flaming meteor into the crowd but no one was hurt. The display and the day's festivities ended with a mammoth set piece spelling "Good Night" in letters of fire while a huge bomb shrieked aloft and with a thunderous explosion showered many colored stars, a fitting climax to the great carnival day of 1913.

The ice wagon driver who was arrested Saturday night for the larceny of $2.22 and $1.26 from William Macè at Houghs Neck was discharged in court this morning, having been found not guilty.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT.

Two automobiles collided at Main and Sumner streets Sunday evening and the occupants of both machines were thrown to the street. Mrs. B. F. Cushman, who was riding with her husband, B. F. Cushman of Brighton, sustained severe injuries about the limbs. Three children and a brother of Mr. Cushman ascaped injury. The other machine was operated by Geo. Hatch of Greenwood, and had Mrs. Hatch and four children as passengers None of the occupants of this car were injured. Mr. and Mrs. Cushman were immediately taken to their home in Brookline.

PROMPTLY ARRESTED

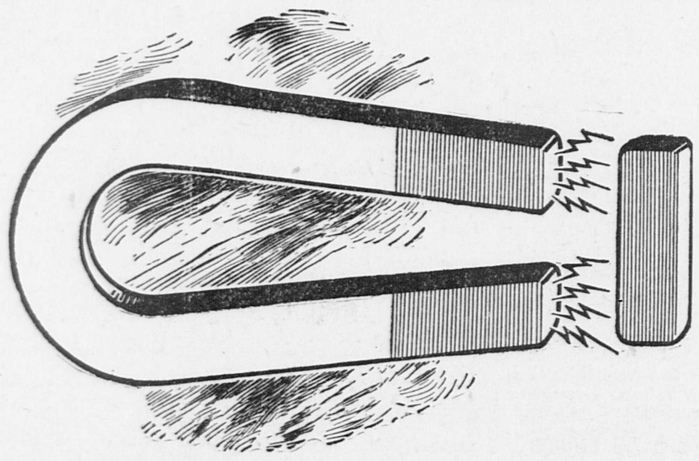

Runaway Boys Steal Bicycle at Public Library

Dr. Francis Abele, Jr., turned police officer for a few minutes this morning during which time he arrested two runaway boys who had stolen a boys bicycle from near the Thomas Crane public library. Dr. Abele saw the boys take the wheel and make off with it toward Boston. He immediately got into his automobile and gave chase overtaking them on Newport avenue. He took them to the police station where it was learned that they had run away from home ten days ago and had been knocking about the country since then, getting food where they could, and helping themselves to what came handy, passing the nights in any shelter they might find on their travels.

One of the boys gave his name as James Bannon, aged 12 years, of Taunton, and the other as Leo Nagle, aged 10 years, of Worcester. The police of these cities have been notified to get in touch with the parents of the boys who will be held until their parents are heard from.

This noon it was learned that the boys did not run away from their own homes but from an institution in Boston where they had been sent by their parents who could not control them. The home in Boston has been notified by the police.

President Wilson Still In Dark as to Mexico

STORIES FAIL TO AGREE

Confidential Reports of Trusted Friends Are at Variance With Official Accounts Furnished by Ambassador Wilson—Mrs. Madero Declares Husband Was Murdered

Washington, July 21.—Continued nation worries the Wilson administration, and it is felt that an actual crisis of a serious nature cannot longer be delayed.

The lack of authentic information, or rather the contradictory reports received from American officials, including the ambassador and the long list of consuls throughout the country, has left President Wilson and his advisers in the dark as to the actual condition of affairs in the much disturbed republic.

Furthermore, hints from Europe that the United States must intervene to put an end to the virtual anarchy which persists under the Huerta rule are embarrassing the president, and his belief that the Huerta government, founded on intrigue and assassination, is weak, has caused him to withhold recognition.

William B. Hale, biographer and trusted friend of President Wilson, has sent confidential reports of the Mexican situation to Washington. Persons who have talked with Hale assert that these reports are at wide variance with the official accounts of conditions furnished by Ambassador Wilson, and hint that Hale's disclosures are of most startling description.

While it is not denied that the ambassador has left the Washington administration in perplexity as to the situation, no official criticism of him has as yet been made.

Secretary Bryan has denied that Ambassador Wilson's conduct was under investigation. It is a fact, however, that Wilson's prompt acceptance of the Huerta account of Madero's death has not been endorsed at Washington.

The president's refusal to grant recognition to the Huerta government is taken as sufficient proof that he did not accept the official story of Madero's death.

Mrs. Francisco I. Madero, widow of the late president of Mexico, who is in this city, declares her husband was slain in his bed while he slept, instead of while trying to escape. She denies the statement that he was being transferred to the penitentiary and killed on the way. The actual assassin, she charges, was Colonel Cardenas, then a captain, and she asserts that this man has since exhibited a knife as the weapon with which he stabbed Madero.

"Mexico," said Mrs. Madero, "has come to a sad state when there is even discussion of such a man as Huerta for a ruler. Who accepts General Huerta accepts his acts."

Emphatic denial has been made by Jose Y. Limantour, formerly minister of finance in Mexico, who is now in France, of the report that he has been using his influence with European diplomatists in the hope of hastening American recognition of the Huerta government.

"I am not in politics," says Limantour.

BULGARIA CLIMBS DOWN

Heeds Advice to Cede Important Territory to Roumania

London, July 21.—The advent of a new Bulgarian cabinet, comprising a coalition of the Liberal groups, seems to have brought a prospect that peace negotiations will be soon entered into.

After vain attempts to negotiate separately with Roumania, the Bulgarian government accepted the advice of Austria and Russia and offered Roumania an important territorial concession.

Bulgaria also sent delegates to meet the Servian and Greek, and presumably Roumanian representatives, at Nish to negotiate an armistice and peace. It is confirmed from Athens that Servia, Greece and Montenegro are ready to participate in these negotiations.

SHOOTING AT WEDDING

One Guest Sends Bullet Through the Body of Another

Lawrence, Mass., July 21.—Two wedding guests at the marriage ceremony of Rasso Fasckel at 22 Middle street entered into an argument which resulted in a tragedy. As a consequence Francisco Bamonbette is dying and Francisco Santuccio is in jail.

According to the story told by both men Santuccio had been sitting on the stairway and grew angry at Bamonbette's frequent requests that he move, as he wished to ascend. Finally the two agreed to settle their dispute in the yard. The instant they had reached the yard, it is alleged, Santuccio drew a revolver and shot a bullet through Bamonbette's body.

NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE.

To meet in conference for the mutual interchange of plans and methods, and for the comparison of different viewpoints, broadens the symathies and stimulates to greater effort.

It is for this reason, doubtless, that in all the history of the church,as well as in the Jewish economy, councils, convocations and feasts have from time to time been held, bringing together priests or ministers and laymen for deliberation concerning the things of the Kingdom of God. And where the emphasis is laid upon the essentials in which the Evangelical church is united, the results must always be quickening. It is in the expectation that this spirit will characterize the thirty-first general conference of Chrisitian workers that an invitation to God's people to gather at Northfield, August 1-17.

Some of the speakers will be Rev. G. Campbell Morgan, Mr. Dan Crawford, Rev. John Daniel Jones, Dr. Len G. Broughton, Rev. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Rev.e George RR. Stuart, Rev. Charles Inglis, Rev. Robert F. Y. Pierce, Mr. Melvin Trotter, Rev. A. T. Robertson, D. D., Rev. John A. Hutton, M. A., and Rev. J. Stuart Holden.

—The liquor men of Michigan are fighting woman suffrage with a vengeance. Why not? While we are not particularly favorable to woman suffrage in all that it might possibly bring in its train, we do believe that with woman suffrage the liquor dealers of this land may well quake in their shoes.—Foxboro Reporter.

IS QUINCY SATISFIED?

The Evidence Is Convincing. The Testimony Open to Investigation.

Before a statement can be accepted here, it must be supported by local testimony—by the evidence of someone residing in Quincy. Statements from unknown people in remote places may be true, but we cannot prove them. Here is a statement by a Quincy resident:

C. P. Russell, 37 Washington Street, Quincy, Mass., says: "My kidneys were weak and acted irregularly. I also suffered from pains in my back. I used Doan's Kidney Pills, and the first box relieved me. I intend to continue taking this medicine."

"When Your Back is Lame—Remember the Name." Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—ask distinctly for Doan's Kidney Pills, the same that Mr. Russell had—the remedy backed by home testimony. 50c all stores. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

SURPRISE FOR COLONIALS

Defeated by the Roger Wolcotts 10 to 9

The Roger Wolcotts beat the Colonials at the Ward Four playground Saturday afternoon, 10 to 9.

Four runs in the eighth innings, contributed by well placed hits and a few poor plays gave the visitors the advantage. The Colonials, try as they might, could only slip one across in the last inning, when two would have tied the score.

Hebert, whose work last year was so effective that most of the teams barred him from the amateur ranks, was in the box for the Colonials. Possessing his usual amount of speed he found it difficult to control the sphere and passed seven men. Shea, the regular first base man succeeded him and placed three on first through lack of control. Sullivan the visiting pitcher passed only two men and fanned five against four apiece for Hebert and Shea.

The loss was a decided surprise to the Colonials and their rooters who figured that a win from the Roger Wolcotts was surely forthcoming.

VICTORY IN THE EIGHT

Atlantic A. A. Defeat Walnut A. A. 9 to 6

In a game that consisted of fast plays, close decisions and strong smashes to the infield, the Atlantic A. A., an amteur team from the Sixth Ward, defeated the Walnut A. A. their neighbors, Saturday afternoon, 9 to 6.

The games was the second of a series of three for the honors of the ward and gives both teams one apiece. It was the first defeat administered to the Walnut A. C.

Pete Creedon, who was obliged to quit the game when the high school season was on because of a broken thumb, was in the winners lineup, and with Pitts and Chassion played well for Atlantic. Jack Duffy, on the mound for the Sixers, did good work throughout the game. Price, Duggan and Luke Finney were the fastest of the losers in Saturdays game.

An argument as to the proper interpretation of rules by umpires affected the otherwise fast played game. Keliher, former Walnut player came in for his share of criticism. Young the second official, was not left outside by critical fans. The score by innings:

Atlantic	0	1	0	0	0	0	2	6	0	—9
Walnut	2	0	0	1	1	0	0	2	0	—6

Batteries—Duffy and O'Connell; Leary and Price.

CLARA AND CINDERELLA

Winners in the Race of Quincy Yacht Club

Lack of a good sailing breeze prevented the race af the Quincy Yacht club Saturday afternoon from being the success that it should have been considering the yachts ready to participate. The race was scheduled to start at 2.30 and at that hour there was a very light breeze. Thinking that the breeze would freshen the start was delayed for half an hour. Instead of freshening however the wind seemed to diminish and although classes C and F were able to finish within the time limit, class C was uot of it, the Gleamer which has won every race in that class thus far this season, was robbed of another victory.

In class C the Clara of ex-Commodore H. W.W. Robbins was the winner and the Cinderella of Debes Bros. in class F. The corrected time was:

ORIENTS WIN FROM RED MEN

Scored Four Runs in the First Inning

The Orients A. A. last year's amateur champions of the city, defeated their intense rivals, the Red Men of South Quincy, at Ward Three Saturday afternoon in a fast game of base ball, 6 to 3.

The Red Men, one of this season's aggregations have been having things their own way in base ball circles on certain days, but four juicy runs in the first innings, and one in the sixth and seventh gave the Orients the lead. In the sixth inning the Red Men scored three runs in good base ball style.

"Bull Moose" Brown who is making baseball history for himself with the team and incidently furnishing spectacular performances since he has appeared in the lineup came across Saturday with more of his fine work. S. Carlson drove a long fly to deep centre in the fourth and it appeared to be sailing for the brooks when Brown who had started with the ball just reached it on the edge of the wall for the prettiest catch of the game. Recovering himself he snapped the ball to third and killed a man trying to reach that base. "Bobby" Mitchell hit a line drive to left field in the fifth innings which Summers took with one hand, robbing Mitchell of a hit when it meant a good deal.

Bradley pitched his usual good ball, blanking seven men, while his friend, J. Kenn, struck out three. Both men passed one apiece, and each allowed eight hits. The summary:

FOSS' PLAN TO END STRIKE REJECTED

Wanted Men to First Return to Work at Old Wages

Boston, July 21.—The strikers in the two shops at Hyde Park controlled by Governor Foss, the Becker Milling Machine company and the B. F. Sturtevant Blower Works, after hearing the report made by Louis F. Post, acting secretary of labor, from Washington, who endeavored to bring about a settlement, voted down the proposition offered by Foss.

The suggestion made by the governor was to the effect that the strikers return to work in the two shops for the same wage they were receiving at the factories when the strike began, and that all individual grievances to be individually adjusted by the managers at the Sturtevant and the Becker factories after they returned to work, and not before.

He said in part:

"Years ago, when the Jewish population was almost half as much as now, they were represented in the city hall and the state house, while now we haven't a single representative in the city hall, either elected or appointed; same in the state house."

EATON TRIAL SET FOR OCT. 13

Date Agreed Upon at Conference With Judge

INQUEST NOT YET CLOSED

Search For Evidence on Killing of Admiral Is Still In Progress—Authorities Have Not Traced Purchase of Deadly Drug Found In Stomach—Widow Accused of Murder

Greenfield, Mass., July 21.—After a conference with counsel for both sides, Chief Justice Aiken of the superior court ordered that the trial of Mrs. Jennie M. Eaton, for the murder of her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, be called at Plymouth on Oct. 13.

Mrs. Eaton was arrested twelve days after the admiral died from poisoning at their home in Assinippi on March 8. With the exception of two brief appearances in court, she has since been a prisoner in jail at Plymouth.

As Aiken was not expected at the superior court in Boston for some weeks, District Attorney Barker, for the government, and William A. Morse, chief counsel for Mrs. Eaton, met him by special appointment at the justice's home here. The assignment of the presiding judge or judges at the trial will be made later. It rests with the chief justice to fix the time and place, and to select the associate judges for superior court trials.

Half a century ago all murder trials were held in the supreme court before at least two, and sometimes three, judges. Since then the law gradually has been modified and capital cases transferred to the superior court, at first before three judges and then before two. At the present time one judge is deemed sufficient to conduct murder cases where the circumstances surrounding the crime do not present many difficult points of law.

The trial of Mrs. Eaton will be held in the courthouse, a little over a mile from the jail. She is accused of having placed poison in coffee and other food prepared for the admiral. A postmortem examination of the stomach revealed the presence of a deadly drug, but so far as known the authorities have never been able to trace the purchase of the poison.

The inquest, begun some time before the arrest of the widow, has never been closed. Much testimony regarding the domestic affairs of the Eatons and the woman's two daughters by an earlier marriage—Mrs. June Keyes and Dorothy Eaton—was given, and neighbors testified to quarrels between the admiral and his wife. It is understood the inquest may be resumed at any time and that the search for evidence still continues.

The question of Mrs. Eaton's sanity has been raised by her friends, and District Attorney Barker once declared he would have this point determined by a commission. No action, however, has been taken in this regard.

ASKS FOR RECALL PAPERS

Curtis After Scalps of Mayor of Salem and Other Officials

Salem, Mass., July 21.—Herman F. Curtis, a supporter of former Mayor Howard, has applied to the city clerk for papers for the recall of three of the officials of the city of Salem. The men mentioned in Curtis' appeal are Mayor Hurley, Charles M. Danforth, director of finance, and Patrick J. Kelly, director of public works.

The names of William Colbert, director of public health, and of Wallace F. Gifford, director of public property, were not included in the wholesale petition for recall because their terms of office expire automatically next January.

HOPE FOR RHEUMATICS

Belief That Microbe Which Causes Suffering Has Been Found

Paris, July 21.—An interesting communication has been made to the French biological society concerning the discovery of a scintillating microbe not belonging to the vegetable kingdom, which some think is the cause of rheumatism.

This microbe, which is visible only under a very powerful microscope and is termed protozoaire, is invariably found in the blood and joints of persons suffering from rheumatism.

While nothing is given out concerning the discovery of these peculiar bacilli, it is believed that another notable medical triumph is near.

PAID NEGRO TO KILL WIFE

Alabama Man Who Then Headed Lynchers Convicted of Murder

Andalusia, Ala., July 21.—Sam Spicer, Jr., was found guilty of murdering his wife and his punishment was fixed at life imprisonment.

Spicer, who is 30 years old, was charged with having hired Joe Green, his negro chauffeur, to kill Mrs. Spicer, and it was testified that Spicer, a few hours later, led the mob which lynched Green.

Washington, July 21.—The senate confirmed the nominations of Judge W. L. Chalmers to be commissioner of mediation and conciliation and G. W. Hanger to be assistant commissioner under the new Newlands act in the dispute between the eastern railroads and their trainmen.

They will begin at once an effort to adjust the differences between the contending parties.

LIPTON WILL RACE FOR CUP NEXT YEAR

Acceptance Is Cabled by Royal Ulster Yacht Club

New York, July 21.—A series of races for the America's cup will be sailed in eastern waters during September, 1914. This was formally announced by the cup committee of the New York Yacht club.

The Royal Ulster Yacht club of Belfast, acting for Sir Thomas Lipton, cabled the New York Yacht club committee that the conditions prescribed by the New York Yacht club had been accepted and signed and were on the way to America.

On the receipt of the cablegram the club officials announced that the tentative dates for the races had been selected as follows: Sept. 10, 12 and 15, and to continue on succeeding Thursdays, Saturdays and Tuesdays until three out of five races had been won by one of the contesting yachts.

WON'T BLOCK TARIFF BILL

But Republicans Intend to Attack It In Vigorous Manner

Washington, July 21.—Republican senators have served notice upon their Democratic opponents that there is to be no unnecessary delay of the Underwood-Simmons tariff revision bill.

While the sharp tongue of Republican criticism and dire prediction is to be loosed throughout the tariff debate, the Republicans do not plan to adopt any general filibustering tactics or to attempt to hold up final action on the tariff revision.

This policy has been partially outlined in the opening speech of the Republican opponents of the administration bill, in colloquies on the floor of the senate, and in private conferences among senators.

TO SAVE HER HONOR

Woman Who Killed Boarder With an Axe Is Freed by Jury

Boston, July 21.—Mrs. Genoeffa Calabrese, a 22-year-old Italian, was found not guilty by a jury in the superior criminal court on the indictment charging her with manslaughter. She was charged with the killing of Guiseppe di Flore, a boarder in her home, with an axe.

She declared she had killed di Flore to save her honor. The trial occupied the whole of two days. The defendant took the stand and told how di Flore had attempted to attack her in her home and how she had struck him with the axe in desperation.

JIGGS DONAHUE DEAD

Once Famous White Sox First Baseman Dies of Paresis

Columbus, O., July 21.—"Jiggs" Donahue, star first basemen for the Chicago White Sox in 1906, when they defeated the Chicago Cubs in the world's series, died at the Columbus state hospital. The direct cause of his death was paresis.

A few years ago Donahue retired from the diamond and ran bowling alleys in Chicago. He was sent to the state hospital in this city a year ago. Domestic trouble is said to have undermined his health.

LEAF FIFTH.

Only an Old Song.

SLEEP is one of the most delightful and undervalued amusements known to the human race. I have never had enough yet, and every second of time that I'm not busy with something interesting I curl up on the bed and go dream hunting—only I sleep too hard to do much catching. But this torture book found that out on me and stopped it the very first thing on page three. The command is to sleep as little as possible to keep the nerves in a good condition—"eight hours at the most and seven would be better." What earthly good would a seven hour nap do me? I want ten hours to sleep and twelve if I get a good tired start. To see me stagger out of my perfectly nice bed at 6 o'clock every morning now would wring the sternest heart with compassion and admiration at my faithfulness—to whom?

Yes, it was the day after poor Mr. Carter's funeral that Aunt Adeline moved up here into my house and settled herself in the big south room across the hall from mine. Her furniture weighs a ton each piece, and Aunt Adeline is not light herself in disposition. The next morning when I went in to breakfast she sat in the "vacant chair" in a way that made me see that she was obviously trying to fill the vacancy. I am sorry she worried herself about that. Anyway, it made me take a resolve. After breakfast I went into the kitchen to speak to Judy.

"Judy," I said, looking past her head, "my health is not very good, and you can bring my breakfast to me in bed after this." Poor Mr. Carter always wanted breakfast on the stroke of 7 and me at the same time, though he rarely got me. Judy has two dead husbands and she likes a ginger colored barber down town. Also her mother is our washerwoman and influenced by Aunt Adeline. Judy understands everything I say to her. After I had closed the door I heard a laugh that sounded like a war whoop, and I smiled to myself. But that was before my martyrdom to this book had begun. I get up now!

But the day after I came from the city I lay in bed just as long as I wanted to and ignored the thought of the exercises and deep breathing and the icy, unsympathetic tub. I couldn't even take very much interest in the lonely egg on the lonely slice of dry toast. I was thinking about things.

Hillsboro is a very peculiar little speck on the universe; even more peculiar than being like a hen. It is one of the oldest towns in Tennessee, and the moss on it is so thick that it can't be scratched off except in spots. But it has a lot of race horse and distillery money in it, and when it gets poked up by anything unusual it takes a gulp of its own alcoholic atmosphere and runs away on its own track at a 2:05 gait, shedding moss as it goes. It hasn't had a real joy race for a long time, and I felt that it needed it. I rolled over and laughed into my pillow.

The subject of the conduct of widows is a serious one. Of all the things old tradition is most set about it is that, and what was decided to be the proper thing a million years ago this town still dictates shall be done and spends a good deal of its time seeing its directions carried out. For a year after the funeral they forget about the poor bereaved, and when they do remember her they speak to and of her in the same tones of voice they used at the obsequies. Then sooner or later some neighbor is sure to see some man walk home from church with her or hear some old bachelor's voice on her front porch. Mr. Cain took Mrs. Caruther's little Jessie up in his buggy and helped her out at her mother's gate just before last Christmas, and if the poor widow hadn't acted quick the town would have noticed them to death before he proposed to her. They were married the day after New Year's, and she lost lots of good friends because she didn't give them more time to talk about it.

I don't intend to run any risk of losing my friends that way, and I want them to have all the good time they can get out of it. I'm going to serve out mint juleps of excitement until the dear old place is running as it did when it was a two-year-old. Why get mad when people are interested in you? It's a compliment, after all, and just gives them more to think about. I remembered the two trunks across the hall and hugged my knees up under my chin with pleasure at the thought of the town talk they contained.

Then just as I had got the first plan well going and was deciding whether to wear the mauve meteor or the white chiffon with the rosebud embroidery as a first julep for my friends a sweetness came in through my window that took my breath away, and I lay still with my hand over my heart and listened. It was Billy singing right under my window, and I've never heard him do it before in all his five years. It was the dearest old fashioned tune ever written, and Billy sang the words as distinctly as if he had been a boy chorister doing a difficult recitative.

"Say, Molly, look at the snake I brunged you!"

My heart beat so it shook the lace on my breast like a breeze from heaven as he took the high note and then let it go on the last few words:

"If you love me, Molly, darling,
Let your answer be a kiss!"

A confused recollection of having heard the words and tune sung by my mother when I was at the rocking age myself brought the tears to my eyes as I flew to the window and parted the curtains. If you heard a little boy angel singing at your casement wouldn't you expect a cherubim face upturned with heaven lights all over it? Billy's face was upturned as he heard me draw the shade, but it was streaked like a wild Indian's with decorations of brown mud, and he held a long slimy fishworm on the end of a stick while he wiped his other grimy hand down the front of his linen blouse.

"Say, Molly, look at the snake I brunged you!" he exclaimed as he came close under the sill, which is not high from the ground. "If you put your face down to the mud and sing something to 'em they'll come outen they holes. A doodle bug comed, too, but I couldn't ketch 'em both. Lift me up, and I can put him in the water glass on your table." He held up one muddy paddle to me, and promptly I lifted him up into my arms. From the embrace in which he and the worm and I indulged my face and dimity came out much the worse.

"That was a lovely song you sang about 'Molly, darling,' Billy," I said. "Where did you hear it?"

"That's a good bug song, Molly, and I bet I can git a lizard with it, too, if I sing it right low." He began to squirm out of my arms toward the table and the glass.

"Who taught it to you, sugar sweet?" I persisted as I poured water in on the squirming worm under his direction.

"Nobody taught it to me. Doc sings it to me when Tilly, nurse nor you ain't there to put me to bed. He don't know no good songs like 'Roll, Jordan, Roll,' or 'Hot Times' or 'Twinkle.' I go to sleep quick 'cause he makes me feel tired with his slow tune what's only good for bugs. Git a hairpin for me to poke him with, Molly, quick!"

I found the hairpin, and I don't know why my hand trembled as I handed it to Billy. As soon as he got it he climbed out the window, glass, bug and all, and I saw him and the red setter go down the garden walk together in pursuit of the desired lizard, I suppose. I closed the blinds and drew the curtains again and flung myself on my pillow. Something warm and sweet seemed to be sweeping over me in great waves, and I felt young and close up to some sort of big world good. It was delicious, and I don't know how long I would have stayed there just feeling it if Judy hadn't brought in my letter.

He had written from London, and it was many pages of wonderful things all flavored with me. He told me about Miss Chester and what good friends they were and how much he hoped she would be in Hillsboro when he got here. He said that a great many of her dainty ways reminded him of his "own slip of a girl," especially the turn of her head like a "flower on its stem." At that I got right out of bed like a jack jumping out of a box and looked at myself in the mirror.

There is one exercise here on page twenty that I hate worst of all. You screw up your face tight until you look like a Christmas mask to get your neck muscles taut and then wobble your head around like a newborn baby until it swims. I did that one twenty extra times and all the others in proportion to make up for those two hours in bed. Hereafter I'll get up at the time directed on page three or maybe earlier. It frightens me to think that I've got only a few weeks more to turn from a cabbage rose into a lily. I won't let myself even think "luscious peach" and "string bean." If I do I get warm and happy all over and let up on myself. I try when I get hungry to think of myself in that blue muslin dress.

I haven't been really willing before to write down in this torture volume that I took that garment to the city with me and what Mme. Rene did to it—made it over into the loveliest thing I ever saw, only I wouldn't let her alter the size one single inch. I'm honorable as all women are, at peculiar times. I think she understood, but she seemed not to and worked a miracle on it with ribbon and lace. I've put it away on the top shelf of a closet, for it is torment to look at it.

You can just take any old recipe for a party and mix up a debut for a girl, but it takes more time to concoct one for a widow, especially if it is for yourself. I spent all the rest of the day doing almost nothing and thinking until I felt lightheaded. Finally I had just about given up any idea of a blaze and had decided to leak out in general society as quietly as my clothes would let me when a real conflagration was lighted inside me.

If Tom Pollard wasn't my own first cousin I would have loved him desperately even if I am a week older than he. He was about the only oasis in my marriage mirage, though I don't think anybody would think of calling him at all green. He never stopped coming to see me occasionally, and Mr. Carter liked him. He was the first man to notice the white ruche I sewed in the neck of my old black taffeta four or five months ago, and he let me see that he noticed it out of the corner of his eyes even right there in church under Aunt Adeline's very elbow. He makes love unconsciously, and he flirts with his own mother. As soon as I've made this widowhood hurdle—well, I'm going to spend a lot of time buying tobacco with him in his runabout, which sounds as if it was named for himself.

This Is Your Town And It Is What You Make It

By HOLLAND.

WHAT makes a town? People and business. You are one of the people. What you buy helps make the business. The more you buy the better the business; the more business the better the town.

You want the town to grow and improve, don't you? Then you should help it to grow by increasing its business as much as you can. Every time you send elsewhere for goods you give your town a blow. Enough of these blows will ultimately kill the town.

The mail order houses do nothing for your town except try to kill it. Are you helping them? You are if you send your money to them for goods that you could buy at home. If you are more interested in the growth of Chicago or New York than you are in the prosperity of your own town, your own neighbors, then continue to send to mail order houses for goods. If you want your own town to thrive

CHAUFFEUR AN EASY MARK

Tells Fairy Tale After Burglar Scare on Quincy Avenue

The Weymouth Times is responsible for the following fairy tale:

Thursday morning, as officer Walsh of the Weymouth force, and Dugan of Braintree met at the little bridge over smelt-brook which makes the dividing line between the two towns, they heard the footfalls of a man running over on Quincy avenue and crossing the toll-bridge. Then came a loud knocking as on a door. The officers started down to investigate, and as they were passing the Gas Co.'s office, a man ran out and said, "I was just telephoning you fellows. There are burglars up at the house." It was the gardener from T. A. Watson's estate.

The maids were alarmed by the noise of a motor-car rushing up to the door, and had aroused the man, who lives in a separate house, by their screams for help. The officers found a peaceable enough chauffeur standing at the front door of the Watson house, wondering what the row was about. All he wanted was his $30.

His story went something like this: "A young fellow engaged the car for tonight last Sunday and I met him and drove him to Milton. We drove up to a nice looking house, and he said he had friends living there, and for me to wait while he went in and saw them. He went around the side way and was gone about half an hour came out and was driven across Boston to Sagus, where he made another visit (?) and then to supper at Lynn; back through Boston, Milton to Quincy.

When at Newcomb square, the passenger inquired the amount of his bill and was told that he had had $30 worth. "I live about a mile from here in a big yellow house that sets in from the street. The folks are rich, and we'll stop here and I'll get you the thirty," was his answer.

When the car reached the lower driveway of the Watson place the driver was directed to turn in and follow the path up to the house. When he reached the front door and stopped the machine, his passenger had disappeared. Somewhere between the gate and the house, the passenger had opened the door of the car and stepped out into the shrubbery.

The officers were satisfied with the story, and after an ineffectual search for the "lost one," allowed the chauffeur to depart in his car. If the driver's yarn was right, he believes he had a narrow escape from being held up for his roll of about $375, as a piece of iron pipe, about 2 feet long, nicely wrapped up in paper, was found on the rear seat.

ADAMS SHORE VICTORY.

The Adams Shore team beat the boys from Post Island on the Adams Shore playground Saturday afternoon by the overwhelming score of 20 to 12. Hyde the pitcher for the winners seemed to have the losers at his mercy, although good work prevented the visitors from breaking up the game. Earl Bates, the losing pitcher worked his best points but poor support and pretty infield hitting was too much for his team mates. Umpire Harry Johnson came in for his share of applause.

AUTOIST HELD FOR TRIAL

Charged with Operating While Under Influence of Liquor

There came near being a serious automobile accident just across the Fore River bridge in North Weymouth, Sunday night, when an automobile owned and being run by William Cobis of Brockton bumped into a two-horse vegetable wagon of Jermoe Breen of Hingham. It is alleged that not only was Cobis intoxicated, but that John Polisky who was in the car with him was also under the influence of liquor. Cobis' wife was also in the car. The vegetable wagon was badly smashed and Mr. Breen thrown off and badly bruised. His horses were also cut and bruised. Officer Nash of the Weymouth police placed both Cobis and Polisky under arrest, the former on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor and the latter for drunkenness. They were arraigned in the Quincy court when Cobis was held in $500 until Thursday. Polisky was also held in $100 until the same day.

WOLLASTON AND WEST QUINCY

Unite in Services at Hall Place M. E. Church

Rev. G. M. Bailey of Wollaston preached a very able sermon at the Hall Place M. E. church, Sunday morning. Mr. Bailey took for his text: "Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth."

This was the first service held under the new vacation system and Mr. Bailey said, that while he did not know on just what intimate terms the two churches were, he saw no reason why it could not work out perfectly, and such a bond of unity and sympathy be formed as to make the plan practical throughout the years to come for the two churches. The service was a success, closing promptly on time.

Sunday School was held at the close of the morning service. No further services for the day were held.

The annual Sunday school picnic will be held Wednesday, July 23, at Highland park. Special cars will leave the West Quincy depot at 9 A. M. A special program of sports has been arranged and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

The regular monthly business meeting of the Epworth League which should have occurred Monday evening July 21, has been postponed.

Rev. G. W. Bailey of Wollaston will occupy the pulpit again next Sunday.

MASQUERADE PARTY AT ADAMS SHORE

A masquerade, given at the home of Mrs .Terrio, on Shelton road, Adams shore, Saturday evening was one of the most delightful parties of the season. Nearly 50 of the summer colony appeared in costume and enjoyed dancing until nearly midnight.

The affair opened with a march of "the horribles." The costumes were representative of many countries, typical of local characters and evoked hearty laughter from the large gallery who were not participants.

Dancing was enjoyed on the spacious veranda, music being furnished by Craft's orchestra of Boston. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

LIQUORS SEIZED AT TWO PLACES

A squad of police under Inspector Goodhue raided the premises of Antonio Traziora at 32 Elm place and of Joseph Pompio at 32 Union street Sunday afternoon, making seizures of liquor at both places. In the raiding party were Officers Duane, Cahill and Fallon. At the premises of Traziora they seized 100 bottles of beer which were cooling off in the ice chest and a quantity of empty beer bottles. At the premises of Pompio they found a dozen bottle of beer in the ice chest and fully 100 empty bottles.

FATALLY SHOT AS SHE SLEEPS

Woman Who Was to Leave Home Killed by Husband

HE THEN SHOOTS HIMSELF

Three-Year-Old Daughter Asleep Between Them When Discovered by Two Other Children—Woman Had Accepted Position In Boston Against Wishes of Her Husband

Revere, Mass., July 21.—Fred Salisbury, 40 years old, shot his wife, Catherine P. Salisbury, 29 years old, and then turned the weapon on himself Sunday morning in their home, 483 Beach street. Mrs. Salisbury died two hours later. Salisbury cannot live.

The shooting was the result of a three days' quarrel between man and wife, which followed Mrs. Salisbury's announcement that she was going to leave home and shift for herself. She had but recently come out of a hospital after a serious operation.

Salisbury took a 32-calibre revolver and, reaching over his sleeping 3-year-old daughter, Alberta, fired a single shot at his wife, who was asleep. The bullet entered her right temple. Then he fired a bullet just above his own heart.

Annie, the 9-year-old daughter of Mrs. Salisbury by her former marriage, and their 6-year-old daughter, Ruth, rushed into the room and found their parents unconscious under the bedclothes.

The children had been asleep in the adjoining bedroom and were awakened by what they first thought was thunder.

Henry Berkowitch, who lives next door, heard the two shots and went into the Salisbury house. He found the two older children crying at the foot of the bed, while Alberta, the baby, was still fast asleep between her dying parents.

The Revere police were notified and took the man and wife together in the police ambulance to the Massachusetts general hospital. Mrs. Salisbury died in the arms of the nurses who, only a few months before, had cared for her through an operation. She died without recovering consciousness.

Salisbury had shot himself just above the heart. The bullet had hit against a rib and diverting lodged just above the heart. He recovered consciousness about 4 o'clock, but internal hemorrhages developed and he lapsed into unconsciousness.

A small diary containing only a few lines showed the state of his mind. In it was written: "What is a man to do who has a wife like mine? She doesn't know how to use money and she knows how many creditors we have. Two weeks ago she got a job in Boston that keeps her out late at night. Ever since she got that job she has been a changed woman."

The job referred to is the position of spare telephone girl at the switchboard of the Hotel Oxford in Boston, which Mrs. Salisbury took two weeks ago. Both she and Salisbury have been employed at a restaurant on the Revere Beach boulevard. He was engaged as a general all-around man and she worked during the afternoon rush as a waitress.

Last Friday night, according to neighbors, Salisbury and his wife had a quarrel over her acceptance of the position in Boston. He asked her to stop working there, but she refused. She said she was tired of living with him and intended to leave him Sunday morning and go to Boston to live, taking her daughter Annie with her. That this was more than an idle threat is evidenced by the statement of friends whom she had asked as to the advisability of taking the girl with her.

All day Saturday the two were continually quarrelling, according to neighbors, and Saturday night Mrs. Salisbury even went so far as to destroy all of the pictures which her husband had of her.

Salisbury was at one time employed as a carpet salesman in a Boston department store and had a good income. Of late he had been working at various lines, but has not been prosperous. The only money found in the home after the shooting was 17 cents, and it is said that the couple was heavily in debt.

Mrs. Salisbury had been married before, her first husband being Howard Ames. According to Ames, who has recently married, he and his wife could not get along and so they separated. Later they were divorced. Then the woman married Salisbury.

WALSH ENTERS THE RACE

Formally Announces Candidacy For Governor of Bay State

Boston, July 21.—Lieutenant Governor Walsh has made the long awaited announcement of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for governor. His formal statement is marked by the absence of any reference to Governor Foss.

Discussion of issues on which he proposes to make his campaign are postponed until after nomination papers have been filed. By this means the necessity of indorsing or disapproving the Foss administration is obviated.

In general terms he pledges himself to the service of the party, saying that he owes the members not only "cautious consideration for its continued success," but also "more unflinching devotion to its service than I can ever hope to render."

WORLD HAS GROWN BETTER

Minister Says Church of Today Would Bar David and Solomon

Chicago, July 21.—"David and Solomon and some other patriarchs were excellent men as judged by the standards of their own time, but they would not be admitted to membership in the church of today," said Rev. John Thompson of Chicago at the Desplaines camp meeting, illustrating his contention that the world is growing better.

"There seems to be more crime and evil than ever," he continued, "but this is because, through the world-searching enterprise of the newspapers, we hear more about it."

The speaker said the rise of golf, baseball and other outdoor sports was a sign of improving moral standards.

"BROWNIE" MAKES SWIMMING RECORD

Richards Goes to Boston Light and Part Way Back

Boston, July 21.—All records for endurance were smashed in the most remarkable swimming exhibition since the death of Captain Webb, when Sam Richards, an L street "Brownie," not only swam from Charlestown bridge to Boston light in seven hours and thirty seconds, but, without leaving the water, swam back to within 100 yards of Bug light in one hour and thirty seconds. He was in the water eight hours and one minute.

The only other successful swimmer in a field of nine was Gus Wise, also of L street, who reached the light in eight hours, sixteen minutes and thirty seconds.

Webb's swim of the English channel is the only feat comparable with Richards' swim. Richards made the swim in faster time than any predecessor, and by coming part way back outdistanced them by a couple of miles. Richards swam twelve miles.

CONSCIENCE SMITES HIM

Express Clerk Who Stole $4000 Wants to See His Children

Philadelphia, July 21.—Declaring that his conscience would not permit him to eat or sleep, Alexander S. Woods of East St. Louis, Ills., surrendered to the police here and relinquished more than $4000 which he said he had stolen from the American Express company in that city on last Tuesday.

"I want to see my two little girls and have them know that even if I made a big mistake I have done all I could to make reparation," said Woods.

He explained that a man whose note he had indorsed failed to make good, and this had worried him so much that he left East St. Louis with his pockets filled with the express company's money.

Woods is being held to await instructions from the authorities of the Illinois city.

Within two hours of his arrival in Providence Cooley received the first injection of turtle vaccine. He came to Topsfield two months ago.

Returning Tourists from South America All Enthusiastic Over Reception

Col. Henry L. Kincaide Voices Their Sentiments

Col. Henry L. Kincaide returned early this morning from South America, and as might be expected, was at his place of business engrossed in business affairs. The editor of the Daily Ledger called to extend a welcome back to our "little city" and found Mr. Kincaide in good health and enthusiastic over the Boston Chamber of Commerce tour of three months. The entertainment, he said, could not have been more elaborate and lavish for royalty. For example, Brazil appropriated $30,000 for the entertainment of the Boston men. Every country visited was very cordial and hospitable, and they in turn are enthusiastic over Boston.

It was not definitely known said Col. Kincaide when the party would make a landing in New York for the reason that if the steamship arrived one minute after 6 o'clock it must remain out until the following morning. Monday morning it was seen that if all went well New York would be reached at night.

The Boston party did not expect the landing until this morning and for that reason there were but few of the Boston party on hand. Several however had got word through the newspaper offices and were on hand. For this reason the home coming reception planned was not fully carried out.

Speaking of the weather Col. Kincaide said that the party had been particularly fortunate for not once during the trip had they experienced a rainy day and while on the water there had been no rough weather for the sea the greater part of the time had been as quiet as a mill pond.

This is the winter season in South America and for that reason heavy garments had to be worn all the time, yet the winter was not severe, but more like our falls. Spanish is the language largely spoken although French and Portuguese are spoken at some places, but nearly everybody speaks Spanish and for this reason it was of the utmost importance that our young men should be taught this language in the public schools if we hope to have business relations with South American countries.

COL. HENRY. L. KINCAIDE.

As stated above Col. Kincaide was very enthusiastic over the trip and one could sit for hours listening to his description of the countries which the party visited. Perhaps at some later time he will tell Quincy people of South America and business possibilities.

The 37 members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, headed by Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, who have been on the trip through South America reached New York Monday night on the steamship Vazari, somewhat earlier than was expected, from their 14,000 mile trip, all enthusiastic over what they had seen, and during which they had been treated more like ambassadors than business men.

While the trip will accomplish all that had been hoped for, the party were nevertheless glad to once more be on American soil. All tell the same

To The Granite Delegates

Barre, Vermont, tried to put one over Quincy in relation to the Retail Granite Dealers convention which is to be held in Boston next month, but owing to the astuteness of John L. Miller, president of the New England Monumental Convention Bureau, the thing has been nipped in the bud, although the atmosphere as yet is somewhat hazy.

When the bureau was formed to arrange for the convention, it was decided that Barre should have two delegates, Quincy two delegates, and other centres who were to go into the convention should also be represented. Funds were needed to carry out the plans and Quincy came forward with a contribution of $400 and other cen-

ELECTED AT CHELSEA

F. E. Parlin the New Superintendent of Schools

Frank Edson Parlin, formerly superintendent of schools in Quincy, was Monday night elected as superintendent of the Chelsea schools on the 27th ballot, to succeed Adelbert L. Safford who failed reelection some weeks ago. There were several candidates for the position and the meeting was three hours duration. The salary is $2,500.

Supt. Parlin came to Quincy in 1900 and remained here until 1909 when he accepted a position as superintendent of schools at Cambridge where he served until 1912 when he failed of election after a sensational meeting of the school board. From Cambridge, Mr. Parlin went to Plymouth where he has been during the past year.

RAN INTO AN ELECTRIC CAR

Little Daughter of Dr. Ryder Has Narrow Escape

Bettie, the 10 year old daughter of Dr. and Mrs. George H. Ryder, of 1073 Hancock street, had a very narrow escape from serious injury Monday evening. While riding a bicycle near her home she ran into a passing electric car.

The little girl and Catherine Griffin, a playmate, were riding their bicycles along the street when some small boys came along and began to plague them. Little Bettie turned her wheel one side in trying to avoid the boys, not noticing the electric car which was almost upon her. Before the motorman could stop his car she had run her wheel against the fender of the front end of the car.

Passengers on the car stood horrified, thinking that she had been thrown beneath the car. Fortunately however the force of the blow threw her one side and the car went its whole length without touching her.

The force of the fall however was such that the little girl was badly bruised all over and while no bones were fractured she is suffering from many bruises.

COUNTRY CLUB LIFE.

One of the pleasantest features of modern summer life is the tendency to build country clubs in the suburbs of cities where golf, tennis, and other sports are played. The money and time spent in games that keep one's muscles active are not often wasted, even from the mere pecuniary view point.

Many or these clubs maintain a delightfully simple and informal social life. But in others the desire for social parade asserts itself. The members gather on the piazza in their swell clothes for bridge and like deversions that occupy their time in town. Some of these clubs would seem more fitly to be named "City Club" rather than "Country Club."

People of course should do the things that interest them. But any club for country outing purposes would seem to accomplish the most when it encourages men and women to engage in active out door sports, and to enjoy green grass, trees, blue sky, and clean air.

GENERALSHIP ON BALL FIELD.

Fortunes rise and fall swiftly in baseball, particularly with the manager. Here is "Jake" Stahl, who last year created a championship team, now down and out. Then there is Clark Griffith. Washington used to be called "First in war, first in peace, and last in the American league," a dumping ground for the superannuated. Griffith made it almost a pennant winner. And the man with all possible enthusiasm and generalship may be upset by the single misstep that lames a muscle.

Literary prophets of baseball expound complicated playing combinations, far from obvious to the spectator. Perhaps this chess play has less to do with a manager's success than some people think. Where he wins first of all is in simple but rare gifts for study and correct estimate of individual players.

The successful manager must build his own team. The stars of today will soon be fading. The pace is too swift. He must know with finality when he has a candidate whose motions, muscular power and control approximate the perfect type. These must be picked from smaller teams, and must be men whose prospective power others have failed to see. No manager can afford to build his team from the $10,000 beauties of his competitors.

The manager must possess superior knowledge of the technique of every position. Each place on the field has its own character. Each player must be fit in physical power and temperament. Every motion must be studied, every man must be coached for the perfect throw and the perfect catch in any conceivable situation.

The man who could pilot a successful major league ball team should be able to captain a big enterprise or govern a city, if tastes and education ran that way.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

By J. O. LEWIS

The Farmer and the Merchant.

THERE can be no doubt that the prosperity of the country—the entire people—is based on the quantity of produce RAISED ON THE FARMS, and no other one thing so seriously affects the business interests of the country as a general crop failure. If the crops are generally good throughout the country and happen to be a failure in one particular locality the merchants are not dependent on the home farmer, but can have his goods, produce, etc., shipped in from other sections and thus supply the demand of his customers, while, on the other hand, THE FARMER IS ALWAYS DEPENDENT ON HIS HOME MERCHANTS—the town or city which is his marketing place—and the home banks for the handling and disposition of his products.

THE MERCHANT NEVER BUYS HIS PRODUCE, HAY AND GRAIN FROM OUTSIDE POINTS WHEN HE CAN GET THEM FROM THE FARMER, BUT THAT THE FARMER IS GIVEN LARGELY TO THE PRACTICE OF ORDERING MANY OF HIS NEEDS FROM STORES IN OTHER CITIES, MORE PARTICULARLY THE LARGE MAIL ORDER HOUSES, IS A WELL KNOWN FACT.

Not a day passes that goods of almost every description, from soaps to farm implements, including gasoline engines, manure spreaders, seed planters, cream separators, cooking stoves and ranges, clothing, groceries and what not, are seen in our depots and express offices addressed to local farmers.

MR. FARMER, DO YOU THINK IT RIGHT TO COME TO TOWN WITH A LOAD OF PRODUCE AND SELL IT TO THE MERCHANTS OF YOUR MARKET PLACE AND THEN TAKE THE MONEY HE PAYS YOU AND SEND IT TO SOME MAIL ORDER HOUSE AND BUY GOODS THAT YOU COULD BUY JUST AS CHEAPLY AT HOME AS FROM A MAIL ORDER HOUSE AND HAVE THE FURTHER SATISFACTION OF SEEING WHAT YOU BUY?

You may say, "Oh, well, I sold my butter and eggs to the groceryman, but he doesn't handle clothing!" Yes; but, my farmer friend, if the clothing man does not sell his clothing he must go out of business, and the groceryman loses a good customer, his business is curtailed, and he then must needs buy less of your produce. You are just as much in duty bound to buy your clothing, your hardware, your farm tools and other necessities from your home market as if these merchants all dealt in your wares first hand.

THESE VARIOUS BUSINESSES ARE INTERLOCKING AND INTERDEPENDENT, AND ON THEIR SUCCESS DEPENDS YOUR SUCCESS.

A certain good farmer in this county ordered a corn planter from a mail order house and, owing to delays in freights, did not get his planter in time to do his planting while a good spell of weather was on. However, it finally came. He got it to the farm, set it up and started in with his planting. Through carelessness or oversight a small gravel got in one of the holes through which the corn drops and there lodged, with the result that the plate was broken. This put the planter out of commission. The farmer had to stop his corn planting and come to town to see if he could get another plate. He called on the hardware stores and implement dealers, but as none of them carried these mail order house planters in stock he could find no plate, and the final result was he was forced to follow the plow and drop his corn by hand. Had he purchased his planter from a home merchant he could easily have got the necessary repairs and not been delayed. It certainly was more costly to the farmer than if he had paid his home implement dealer many dollars more. Furthermore, the implement dealer had been buying corn every season from this farmer who bought his planter from a mail order house.

Every dollar you send to a mail order house is taken out of local circulation entirely, and the good of it is lost forever. IT HURTS YOU IN THE LONG RUN just as much as any one. Therefore, before you order anything else from out of your home town go to town and see if you can find what you want, or if you can't get to town telephone a merchant, and if it is a small package he will send it out by parcel post. If it isn't satisfactory send it back. Merchants guarantee the goods they sell just as well as mail order houses. There is not a local merchant who will not treat you right. Give him a chance and he will [illegible]ate it.

To be continued un[illegible]title, "THE STRENGTH OF THE WHEEL."

The Prisoners' Alphabet

How a Girl Learned It and It Led to Her Freedom

By CATHERINE KRONIN

My father was a landed proprietor in the department of Koskoma, Russia. Our peasants, who had formerly been serfs and not many years liberated, were very ignorant, and it seemed to me—then a girl of twenty—that the first thing to do to better their condition was to educate them, for they were only fitted for a grade of labor but little above what was performed by beasts of burden. Indeed, they were treated by the government officials as cattle. I have seen a man go into a clamoring crowd with a stout whip and scatter them as he would so many steers.

My father forbade me to do anything for the poor creatures that was not permitted by the government, knowing well that by doing so I would get into trouble. But my sympathies were so strong that I consented to teach clandestinely. I found it easier to teach the children, and I used a back room in a peasant's cottage for a school. I had not been long at the work before the secret got out, and one day the government officials broke into the room while my school was in session, and I was caught red handed.

I pass over our dreary march to Siberia, for it has nothing to do with my story. That story begins on the first night of my arrival at the prison at Kara. I was lying on my cot in my cell, overcome with that dreadful feeling of being locked in and wishing that death would relieve me from the sufferings in prospect for me. I do not know whether it had seemed bleaker to me outside or now that I was within the prison walls. So unendurable were my thoughts that I tried to turn them to the home I had left, my father, my mother and my sisters. But I knew they were suffering on my account, and to think of them gave me no relief.

But dark as the prospect was, deep as the gloom in which I was plunged, there came something that turned my thoughts from my misfortunes. A heating pipe entered my cell at the floor and ran perpendicularly through the ceiling. Suddenly a sound passed over the pipe, as when steam is turned on in a radiator. It was but one tiny tick, such as would be made by the pipe being struck by metal. It was immediately followed by another tap, then a short interval, then a third. Next three taps came together, followed by two.

This was enough to indicate that the sounds were not made by the expansion or contraction of the pipes from heat or cold, but that some one was tapping on them, with what I did not know. I listened for some time, during which I knew that a message was being transmitted; but, since I did not know the code, I could not interpret it. When it ended another series of taps commenced, and there was a difference in the key, indicating that the later series was produced by a different instrument from the first.

Oh, blessed relief—something to think about, something to unravel! Messages were being transmitted through my room over the heating pipe. I was at once interested in reading them. Had I known of the Morse telegraphic code—which I did not—I would have surmised that this one was similar. The Morse code is composed of dots and dashes. This prison code was composed of taps and intervals. For instance, one tap might mean the letter A, two taps B, two taps and one after an interval C, one tap and two after an interval D, and so on.

I did not gain a knowledge of a single letter that night, though two persons talked over the pipe for some time. All communication ceased a quarter of an hour before the last visit of the guard and recommenced a quarter of an hour after the round had been made, the persons continuing to communicate for half an hour, when they ceased, giving me the first cue to their code. The last two divisions or words—as I took them to be—were tapped after a short silence, and the same taps and intervals were repeated by the person who received them.

I had by this time learned to separate letter from letter and word from word. These last two words, tapped and repeated, were composed the first of four, the second of five letters. I listened for some time for more, but heard nothing, and it occurred to me that the words spoken were intended for a closing of the conversation, just as today persons talking over a telephone say "goodby" to each other to indicate that they have nothing more to say. Immediately it flashed upon me that the words spoken were goodby, but the second word of goodby is composed of two letters, whereas, as I have said, the second word of the last message was composed of five.

"I have it! The message was 'good night.'"

So ended the first evening of my prison life, for, small as the distraction from my troubles was, it was enough, worn out as I was, to bring on sleep. I passed into unconsciousness, thinking that probably the messages would recommence on the morrow and I should have something to do to read the messages, for if my interpretation of the two words was correct I had seven letters. Surely that would be quite enough to give me the others in time, though I remembered them imperfectly and needed to hear them again.

I did not hear them again till the next night, but I heard other letters and short words that added to my knowledge of the code. The letter I was used quite often by itself, as was the letter A. Besides, when a conversation was ended during the day the last words were two, and I was not long in interpreting them as "goodby." This gave me nine letters, or a third of the alphabet. Within a few days I had it all, but it required practice to read it. As to telegraphing myself, I practiced at sending messages to myself by tapping with my finger on the wall of my cell and soon became quite proficient.

As soon as I could read readily I determined to take a hand in the dialogues. Two men, both politicals, were communicating, the one a young man who had been sent to Siberia from a university; the other had been implicated in a conspiracy to assassinate a minister of police. The latter was much older than the former—at least he talked more sedately—while the student was full of hope and enthusiasm. He was discussing with the other plans for escape, which his correspondent discouraged as impossible and would only bring down more horror on those who attempted them.

The call signal I learned at the outset. It was three taps at intervals till the party to be called responded. When I was sufficiently practiced to hold a conversation I gave the signal. A reply came.

"What is it, Paul?"

I made the reply myself. I said that I was a political prisoner, a young girl; that I had heard their conversations over the pipe and had interpreted their code. I would be pleased to talk with them when they were not engaged chatting with each other. Paul, the university man, asked me how long I had been in learning the code and, when I told him, complimented me on my readiness. I asked him if he were not afraid of the prison authorities becoming aware that he was communicating, to which he replied that the prisoners all knew the hours when the guards were due and were careful to refrain from tapping when they came round. He added that the latter were a stupid lot and, if they heard the tapping and suspected a code, could never learn it as I had done.

Doubtless the principal deterrent from insanity among prisoners is planning escapes. Paul, who, I learned, was in the cell directly below me, was full of these plans, which he had been proposing to Alexis, who was in the cell above me. After I came into the trio Paul consulted me rather than Alexis as to the practicability of his plans, but I had not been there long enough to have any knowledge of the prison or the habits of our guards and could be of no use to him. Nevertheless he finally laid a plan intended for my escape, with the assistance of the other two, which Alexis pronounced feasible, though not probable. No escape could be made without bribing the guard, and this could not be done without his being able to make it appear that he was innocent. A woman, Maria, had charge of the cells for the woman prisoners, and I succeeded in winning her sympathy. Indeed, she became so fond of me that she would willingly aid me to get away provided she should not suffer for negligence or abetting me in my escape.

Paul's plan was for me to effect a change of clothing with him, to pretend illness, be sent to the hospital and trust to luck to get back into woman's attire and go out as an unidentified prisoner. There seemed to be no way to carry out the initiatory part of the plan until I proposed to do my clothes up in a bundle that could be put through the window bars and let it down to Paul on the floor below. Then I would haul up his clothes by the same means. I could make a cord by tearing certain articles of my clothing into strips.

We exchanged the clothing without difficulty, and the next morning when Maria came around she found me in man's dress. I offered, if she would help me, to send her a thousand rubles from home. This she declined, but agreed to assist me because she pitied and loved me, though she would be obliged to leave the prison and Kara as well as I if she did so. She went away, leaving my cell unlocked, I agreeing to give her a couple of hours to get away. At the end of that time I walked out into the corridor till I saw a jailer approaching, then fell on the floor. Coming to me, he picked me up and, not knowing who I was, but thinking me to be ill, sent me to the hospital, where I was put to bed.

The nurses were men, and I had no opportunity to appropriate a woman's clothes. But at midnight I got out of bed in my nightclothes and went out into the prison yard. There I was picked up by an official and, being a woman, was taken to the woman's hospital, the man supposing me to have come from there. Before morning I had stolen the uniform of a nurse and in this disguise succeeded in making my escape.

I had appointed a rendezvous with Maria and took her with me to Berlin, where I communicated with my father.

All this happened twenty years ago, and Maria has been in my service ever since.

I heard some time after my leaving Kara that Paul had made his escape and had gone to America. I have lived since leaving Russia in Germany. I suppose I should sacrifice myself again for the cause, but the prospect of that horrible prison life deters me.

WEALTH OF INFORMATION

story, that they cannot find words to describe the lavish hospitality with which they have been greeted.

Seven Presidents of seven Republics met them personally and gave them the freedom of their countries. They travelled in private trains, and in fact everything that South American countries had was placed at their disposal.

None were more enthusiastic over the trip than Col. Henry L. Kincaide who in reviewing the trip said to a reporter:,

"We had a great time. In every country visited, Panama, Peru, Bolivia, Chile, Argentine Republic, Uruguay and Brazil, the delegation was received by the Presidents of these republics and highest government officials. The leading men of affairs representing every well known commercial nation joined in making the visit of the delegation a success and did everything possible to promote and broaden business relations.

"The friendly feelings which were everywhere displayed for our North America people ought to be a source of gratification to them and should encourage our citizens to do everything in their power to foster these friendly relations.

"The progress of these Nations can hardly be realized, and it is to be regretted that a greater number of our business men do not tour South American countries in their vacations. The delightful climate, change of scenery and comfortable sea voyages offer rest, recreation, educations and broadened business ideas.

"South America is a natural outlet for United States products, and our merchants have allowed millions of dollars of business annually go to foreign countries because they have paid but little attention to this all important market. The opening of the Panama Canal will greatly facilitate shipping in American-made merchandise, and the delegation just returning has a wealth of information for business associates in their knowledge of how this valuable trade can be best handled."

During their visit they have had placed at their disposal the best opportunity possible to study mining, nitrates, cattle raising, wheat growing coffee, cultivation, preparation and shipping, sugar growing and manufacture, opportunities to visit shoe and leather factories, cotton and woolen mills, packing houses, study of ports, shipping educational institutes and commercial activities.

Leading business men in large numbers from all the South American republics are intensely interested in the San Francisco Exposition of 1915 and are planning to visit the leading cities of the United States at that time in connection with their trip to San Francisco.

"The South Americans have come to like us," continued Mr. Kincaide. "In the past Germany and England swallowed most of their trade, but we can now have a large share for the asking. We must get down there.

"The members of the party have brought back a great store of information and I see no reason why we should not make millions of profit. What we need down there is banks, not necessarily large ones, but at least one in each country."

Last Thursday night the chamber party held a banquet at which Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy, president of the tour, was given a loving cup, Ex-Mayor Logan making the presentation speech.

H. L. Dillingham, assistant secretary of the chamber, who was the official guide of the long journey, was given a gold watch and chain in return for his ability to make everything run with perfect smoothness, although he had never been in South America before. This time the presentation speech was delivered by Col. Kincaide.

SANCTUARY IN ENGLAND.

The Principle Still Survives to a Limited Degree.

Much water has flowed under London bridge since the British criminal could defy the strong arm of the law by the single expedient of escaping to the nearest church or hospital and claiming the protection of the "sanctuary," for down to the early Stuart days Great Britain had thousands of just such refuges for the criminal, from cathedrals and royal palaces to scores of towns and cities, where the man guilty of felony could laugh with impunity at the officers of law and justice for a period ranging up to forty days. If within that time he chose to go before the coroner, clothed in penitence and sackcloth, and confess his guilt, he was free to quit the realm without any hand daring to stay him.

Although no such asylum exists today for the criminal, the principle of the "sanctuary" still manages to survive. This privilege refers only to civil offenses and not to crimes as in the olden days, and yet the privileges are of considerable value.

No clergyman can be arrested within the walls of his church or while he is going to or returning from his duty. Bishops and archbishops are still more protected, for not one of them can be haled before a magistrate even though the cause is a crime, unless the king especially commands it. Nor even up to the present time has any warrant an effect within the precincts of any of the king's palaces.—Chicago Tribune.

COLORS OF THE SKY.

And Their Connection With Stormy or Sunshiny Weather.

In "Our Own Weather" Edwin C. Martin, after noting the indications of weather shown by barometric readings, the variations of the winds and their meaning, the ever changing forms of the clouds, shows how the colors of the sky act as weather signs:

Ordinary observation has gathered a great number of weather signs from simply the ever varying colors of the sky. Among the more familiar and reliable ones are:

A bright blue sky is the sky of fine weather.

A bright yellow sky at sunset promises winds, a pale yellow sky rain and a "sickly greenish" sky both wind and rain. A rosy sky at sunset promises fair weather, but a dark red sky at sunset promises rain. A red sky in the morning promises wind or rain. "A red sun has water in his eye."

"If the sun sets in dark, heavy clouds, expect rain the next day." Even a gray sunset indicates rain. But a gray morning indicates a fine day.

"When the sun draws water rain follows soon."

And, finally, what in this connection it would be perhaps the most reproachful of all posible omissions not to mention:

Rainbow at night,
Sailor's delight;
Rainbow in the morning,
Sailor's warning.

The Great White Shark.

The man eating fish par excellence is the great white shark. It is otherwise known by the name of man eater. Occasionally specimens are seen on both coasts of the United States, though its more customary habitat is in tropical waters. This frightful creature attains a length of nearly forty feet, and it is able to swallow a man whole. This fact is proved by an experiment which sailors are fond of making when such a shark is captured. The skull being preserved, they amuse themselves by crawling one after another through the distended jaws. It would be unsafe to do this, however, when the head has been freshly cut off, because under such conditions the jaws will snap together fiercely for some time afterward if anything is placed between them.

Legend of the Moss Rose.

A German tradition gives the origin of the moss rose as follows: An angel came to earth in mortal guise. He sought a place of shelter and repose after his labors of love, but every door was shut against the heavenly visitor. At length the angel, being very weary, sank upon the ground and over him a rosebush spread like a tent. It caught upon its outspread leaves the falling dew which would otherwise have drenched the messenger of love. Waking, the angel said to the rose:

Thou hast yielded the shelter that man denied:
A proof of my love shall with thee abide.
And the green moss gathered about the stem
While the dewdrops shone like a diadem,
Crowning the blushing flower.

Naturally.

The teacher had been reading to the class about the great forests of America.

"And now, boys," she announced, "which one of you can tell me the pine that has the longest and the sharpest needles?"

Up went a hand in the front row.

"Well, Tommy?"

"The porcupine."—Philadelphia Ledger.

The Only Explanation.

"Remember," said the fair visitor to convict 2323, "that stone walls do not a prison make nor iron bars a cage."

"Well, den, lady," replied 2323, "de warden's son only got me hypnotized."—New York Times.

BETWEEN BOSTON AND NEW YORK

Morse Is Thought to Be Planning a New Water Line

NEW BOATS FOR GRAND TRUNK

Boston Steamship Men Believe Former Water King Will Become Their Owner and Regain Prominence In Transportation World—Aided by Recent New Haven Developments

Boston, July 22.—The return of Charles W. Morse, the ice king and former steamship owner, to the position of prominence in the world of water transportation which he formerly enjoyed is being watched by men prominent in local steamship circles.

Rumors that he is attempting to purchase the Narragansett and the Manhattan, combination freight and passenger steamers now in process of construction and originally intended for use by the Southern New England railway in connection with the extension of that branch of the Grand Trunk system to Providence, are freely circulated.

It is said he intends to operate the boats between Boston and New York in opposition to the line operated by the Eastern Steamship corporation.

The local Grand Trunk officials say it is not yet known where the boats will be used, but steamship men in general believe that the rumors are well founded and that Morse will be the final owner of them.

With the retirement of Charles S. Mellen as president of the New England lines, Morse is said to regard his return to control of the steamship situation in this section as being materially aided.

When Mellen first took the presidency of the New Haven ten years ago, Morse was rapidly gaining control of the water transportation interests. One of the first tasks to which Mellen dedicated himself was the checkmating of Morse in his ambition.

With the recommendation of the interstate commerce commission that the New Haven divest itself of its steamship holdings and the subsequent retirement of Mellen from the presidency of the New Haven, there were rumors that Morse would attempt to come back into his own. These developments give added strength to the belief of steamship men that the two boats now in the shipyards at Wilmington, Del., will pass into Morse's hands.

HITS BULLSEYE 103 TIMES

World's Record Is Shattered by a Bay State Marksman

Wakefield, Mass., July 22.—One world's record went to smash at the opening day's shooting in the New England Military Rifle association's ninth annual meeting when Captain Stewart W. Wise of headquarters of the Sixth Massachusetts regiment made 103 consecutive bullseyes at the 800-yard range.

For an hour and a half Wise lay on the firing line sending shot after shot into the innermost disc of the target with unerring accuracy. Nearly every shot struck the disc exactly in the centre.

The previous record for consecutive bullseyes at 800 yards was fifty-seven, made by J. W. Hessian of New York at Sea Girt last year.

POTHIER IS HOPEFUL

Governor Still Believes Grand Trunk Will Build Extension

Providence, July 22.—Governor Pothier still holds to the belief that the Grand Trunk will eventually build the Southern New England railway between here and Palmer, Mass., and upon which work has been indefinitely suspended. In an interview the governor said:

"I still have hopes the Grand Trunk will come to this state and will be a factor in the improvement of our harbor facilities, and I believe the present situation, so far as the New Haven road is concerned, will hasten this."

Both men pleaded not guilty to charges of conspiracy to use the mails to defraud. Cruchet was able to obtain bail, but in default Small was committed.

WOMAN'S CLUB HOLD DANCE

Largely Attended by Squantum People and their Guests

Over 100 people attended the dance of the Squantum Women's club Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Loughan, Bellevue avenue. It was the largest attended and most enjoyable hop ever held in Squantum. While the young people had the floor the greater part of the evening a score or more elderly people sat upon the spacious veranda and enjoyed the affair as much as those dancing.

Then the committee announced a Virginia reel for the elder people only, and there was a delightful old-time dance in which much of grace and beauty that is missing in the more modern dances was displayed. Music was furnished by the Postal Clerks orchestra and was excellent.

Owing to the large attendance the large living room could not accommodate the crowd and two adjoining rooms were thrown open. The home was very prettily decorated with bunting, flowers and Japanese lanterns. The generous hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Loughan and their charming daughters, Misses Mary, Anne and Helen Loughan will long be remembered by those who attended. Ice cream and tonics were served and a goodly sum netted toward the women's club building fund.

The dance was in charge of the following committee: Mrs. Ethel Bostwick, chairman; Mrs. J. Hogan and Mrs. Russeault.

Among those present were:—Mr. and Mrs. Edward Eagar, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. W. N. Kenyon, Miss M. Ward, Mr. Ward, Mrs. T. F. Callahan, Mrs. E. H. Kokerda, Mrs. T. J. NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

Automobile numbered 26024 struck and injured George Keefe of Fishell avenue, East Milton, this morning. The boy was taken to the Quincy City Hospital in the machine. The accident occurred on Granite avenue, East Milton.

It was later learned that the automobile which struck the boy was owned by Marks Angel of 89 Ruthvern street, Roxbury, and that it was probably Mr. Angel who took the boy to the City Hospital. At the hospital it was said that the boys injuries were not serious and that his condition was good. Chief Pearce of Milton visited the hospital to see the boy and get some information as to the extent of his injuries but says that he was unable to get any satisfaction from those in charge.

John Henry Brooks, who died in Milton on Sunday in his 65th year, was one of those directing the interests of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad up to the time of his retirement, a few years ago. He was also a director in several mining companies and a popular club member. He had a summer home at Cohasset. He is survived by four sons, Henry G. Brooks, John Edward Brooks, Laurence Brooks and Winthrop S. Brooks, all of Milton, and one daughter, Mrs. Charlottee L. Lee of Cohasset.

KINGSBURY IS READY

Comments on the Challenge of Mr. Phelan

Editor of the Ledger:

I see that Mr. Phelan has accepted my challenge for another race sometime next month. It was stated in Thursday's Ledger that I was aware or Mr. Phelan's condition and blood poisoning. I was aware of his condition and blood poisoning, just as much as he was of my condition. It was also stated in the same paper that my showing in that race was unexpected, as most of the people thought that Mr. Phelan would win it easy. If he knew he was in no condition to run, why did he go in it.

It should also be remembered that I won a fast half-mile race from scratch less than fifteen minutes before and had not recovered my full strength and wind when I started the race; while Mr. Phelan was fresh, having run only in one heat of one hundred yards.

I did not state in my challenge that Mr. Phelan forfeited the race to me. If it was so stated, it was by some one else.

It was very nice of Mr. Phelan to say that I will be able to win a few more races with the help of Dr. Smith, but I think I will be able to win some without his help, as I have won some before without any help from him.

Washington, July 22.—Senators Nelson and Clapp of Minnesota last night took the stand before the committee of their colleagues investigating the "lobby," and denied the truth of statements made by Martin M. That the National Association of Manufacturers planned, had it succeeded in electing James E. Watson governor of Indiana in 1908, to "groom" him for the presidency four years later, was developed yesterday.

He was taken to court and pleaded guilty to the indictment, which had been drawn soon after Petolla was killed. Bonititas declared he had stabbed Petolla in self-defense. He was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

PHILADELPHIAN INVENTS SUNSHINE SUBSTITUTE.

Says He Has Perfected Apparatus Emitting Rays of Daylight.

Dr. Herbert E. Ives, a prominent scientist of Philadelphia, claims to have invented a substitute for daylight. He has been at work for a dozen years at the research laboratories of that city's gas plant and finally has produced, he says, a light which has passed the test and is in every way equal to sunshine and the light of day.

He has designed a powerful incandescent lamp with a special mantle which is so placed in the top of a specially made cabinet that its rays are immediately beneath a reflector. This is made of metal, and the light is forced downward through a series of delicately colored screens.

In telling of his discovery Dr. Ives said:

"My recent invention has a field of usefulness in certain industries, such as textile manufacturing, dyeing, color printing and similar arts. In color printing the presses can be run only so long as the ink put in by daylight lasts. With the aid of my invention the presses can be run every hour of the twenty-four.

"In the sorting of cigars their color cannot be told by artificial light. In dental work the color of artificial teeth cannot be told at night. In paper manufacture and the manufacture of flour they cannot tell the different grades. With the aid of this machine they can tell the grades all the time.

"Diamond buyers will only deal in the daylight. Now they will be able to make deals at any time. Surgery is another field of usefulness. The color of tissues cannot be detected by artificial light. Surgeons depend upon the color of tissues to tell whether they are diseased or not, and as a consequence major surgical operations can now be performed at night.

"The invention can be made in various forms to be used for different purposes. It can be used to light a small room or closet or it can be used to light a table so that one can read as by daylight at any time of the day or night."

COST OF LIVING CLIMBS.

Household Necessaries Higher by 17 Per Cent In a Year.

The continued higher cost of living is reflected in a report to Sherman Allen, assistant secretary of the treasury, by the government's general supply committee on the contracts it has let for supplies for the executive departments of Washington for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

This barometer of the trend of prices shows that the cost of groceries and household supplies has increased 17 per cent as compared with last year, lumber 10 per cent, fuel and ice 7 per cent and dry goods 5 per cent.

While these essentials are soaring, the report showed decreases in the prices of the following: Forage, flour and feed 20 per cent, paints and oils 12 per cent, hardware 7 per cent, and furniture, stationery and electrical engineering supplies 5 per cent each. These last named articles were stationery, drugs and chemicals, laboratory apparatus, photographic supplies, engraving and printing supplies and incandescent gas lamp supplies.

KNIFE REFORMED BANDIT.

Criminal Tendencies Gone After Twenty-four Years In Prison.

"Black Bart" Holzhay, sentenced for life to Marquette (Mich.) prison in 1889 for highway robbery, was released recently after having served twenty-four years.

Holzhay's exploits in the woods of northern Michigan and Wisconsin rivaled those of Jesse James. He held up stagecoaches and waylaid travelers. When received at the prison he was illiterate, ill kept and gave the prison authorities much trouble.

A surgical operation changed his character completely, and since it was performed he has been a model prisoner, studying hard and gaining a fair education.

Cardenio King Dies as Freedom Is Being Arranged

GOVERNOR CUTS RED TAPE

Secures Seven Councillors' Consent to Release Prisoner Only to Find They Could Not Legally Act by Telephone—Stock Promoter Had Steadily Failed In Health—Sketch of Career

Boston, July 22.—Cardenio F. King, the Boston stock promoter serving a ten to fourteen years' term for embezzlement, died at 3:55 yesterday afternoon in the state hospital at Bridgewater, even while arrangements were being made to grant him a pardon today so he could be taken home to die.

Mrs. King and the four sons were at the bedside when the end came. Superintendent Blackstone and Medical Director Emerson of the hospital were also there. They had been doing their utmost all day to relieve the dying man and to make matters as easy as possible for the family.

The dying man suffered greatly but his agonies were relieved by intervals of easier condition. He could talk very little with his wife and sons. As the end came his sufferings abated and he passed away to a peaceful death.

A desperate effort to get King pardoned failed when Attorney General Swift ruled that members of the governor's council could not legally give their approval to the pardon over the telephone.

When Governor Foss was unable to budge the attorney general from his opinion, he called a special meeting of the counsel for 9 o'clock this morning.

King died of strangulated hernia. When Dr. Davis of the Massachusetts general hospital, who went to Bridgewater and examined King, reported this to Governor Foss, the latter had members of the council called on the telephone, to see if they would favor an immediate pardon.

Executive Secretary Hamlin reached seven councillors, each of whom said that he favored a pardon under the circumstances and would so vote.

On the strength of this, pardon papers were made out, ready for the governor to sign and Mrs. King and the four sons, assembled at King's death-bed, awaited eagerly the word that the pardon had been issued.

The discovery that King was nearing his end, the hasty calling of his wife and sons to the hospital, the equally hurried summoning of physicians and the extremist measures taken to get councillors on the telephone when the gravity of the case was known—all these formed a most dramatic chain of events in the final chapter of King's sensational life.

King served but a short time in the state prison before it was found that his health was failing. He was then removed to the state farm in an effort to bring him back to his usual health. He sank slowly.

Several attempts have been made to have the former promoter pardoned. One of these attempts nearly succeeded. Mrs. King spent weeks and months in an endeavor to have Governor Foss and the pardon committee of the executive council give King his freedom that she might nurse him back to health.

King's conviction came on an indictment of thirty-two counts charging the larceny of $25,388.

Cardenio F. King became known in Boston as the financial editor of a local daily in 1897. Before this he had been an advertising solicitor. His rise in the financial world was phenomenal when once he started in the brokerage business on his own account. So phenomenal was his progress that in a short time he rose from an unknown to the rival of Thomas W. Lawson.

He gave State street a new feature by his great display stock advertisements in the Boston papers. After hiring an entire floor in one of Boston's biggest office buildings he opened offices in New York and soon made himself known in Wall street. Later he dabbled in the newspaper business in this city, losing an immense amount of money on a local daily.

In 1907, just a decade after his phenomenal introduction to local finances, his fortunes began the downward trend. His fortune dwindled rapidly, until his methods to recoup brought him to the attention of the police.

He anticipated the police and went to London, where he lived luxuriously, then to Paris, and finally to Ceylon. Suddenly he appeared in America and gave himself up.

He was sentenced to state prison and later taken to Bridgewater, where he remained until death outstripped his pardon.

Sinking Steamer Rushed to Shore

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 22.—The steamer Tremper, with twenty passengers, was beached on the east side of the Hudson with water pouring through a hole in her hull. The Tremper ran on a rock on Esopus island. The boat had settled very low before she reached the mainland after a two-mile race.

TO GUARD "NEW FRONTIER"

Daniels Says Bulk of Battle Fleet Will Be Kept on Pacific

Portland, Ore., July 22.—Calling the Pacific coast the "new frontier," Secretary of the Navy Daniels, in an interview here, stated that, upon the completion of the Panama canal, the administration intends keeping a large part of the battle fleet of the navy on the Pacific coast.

"This coast faces the largest population of the world," said Daniels, "and as such it is most important that it be adequately defended. The canal will enable us to send a fleet from one coast to the other with comparative ease, but the major strength of our fleet will be required on the Pacific."

New York, July 22.—John Cahill, a policeman, was murdered probably by burglars whom he surprised in an attempt to break into the rectory back of St. Matthews' Catholic church in Brooklyn.

MERCHANTS AND FARMERS GAIN

More Sweeping Parcel Post Changes Are Looked For

EXPRESS PACKAGES BY MAIL

Rates Within Radius of Two Hundred Miles of Boston Reduced One-Half to Two-Thirds Lower Than Those of Express Companies—Revenues Expected to Wipe Out Deficit

Washington, July 22.—The new parcel post rates just announced by the postmaster general will be of the greatest importance to Boston merchants as well as to business men and the farmers who ship their goods for sale or distribution in Boston.

Under the new rates a Boston merchant will be able to ship packages to suburban residents up to twenty pounds at 5 cents for the first pound and 1 cent for each subsequent two pounds. A twenty-pound package can therefore be sent mailed for 14 cents within the local rural delivery area. As this area embraces a large portion if not all of the Boston retail territory, the big slash in rates will prove a great boon to the retail trade.

The rates for a twenty-pound package to any point within a radius of about 200 miles from Boston will be 24 cents as against the express rate of something like 50 or 75 cents.

Boston merchants will be able to ship their goods by parcel post collect on delivery not only for the price of the article but for the postage. Farmers who live within this territory will have the same rates for shipping their produce in baskets to the city kitchen.

It is known here in Washington that the expansion of rates and the raising of the weight limit announced by Mr. Barleson are considered by the government parcel post experts, as well as by Representative Lewis of Maryland, the father of the parcel post act, as merely the forerunner of still more sweeping changes which will be made in the parcel post system by the first of January, 1914, at the latest.

The revenues of the postoffice, it is calculated, will be greatly increased as a result of the large volume of business which the department will be handling before the first of September.

It is calculated that these revenues will not only wipe out the famous and much disputed deficit in the postoffice department, but will, furthermore, show that the government can conduct the business of transporting goods so efficiently that enlargement of the classification and lowering of the rates will inevitably follow.

AFTER 150 HOURS' SLEEP

St. Louis School Teacher Says She Feels "Greatly Refreshed"

St. Louis, July 22.—Miss Christine Fischer, who had slept uninterruptedly for 150 hours, following a tennis match, has regained consciousness. Miss Fischer made the following statement:

"I was awfully tired. My work as a school teacher has been most wearing, and for a month I have felt as though I could sleep for a million years.

"I went out on the hot tennis court and when I went to dinner I sat on the edge of the bed to rest myself.

"Suddenly I felt myself going, sinking, sinking, and I must have fallen asleep then, for I can remember nothing more. I feel greatly refreshed now, though I'm very weak. The doctors say I will be all right in a week or so."

BARBERS CALLED OUT

Eighteen Thousand Expected to Quit Work In New York City

New York, July 22.—A million or so unshaven faces in New York city are threatened by another barbers' strike.

A general order was issued calling out 18,000 barbers because the union leaders were not satisfied with the terms granted by the bosses after the barbers returned to work several weeks ago.

The barbers want a working day from 7 to 8 o'clock, hours from 7 to noon on Sundays, and one day off a week.

MacMillan Expedition Will Continue Journey on Another Ship

St. John's, July 22.—The steamer Diana of the Donald B. MacMillan exploring expedition, bound for Crocker Land, which went on the rocks in the Strait of Belle Isle last Wednesday, is so badly damaged that she cannot be repaired at Battle Harbor, according to dispatches received here.

It is expected that the cargo of the Diana will be transferred to another sealer, probably the Erik, at Battle Harbor, and that the expedition will proceed from there.

BULGARIA MEETS ENEMIES' DEMANDS

Beset on All Sides, She Could Not Do Otherwise

London, July 22.—It is officially confirmed in Bucharest that Bulgaria has accepted the conditions laid down by Roumania and has also agreed to terms of peace with Servia and Greece.

With 30,000 Roumanian troops at Orchaniji and Etropole, within forty miles of Sofia, with Enver Bey at the head of the Turkish cavalry at Adrianople, where the Bulgarian garrison of 2000 had received orders not to resist the Turks, with the Servians at Izoor, forty-two miles southwest of Sofia, and the Greeks at Djumaibala, fifty miles south of the Bulgarian capital, there was nothing else left for her to do.

SUCCESSOR TO MELLEN

May Be Chosen by New Haven Directors' Committee Today

New York, July 22.—Charles S. Mellen's successor as president of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad may be selected at the meeting of the directors' committee here today. Theodore N. Vail, chairman of the committee, said that choosing a new president should not require much time, although, so far as he knew, no candidate had been even tentatively advanced above another.

Someone asked Vail whether he favored Edward E. Loomis, vice president of the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western.

"All I know about it is what I've read in the papers," he replied. "Mr. Loomis is an excellent man—but the committee hasn't met yet."

BOON TO COAST SHIPPERS

Cape Cod Canal Will Save Three Days In Transit For Barge Tows

Washington, July 22.—According to Commodore Miller, in the National Waterways Magazine, the Cape Cod canal will save three days to coast shippers. Miller says:

"Not only will the hazard of navigation around the cape be obviated, but the distance will be reduced seventy miles and a saving of three days in transit will be effected for barge tows which carry annually 8,000,000 tons of coal from Norfolk, Baltimore, Philadelphia and Perth Amboy to Boston and the northern New England mill centres.

AND when that conflagration was lighted in me, Tom did it. I was sitting peaceably on my front steps, dressed in the summer before last that Judy washes and irons every day while I'm deciding how to hand out the first sip of my trousseau to the neighbors, when Tom, in a dangerous blue striped shirt, with a tie that melted into it in tone, blew over my hedge and landed at my side. He kissed the lace ruffle on my sleeve while I reproved him severely and settled down to enjoy him. But I didn't have such an awfully good time as I generally do with him. He was too full of another woman, and even a first cousin can be an exasperation in that condition.

"Now, Mrs. Molly, truly, did you ever see such a peach as she is?" he demanded after I had expressed more than a dozen delighted opinions of Miss Chester. His use of the word "peach" riled me and before I stopped to think I said, "She reminds me more of a string bean."

"Now, Molly, don't be mean just because old Wade has got her out driving behind the grays after kissing your hand under the lilacs yesterday, which, praise be, nobody saw but little me! I'm not sore; why should you be? Aren't you happy with me?"

I withered him with a look, or, rather tried to wither him, for Tom is no mimosa bud.

"The way that girl has started in to wake up this little old town reminds me of the feeling you get under your belt seven minutes after you've sipped an absinth frappe for the first time—you are liable for a good jag and don't know it," he continued enthusiastically. "Let's don't let the folks know that they are off until I get everybody in a full swing of buzz over my queen." I had never seen Tom so enthusiastic over a girl before, and I didn't like it. But I decided not to let him know that, but to get to work putting out the Chester blaze in him and starting one on my own account.

"That's just what I'm thinking about, Tom," I said with a smile that was as sweet as I could make it, "and as she came with messages to me from one of my best old friends I think I ought to do something to make her have a good time. I was just planning a gorgeous dinner party I want to have for her when you came so suddenly. Do you think we could arrange it for Tuesday evening?"

"You are tempting Providence, Molly Carter."

"Lord love us, Molly! Don't knock the town down like that. Let 'em have more than a week to get used to this white rag of a dress you've been waving in their faces for the last few days. Go slow!"

"I've been going so slow for so many years that I've turned around and I'm going fast backward," I said with a blush that I couldn't help.

"Help! Let my kinship protect me!" exclaimed Tom in alarm, and he pretended to move an inch away from me.

"Yes," I said slowly, and as I looked out of the corner of my eyes from under the lashes that Tom himself had once told me were "too long and black to be tidy" I saw that he was in a condition to get the full shock. "If anybody wakes up this town it will be I," I said as I flung down the gauntlet with a high head.

"Here, Molly, here are the keys of my office and the spark plug to the auto. You can cut off a lock of my hair, and if Judy has got a cake I'll eat it out of your hands. Shall it be California or Nova Scotia? And I prefer my bride served in light gray tweed." Tom really is adorable, and I let him snuggle up just one cousinly second. Then we both laughed and began to plan what Tom was horrible enough to call the resurrection razoo But I kept that delicious rose embroidered treasure all to myself. I wanted him to meet it entirely unprepared.

I was glad we had both got over our excitement and were sitting decorously at several inches' distance apart when the judge drew the grays up to the gate, and we both went down to the sidewalk to ask him and the lovely long lady to come in. They couldn't, but we stood and talked to them long enough for Mrs. Johnson to get a good look at us from across the street, and I was afraid I would find Aunt Adeline in a faint when I went into the house.

Miss Chester was delightfully gracious about the dinner—I almost called it the debut dinner—and the expression on the judge's face when he accepted! I was glad she was sitting sidewise to him and couldn't see. Some women like to make other women unhappy, but I think it is best for you to keep them blissfully unconscious until you get what you want. Anyway, I like that girl all over, and I can't see that her neck is so absolutely impossibly flowery. However, I think she might have been a little more considerate about discussing Alfred's London triumph over the Italian mission. As a punishment I let Tom put his arm around my waist as we stood watching them drive off and then was sorry for the left gray horse that shied and came in for a crack of the judge's irritated whip.

Then I refused to let Tom come inside the gate and he went down the street whistling, only when he got to the purple lilac he turned and kissed his hand to me. That Mrs. Johnson just couldn't stand, and she came across the street immediately and called me back to the gate.

"You are tempting Providence, Molly Carter," she exclaimed decidedly "Don't you know Tom Pollard is nothing but a fly up the creek? As a husband he'd chew the rope and run away like a puppy the first time your back was turned. Besides being your cousin, he's younger than you. What do you mean?"

"He's just a week younger, Mrs. Johnson, and I wouldn't tie him for worlds, even if I married him," I said meekly. Somehow I like Mrs. Johnson enough to be meek with her and it always brings her to a higher point of excitement.

"Tie, nonsense; marrying is roping in with ball and chain, to my mind And a week between a man and a woman in their cradles gets to be fifteen years between them and their graves. I'm going to make you the subject of a silent prayer at the next missionary meeting, and I must go home now to see that Sally cooks up a few of Mr. Johnson's crotchets for supper." And she began to hurry away.

"I don't believe you'll be able to make it a 'silent' session about me, Mrs. Johnson," I called after her, and she laughed back from her own front gate. Marriage is the only worm in the bud of Mrs. Johnson's life, and her laugh has a snap to it even if it is not very sugary sweet.

When I told Judy about the dinner party and asked her to get the yellow barber to come help her and her nephew wait on the table she grinned such a wide grin that I was afraid of being swallowed. She understood that Aunt Adeline wouldn't be interested in it until I had time to tell her all about it. Anyway, she will be going over to Springfield on a pilgrimage to see Mr Henderson's sister next week. She doesn't know it yet, but I do.

After that I spent all the rest of the evening in planning my dinner party, and I had a most royal good time. I always have had lots of company, but mostly the spend the day kind with relatives or more relatives to supper That's what most entertaining in Hillsboro is like; but, as I say, once in awhile the old slow pacer wakes up.

I'll never forget my first real dinner party, as the flower girl for Caroline Evans' wedding, when she married the Chicago millionaire, from which Hillsboro has never yet recovered. I was sixteen, felt dreadfully naked without a tucker in my dress and saw Alfred for the first time in evening clothes—his first. I can hardly stand thinking about how he looked even now. I haven't been to very many dinner parties in my life, but from this time on I mean to indulge in them often. Candle light, pretty women's shoulders, black coat sleeves, cut glass and flowers are good ingredients for a joy drink, and why not?

But when I got to planning about the gorgeous food I wanted to give them all I got into what I feel came near being a serious trouble. It was writing down the recipe for the nesselrode pudding they make in my family that undid me. Suddenly hunger rose up from nowhere and gripped me by the throat, gnawed me all over like a bone then shook me until I was limp and unresisting. I must have astralized myself down to the pantry, for when I became conscious I found myself in company with a loaf of bread, a plate of butter and a huge jar of jam.

I sat down by the long table by the window and slowly prepared to enjoy myself. I cut off four slices and buttered them to an equal thickness and then more slowly put a long silver spoon into the jam. I even paused to admire in Judy's mirror over the table the effect of the cascade of lace that fell across my arm and lost itself in the blue shimmer of old Rene's master piece of a mediaeval then deep down I buried the spoon in the purple sweetness. I had just lifted it high in the air when out of the lilac scented dark of the garden came a laugh.

"Why, Molly, Molly, Molly!" drawled that miserable man doctor as he came and leaned on the sill right close to my elbow. The spoon crashed on the table, and I turned and crashed into words.

"You are cruel, cruel, John Moore, and I hate you worse than I ever did before, if that is possible. I'm hungry, hungry to death, and now you've spoiled it all! Go away before I wet this nice crisp bread and jam with tears into a mush I'll have to eat with a spoon. You don't know what it is to want something sweet so bad you are willing to steal it—from yourself!" I fairly blazed my eyes down into his and moved as far away from him as the table would let me.

"Don't I, Molly?" he asked softly after looking straight in my eyes for a long minute that made me drop my head until the blue bow I had tied on the end of my long plait almost got into the scattered jam. Even at such a moment as that I felt how glad old Rene would have been to have given such a nice man as the doctor a treat like that blue silk chef d'oeuvre of hers. I was glad myself.

"Don't I, Peaches?" he asked again in a still softer voice. Again I had that sensation of being against something warm and great and good like your own mother's breast, and I don't know how I controlled it enough not to—to—

"Well, have some jam then," I managed to say with a little laugh as I turned away and picked up the silver spoon.

"Thank you, I will, all of it and the bread and butter too," he answered, in that detestable friendly tone of voice as he drew himself up and sat in the window. "Hustle, Peaches, if you are going to feed me, for I'm ravenous. I haven't had any supper. You have, so I don't mind taking it all away from you—every bit of it."

"Supper," I sniffed as I spread the jam on those lovely, lovely slices of bread and thick butter that I had fixed for my own self. "That apple toast combination tires me so now that I forget it if I can." As I handed him the first slice of drippy lusciousness I turned my head away. He thought it was from the expression of that jam, but it was from his eyes.

"Slice up the whole loaf, Peaches, and let's get on a jam jag! Come with me just this once and forget—forget"— He didn't finish his sentence and I'm glad. We neither of us said anything more as I fed him that whole loaf. I found that the bite I took off of each piece I had ready for him when he finished with the one he had in hand satisfied me as nothing I had ever eaten in all my life before had done, while at the same time my nibbles soothed his conscience about robbing me.

His teeth are big and strong and white and his jaws work like machinery. He is the strongest man I ever saw, and his gauntness is all muscle. What is that glow a woman gets from feeding a hungry man whom she likes, with her own hands, and why should I want to be certain that he kissed the lace on my sleeve as it brushed his face when I reached across him to catch an inquisitive rose that I saw peeping in the window right at us?

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

ALLAN B. SPEIRS HAS BEEN UNLUCKY

Allan B. Speirs, who died at the Fore River hospital on Monday, from injuries received by a fall, has been particularly unfortunate as regard to falls, for that of Monday which caused his death is said to have been the sixth bad fall which he has had in the past few years. There are now pending several suits for damages caused by the falls which he has had. Mondays fall was a short one in comparison with some which he experienced, for it was said Monday by one who knew him that one of his falls was of 100 feet. While he suffered more or less injuries from all of the falls he has managed to escape serious injury until Monday. Mr. Speirs has been a resident of Quincy for about 12 years and was the owner of considerable property on what is known as Watson road.

ACCIDENT TO MOTORMAN.

Patrick Dennehy of 967 Hancock street, motorman on the street railway, is still confined to his home as the result of injuries received last week by being hit by his own car. His car was coming up Hancock street when it became blocked by a team. Leaving his car he ran ahead to turn the team off the street and the conductor taking the controller started the car ahead. The conductor ran the car too near the motorman, with the result that he was struck and knocked down and had a narrow escape from being run over by the car. He was taken to the office of Dr. Sweeney and later taken to his home and has been confined to his bed ever since. Fortunately no bones were broken but he was severely bruised and will be confined to his home for some time.

BOWLING MATCH.

One of the fastest bowling matches ever held in this city is scheduled at the Valgin alleys Wednesday evening when the Chauncey five, champions of the Boston City League, will roll the East Boston Catholic Lyceum. In the champion bunch will be Archie Walsh, "Chic" Holmes, Griffin, "Bill" Beatty and Paul Poehler. This team includes some of the best small ball men in the country. The Lyceum boys are Hickey, Kelliher, McDonald, Mahoney and Callahan, and have made some large team totals the past winter.

It is estimated that more than two and a half billion dollars are invested in the electrical suply stations in this country.

UNIVERSAL PEACE PLAN GIVEN OUT

Secretary Bryan Submits It to Foreign Representatives.

INDORSED BY PRESIDENT.

Proposal, With Supplementary Memorandum, Calls For Investigation by an International Commission of Disputes of "Whatever Character and Nature"—Text of Plan.

The state department has just made public in Washington the text of the proposal of the president and secretary of state to the nations of the world for universal peace. The proposal, with the supplementary memorandum, handed to the representatives in Washington from foreign governments is:

The parties hereto agree that all questions of whatever character and nature in dispute between them shall, when diplomatic efforts fail, be submitted for investigation and report to an international commission (the composition to be agreed upon), and the contracting parties agree not to declare war or begin hostilities until such investigation is made and report submitted.

Secretary Bryan's Plan.

The investigation shall be conducted as a matter of course upon the initiative of the commission without the formality of a request from either party. The report shall be submitted within (time to be agreed upon) from the date of the submission of the dispute, but the parties hereto reserve the right to act independently on the subject matter in dispute after the report is submitted. Secretary Bryan's plan is:

"In the peace plan proposed by the president to all the nations the composition of the international commission is left to agreement between the parties, and I am authorized to suggest for the consideration of those who are willing to enter into this agreement:

"First.—That the international commission be of five members, to be composed as follows: One member from each of the contracting countries, to be chosen by the government; one member to be chosen by each of the contracting countries from some other country, and the fifth member of the commission to be agreed upon by the two governments, the commission to be appointed as soon as convenient after the making of the treaty, vacancies to be filled according to the original appointment.

"Second.—The time also is to be agreed upon, and it is suggested that that time be one year. If a year is considered too long or too short this government will consider either a greater or a less period.

Providing For Emergencies.

"Third.—This government is prepared to consider the question of maintaining the status quo as to military and naval preparations during the period of investigation if the contracting nation desires to include this, and this government suggests tentatively that the parties agree that there shall be no change in the military and naval program during the period of investigation unless danger to one of the contracting parties from a third power compels a change in said program, in which case the party feeling itself menaced by a third power shall confidentially communicate the matter in writing to the other contracting party, and it shall thereupon be released from the obligation not to change its military or naval program, and this release will at the same time operate as a release of the other contracting party. This protects each party from the other in ordinary cases and yet provides freedom of action in emergencies.

"All of these suggestions, however, are presented for consideration and not with the intention of imposing any fixed conditions. The principle of investigation being accepted, the details are matters for conference and consideration."

CHANCE FOR THE LITERATI.

Cash Prizes Are Offered For the Best Sunday School Story.

Under the conditions of the John C. Green income fund the American Sunday School union, with headquarters at 1816 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, has offered $2,000 in three prizes for three books.

The fund left in trust by Mr. Green provides that the society shall set aside one-sixth of the net income of the fund from time to time, and when this income shall amount to $1,000 the society shall appropriate it for the purpose of aiding "in securing a Sunday school literature of the highest order of merit."

The present offer, which closes Oct. 1, 1914, provides a prize of $1,000 to the author who presents the best original work upon "Christian Unity: Jesus Christ's Idea of It; How and Why It Should Be Realized Today."

Wireless Phone Perfected.

The problem of the long distance wireless telephone, it is announced in Paris, has been solved in a practical manner by Professor Arsene d'Arsonval of the College of France. The details have not yet been made public, but the Journal says that the professor has now merely to put the finishing touches on a transmitter which will be ready in October.

PIPER AGAIN A CANDIDATE

Defeated Last Year in the three Cornered Fight

Ex-Representative Walter E. Piper has taken out nomination papers as a candidate for Representative from the Fifth Norfolk district. A set of nomination papers have also been taken out by William J. Sullivan, but it is not known who they are for or what they are for. He asked for sixteen sets of papers but only got six. As far as known Representative Michael T. Sullivan has not taken out papers but he probably will.

Ex-Representative Piper served in the legislature in the year 1912 but was defeated in a three cornered fight for reelection at the election of that year, the vote being Walter E. Piper, Republican, 1052, James P. Roberts, Progressive, 495, Michael T. Sullivan, Democrat, 1107, and Caleb F. Howard, Socialist,2. Without question it was the entrance of the Progressive candidate into the contest which defeated Mr. Piper.

QUINCY VERSUS BARRE

tres also contributed, but as yet Barre has done nothing. From the first it was planned to have Friday, Aug. 22, as Quincy day and it was supposed that it was so understood and everything was all right.

While in Barre this month, however, Mr. Miller learned that Barre was quietly working and planning to have this same day as a Barre day, and their plans called for a special train from Boston. It was first denied to Mr. Miller that such was the case, but it finally came out. This was contrary to what was being planned, and effort was made to have Barre change its date, but all to no avail.

The delegates to the bureau were therefore summoned by telegraph to a meeting which was held Monday where for several hours the delegates wrangled. There were eight present, which included two from Quincy, two from Barre, two from Milford, and one each from the National Association and Vermont Marble Co. All efforts to get Barre to change its date were unavailing and even when the Barre committee was communicated with by telephone they were obstinate and refused to give up the day.

Monday night the committee of the Quincy Manufacturers association met and after hearing the report of the meeting during the day voted to stick to the date for the "Quincy day" as planned. This means that there will be two affairs on the same day but as Quincy has much more in the way of entertainment to offer than has Barre it will be very strange if two-thirds of the party do not accept the Quincy invitation. About all that Barre could offer was a barbecue and those who partook of one of Barre's barbecue's several years ago do not want to repeat the experiment.

As now planned, and as will be carried out, the delegates to the convention will be met in Boston on the morning of August 22 with automobiles and after being given a ride through the park system of Boston they will be taken to some of the quarries at West Quincy, thence through the cutting district and South Quincy, and then to City Square where they will be received by the Mayor.

From here they will go to Nantasket where the Palm Garden will be the headquarters and where dinner will be served. In the evening the trip back to Boston will be made in one of the Nantasket steamboats.

It was suggested to the delegates on Monday that the convention business would not be finished in time for the party to leave Boston on a special train Thursday night, Aug. 21, and that if Barre, would only made its date Saturday or Monday that it would probably get a larger party. It was suggested that a special train leave Boston Sunday evening and arrive in Barre early Monday morning. If this was carried out a larger number would go on the trip and it would be more successful in every way.

While it was admitted that this was doubtless true, the Barre committee remained firm in their decision to hold it on Friday, Aug. 22, so that as far as things now look there will be two outings on the same day and the granite city which offers the greatest attraction will get the crowd.

It is expected that there will be at least one thousand delegates to the convention.

OFFICER NOW ON DUTY

To Enforce Quarantine in Diphtheria Cases

Now Epidemic on Water St.

The carelessness of families infected with diphtheria in the Water street section, between Franklin street and Quincy avenue, and in some cases their utter disregard of quarantine regulations, has resulted in the placing of one of the stiffest propositions in the way of the Quincy Board of Health that they have been confronted with for some years.

Monday, Dr. Fred E. Jones, chairman of the board, made a requisition on Chief of Police Burrell for a police officer to be stationed in the vicinity to strictly enforce the law requiring people living in houses which are inhabited by patients to remain within the precincts of their home.

A few weeks ago similar measures were introduced and when a decrease became noticeable in diphtheria cases the officer was relieved from further duty. Now, however, people who acted as carriers before that officer was assigned to the district, have been the cause of new cases breaking out and today there are 10 known diphtheria cases which are dangerous from the contagion standpoint.

When the disease first made its appearance among the Italian families there seemed to be no unusual spread since a firm regard for the quarantine regulations was held by the families, but on the first signs of cure they commenced acting as germ carriers. It was then that more than the normal number of cases were reported to the board.

Dr. Jones has been spending considerable time in the district, trying to find out the real cause of the spread of the disease, and it is his conclusion that people were not obeying the strict letter of the law. He therefore made the requisition for the officer to be stationed there in hopes of stopping the neighborhood calling which has been carried on by relatives and friends, regardless of the disease.

Most of the families affected are Italians, although several cases were reported in the homes of other people. A further violation of the quarantine laws will result in the firm prosecution of offenders, regardless of sex, race or age.

—A toy company at Sheboygan, Wis., started out to use only the waste wood from other mills. It has worked out a system of using all small waste pieces so that practically nothing but the sawdust is lost.

GIBBONS IS SEVENTY-NINE

Cardinal Thinks Death Summons Will Be Sudden When It Comes

Baltimore, July 22.—Cardinal Gibbons is celebrating his 79th birthday here in the town of his birth today. He says he does not expect to live much longer.

"My life is nearly spent," he told a visitor. "I will soon be an octogenarian, and nature must take its course. God has blessed me with a long life, and I am ready to answer whenever He sees fit to call me to render an account of my stewardship. I think it will not be long now," and there was no sorrow in his voice.

"And when the call comes," he added, "I think it will be a sudden one. We should all be ready for the call, because we don't know how soon it may come."

PROSECUTION WON'T DISCLOSE ITS HAND

Chief Justice Denies Motions of the Eaton Defense

Boston, July 22.—Counsel for Mrs. Jennie M. Eaton, who is to go to trial Oct. 13 on a charge of murder in poisoning her husband, Rear Admiral Joseph G. Eaton, lost the three most important of four motions made to force the government's hand before the trial day.

Counsel for the defense made motions that the district attorney be compelled to furnish the defense a transcript of the grand jury evidence, access to all government exhibits in the case, a bill of particulars regarding the specific poison used and the names of all grand jury witnesses.

Chief Justice Aiken allowed only the last motion for names of grand jury witnesses, but these are a matter of record. The other three are denied.

ROSA BRUNO FINED $100

The continued case against Rosa Bruno for assault on Rosario Cuombo with a dangerous weapon at Quincy, was heard this morning in the district court. She was found guilty and fined $100. An appeal was taken.

This is the case that grew out of the case which the woman had against Cuombo in court several days ago when he was charged with threatening to assault her. At the hearing in that case she testified that when she saw Cuombo in front of her house she went up stairs and getting her revolver fired two shots at him to frighten him away. The bullets went wide from their mark however. After the court had placed Cuombo under bonds to keep the peace for three months he swore out a warrant against the woman for assault with a dangerous weapon. It was on this complaint that she was fined $100.

BIG FIRE SALE.

Bargain hunters, and their name is legion, are anxiously waiting for Friday morning when the doors of the Payson-Mitchell gents furnishing store will open for one of the largest fire sales ever held in Quincy. On Sunday morning July 6, flames were seen coming from the basement of the Payson-Mitchell store in City Square, and before they had been conquered by the firemen heavy damage had been done.

The insurance losses have been settled and the thousands of dollars worth of clothing and gents' furnishing goods damaged largely by smoke and water will be put on sale Friday morning. The goods must be disposed of and therefore prices have been slashed. The knife has been put deep and turned round. Watch for their advertisement in Thursday's Daily Ledger.

SPECTACULAR FIRE AT WEYMOUTH

Main Building of American Fertilizer Co. Totally Destroyed with Smaller Buildings, Tenements and Lighter

Quincy and Hingham Fire Departments Render Valuable Assistance

Quincy firemen rendered valuable aid Tuesday afternoon at the fire which did a damage estimated at $200,000 to the American Fertilizer works at North Weymouth, better known as the Bradley Fertilizer plant.

A telephone call for aid was received by Chief Litchfield about 4 o'clock and he immediately dispatched the Central station steamer, and auto combination for the scene, accompanying them in his own car.

The Steamer made good time with its three-horse hitch, and on its arrival was stationed on the wharf between the building containing finished product awaiting shipment and the large pile of coal beneath the run near the main mill which was the first building to be swept by the flames.

Aid was also sent by Hingham which sent a hose company, Hook & Ladder Co., and its auto pump. Chief Cushing was also present.

The Quincy firemen prevented the spread of the fire to the finished product warehouse, while the Hingham firemen prevented the fire from spreading to a large number of small buildings situated on the northerly side of the peninsular, occupied by the workmen by confining the blaze to a large frame house which had been gutted.

The fire started from an explosion of niter in one of the lighters tied up at the wharf. The first explosion caused explosions in a second lighter and lighters Nos. 10 and 12 were rent asunder and sunk. Capt. Charles Franklin and his wife were aboard No. 10 and were thrown overboard by the explosion. They were rescued by Capt. Stephen Monahan of No. 12.

From the lighters the fire communicated to the main planing mill and carpenters shop burning them flat. There was a stiff southwest breeze blowing which drove the flames to some of the tenement houses, two of which were destroyed and several others badly scorched.

So fierce were the flames in the planing mill and carpenter shop that not a board was left, all that remained being the frame work of some of the machinery. There were 350 men at work in these two buildings but they managed to escape.

An alarm was sent in on the Weymouth circuit and on the arrival of District Chief Wolf he saw that the fire was too great for his department to cope with and calls for help were sent to Quincy and Hingham, both of which responded. A call was also sent to Boston for a fire boat, and No. 44 was sent down arriving about 5 o'clock.

The fire boat was stationed near the wharf and sent three powerful streams of salt water onto the burning embers, and into the remains of a building where there were a number of carboys of niter. As the water struck these carboys it caused their explosion and for a time there was a series of explosions which sent sparks and dead material high into the air.

With the first explosion many thought that the fire had communicated to the stored chemicals and the crowd that lined the wharf beat a hasty retreat.

The main acid building was to the westward of fire and was not reached by the flames which had been carried toward the water end on the plant by the wind.

Many of the employees at the plant had narrow escapes from the flames which spread with lightning-like rapidity, and it was remarkable that several did not lose their lives. As far as known however none of the employees at the factory were injured.

The fire was under control shortly after 5 o'clock, although the firemen said that it would be hours before the smouldering ruins would be extinguished. The out of town firemen were sent home by 6 o'clock but the Weymouth department remained on duty all night playing on the burning embers.

John F. Towles, a representative of the company, said that the fire would not seriously handicap the plant, as there were enough buildings remaining in which to continue work. He also said that the burned buildings would probably be rebuilt, for which three months would be required.

The fire made a dense smoke and could be seen for miles. It was no long before the scene of the fire was located and then there was a great rush of people from Weymouth, Quincy, Hingham and other places to the scene. Hundreds of automobiles were soon on the scene while many more came in electric cars.

Others came over from the Quincy and Weymouth shores by boats, so that there were thousands of spectators on the scene during the height of the fire.

In addition to these the Hingham shore of the river opposite from the plant was black with spectators while every prominent piece of land in the neighborhood contained its quota of sightseers. Chief Mullen of the Boston fire department also came down in his automobile over the road and rendered valuable assistance.

Just how the fire started is somewhat of a mystery. Men were at work unloading the lighter and the load was about half out when flames suddenly started among some baggage on the deck. There was no fire near them and the only solution is that sparks from a pile driver near by must have dropped on the inflammable material.

There were several other lighters tied up to the wharf but they were at the westerly end and were drawn out of range by one of the tug boats These tug boats also did good service with their one line of fire hose.

The firemen were somewhat handicapped by lack of water for a time but when the steamers from Quincy and Weymouth arrived they played salt water. Weymouth's second steamer and the auto pump from Hingham playing fresh water. There were plenty of hydrants surrounding

FORE RIVER MACHINIST

Fred Anderson Passes Away in 69th Year

Fred Anderson, for many years in the employ of the Fore River Shipbuilding corporation as a machinist, died Tuesday morning at his home 164 South Walnut street, in his 69th year. He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Albert Collier of Braintree, and four sons, Oscar, Carl, Russell and Connell, all of Quincy.

Mr. Anderson, because of his age, was one of the first to come under the ban of the compensation act, which requires a company to employ men only under the best of conditions when old age is reached. Shortly after his employment ceased at the Fore River yard Mr. Anderson developed a nervous trouble which resulted in his death.

He has been here for many years and was a well known and respected resident particularly among the Norwegian people. He was active in many of their societies in his younger days.

His funeral was held from his home his afternoon. Services were conducted by Rev. Leander Hokenson, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery. There was a profusion of floral tributes. Among those attending were members of the Norwegian Society of Quincy of which his son is an active member.

GIFTS AWARDED.

The committee in charge of the recent June festival of St. Mary's parish announced Tuesday evening that the lace handkerchief presented by Mrs Woodrow Wilson, wife of President Wilson, had been awarded Mrs. William Cashman. A doll, presented by Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston and named "Columbia" by him in honor of the flag day on which the affair was held was awarded ot Edward Cashman in a popularity contest after over 200 had failed to guess the name.

Mrs. Walter Packard of Hancock street, who is recovering from an operation performed at the Quincy City Hospital, is reported this morning as doing well.

THE NEW ADAMS

Rapid Progress On New Schoolhouse

Location Is Very Sightly

Unless some unforseen accident mars the final lap in the construction of the new Adams school, the building will be ready for occupancy on September 2, the opening of the school year, and the children who attend classes in the antiquated wooden school house that is located on Phipps street will have reason to be pleased at the change in the educational conditions in the third ward.

At the present time the interior finish is being rapidly placed. Everything in the line of construction has been set, even the heating apparatus. The spacious corridors and the well lighted and modern ventilated rooms are inviting, and aside from the attractions offered from an architectural standpoint the site of the building overlooks the length and breadth of the entire city.

From here can be seen the roofs of all but two of the school buildings of the city, Wollaston and Atlantic being hidden from view by Third Hill. The building is in the paths of all winds, even the northeaster will have an open sweep by it, but the up to date heating apparatus will take care of the comfort of the pupils.

The Parents-Teachers Association have created a nice little fund for decorative purposes and the fine possibilities offered by the well planned building will be taken advantage of by the members who have looked forward to just such a building for years.

All the staff regularly pay the premises a visit to see how far the work has progressed and many of the members of the School Committee are keeping an anxious eye on the completion of the contract.

The building has rather a political significance since several candidates for mayor will probably make it a campaign issue, their later day conclusions not jibing with their views when the site was chosen.

In a short time active work will be commenced on the grading and all behind the high wall which runs around the northerly boundary will be filled in. The southerly side will need little or no grading.

CROWDS AT PLAYGROUNDS

Over 4000 on Three Fields in Six Days

The attendance at all of the supervised playgrounds was very good last week despite the fact that there was one whole day that the grounds were not open on account of the rain. The grand total was 4,334 for the three wards. Of this number 2,282 were boys.

Ward Three led as usual with the good mark of 2,105, of whom 1,032 were boys. Ward Two had a good week with a total of 1,215 while Ward Four had 1,014 for their total.

On Thursday afternoon of last week the West Quincy grounds had the largest attendance of its history when 368 children enjoyed its many privileges.

NORWEGIAN SOCIETY.

A meeting of the Norwegian Society of Quincy was held in the Johnson building Tuesday evening and matters of importance to the society were discussed by the large attendance. Resolutions were passed on the death of Fred Anderson of 164 South Walnut street and a sum of money was appropriated for his widow. A delegation was detailed to attend the funeral.

The horn of an angered cow punctured the palm of the left hand of John J. Griffiths, at the barn in the rear of his home, 22 High street, on Monday evening. The wound was treated by Dr. John H. Ash, who said it was not serious.

PUBLIC BATHS POPULAR

All Ages At Ward Two Bathhouse

Very Free From Accidents

Hundreds, yea thousands of local residents have patronized the public bath house at Quincy Point, the private bath houses at the Quincy Shore reservation and a private bath house at Houghs Neck, since the opening of the summer season.

Beyond doubt the most popular of all places is the reservation because of the long stretch of shore, the good bathing bottom and its nearness to the residential section of Norfolk Downs.

Not one whit behind in popularity however is the public bath house at Quincy Point which was built by the city as a venture and which immediately became the most popular public building in Quincy.

While men are not expected to do much cooking nowadays, it does seem as if they ought to be able to get up a pitcher of ice water without calling in their wives to help.

Not having sent your trunk off a week in advance, of course you must not expect anything to wear but your travelling suit during your first few days at the summer resort.

President Wilson's daughters having played base ball at Windsor, no one can any longer claim they are not competent to vote.

Chicago is to have 10 policewomen. It is predicted that they will not devote quite as much attention to keeping order among the nursemaids.

Your wife will be glad to have you take hold and help "swat the fly," particularly if you pick the new parlor wall paper as a place to display your prowess.

Some Americans must have been making the incendiary statement that the Mexicans should go to work, as they are parading the streets and shouting "Death to Yankees."

Should Barre, Vermont, succeed at the close of the Retail Granite Dealers convention in Boston, in getting the delegates as far away as Vermont it is probable that half of them would not return to Boston for the welcome to be extended by Quincy, however grand the reception planned. If Barre realizes this, it is a mean trick which the granite dealers there would consummate. The Quincy granite manufacturers are making no effort to keep the delegates away from Barre, but Quincy is in greater Boston, and to save time and travel the delegates will want to visit Quincy while at Boston. The Quincy manufacturers are right in insisting that the outing day at Quincy shall come the day after the convention adjourns.

The conspicuous part which Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy took during the three months' tour of the Boston Chamber of Commerce men in South America was an honor to Quincy. Although a pleasure it was doubtless a task to act as president and diplomat. The tourists came from many walks of life, and were strangers to each other, and must be brought together; they visited several foreign countries, and it would not do to provoke jealousy among those countries; then hosts spoke a different tongue, so that interpreters were usually necessary; then customs are different.

Therefore Quincy is pleased at the praise the Boston papers are showering on Col. Kincaide. Thomas F. Anderson in the Globe says:

"The other incident was one in which Col. Kincaide himself played the leading role. Upon him had devolved another heavy responsibility of the tour—the diplomatic or 'glad hand' part, and it must be conceded that he met the test on every occasion that he was called upon to meet a President, respond to a toast at a banquet, greet a welcoming delegation or give an interview to a Spanish speaking newspaper representative.

"Of the half-hundred or more speeches that our several spokesmen were called upon to make during the tour, Col. Kincaide's share naturally was much the larger.

"It was with the utmost pleasure, therefore, that we arranged a complimentary banquet in his honor while the ship was plowing through blue Caribbean waters, and presented him a silver loving cup, in testimony of our high respect and esteem. The presentation address was made by Ex-Mayor James Logan of Worcester who happily summarized the virtues of 'the Colonel,' as revealed to us throughout the tour, his tactfulness and unfailing serenity under trying circumstances being properly commended.

"To Col. Kincaide much of the success of the expedition, and much of the pleasure of its participants unquestionably is due.

"Vice Pres. Logan, with his effective speeches and perennial good nature, also contributed a whole lot to the general success of the trip, and he, like Messrs Kincaide and Dillingham, made many warm friends in the south.

"The conventions of the occasion were looked right after by the leaders of the tour; and one of the interesting incidents of the voyage up the Pacific was the sending by wireless of cordial messages of thanks to the presidents, governors, Committees and others who had entertained us in Buenos Ayres, Montevideo, Rio, Bahia and other places. On several instances messages from our late entertainers, expressing the hope for a pleasant voyage followed us to sea.

"Thus was further knit together the bonds that hereafter will be stronger than ever between our country and those at Latin America.

"To sum it up, the Boston Chamber of Commerce delegation has returned from its successful and historic tour of South America and its near neighbors convinced of these among many other truths:

"That the people of all of these Latin-American Nations have the most friendly feelings toward the people of the United States, and want to come closer to us, socially and commercially.

"That there are hundreds of trade and investment opportunities there for the manufacturers and exporters of our country, if they care to go after them in the right way.

"That the relations between North and South America will never be on a satisfactory basis until a fast steamship line flying the United States flag is established and a strong bank supported by United State capital is founded in the more important South American countries.

"That our manufacturers desiring to remain or engage with export trade absolutely must conform to certain requirements as to exploiting their business, packing, invoicing, shipping and distributing.

"That our manufacturers likewise must send to South America their own representatives, and must occasionally visit these countries themselves and get personally acquainted with the South American people and their customs.

"That the commercial organizations of the United States must at once begin to take intelligent interest in the entire question of South American trade opportunities, comparable with that which has long been manifested by the Department of State, the Department of Foreign and Domestic Commerce and the Pan-American Union.

"These are but a few of our many discoveries."

AUTOMOBILE BLOCKADE

Breaks Down Near Tracy Turnout on Washington Street

A path, four cylinder automobile, numbered 32985, operated by W. H. Berry of 71 Benton road, West Somerville, and carrying a woman as a passenger broke down opposite the Tracy turnout on Washington street at the busiest hour Tuesday evening and tied up car service on the East Weymouth and Nantasket lines for over 15 minutes.

Hundreds of automobiles, and carriages were returning from the Bradley fire at North Weymouth and stopped in the street, forming a crowd much larger than usually seen in that vicinity.

The accident occurred when the nuckle snapped at the hub of the right wheel and when the broken end struck the car tracks and paving the axle snapped at the hub of the left wheel. The machine was being operated at a moderate rate and the occupants were not thrown from their seats.

One wheel started a merry roll down Washington street. When near the Central garage it spun the required number of times and lay flat in the dust. The other ran along the stretch of lawn at the home of Hugh Tracy, a distance of nearly 100 feet.

The service crew of the Central garage was called and removed the machine from the tracks, opening car service. Nearly an hour was consumed in taking the machine from the spot to the garage. The running board and mud guard were smashed beyond repair and it is estimated that the damage will approximate about $100. The car is practically new, having been in service only two months.

MIX-UP AT HOUGHS NECK

All Over a $2 Bill and Pint of Ice Cream

An unexplainable mixup in the making of change at a Houghs Neck store early this week resulted in a court case, and probably ill-feeling between two families. The case was one where Leila M. O'Connell charged Mary Erkhardt with the larceny of a $2 bill.

According to the story told in court the little girl of Mrs. Erkhardt entered the store of Mrs. O'Connell and bought a pint of ice cream tendering in payment therefor a $2 bill, for which $1.85 cents change was given. A little later the girl came back stating that it was a $5 bill that had been tendered for payment of the ice cream, and she wanted the balance of the change. This was denied and a little later Mrs. Erkhardt appeared on the scene to demand the proper change. She declared that she had but a $5 bill and a $10 bill, and that the $5 had been sent with the little girl.

Mrs. O'Connell declared that she only had four dollars in change before the transacions, all ones and hat she now had a $2 bill and no fives. Sheproduced her money to back up her statement, when it is alleged that Mrs. Erkhardt grabbed the $2 bill and departed.

The court said that she was technically guilty of larceny and advised that the money be returned and that redress be sought from the civil side of the court. If this was done the case would be placed on file. Mrs. Erkhardt took the court's advise and left the court room declaring that she would commence a civil suit for her money.

BAZAAR AT SQUANTUM.

Plans are all completed for a merry time Saturday afternoon and evening at Callahan's Oval, when the Squantum Women's club hold a bazaar and dancing party. The grounds will be opened at 4 o'clock and there will be attractions to interest all visitors up to midnight. On the lawn under the pine trees will be located booths where attractive home-made articles will be for sale. At 7.45 there will be an entertainment followed by dancing to music by the Postal Clerks orchestra.

SPECTACULAR FIRE

the plant and fire squad at the plant did good service at the start but the spread was so rapid that they were unable to cope with the flames, and by the time the first piece of fire apparatus arrived it looked as though the whole point was doomed.

Most of the small buildings on the extreme easterly point are occupied by Polanders employed at the plant and many hastened to remove their household effects, so that way over to the north out of danger there were great piles of household effects. As soon however as it was seen that their homes had been saved the furnishings were taken back. The families in the two burned buildings however lost all of their household effects although the family washing of one family was saved by James R. Qualey of Braintree who braving the heat of the burning house rushed up and cut the clothes line winding up the clothing as he came away from the building.

MADE THE BEST OF IT.

A Quincy bound car met with an accident to its motor at the foot of the Newport avenue hill at a late hour Tuesday night, and while waiting for a set back many of the passengers walked to Quincy square in an effort to connect with the 11.05 East Weymouth car. Among these was a couple, apparently happily married, who joshed each other on the shaded walk along Adams street. A cumbersome lawn swing, packed in excelsior and held in place by a wooden frame was noticed among the bundles the man was carrying. He had a few others of small proportions but did not seem to mind his load. His wife, after witnessing his struggle for the balance of power remarked "What fools we poor mortals be." They walked in the direction of Braintree.

FALSE ALARM.

The alarm from Box 322 shortly before one o'clock this morning was false. The box is situated at Granite and Centre streets and has been recently installed. No clue was obtained as to who summoned the department in so unceremonious a manner.

SQUANTUM PERSONALS.

Mrs. John McCloud and her two children, Miss Jennie McCloud and Charles McCloud of Brooklyn, N. Y., are the guests for the rest of the summer of Mr. and Mrs. George Morrill at their summer home on Gladstone street.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lovejoy and their son and daughter, Paul and Hazel Lovejoy, are on their sailing yacht on a three day's cruise along the coast.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Howard Dargie and daughter, Miss Muriel Dargie, are the guests for two weeks of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Smith at their bungalow on Wedgewood street.

How to Build Up or Tear Down This Community

BY J. O. LEWIS

The Strength of the Wheel.

THE wheel, composed of hub, spokes and tire, is one of the most useful and one of the strongest of man's mechanical devices. It also illustrates well the manner in which various parts are needed to make a perfect whole. A GOOD TOWN, A CENTER OF TRADE, RESEMBLES A WHEEL. With all of its contributing factors closely wedged in like the spokes fit into the hub of a wheel the prosperous country surrounding it holds it together like the tire holds the wheel.

So long as all parts are in place the device runs smoothly and is a perfect machine. Remove a spoke and THE WHEEL AT ONCE BECOMES WEAKER and is no stronger than its weakest point.

TO HAVE AND TO MAINTAIN A GOOD SOLID TOWN EVERY KIND OF BUSINESS MUST BE FIRMLY ESTABLISHED, AND AROUND THESE MUST BE UNITED PEOPLE WORKING FOR THE COMMON GOOD.

Destroy the mercantile business or the manufacturing business or the banking business and, like removing a spoke from the wheel, you weaken the interests of the whole.

Send your money to mail order houses or patronize merchants in other cities and you take away that patronage which rightfully belongs to the home merchant and thereby undermine the business of the town. All classes or kinds of business are so closely related and interlocking that when you damage one you damage all.

But we have a beautiful little city, prosperous, growing and happy, and in it we have some of the best merchants, banks, mills, jobbers and factories conducted by as fine a set of men as you will find anywhere on earth. We have fine schools, handsome churches, excellent public utilities and many fine buildings the equal of any city of its size in the entire country, and ALL MADE POSSIBLE BY THE BUSINESS MEN—big hearted, progressive and aggressive hustlers and boosters.

There is hardly a day that the business men—merchants, banks, jobbers, mills, etc.—are not called on to make a subscription or donation to some institution or some worthy cause—to do something, if you please, for greater building or better living. And that they generously give and have given is proved in the many institutions we have for the intellectual, moral and the spiritual uplift of our citizens. Therefore, when you solicit a subscription from these business men of your home city you should feel in duty bound to give them what assistance you can and to always patronize them to the exclusion of others and outsiders.

THE VALUE OF YOUR HOME, THE RENTAL OF YOUR PROPERTY, THE PRICE OF LOTS—ALL ARE BASED ON THE SUCCESS OF YOUR BUSINESS MEN.

If the town has a lot of vacant stores, idle factories, mills running on half time, there can be no substantial value to property. Therefore, to keep the stores rented, the dwellings occupied and a general good tone to property values it is necessary that you GIVE TO YOUR HOME PEOPLE YOUR ENTIRE SUPPORT.

Patronizing mail order houses is not altogether limited to poor people or to farmers or to people who do not know the hurt they are doing the home town, but is a common practice among certain well known, well to do men. I believe this is more the result of thoughtlessness and of being misled by embellished and highly exaggerated descriptions than through a spirit of antagonism to the home merchant. Moreover, I firmly believe that when you think over this matter seriously and carefully, analyzing it in every detail, that hereafter YOU WILL GIVE YOUR HOME MERCHANT YOUR TRADE.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred Dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

TURKS GET ADRIANOPLE

This important city, which was taken from Turkey by the Bulgarians after a long campaign and at the cost of thousands of lives, has been recaptured by the Turks. The loss of the city is said to have compelled Bulgaria to sue for peace.

CREATES BAD IMPRESSION

Europe Stirred by News That Turks Have Reoccupied Adrianople

London, July 23.—The official announcement made at Constantinople that the Turkish troops had reoccupied the citadel of Adrianople created the worst possible impression in diplomatic circles, and no time was lost by the powers in starting an exchange of views with the object of finding the best means of checkmating Turkey's action, which is looked upon as a clear defiance of all Europe.

The nex few hours are likely to decide whether or not forces hitherto unengaged shall enter the Balkan cockpit. Russia is understood to be ready to accept the mandate of Europe to compel the porte to respect the treaty of London, which the Ottomans are now tearing up, and the British cabinet meets today to consider whether this government shall consent to active intervention on the part of Russia.

THIRTY-FIVE MEN ARE BURNED ALIVE

Negro Convicts Trapped by Fire in a Wooden Cage

Jackson, Miss., July 23.—Thirty-five negro convicts sleeping on the second floor of a wooden cage at the Oakley convict farm, twenty miles southwest of Jackson, were burned to death shortly before midnight.

The fire started on the first floor at the stairway landing, cutting off the only avenue of escape. The structure was an ancient wooden affair.

The convict farm is not equipped with any form of fire protection. Two night watchmen are employed at the place.

WATSON'S IRE AROUSED

Talk of Criminal Libel Brings Forth Retraction From Mulhall

Washington, July 23.—Martin M. Mulhall yesterday retracted the most serious charge he has made before the senate investigating committee.

He swore Monday that former Representative Watson of Indiana had been employed by private interests in 1909, while he was still a member of the house, to work for a tariff commission bill.

He testified yesterday what he had sworn to Monday was wrong; that Watson was not a member of the house at that time.

Reports that Watson, who is in Washington, was about to ask a District of Columbia grand jury to indict Mulhall for criminal libel were heard about the investigating room all morning. Mulhall had volunteered his retraction shortly after the noon recess.

A MODERN ELOPEMENT

French Airman Flies Off With Governess in an Aeroplane

Paris, July 23.—A young airman was giving exhibition flights at Niort when a pretty governess fell in love with him. A few days later the airman eloped with her in his aeroplane.

The girl's father loiged a complaint against the airman, accusing him of abducting his daughter. The governess said she had eloped with the airman of her own free will. The father's complaint was dismissed.

PUBLIC BATHS POPULAR

It is difficult to estimate the number of people who have donned their suits at this place. Time and time again the lockers have been occupied. The patrons register from the six year old tot to the grey haired person who learned to swim probably before the war.

One and all, irrespective of creed or nationality, await their turn and today, there was a steady stream of humanity wending its way across the Ward Two playground which offers the easiest approach to the only public bath house in the city.

And it can be said in a boastful fashion that no fatalities have occurred there this year and not even a narrow escape has been reported, although several were taken from the water in an exhausted condition earlier in the season. The utter absence of accidents is due to the thoughtful actions of the people who while they indulge in all the water sports they do not neglect to take the precautions necessary for prevention of accidents.

John Starr who has been in charge of the building since it was opened to the public is still the man of the hour and aside from keeping an anxious crowd in good mood while awaiting their turn he is also the life guard. He has a couple of rescues to his credit, but it is hard to get him to mention the names of the people he snatched from death. In John Starr the city has one official who acts first, and then forgets the incident.

REBELLION IN SOUTHERN CHINA

Prospect That It Will Be Soon Crushed, as Yuan Has Money, Troops and Support of Powers to Aid Him In Suppressing Secessionists, Who Are Badly Trained

Pekin, July 23.—Trade throughout southern China has been dislocated by the proclamation of the independence of the province of Kwang-Tung. In Canton great anxiety has been created, stores have been closed, and many merchants have telegraphed to shippers not to consign goods here for the present.

Many persons have left Canton in junks, and others have gone north on foot. Thousands more have flocked into the Portuguese colony of Macao, and into Honk Kong, among the latter being officials who have retired from their posts carrying with them millions of dollars in silver and paper money.

There is a strong feeling of resentment throughout the southern provinces against the policy of provisional President Yuan Shi Kai, but it is felt in some quarters that it will be impossible to resist him for long, as he commands a large trained army, possesses money, and has the support of the great powers.

The fact that the merchants of Hong Kong do not sympathize with the independence movement is regarded among foreign observers as a sign that the revolt will be short lived.

It was not expected in Canton that the province of Kwang-Si would follow the example of Kwang-Tung. A false rumor, however, was circulated that the governor of Kwang-Si had fled to Hong Kong on board a British vessel.

Governor Chang Hsun of Kwang-Tung secretly visited Hong Kong on Friday, but has since returned. Former Governor Wu Hon-Min of Kwang-Tung, who was at one time secretary to Dr. Sun Yat Sen, also has gone back.

Before the proclamation of independence Governor Chang Hsun, who was appointed to the post only two weeks ago by Yuan Shi Kai, addressed the assembly at Canton, declaring his disapproval of the policy of independence for Kwang-Tung which had been introduced. A few of the members supported him with speeches, but the motion was carried and independence proclaimed.

Governor Chang Hsun during his short period of office had applied to Pekin for $10,000,000 to place the finances of the province on a stable footing. On Friday last he received from the central government $1,500,000 for this purpose, and he contends that plenty of money is available.

It is the general belief that a fight will occur on the arrival of General Lung and that the 60,000 secessionist troops, who are for the most part badly trained and undisciplined, will not offer much resistance.

Several Chinese war vessels are awaited at Canton and the British fleet has been strengthened by the arrival of several units. A strict censorship has in the meantime been established over all telegrams.

BARGAINS! BARGAINS!

The Payson-Mitchell company whose great fire sale opens Friday morning are preparing to handle the immense crowds of bargain seekers who are sure to attend this phenominal sale, by the employment of a large number of additional clerks. Without doubt, this will be one of the greatest fire sales ever held outside of Boston. Not only will it be a genuine sale but genuine bargains will be offered.

Of course some of their large stock of clothing was burned by the fire of July 6, but there were thousands of dollars worth of other clothing and gentlemen's furnishing goods that were only slightly damaged by smoke and water. This of course does not injure the wearing quality but naturally injures the market value.

It is to dispose of this large stock that the sale is to be held and at which prices will be sacrificed. At this sale a dollar will purchase fully as much as $2 or $3 did before the sale. All the popular brands of shirts, straw hats, underwear, hosiery, neckwear, umbrellas, raincoats, sweaters, etc., and in fact everything usually found in a first-class gentlemen's furnishings store will be found on the counters, and the early comer gets the best bargains.

McCRACKEN'S BRIDE COMES

Married on Arrival of the Parisian at Boston

No official return of the marriage of John McCracken to Miss Sarah J. Stewart, who arrived from Belfast, Ireland, on the steamship Parisian, Monday, has as yet been received, although the marriage was solemnized at noon Tuesday. The girl spent Monday night at the immigration station and bright and early Tuesday morning McCracken was on hand with his license ready to claim his bride who had travelled the thousands of miles to meet and marry the sweetheart of her girlhood days.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Herbert Manchester a Presbyterian clergyman in the presence of several inspectors and friends of McCracken, who heartily congratulated the couple after the ceremony and wished them all the good luck possible.

Immediately after the ceremony they left for Quincy where they will make their home at 60 Baxter street. McCracken has been in this country several years and by hard work and self denial accumulated the necessary funds to send for his bride and start housekeeping. His bride was an expert weaver in the Belfast, Ireland, mills.

WILLARD ST. HIGHWAY

Towns to the South Are Now Backing Out

Mayor Stone visited the office of the State Highway Commission on Tuesday relative to accepting a part of Willard street as a State highway. It was the plan at first for all of the towns interested, south of Quincy to petition for the acceptance of the street, the plan being to have a State highway clear through to Brockton. From what can be learned however it would appear that some of the towns south of Quincy, who were at first interested in the matter, are now backing out, and for this reason the Highway Commission has taken no action, either favorable or unfavorable. It is understood however that the Highway Commission is to hold a meeting today and that the matter of Willard street would be considered.

DISTRICT COURT.

Thomas E. Martin was fined $10, Edward D. McDermott $5, Charles E. Smeltzer $5, Harry C. Dodge $10, and Harry J. O'Mera $10 for violation of the Metropolitan Park rules.

John Kane of Quincy was fined $10 and Patrick C. Creedon of Milton $5 for drunkenness.

John F. Crockett was arraigned for non support at Quincy. Case continued until Aug. 1.

BRIEFS

Rev. Edward Norton is preaching at the Union church at East Braintree, where Rev. R. H. Cochrane recently resigned.

Lester William Harrison of 29 Newport avenue, Wollaston, and Miss Vica Ellen Lewis of Arlington, were married Monday evening by Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath, pastor of the Wollaston Congregational church. The groom is a clerk employed at Boston and has many friends at Wollaston.

Mrs. A. Gayette of Botolph street gave an afternoon whist Tuesday afternoon on her grounds. The trees were draped very prettily in bunting red, white, and blue, and they furnished shade in an ideal spot for such an occasion. Mrs. Rednor P. Coombs won first prize, Mrs. Charles R. Safford second, and consolation was given Mrs. Hosmer. Refreshments were served.

A broken handle of a bicycle pump penetrated and badly wounded the right hand of Russell Pierce, son of John C. Pierce of Centre street, at Ossipee, N. H., where the boy is spending his vacation. The accident occurred while he was pumping up a tire. Because of the position of the wound and the danger of infection the parents are worried over the boys condition. Reports received however are encouraging.

JOHNSON POPULAR WITH PARIS CROWDS

Gets $1200 a Night as Drawing Card In Folies Begeres

Paris July 23.—Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, appeared in the revue at the Folies Bergeres to fill in the gap caused by the absence of Anna Held, who was injured in an automobile accident. Johnson threw a medicine ball about and boxed four exhibition rounds.

The theatre was crowded and Johnson got a hearty welcome. According to popular report he is to receive $1200 a night, which is probably a good investment for the management. He will remain for the eleven night until the theatre closes, when he will make a tour of the provinces.

Johnson and his white wife did a turkey trot for a few minutes and the audience seemed to enjoy this more than Johnson's previous exhibitions.

KITE WIRE CROSSES CABLE

Boy Receives Electric Shock Which May Cost Him His Life

Newburyport, Mass., July 23.—Twenty-three hundred volts of electricity, the full charge of a high-tension cable line, coursed through the body of John Smith, 13 years old, burning him so severely that little hope is entertained for his recovery.

The boy received the charge when he grasped a wire kite string that was in contact with the cable line of the Amesbury Electric Light company at Salisbury Beach.

PEACE WITHIN THIRTY DAYS

Otherwise Intervention In Mexico Is Demanded

MURRAY OFFERS A RESOLUTION

Oklahoma Congressman Flays Huerta Regime and Asks That United States Take Possession of All Public Property In Republic and Prepare Mexicans For Self-Government

Washington, July 23.—A sensational resolution demanding intervention in Mexico within thirty days unless peace be restored, and denouncing the Huerta regime as one of "brute force, incendiarism, rapine and murder," was introduced in the house by Representative Murray, Democrat, of Oklahoma.

The intervention resolution provides that the president shall notify Mexico that peace must be restored, and that the lives and property of American citizens and all foreigners sojourning in Mexico shall be respected.

If disorder in the Mexican republic continues for another thirty days, the resolution provides, the president shall intervene, "establish peace and order and civil government, and take possession of all public property of the former republic of Mexico and hold the same until every item of expense and all damages for the deprivation of liberty or the destruction of property of any American citizen or citizen of any nation, has been fully compensated out of the Mexican revenues."

It is also demanded that, in the event of intervention, the president is empowered to rehabilitate the Mexican government, prepare the Mexicans for self-government and restore law and order, "and the president is authorized to use the land and naval forces of the United States for the accomplishment of all such purposes."

The preamble of the resolution defends the Monroe Doctrine and asserts that the United States is in duty bound to protect its own citizens in Mexico as well as the citizens of other nations.

On the heels of the demand for intervention came a dispatch from Havana saying that Garza Aldape, personal emissary of President Huerta, had declared:

"If the United States intervenes in Mexico, Japan will back us up."

Aldape has been in New York and is on his way back to Mexico. In his statement he denounces the United States for failing to recognize the Huerta regime, and called President Wilson an "academic ignoramus."

WEARS WHOLE WARDROBE

How Jerseyman Sought to Evade Attachment by Landlord

Passaic, N. J., July 23.—Adam Bartin was held for action by the grand jury on a charge of attempting to defraud his landlord.

When Bartin appeared he was wearing three undershirts, three outer shirts, three pairs of trousers, three pairs of socks and a small cap inside a straw hat. And yet Bartin said he was cold, insisted he was in a draught and asked if some one wouldn't please close the courtroom door.

Judge Breitman decided Bartin's outfit was designed to evade attachment of his wardrobe.

New Haven President Expected to Be Named Next Friday

New York, July 23.—It is probable that on Friday, at the regular meeting of the directors of the New Haven road, the special committee selected to choose a successor to President Mellen will make its report to the board. Two meetings were held yesterday by the special committee. The committee is composed of J. P. Morgan, T. N. Vail, William Skinner, Samuel Rea, Edward Milligan and R. W. Taft.

It is said on good authority that the committee will make known its choice to the board of directors at the regular meeting on Friday.

LARCENY OF TOWN FUNDS

Meacon, Whose Accounts Were Short $7000, Given Three Months

Salem, Mass., July 23.—Joseph L. Meacon, former town treasurer of Saugus, was sentenced in the Essex superior court to three months in the house of correction for stealing $675.94 of the town's funds, which were found to be short about $7000.

Feb. 10 Meacon pleaded guilty to three counts against him. He claims that $5000 and some checks were stolen from his store in Saugus, making the shortage in his accounts.

Prominent citizens asked clemency in his case and he received the minimum sentence.

HALF A HUNDRED KILLED BY FIRE

Flames Quickly Destroy Clothing Factory at Binghamton

BODIES RAIN FROM WINDOWS

Building Equipped With Fire Escapes, but Women and Girls Have No Time to Get Out Except by Leaping—Bears Strong Resemblance to Triangle Waist Company Holocaust

Binghamton, N. Y., July 23.—Fifty persons were killed, according to late estimates, and as many injured, a dozen of them mortally, in a fire which swept the four-story factory building of the Binghampton Clothing company. The victims were chiefly women and girls.

Twenty-two bodies have been recovered. In the city hospital and in private institutions are thirty injured.

Some two-score persons are known to have escaped, as by a miracle, from the building, which burst into flames like a tinder box and became a roaring furnace almost immediately after the first alarm was sounded.

About 125 persons were in the factory when the fire broke out. The unaccounted for, or most of them, are believed to be still in the red-hot ruins of the structure.

Around the scene of the catastrophe thousands watched the rescuers work, many in the great throng being restrained by the closely drawn police lines from rushing into the ruins in an effort to find the bodies of relatives or friends.

Water in many streams is being poured into the fiery pit that a few hours ago was the cellar of the burned establishment. As the ruins were cooled a bit from time to time in a spot upon which the streams were centred, men went forward to dig as long as human endurance would allow them to work. Occasionally a body was found and taken away.

It will take at least two days, the authorities believe, before the cellar can be cleared and the whole truth of the disaster revealed.

The big, outstanding fact of the catastrophe is its suddenness. In this the disaster bears a strong resemblance to the Triangle Waist company holocaust in New York city, where 147 lives were lost when the inflammable material upon which the employes were working and the waste which littered the floors blazed with inconceivable rapidity and set the imprisoned workers jumping from the windows to their death.

The parallel here fails only in the lesser height and different construction of the building and in the length of the list of dead and injured.

Another resemblance to the New York disaster is that the fire is believed to have been started by the careless throwing away of a cigaret butt or matches.

In the tragedy here the killing burst of flame followed quickly upon the alarm. There was small opportunity for any person to use the ordinary or even the emergency means of escape. Fire drills had been carried on regularly. In fact so regularly that the employes had found them monotonous.

The building was equipped with fire escapes and an automatic alarm system.

Life nets and extension ladders were useless. There was no chance of escape for those caught on the upper floors, except the chance of jumping, and this many took, while others fell, shriveled and crumpled with the heat.

Scarcely one of the survivors was able to give a connected account of what occurred on the upper floors of the factory when the employes there, mostly women and girls, realized that the fire call was no false alarm, and that death was sweeping down upon them. The coolest among them recalled that women fainted by dozens and that a scene of indescribable confusion occurred.

Some of the men employes seem to have kept their heads and to have done their best to rescue the imperiled women.

The fire escapes were not big enough to hold all who rushed madly to the exits, and there was a scramble for the windows. Then from windows and fire escapes bodies began dropping. They fell thick and fast.

The building was but four stories high and many who jumped, even from the topmost floor, escaped with their lives, although most of them were badly maimed.

It was on the fourth floor that most of the women operators were working, and it was among these that the loss of life and injury was greatest.

Needed Hair Cut and Shave

Millville, N. J., July 23.—Waldron Furry, a "wild man," frightened women and children roaming in the woods. He was "captured" and a basketful of hair clipped from his head and face.

Car Goes Trhough Bridge

Columbus, O., July 23.—Fifteen persons were injured, three seriously, when a traction car crashed through a temporary bridge over the Olentangy river at Stratford.

"BOMB" FOR CARNEGIE

Turns Out to Be Loud-Smelling Cheese Inclosed In Zinc Case

New York, July 23.—The mystery of the "bomb" which somebody sent to Andrew Carnegie in care of the secretary of the Carnegie corporation, who promptly turned it over to the police, who as promptly turned it over to the bureau of combustibles, has been solved. It was a juicy cheese enclosed in a smell-proof case of zinc.

After long deliberation as to what method should be used to determine the contents of the "bomb" without causing an explosion that would injure anybody, the officials of the bureau of combustibles took the "infernal machine" to a vacant lot.

There, from a safe distance, while an immense crowd waited with their fingers in their ears expecting an awful report, one of the officials leveled a rifle at the bomb and perforated it with a bullet. A thick yellow substance oozed from the hole and that was all that happened. Four more bullets were fired into the bomb and silence reigned.

Soon, however, a pungent odor became perceptible and even the laymen present were able to recognize the true nature of the "bomb."

NOW REFUSES TO WALK

Mrs. Pankhurst Takes New Tack In Fighting the Law

London, July 23.—In Holloway jail Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, leader of the militant suffragettes, continued her hunger strike as well as her newest form of protest—refusal to walk.

From the moment of her sensational re-arrest at the big meeting in London pavilion, Mrs. Pankhurst has declined food and refuses to move her feet. When the detectives seized her she sank down limply and they had to carry her out of the building. She forced them to carry her into the police station and then into Holloway jail.

All the women arrested at the London pavilion during the suffragette riot that accompanied the re-arrest of Mrs. Pankhurst were convicted in police court. They were given the alternative of sentences of from fourteen to twenty-one days in jail or paying fines. All of them chose imprisonment.

HOUSEWIVES TEACH TILLMAN SOMETHING

Reflection on Cooking Brings Him Fried Chickens

Washington, July 23.—When Senator Tillman, who is on a diet by order of his physician, declared somewhat peevishly that "the art of frying chicken is unknown in Washington," he had not reckoned with the housewives of the District of Columbia, many of them southerners and jealous of their ability to cook chicken in any fashion.

As a result the South Carolina statesman has been inundated with fried chickens. They come by parcel post and by messengers, until each day the senator's committee room takes on the appearance of a camp meeting ground.

At first Tillman sought to return the gifts, but few had the name of the donor on them, although many contained notes defying the senator to decry the fowl or the cooking.

Committee clerks and senate attendants, impressed to aid in keeping up with the incoming supply, are nearing a state of rebellion.

ACCUSED OF $20,000 THEFT

Salesman For Produce Company Said to Have Robbed Employers

Worcester, Mass., July 23.—Joseph Belli was arrested here, charged with the larceny of $20,000 from the W. H. Blodgett Produce company, by which he was employed as a salesman.

It is alleged Belli diverted to his own use money received from retailers to whom he had sold fruit and produce belonging to the firm.

He is 30 years old and has been employed by the Blodgett company for about ten years.

Hayden Will Not Act as Attorney In Diggs-Caminetti Case

Washington, July 23.—Thomas E. Hayden, appointed by President Wilson as an attorney in the Diggs-Caminetti "white slave" case, has declined the appointment.

Hayden, in a letter to Attorney General McReynolds, states that he finds that previous engagements will not permit him to be in San Francisco at the time the case is called for trial.

Convicts Help Save Prison

Ossining, N. Y., July 23.—Fire started in the mat shop at Sing Sing prison and quickly destroyed five buildings at an estimated loss of $150,000. About 200 convicts aided in preventing the flames from spreading to the prison proper.

THE Melting of Molly

LEAF SEVENTH.

Which?

"THE juice of a lemon in two glasses of cold water to be drunk immediately on waking!" Page eleven! I've handed myself that lemon every morning now until I am sensitive with myself about it. If there was ever anybody "on the water wagon" it's I, and I have to sit on the front seat from dawn to dusk to get in the gallon of water I'm supposed to consume in that time. Sometime I'm going to get mixed up and try to drink my bath if I don't look out. I dreamed night before last that I was taking a bath in a glass of ice cream soda water and trying to hide from Dr. John behind the dab of ice cream that seemed inadequate for food or protection. I haven't had even one glass for two months, and I woke up in a cold perspiration of embarrassment and raging hunger.

I don't know what I'm going to do about this book and I've got myself into trouble about writing things beside records in it. He looked at me this morning as coolly as if I was just anybody and said:

"I would like to see that record now, Mrs. Molly. It seems to me you are about as slim as you want to be. How did you tip the scales last time you weighed, and have you noticed any trouble at all with your heart?"

"I weigh 134 pounds and I've got to melt and freeze and starve off that four," I answered, ignoring the heart question and also the question of pro ducing this book. Wonder what he would do if I gave it to him to read just as it is?

"Expand your chest."

"How about the heart?" he persisted, and I may have imagined the smile in his eyes, for his mouth was purely professional. Anyway, I lowered my lashes down on to my cheeks and answered experimentally:

"Sometimes it hurts." Then a cyclone happened to me.

"Come here to me a minute!" he said quickly, and he turned me around and put his head down between my shoulders and held me so tight against his ear that I could hardly breathe.

"Expand your chest three times and breathe as deep as you can," he ordered from against by back buttons. I expanded and breathed—pretty quickly at that.

"Now hold your breath as long as you can," he commanded, and it fitted my mood exactly to do so.

"Can't find anything," he said at last, letting me go and looking carefully at my face. His eyes were all anxiety, and I liked it. "When does it hurt you and how?" he asked anxiously.

"Moonlight nights and lonesomely," I answered before I could stop myself, and what happened then was worse than any cyclone. He got white for a minute and just looked at me as if I was a bug stuck on a pin, then gave a short little laugh and turned to the table.

"I didn't understand you were joking," he said quietly.

That maddened me, and I would have done anything to make him think I was not the foolish thing he evidently had classified me as being. I snatched at my mind and shook out a mixture of truth and lies that fooled even myself and gave them to him, looking straight in his face. I would have cracked all the ten commandments to save myself from his contempt.

"I'm not joking," I said jerkily. "I am lonesome. And worse than being lonesome, I'm scared. I ought to have stayed just the quiet relict of Mr. Carter and gone on to church meetings with Aunt Adeline and let myself be fat and respectable, but I haven't got the character. You thought I went to town to buy a monument, and I didn't. I bought enough clothes for two brides, and now I'm scared to wear 'em, and I don't know what you'll think when you see my bankbook. Everybody is talking about me and that dinner party Tuesday night, and Aunt Adeline says she can't live in a house of mourning so desecrated any longer. She's going back to the cottage. Aunt Bettie Pollard says that if I want to get married I ought to do it to Wilson Graves because of the seven children, and then everybody would be so relieved that they are taken care of that they would forget that Mr. Carter hasn't been dead quite one year yet. Mrs. Johnson says I ought to be declared a minor and put as a ward to you. I can't help Judge Wade's sending me flowers and Tom's sitting on my front steps night and day. I'm not strong enough to carry him away and murder him. I am perfectly miserable, and I'm"—

"Now, that'll do, Molly; just hush for a half minute and let me talk to you," said Dr. John as he took my hand in his and drew me near him. "No wonder your heart hurts if it has got all that load of trouble on it, and we'll just get a little of that 'scare' off. You put yourself in my hands, and you are to do just as I tell you, and I say—forget it! Come with me while I make a call. It is a long drive, and I'm—I'm lonesome sometimes myself."

I saw the worst was over, and I breathed freely again, but I had talked so much truth in that fiction that I felt just as I said I did, which is a slightly unnatural feeling for a woman. There was nothing for it but to go with him, and I wanted to most awfully.

To my dying day I'll never forget that little house, way out on the Cane Run pike, he took me to in his shabby little car. Just two tiny rooms, but they were clean and quiet, and a girl with the sweetest face I ever saw lay in the bed with her eyes bright with pride and a tiny, tiny little bundle close beside her. The young farmer was red with embarrassment and anxiety.

"She's all right today, but she worries because she don't think I can tend to the baby right," he said, and he did look helpless. "Her mother had to go home for two days, but is coming tomorrow. I dasn't undress and wash the youngster myself. It won't hurt him to stay bundled up until granny comes, will it, Doc?"

"Not a bit," answered Dr. John in his big comforting voice.

But I looked at the girl, and I understood her. She wanted that baby clean and fresh even if it was just five days old, and I felt all of a sudden terribly capable. I picked up the bundle and went into the other room with it, where a kettle was boiling on the stove and a large bucket by the door. I found things by just a glance from her, and the hour I spent with that small baby was one of the most delicious of all my life. I never was left entirely to myself with one before, and I did all I wanted to this one, guided by instinct and desire. He slept right through and was the darlingest thing I ever saw when I laid him back on the bed by her. I never looked in Dr. John's direction once, though I felt him all the time.

But on the way home I gave myself the surprise of my life! Suddenly I turned my face against his sleeve and cried as I never had before. I felt safe, for it is a cliff road and he had to drive carefully. However, he managed to press that one arm against my cheek in a way that comforted me into stopping when I saw we were near town. I got out of the car at the garage and walked away through the garden home without looking in his direction at all. I never seem to be able to look at him as I do at other people. We hadn't spoken two words since we had left the little house in the woods with that happy faced girl in it. He has more sense than just a man.

It was almost dusk, and I stopped in the garden a minute to pull the dirt closer around some of the bachelor's buttons that had "popped" the ground some weeks ago. Thinking about them made me regain my spirits, and I went on in the house to be scolded for what ever Aunt Adeline had thought up while I was gone to do it to me about. Judy told me with her broadest grin that she had gone down to her sister-in-law's for supper, and I sat down on the steps with a sigh of relief.

Some days are like tin cocoanut graters that everybody uses to grate you against, and this was one for me. For an hour I sat and grated my ownself against Alfred's letter that had come in the morning. I realized that I would just have to come to some sort of decision about what I was going to do, for he wrote that he was to sail in a day or two, and ships do travel so fast these days.

I love him and always have, of that I am sure. He offers me the most wonderful life in the world, and no woman could help being proud to accept it. I am lonely, more lonely than I was even willing to confess to Dr. John. I can't go on living this way any longer. Ruth Chester has made me see that if I want Alfred it will be now or never and—quick. I now know that she loves him, and she ought to have her show if I don't want him. The way she idolizes and idealizes him is a marvel of womanly stupidity.

Some women like to collect men's hearts and hide them away from other women on cold storage, and the helpless things can't help themselves.

I have contempt for that sort of butcher, and I love Ruth!

It's my duty to look the matter in the face before I look in Alfred's—and decide. If not Alfred, what then?

First, no husband. That's out of the question! I'm not strong minded enough to crank my own motorcar and study woman suffrage. I prefer to suffer at the hands of some cruel man and trust to beguiling him into doing just as I say. I like men, can't help it, and want one for my own. I don't count poor Mr. Carter.

Second, if not Alfred, who? Judge Wade is so delightful that I flutter at the thought, but his mother is Aunt Adeline's own best friend, and they have ideas in common. She is so religious that living with her would be like having the sacrament for daily bread. Still, living with him might have adventures. I never saw such eyes! The girl he wanted to marry died of tuberculosis, and he wears a locket with her in it yet. I'd like to reward him for such faithfulness with a nice husky wife to wear instead of the locket. But, then, Alfred's been faithful too! I look at Ruth Chester and realize how faithful, and my heart melts to him in my breast. My hips have almost all melted away, too, so I had better keep the heart cold enough to handle if I want anything left at all for him to come home to.

In some ways Tom Pollard is the most congenial man I ever knew. You have to say "don't" to him all the time, but what woman doesn't like a little impertinence once in awhile? I flavor all Tom's daredevil kisses with kinship when I feed them to my conscience, and I truly try to make him be serious about the important things in life, like going to church with his mother and working all day even if he is rich. I wish he wasn't so near kin to me! Now, there, I feel in Ruth Chester's way again! One of the things that keeps the devil so busy is taking helpless widows to the heights of knowledge and showing them kingdoms of men that girls never dream even exist. If all women could have been born with widow eyes things would run much more smoothly along the marriage and giving in marriage line. And the poor men are, most of them, as ignorant as girls about what to do.

I suppose I really would be doing a righteous thing to marry Mr. Graves, and I would adore all those children to start with, but I know Billy would not get on with them at all. I can't even consider it on his account, but I'll let the nice old chap come on for a few times more to see me, for he really is interesting and we have suffered things in common. Mrs. Graves lacked the kind of temperament poor Mr. Carter did. I'd like to make it all up to him, but if Billy wouldn't be happy that settles it, and I don't know how good his boys are. I couldn't have Billy corrupted.

And so, as there is nobody else exactly suitable in town, it all simmers down to one or the other of these or Alfred. In my heart I knew that I couldn't hesitate a minute, and in the flash of a second I decided. Of course I love Alfred and I'll take him gladly and be the wife he has waited for all these six lonely years. I'll make everything up to him if I have to diet to keep thin for him the rest of my life. I likely will have that very thing to do, and I get weak at the idea. Before I burn this book I'll have to copy it all out and be chained to it for life. At the thought my heart dropped like a sinker to my toes, but I hauled it up to its normal place with picturing to myself how Alfred would look when he saw me in that old blue muslin done over into a Rene wonder. However, old heart would show a strange propensity for sinking down into my slippers without any reason at all. Tears were even coming into my eyes when Tom suddenly came over the fence and picked me and the heart up together and put us into an adventure of the first water.

Before the department succeeded in extinguishing the fire it had done nearly $6,000 worth of damage in the basement. The smoke and water damage to the stock of the Payson Mitchell Co., is estimated at about $6000. The stock of the jewelry store of C. F. Pettengill, the adjoining store was damaged about $1000.

The fire is thought to have started in a rubbish pile in the rear of the basement used by the tailoring department. The flames shot up through an airshaft to the roof and ate through the partitions separating the basements of the Payson and Pettengill stores.

Four lines of hose were laid by the apparatus which arrived promptly Nearly all the call men in the city responded and immediately went to work to check the progress of the fire. damage to the stock of the Payson Mitchell Co., is estimated at about $6000. The stock of the jewelry store of C. F. Pettengill the adjoining store was damaged about $1000.

When the front door was burst open a cloud of smoke puffed out that was thicker than any seen at any fire in Quincy for a long time. Several firemen who tried to see how far forward the fire had gone were unable to withstand the smoke.

After 20 minutes stiff work the deluge of water which was poured on the area had its effect. By this time the smoke had partly cleared and the men had the opportunity of fighting the remains of the fire at close range.

The smake rolling from the open doorway of the Payson store was a thick, heavy black, while that coming from the open entrance to the Pettengill store was a fleecy whiteness. From the street it seemed as though the whole block was doomed to destruction.

A friend rode to the home of Mr. Payson and brought him to the scene. He reached his safe after much effort and succeeded in getting the account books and memorandum that was in his desk. The cash register and other furnishings and fixings that were metal were charged and several of the firemen received stiff shocks from contact with them.

The cause of the fire is unknown, but the department is satisfied that it started in a rubbish pile in the Payson store. Arrangements were made with the police department to protect the block until repairs have been made and windows replaced.

Here's the story of this disastrous FIRE as told by the QUINCY DAILY LEDGER of Monday, July 7th.

LOOT STORE OF PAYSON-MITCHELL CO., DURING FIRE SATURDAY NIGHT

A fire that for a time threatened the entire business district in the city destroyed almost the entire stock of Payson, Mitchell Company's store, Hancock street, about midnight Saturday. J. L. Payson, manager of the store, estimates the loss at $7000.

Most of the damage was done by smoke, heat and water. The jewelry store of Pettengill and Campany, adjoining, was dense with smoke and it is thought that much damage will result from the tarnishing of certain stock. Many gallons of ice cream in the basement of Emanuel's store were melted.

The big fire started in the basement of the Payson, Mitchell store, where the wardrobe service is conducted. It is thought that fire started in a heap of waste papers in the southeast corner of the basement. No cause is ascribed for the fire, though it is thought that gasoline or some other explosive ignited the paper. The flames spread through the skuttle, up onto the first floor.

When the clothing and other wearing apparel began to burn, the smoke became exceedingly thick. Great amounts of water were consumed to quench the fire, but the excessive smoke wrought more damage than a big conflagration.

When the fire was under control, a number of onlookers gained entrance into the store and it was said that many bystanders started to help themselves to whatever wares appealed to them. Chief Litchfield was soon to notice the situation and in order to prevent any loots being made, ordered the police to drive all from the building who were not connected with the fire department.

The store will be closed for a few days, until the insurance company aggregates the loss.

LADIES' DAY OF THE Q. .Y C.

Fair Sex Always Out In Large Numbers for Social Event of the Season

Sail in Harbor, Refreshments and Dancing

Indications this morning were that the Quincy Yacht club, would have fair weather for its annual "Ladies Day." The wind was fresh and if it holds it will be a delightful afternoon for a sail. These annual social events have been a feature with the Quincy club for many years and are always looked forward to with thoughts of pleasure.

The schedule for today is:
Review and sail, 3 to 5.30.
Promenade concert 3 to 7.
Dancing, 7.30 to 10.30.

The Quincy club is one of the oldest clubs in Massachusetts bay having been in existence nearly 40 years besides having a clubhouse and anchorage at Houghs Neck and also a correspondent with the Buenos Ayres Yacht club of La Plata, South America

Starting with a small membership in 1874 it has steadily increased its membership until at the present time there are something over 400, of whom 19 are life members, and 150 yacht owners. It will be seen therefore were it possible to have all the yachts enrolled participate in a rendezvous, that it would make an imposing sight.

In addition to its active membership the club has an honorary membership of 20, although some of the honorary members have been summoned before the Grand Commodore above.

During its long and active history it has had 18 different Commodores including the present Commodore, Harry S. Crane, and among them were many prominent in the affairs of the town and city of Quincy as will be seen by the following list:

James H. Slade	1874—1877
Harrison A. Keith	1878—1879
John Quincy Adams	1880—1881
Sigourney Butler	1882
George W. Morton	1883—1884
Charles Francis Adams, 2d	1885—1887
Henry H. Sheen	1888
John Shaw	1889—1892
Henry M. Faxon	1893—1894
Charles F. Pettengill	1895—1896

Frank Fessenden Crane	1905—1907
Herbert W. Robbins	1908—1910
Ira M. Whittemore	1911—1912
Harry S. Crane	1913

In addition to the quarters of the club mentioned above, it at one time maintained a landing at Quincy Point, near the coal wharf of J. F. Sheppard and Sons.

The clubs official club flag is a pointed burgee with a white field, and one-third inches in length for each foot of sailing measurement of the yacht, the width at the luff being two thirds of its length. The device is a red pointed star, of such size as may be inscribed in a circle of a diameter equal to one-third the length of the luff; the centre of the star to be one-fourth the distance from luff to point. This emblem is worn on the front of the yachting cap of members.

The Commodore's flag is a swallow-tail pennant with a blue field, having in its centre a white foul anchor en-

DR. McLENNAN PASSES AWAY

Successful in Practice and Beloved by Many Patients

In the death of Dr. Roderick McLennan, which occurred Wednesday afternoon at his home on Federal avenue, many a person in Quincy and elsewhere has lost a friend. Loyalty to his friends was one of the doctor's strong traits of character. He had been in ill health for several weeks and his death was not unexpected. The funeral will take place from his late residence on Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Dr. McLennan was born in Prince Edward Island, 53 years ago, and after acquiring his education, at Toronto University and Trinity Medical college, came to Quincy 26 years ago, and began the practise of his profession here.

Six years later he was married to Miss Caroline M. Woodmansee, who was the head nurse at the Quincy Hospital. The union was blessed with three daughters, Celia F., Cordelia H. and Dorothy D., all of whom are living.

The doctor was successful in his practice and leaves his family well off. He was on the staff of the City Hospital since its institution, and for many years back has been the medical examiner for Clan McGregor, and loyal Ladies of Clan McGregor. He was also a member of the Massachusetts Medical Society and the Norfolk Medical Association.

CONDUCTOR AT HOSPITAL

Struck by Another Car on Houghs Neck Line

Walter Anderson, a conductor on the Bay State street railway, had a very narrow escape from fatal injuries this morning when he was knocked from the running board of his car by a passing car. Anderson was in charge of the car which left Quincy about 6.30 for Houghs Neck. While his car was on the double rail between the Adams farm and Adams Shore something went wrong with the register rope, and Anderson stepped onto the running board on the inner side to fix it. He leaned back to get a better view of the register, to see that the rope was clear when he was struck by an upward car.

He was knocked from the car and narrowly escaped being run over. As it was he was rendered unconscious. He was taken aboard the up car and brought to City Square, where he was attended by Dr. Sargent and Dr. Burke and removed to the City Hospital. It was found that fortunately no bones had been fractured but that he had been severely bruised and possibly injured internally and also that he had probably suffered from a concussion of the brain.

REPUBLICAN COMMITTEE

Enthusiastic Meeting With a Large Attendance

An enthusiastic meeting of the Republican City Committee was held on Wednesday evening at their headquarters in the Johnson building. The meeting was very largely attended, many of the old time workers for the party's success being present.

There was no special subject for discussion but there was a general talk on the matter of naturalization and registration. The committee will look carefully after the naturalization of those eligible to become citizens as well as to carefully canvass the different wards to see that every Republican is registered before the caucuses for the nomination of candidates for the state election.

Considerable new life seems to have been enthused into the committee and all are determined to work hard for the success of the party candidates.

The man who brags about rising at 5 A. M. may not have any more resolution than any one else. Perhaps his conscience won't let him sleep any longer.

Although there is $20,000 to be spent in renovating the White House, Mrs. Wilson is staying in the country, when she might be in the stores selecting wall paper and rugs.

Possibly the government could save $25,000 on the President's salary by allowing him to go out on the lecture platform also.

The passage of the railroad arbitration act indicates that the American people are not to get the practice that had been confidently expected.

Probably some of those who invested in Mexican enterprises are now wishing they had taken out postal savings bank books at two per cent.

Owing to the alarming tendency of the lambs to retain their wool a little longer, Wall street is depressed about the country's future.

The principal event of United States history for the month of July appears to be the deposition of "Jake" Stahl from his position as manager of the champion Red Sox.

Some fussy people call on the summer hotel to serve square meals, although the guests should be satisfied to feast on the scenery.

When the President's train stops five minutes, the Chief Magistrate should be ready with a carefully prepared speech on the rise and progress of the republic, the address to be different at each station.

Greatness still fails to be appreciated. When Jack Johnson applied at the Paris hotels, none of the guests gave up their rooms in order that he might be accommodated.

That man who bought 500 coffins to supply the Gettysburg reunion would have done much better to put in sporting goods.

Now they are talking about the new "stable aeroplane," but it will never be popular for county fair exhibitions.

EATING ON THE TRAIN.

It used to be said by arbitrators of social customs that you could not eat on a train. That is, unless you go through the machinery of the dining car, with its full restaurant equipment, tipping the waiter and paying the bill. If the price happened to be more than a vacationist's pocket book could stand, why you should hustle around and earn more money. Eating a lunch in the ordinary car was "common."

Perturbed souls who are affected by such social decrees may take some comfort in recent pronouncements by newspaper exponents of good form. They say the ban on a railroad journey picnic is not so drastic as formerly. It is said that the automobilists are the cause of the change.

Tourists by motor car are not all J. P. Morgans. Some have to pare and prune very carefully to finance the gasoline bill. Not all of them put up along the way at the road houses that scramble for the automobile dollars like children for pennies. Safely concealed in hampers, many of them carry democratic layouts of ham sandwiches and grape juice.

Once the simple habit of childhood is required, it may persist even on a railroad journey. Travelling is tiresome work. Often the headachy tourist merely wants a slice of toast and a cup of tea. But on some railroads you can't get past the diner's gilded threshold without paying $1.00 for each, from Grandma down to the three year old, plus 25 cent tips all around. Under such circumstances a picnic lunch seems the common sense thing.

The day coach picnickers may eat a simple and nourishing luncheon and may gather up their crumbs and fold up their paper napkins. The more stately diners may shovel down ill assorted and over seasoned courses. "Commoness" consists not so much where you eat, as how.

THE CORN CROP.

The estimated yield of corn per acre, 27.8 bushels, as against 26 last year, means a lift along the way to the poor man. If the farmers could raise what the Department of Agriculture says they should, crops of 80 bushels per acre, little more would be heard of the cost of living problem.

The very soul of America seems to be reflected from those magnificent rolling fields of corn belt. The great wheat field, yellow and golden, suggests the richness of prosperity. But the shiny pennants of the corn field, glistening in the sunshine and floating in the breeze, suggests all the sparkle of the American temperament, and alert energy of American enterprise.

Historians say that if the white man had delayed coming to this country another hundred years, the Iroquois and other tribes of Indians were making such progress in corn raising that they would have developed on their own account a more stable civilization. They had enormous fields even then. The great West would be barren today had not the corn field provided easy sustenance for men who were doing the coarse and heavy tasks of pioneering.

There can be no more important task before the government than spreading knowledge of corn gospel, and bringing up a race of farmers who can push the corn harvest to its limit of possibility. The simple home will never go hungry as long as the corn fields fill the meal barrel and feed the source of the pork supply. In millions of cottages, johnny cake, hominy, and bacon are still the satisfying foundation for work in the field, the mine and the forest, a great triangle of bone, muscle, and sinew.

How many farmers know that a good ear of corn should be 10 inches long, and that its circumference should be three-fourths its length, thickly studded with deep, fat grains?

Each of Us Is a Living Monument of Our Thoughts

By Mrs. MARY E. T. CHAPIN of New York, Advocate of the New Thought

MOST PEOPLE DO NOT DREAM THEY HAVE THEMSELVES TO THANK FOR EVERYTHING THAT COMES TO THEM. EACH OF US IS THE LIVING MONUMENT OF OUR THOUGHTS.

We are not what we eat, nor yet what we read. We are WHAT WE THINK. A man who is down and out has been thinking down and out thoughts; has been misusing the God given power of his own mind and opening the same mind to thoughts of failure.

If he had put the same amount of thought on the other side of the picture the result would have been quite as different. We CAN THINK CONSTRUCTIVE THOUGHTS, and the mind holds the picture and becomes a battery, drawing to it the power that is needed to visualize the conditions of success we picture; also we can hold destructive thoughts, and the same battery DRAWS TO ITSELF THE DESTRUCTIVE FORCES that will bring about the very condition it dreads.

Again, one may use the example of a dark room. It is dark until one touches the right button, and then the place is flooded with light. I know of no simile better for the human mind. It is DARK UNTIL IT GETS THE HIGHER CONNECTION that makes of it a changed place.

The way to eliminate failure and misfortune is to begin with the very young child and bring it up without a thought of fear. There are those who think fear should be taught to protect a child from things that would injure it.

The truth is, nothing would injure it if we did not expect to be injured by it. Even wild animals that we think are most savage would be entirely ROBBED OF THEIR CRUELTY IF WE COULD CHANGE OUR FEELING TOWARD THEM.

LADIES' DAY OF THE Q. Y. C.

circled by thirteen white stars.

During its early years the club was not so well situated for headquarters as at present. Eventually however, land was acquired and a clubhouse built at Houghs Neck, from which a run and float extended out to the channel. It was many years however before the enterprise of the members, particularly ex-Commodore Frank Fessenden Crane succeeded in having the state make an appropriation to dredge the channel and now plans are on foot for the dredging of a basin near the club float.

It became evident several years ago that the club had outgrown its quarters. There was a constant demand for lockers, and a larger assembly and ante rooms with modern conveniences which could not be had in the present building, and it was desired to enlarge. The plans for the enlargement were made by Frederick E. Tupper the present Commissioner of Public Works, and the work undertaken, the expense being taken care of by bonds sold to members.

The enlargement gave the club a large number of additional lockers as well as a larger assembly hall, with ladies room in the rear, and a dining room on the second story. On the first floor it also gave the club a billiard and pool room, in addition to a smoking room with a cosy open fire place and additional toilet rooms, so that today its clubhouse is adequate in every way, although i. the membership continues to increase as rapidly as in the past few years additional enlargements will have to be made.

The club does much for the entertainment of its members, both yacht owners and those humorously alluded to as the "Arm chair fleet." It always opens and closes is seasons with a smoker and entertainment at which good cheer is the prime object. Then during the mid-season comes the ladies day. In addition to these social events there are hops on Tuesday evenings during the season and whist parties on Thursday evenings.

For its yacht owners it provides a series of races under the club auspices which are in addition to the races of the M. Y. R. A. and the Interclub races.

In the late fall of 1897 some of the prominent members of the club, in order to stimulate racing began to talk up a permanent trophy which should be raced for each year. Early in 1898 this plan took definite form and at a meeting of the club held in the City Council chamber the nucleus of a fund of $500 was raised. In fact practically the entire amount was pledged at this meeting. A beautiful silver trophy was made for the club, which was known as the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup, and this trophy has been raced for nearly every year since that time.

During the early races for the trophy the boats were little more than skimming dishes and were of but little value for a pleasure craft. In fact their only value was for a racing machine. In addition to this it made it rather expensive building new racing machines at frequent intervals and largely for this reason interest in the cup waned for several years during which the trophy was in the keeping of the Manchester club.

In the early part of 1906 however, by agreement between the Manchester club, then holding the cup, and the Quincy Yacht club, the declaration of trust was amended, and since that time the races have been such as to awaken the keenest of sport, the yachts which now complete being known as the Sonder Klauss.

In connection with the cup races the club is greatly indebted to ex-Commodores Fred B. Rice and Henry M. Faxon who built the first defenders of the cup and during the past few years to ex-Commodore Charles Francis Adams, 2d, acknowledged by all to be the best amateur yachtsman in Massachusetts waters, and in addition to that the fairest and most sportsmanlike skipper. If he cannot win a race fairly he does not want it, and one need go back no later than a year ago, when he relinquished two races won, when it was found that his sail was larger than allowed.

This year in addition to open, and Interclub races of other clubs in which yachts of the Quincy club participate, the regatta committee made up a schedule which provided that there should be a race nearly every Saturday afternoon off the clubhouse, and some scrappy races have resulted. The regatta committee is also much to encourage racing among the younger members of the club and class D aroused considerable interest among the boys of members. Yachting is acknowledged by all to be the cleanest of the many sports.

The Daily Ledger of Friday will give a detailed report of Ladies Day, with names of those who enjoy the sail.

PICNIC OF SUNDAY SCHOOL

Interesting Series of Sports at Hall Place M. E. Outing

The annual picnic of the Hall Place M. E. Sunday school was held Wednesday at Highland Park. Two special cars left West Quincy at 9 A. M. arriving at the park about 11 o'clock where the crowd scattered to enjoy the various attractions.

25 yd. dash open to all under 16—Leslie McCormick, Milton Campbell, Bert Walker.

Three legged race (open)—Camille and Julius Fuller, Robert McCormick and Bertram Walker, Ethel Newcomb and Mona Norris.

Hobble race for girls—Addie Newcomb, Ethel Newcomb, Annie Lamb.

At 12 o'clock coffee and ice cold tonic were served through the kindness of Charles A. Goucher.

At 4 P. M. King and Queen, the famous diving horses gave their exhibition. Queen was the first to dive and performed her act well. King does not like it so well and it took him much longer; his dive was not so graceful as Queen's. There was an open air show at 3 P. M.

The outlook from the observatory was especially good as the air was very clear for miles around. The roller-coasters, swings and merry-go-rounds were centers of attraction all day for all ages of people. At 6 P. M. through the kindness of Clarence Trask free rides on the Merry-go-rounds were enjoyed by the Sunday school.

The cars left the Park at 6.30 arriving in West Quincy about 9 o'clock. As is usual on a picnic of this nature the ride home was fully enjoyed by all.

CONCERNING THE DOG DAYS.

The dog days are hot stuff. They are also hot and stuffy. They warm up about the middle of August, and are a sure sign that the backbone of winter is broken. It is only when the Dog Star rages that we have dog days, but nobody has yet discovered what the Dog Star rages about, unless it is the sidereal heavens at night, and he certainly does rage about there considerable. Which reminds us that the Dog Star rages only at night, and it is the dog days we hear more about. There is no answer to this one, either. But that maks no difference to the Weather Bureau, and the mercury shins up the tube just the same, while mankind simply drifts along on a sea of perspiration. The name of the Dog Star is Sirius. This is because he is no joke. Dogs become mad during dog days, and why shouldn't they? Everybody else does, and swears besides, which dogs do not. Dog daisies blossom at this season, and they are tropical flowers, all right. In conclusion it may be said without fear of successful contradiction that although every dog has his day, every day hasn't its dog, and the rest of us ought to be doggoned glad of it.—W. J. Lampton in August Lippincott's.

FALSE ALARM.

People living in the vicinity of Butler road asked the assistance of the police Wednesday afternoon in the capture of a man acting in a suspicious manner in the fields near Hudson street. According to their stories he was brandishing a knife and running about in circles.

Officers Cahill and Olsen were immediately sent down in the auto and when they arrived they found a man who gave his name as John Emmons of Worcester digging flag root. He told the officers that he was a candy manufacturer and used the juice of the root for flavoring. Nothing suspicious seemed to be connected with the man and he was not arrested.

Mr. Emmons told the police that he had not been in Quincy for more than three years and that he kept his eye on the growth of flagroot throughout the state. He said he was the father of Robert Emmons, secretary of the Boston Chamber of Commerce.

PAST DICTATOR A DELEGATE

Will Attend National Moose Convention in Ohio

Quincy lodge, No. 413, L. O. O. M., will be represented at the National convention at Cincinnati, Ohio, by Albert J. Williams, past dictator who has been chosen delegate. Final arrangements were made at the regular meeting in Faxon hall Wednesday evening. Mr. Williams leaves Friday and the convention opens July 28 and will be held throughout the week.

The silken American flag which was presented to the lodge in behalf of the degree team by Albert Jardine, captain, and which was accepted by James A. Daley, dictator, hung over the dictators chair during the meeting.

The sentiment expressed freely favored the recently organized building association, composed of members of the lodge, which plans to erect in the near future a Moose home in or near City Square.

BARGAINS! BARGAINS!

The Payson-Mitchell company whose great fire sale opens Friday morning are preparing to handle the immense crowds of bargain seekers who are sure to attend this phenominal sale, by the employment of a large number of additional clerks. Without doubt, this will be one of the greatest fire sales ever held outside of Boston. Not only will it be a genuine sale but genuine bargains will be offered.

Of course some of their large stock of clothing was burned by the fire of July 6, but there were thousands of dollars worth of other clothing and gentlemen's furnishing goods that were only slightly damaged by smoke and water. This of course does not injure the wearing quality but naturally injures the market value.

It is to dispose of this large stock that the sale is to be held and at which prices will be sacrificed. At this sale a dollar will purchase fully as much as $2 or $3 did before the sale. All the popular brands of shirts, straw hats, underwear, hosiery, neckwear, umbrellas, raincoats, sweaters, etc., and in fact everything usually found in a first-class gentlemen's furnishings store will be found on the counters, and the early comer gets the best bargains.

GHEN—SHADDOCK.

After securing permission from Judge Avery to wed within the five days required by law, Rutherford Lloyd Ghen of Charlton, Ontario, and Miss Ethel S. Shaddock of 567 South street, Quincy Point, were married Tuesday afternoon by Rev. Isaiah W. Sneath of the Wollaston Congregational church.

The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Ghen of Provincetown. He is a musician and when he came to claim his bride had no knowledge of the five day law.

Even after securing permission to wed within the time they were dissappointed in finding Rev. R. A. Willmott absent from the city. A call at the Christ church rectory had the same results, and finally they were directed to Rev. Mr. Sneath, who performed the ceremony.

Mr. and Mrs. Ghen returned to Ontario where they will make their home.

—Rev. Carl Peterson, pastor of the Maplewood Swedish Congregational Church, has accepted a call from the Swedish Congregational Church at Attleboro and will begin his duties there in October.

MOTOR BOAT MUFFLER TEST

Three Judges the Guests of Harbor Master Hird

Judge Albert E. Avery of Quincy, Judge Barnes of East Boston and Judge E. S. Ellis, before whom violators of the motor boat muffler law are arraigned were present at a speed demonstration test in Boston Harbor Wednesday afternoon which showed conclusively that a muffler does not impair the speed of a motor boat. They were aboard the police boat Guardian as the guests of Harbor Master Hird.

One of the noisiest boats in the harbor was first run with the muffler and then without. The test wrecked the contentions of boat owners who have been claiming that speed is lost. After the test the distance at which the sound of a motor boats engine could be heard was discussed.

The test was without doubt interesting to Judge Avery who passed on two alleged violations at Milton a few weeks ago. He also gained information which will be of real value in the disposition of violators in and about Quincy bay, in case arrests are made.

TREATS BOTH SIDES ALIKE

President Won't Allow Arms to Go From United States to Mexico

Washington, July 24.—President Wilson has determined that no faction in the present Mexican revolution shall obtain arms or ammunition from the United States, and that neutrality must be observed in its strictest sense.

This was the interpretation of the neutrality laws decided upon by the president after conferences with Senator Bacon and Representative Flood, chairman of the two congressional committees on foreign relations.

While the Mexican rebels have been getting no arms heretofore, yesterday's developments mean that the Huerta administration will be deprived of the privilege previously accorded the Madero government, and the United States will treat all sides alike in the present dispute.

BOSTON RUN BY UNIONS IN 1910

At Least That Was Mulhall's Report to Van Cleave

MENTIONS CRANE AND LODGE

Says Senators Took "Orders" From Labor Leaders—Lobby Agent Says He "Helped" Draper In 1909 Election When Governor Incurred Enmity of Labor Element

Washington, July 24.—With the end of the famous Mulhall letters finally in sight, attorneys for the National Association of Manufacturers were prepared to fight the ruling of the senate lobby investigating committee, that they could cross examine Mulhall only by writen questions submitted through the committee.

Beginning with "No. 3000," the committee plodded wearily through the balance of the 5000 letters and confidential reports, skipping many and reading only portions of others. The letters related to the Danbury, Conn., strike of 1909, which Mulhall claims he "fixed" by buying labor leaders, and to tariff activities of the N. A. M.

In November, 1910, Mulhall wrote Van Cleave after a trip to Boston that the town "was run" by labor unions. He suggested that a fight be made against these unions and said he believed a test could be made of their strength by having some Massachusetts congressman deliver strong anti-labor speeches on the floor of the house and then fight for re-election.

Mulhall added that Senators Crane and Lodge took "orders" from labor unions. This came to the ears of A. E. Cox of Boston, a manufacturer. He wrote Mulhall thus:

"Neither Crane nor Lodge is controlled by labor. They can always be depended on to stand against all revolutionary legislation."

In November, 1909, Mulhall wrote of trips to Massachusetts to "help Governor Draper," who had incurred the enmity of the labor unions on account of his veto of an eight-hour bill. He wrote Schwadtman it would not be hard to get the Knights of Labor and the American Federation of Labor fighting to the advantage of the manufacturers.

AUTO DROPS OFF BRIDGE

Engineer Walks Through Scalding Water to Avert Possible Disaster

Brockton, Mass., July 24.—In a successful effort to avert an explosion that would endanger the lives of 500 employes, C. G. Eaton, engineer of the Preston B. Keith factory on Market street, waded through scalding water to bank the fires under the boilers in the engine room and open the steam valves.

Volumes of steam filled the rooms of the immense factory. The employes became alarmed and hurriedly left the building, thinking the structure was on fire.

After the steam had left the pipes a big leak was found in an iron pipe leading to the boiler. Eaton was burned about the feet.

SAYS HE CANNOT REFORM

Chicago Youth Openly Boasts of Long Career of Crime

Chicago, July 24.—In a statement made to the police, Walter Novak, 20, arrested with four companions, after they had fatally wounded Patrolman Sowers and beaten Patrolman Walpole, admitted having taken part in more than thirty robberies in two months and boasted of his career of crime.

"I was born a thief and I've been a thief ever since," said Novak. "I don't care whether I go to the gallows or not. I started when I was 9 years old, stealing pennies from kids. I have been put in all kinds of institutions to reform me, but they only made me worse."

LORDS AGAIN STRIKE

This Time They Aim at the Welsh Disestablishment Bill

London, July 24.—The house of lords treated the Welsh disestablishment exactly as it did the home rule bill.

By a vote of 242 to 48 the lords refused to give the bill a second reading and adopted a motion declining to proceed with its consideration "until it had been submitted to the judgment of the country."

Soda Water Tank Sails Skyward

New York, July 24.—A 100-pound soda water tank exploded and sailed away to the top of a six-story building in this city. Pedestrians thought it was a rocket.

Engine Kills Maine Farmer

Portland, Me., July 24.—While driving across the Oakhill railroad crossing James W. Libby, 60, a farmer, was struck by an engine and instantly killed.

Young Motorist Killed

Taunton, Mass., July 24.—In an automobile accident Richard Waite, 19 years old, was killed and Walter Shumway, a companion, was badly injured.

ANNUAL PICNIC OF REBEKAHS

Sports and a Good Time Enjoyed at Nantasket

Thirty-five members of George L. Gill Rebekah lodge I. O. O. F., attended the annual picnic at Nantasket Wednesday. It was probably the most genuine fun-fest ever held under the auspices of the lodge. The day passed with a series of athletic games on the shore, water sports in the ocean, and a real invasion of the Paragon Park attractions.

On the way home all were labeled, the most conspicuous being the "Wife Wanted" sign on Arthur Stetson, and "Love Me Just a Little" worn by Archie McLeod. Others carried "Oh You, Kid." "Just Married". etc.

In the swimming race Mrs. Robert Welch beat Mrs. Eugene Blaisdell for first place. Mrs. Robert M. Wood was in the swim for a little but couldn't stand the pace.

Mrs. Robert Welch and Mrs. Richardson of Wollaston tied in the 40 yard dash, for women only. There was a heavy entry list.

In the get back to nature poses, Mrs. May Gaynor of Roxbury was popularly awarded the contest. Nearly all were entered in this event.

The party left City Square about 10 o'clock and arrived home nearly 12 hours later.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

On exhibition in the art gallery of the Thomas Crane public library are a number of large photographs of Venice, a story of each place being mounted with its picture.

The pictures are as follows:—

1 Venice as seen from the Island of San Giorgio.

2 Riva degli Schiavoni, a continuation of the Piazzetta and Molo. It is a fine broad quay, where a multitude of sea-faring men of all nations may be seen at all hours of the day.

3 Piazzetta of St. Mark, from the sea.

4 Another view of the Piazzetta of St. Mark, also giving a view of the Island of San Giorgio.

5 The Ducal Palace, first founded in 1820 and has been destroyed five times and each reconstruction produced a more magnificent building.

6 Another view of the Ducal Palace showing the grand entrance.

7 A fine view of the Court of the Ducal Palace.

9 A nearer view of St. Mark.

10,11,12. These show the beautiful architecture of this building by scenes of the interior and near views of the outside of the building.

13 This picture is of the Grand canal which brings in a view of the Custom house, built in 1676.

14 A photograph of the Bridge of the Rialto. This is more than a bridge as there is a covered passage and a row of shops sustained on an arch.

15 The last in the collection is of a monument of Bartolomeo Colleoni, a general of the Republic who is said to be the first to have used field pieces in warfare, A. D. 1475.

DISTRICT COURT.

Gordon Emslie was arraigned on two complaints, one charging him with taking the automobile of Dr. W. H. Blanchard without permission and the second with operating an automobile with a license. The court intimated that it would place one of the complaints on file on payment of costs and restitution for the tail lamp smashed or lost, but continued both cases until July 31.

Antonio Grazroia and Joseppi Porupee whose places were raided by the police last Sunday were arraigned for violation of the liquor law. Cases continued until July 30.

Andy Caulberg was arraigned on two complaints for giving short ice weight. Cases continued until July 30.

Edward Schouter was find $10, Henry Anderson $5, Vina Wall $5, Bernando Giovannaugheli $10, and George F. McLaughlin $15, for drunkenness at Quincy.

Lizzie Kendall was fined $15 for disturbing the peace at Weymouth.

—Jane Addams herewith proves her skill at turning a nice phrase in compliment of her sex: "The women should have votes. The problems of our time will be solved only when all of the best mind, conscience, and talent in the community are brought to their solution," she says: and the women are free to see herein claim either of equality with man, mentally and morally, or the pre-eminence of woman to man at these points. Their best united with man's best, does Miss Addams ask for: or are the women to furnish the now missing best? Let the women say.—New Bedford Standard.

—A Minnesota girl saved her money for five years to free her lover from the penitentiary. It is sad to reflect that, after they are wed, she may have to take in washing to support him.

For all kinds of advertising—i. e., for all lines of business and at all times—the newspaper ranks first. There is no medium that reaches as many people and brings as good results for the money expended as do the newspapers. Only a few years ago there were many families who subscribed for no paper; today there is probably not a single family in the community that does not take several papers, and I think I would be safe in saying that every one takes a daily.—F. There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

HOW QUINCY POLICE WON

Were Generous to Newton in Last Inning

The Quincy police easily defeated Newton on the Ward Three grounds Wednesday afternoon, 10 to 6. Newton was in a triple tie for first place and was given a rude shock by the snappy playing of the winners.

Dineen, commenced the fun in the third innings when he scored Fallon, and later scored on a good biff for the first two runs of the game.

Four runs in the sixth were duplicated in the seventh.

In the last round, Fallon, the pitcher, and the rest of the team commenced to tire, and their easy playing resulted in the visitors scoring five runs.

Clancy and Hannon, were tapped for 15 hits, while Fallon was bumped for 17, seven coming in the last call.

The visiting team made a good appearance on the field and their gentlemanly conduct was remarked by the large number present at the game.

The score by innings:

PLAYGROUND BASE BALL

Ward Three to Play Ward Two Tomorrow

The regular league baseball teams were chosen Wednesday afternoon at Ward Two and from now on the boys will play on their picked teams. Four teams were selected and names chosen to represent the teams of the American League as follows:

Naps, E. Bar, captain.
Senators, J. Moynihan captain.
Athletics, J. Gamble captain.
Red Sox, J. Gallagher captain.

One game was played Wednesday after the teams were picked, and was proving to be rather one-sided, for the Naps had the Athletics 10 to 5 when the game was protested by Captain Gamble of the latter team.

Capt. Gamble claims that J. Dorley of the Naps is over 16 years of age and that under the constitution no boy over 16 years old is allowed to play in the league. As Dorley is now a junior at High school it seems that there may be some justice to Capt. Gambles claim. The protest will be decided this afternoon.

The Ward Two boys will make a trip to Ward Three Friday afternoon to cross bats with the South Quincy butters. Each team has been preparing for this game for over two weeks and some classy baseball may be looked for.

Ward Two has been coached by "Russ" Bates of the University of Bates team, while Ward Three has had the benefit of Frank Tirrell's knowledge of the game gained while he was at the Maine University law school last season. Tirrell was chosen captain of his school team so that there ought to be something doing at Ward Three in the line of inside baseball.

DORCHEN WINS AT PUT-IN-BAY

Quincy Yacht Makes Long Journey and Scores Success

The Dorchen II of A. W. Finlay of Germantown won her race Tuesday in the Interlake Regatta of the Lake Erie Centennial which is being celebrated at Put-In-Bay, Ohio. The time was the fastest ever made over the regular nine mile course.

Miss Dorothea Finlay handled the jib and spinnaker while her father handled the mainsail. George W. Finlay, well known in state athletic circles, was the skipper.

The Dorchen is an 18-footer and was shipped on a flat car from the Fore River yard, Quincy. No damage was done the boat in transit. Capt. Finlay, who is also the owner of the Marie L., is an enthusiastic yachtsman, but is no more so than his daughter Dorothea who is the equal of most of the skippers handling yachts in Quincy bay.

This is the first time that a Quincy boat has been successful in races so far away from home. The colors of the Boston Yacht Club were flying at the mast head of the Dorchen.

RICH TOWNS AT ADVANTAGE

Should Help Education in Less Favored Towns

At the conference of Massachusetts Mayors with Mayor Willard of Chelsea on Wednesday the subject of possible legislation relative to taxation for school purposes was discussed at length, and it was voted that the sense of the meeting was that a measure be introduced into the legislature to increase the support by the state for educational purposes and that a committee of three be appointed to draft the bill. The committee appointed were Mayor Willard of Chelsea, Mayor Chambers of Everett and Mayor Schumacher of Malden.

The idea of the new plan in brief is that the state tax each city and town for educational purposes according to the valuation and then distribute the amount among the cities and towns according to the school population.

It is cited that in rich towns like Brookline, where the valuation is large and school population is small places Quincy with a small valuation and a large school population at a disadvantage. That is a place like Brookline by having a small school population can afford and does pay larger salaries to its teachers than does Quincy, and for this reason such places are able to come to Quincy and pick off its best teachers by offering a larger salary than Quincy can afford to pay. It is argued that if the bill as proposed goes through this will be prevented.

EAGLES TO HAVE GRAND CLAMBAKE

John Adams Aerie, F. O. E., met in Electa hall Wednesday evening and acted on four applications. Eight new members were initiated, the work being performed by the degree team under the direction of John J. McDonnell, acting captain during the absence of Bernard Burke who is at Colon, Panama.

Arrangements were completed to send a delegate to the National convention which will take place at Baltimore, commencing August 4. James J. Mellen, past president, who will represent the aerie will leave August 1. It is possible that the North Dakota battleship float, which is in great demand wherever a parade is held, will be sent to Baltimore.

The members are discussing the annual clambake. It will be held within a few weeks, probably at Squantum. Last fall over 250 attended the affair and the time was enlivened by the presence of many of the most active politicians of the day. The entertainment committee is now headed by James J. Mellen, while Gus Tretton, the regular chairman, is in the west.

NEW HAVEN ROAD IS EXONERATED

Death of Chair Car Passenger Declared "Accidental"

REPORT OF CORONER PHELAN

Driver of Engine Which Figured In Stamford Disaster Found to Have Been Fit—No Criminal Negligence, but Mild Censure For Running Two Trains In Block

Bridgeport, Conn., July 24.—Neither Engineer Charles J. Doherty nor the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, its servants or agents is guilty of criminal negligence in connection with the wreck of the Springfield express in Stamford June 12, according to the finding of Coroner Phelan of this city.

The finding is based on the death of Ada P. Kelley of Chicago, one of the six passengers killed in the Pullman parlor car Skylark of the first section of the express, which was telescoped by engine 1338 of the second section, and her death is classed as "accidental."

The coroner reviews at some length the evidence taken by him in the hearings at Stamford and Bridgeport and discusses the question of Doherty's competency, the location of the distance signals at Stamford, the use of automatic train stopping devices and the air brake equipment.

On the matter of the engineer's fitness the coroner says "Doherty's alleged incompetency is disproved by his almost perfect service record" and by testimony given by employes and officials of the company. In the matter of practical experience the coroner believe that the "one-year rule" for engineers does not give sufficient experience, and thinks the limit should be increased to two years at least, "but preferably to three years."

While the distance and home signals, he finds, are too close together at Stamford and should, in the interests of safety, be increased to at least 2500 feet, he does not think criminal negligence should be attributed to the company or its signal engineer in connection with their location, because of the fact that Stamford is a predetermined stop and in view of Doherty's "knowledge and obligation to stop" and his "presumed knowledge of the place to start braking."

The practice, however, the coroner says, "of allowing one high speed train to follow another into what is practically the same block and to come within a few feet of another on the same track is a foolhardy one, and a hazard not to be justified by the slight gain in time over that lost by one train remaining in the block behind until the train ahead has cleared from its block." This practice, the coroner finds, also does "rude violence" to the public belief that, to ensure safety, trains while running are kept one block apart.

In reference to the automatic train stops, the coroner says he has no knowledge of the continued use of any approved device on steam or electric roads.

The company is not bound to adopt any particular device that has not proved its success by actual and continued use, the coroner says.

The coroner says he is unable to find that the company is indifferent to the public needs in the matter of steel cars and that it is taking steps to secure more of such equipment.

In concluding the coroner says while there can be no question as to Doherty's competency, he is persuaded by the engineer's nervousness, due partly to his limited experience, and by other evidence, that he did not apply his "air" early enough, but too near the home signal.

The coroner also holds that the company, in view of agreement with the engineers' union, "exercised all required care" in permitting Doherty to run the express.

FROM HER RAIL TO WATERLINE

Great Hole Torn In Side of Holland-American Freighter

RAMMED BY LARGE SCHOONER

Latter Disappears From View, Leaving Wreckage on Deck of the Sloterdyk—Mystery Surrounds Identity of Four-Master, Which Is Thought to Be Lost With All on Board

Boston, July 24.—A tragedy of the sea, which it is feared sent a four-masted schooner with all hands aboard to the bottom, was narrated when the Holland-American freight steamer Sloterdyk crept into port last night.

She bore a great gash in her side from rail to waterline, the result of a collision, four miles off Nantucket, during a fog Tuesday night.

Old salts who viewed the rent in the iron hulk said no wooden craft could inflict such a blow and survive, and that the schooner that hit the Sloterdyk surely had her bow crushed in.

Mystery surrounds the identity of the schooner which cut through the iron side of the freighter and left on the deck a mass of wooden wreckage to tell of grave damage received from the blow.

Although the lower point of the rent was dangerously near the water line, the Sloterdyk for four hours circled through the fog in an effort to locate the schooner. But not the slightest trace of the craft was found. The crew of the Sloterdyk numbered forty-two.

Just as she was veering away, after the crash, some one twice shouted name of the schooner to the crew that had tumbled from their bunks on the steamer, and were standing by the lifeboats in readiness to put off if the gigantic freighter sank.

Those who tried to catch the name said that the hailing which reached their ears was unintelligible. One of the officers declared that the name of the vessel was of two syllables. That is the most definite information that could be given as to her identity.

In the pile of splintered wood from the bow of the schooner was found the gold frescoed under part of the bowsprit. But there was not a letter that would indicate the name of the craft.

Mute testimony of the great force of the blow exists in the jagged cut amidships in the port side of the steamer, in the tearing away of iron superstructure and ponderous funnels, and in the bending in of the entire side of the great craft for a distance of 100 feet.

The thirty-foot cut in the iron side of the steamer ranged from a width of four feet at the rail to a gaping hole twelve feet in width at the centre, and then tapering down to a point just above the water line.

After patching up the lower point of the cut with boards and oiled canvas the steamer, which had left Boston on Tuesday for Philadelphia to pick up more cargo, was headed back to this port.

Captain Metz, commander of the vessel, was on watch when the collision occurred. He declares he was entirely blameless in the mishap. He asserts that his lights were in the proper places and the steamer was going at a low rate of speed and with due regard to the weather conditions.

THE Melting of Molly

LEAF EIGHTH.

Blue Absinth.

"MOLLY," Tom said in the most nonchalant manner imaginable, "we've got a dandy, strolling gypsy band up at the hotel, the dining room floor is all waxed and I'm asking for the first dance with the young and radiant Mrs. Carter. Get into a glad rag and don't keep me waiting."

"Tom!" I gasped.

"Oh, be a sport, Moll, and don't take water! You said you would wake up this town, and now do it. It seems twenty instead of six years since I had my arms around you to music, and I'm not going to wait any longer. Everybody is there and they can't all dance with Miss Chester."

That settled it. I couldn't let a visiting girl be danced to death. Of course I had planned to make a dignified debut under my own roof, backed up by the presence of ancestral and marital rosewood, silver and mahogany, as a widow should, but duty called me to deweed myself amid the informality of an impromptu dance at the little town hotel. And in the fifteen minutes Tom gave me I deweeded to some purpose and flowered out to still more. I never do anything by halves.

In that—that—trousseau old Rene had made me there was one, what she called "simple" lingerie frock. And it looked just as simple as the check it called for, a one and two ciphers back of it. It was of linen as sheer as a cobweb, real lace and tiny, delicious incrustations of embroidery. It fitted in lines that melted into curves, had enticements in the shape of a long sash and a dangerous breast knot of shimmery blue, the color of my eyes, and I looked newborn in it.

I'm glad that poor Mr. Carter was so stern with me about rats and things in my hair, now that they are out of style, for I've got lots of my own left in consequence of not wearing other people's. It clings and coils to my head just any old way that looks as if I had spent an hour on it. That made me able to be ready to go down to Tom in only ten minutes over the time he gave me.

I stopped on next to the bottom step in the wide old hall and called Tom to turn out the light for me, as Judy had gone.

I have turned out that light lots of times, but I felt it best to let Tom see me in a full light when we were alone. It is well I did! At first it stunned him, and it is a compliment to any woman to stun Tom Pollard. But Tom doesn't stay stunned long, and I only succeeded in suppressing him after he had landed two kisses on my shoulder, one on my hair and one on the back of my neck.

"Molly," he said, standing off and looking at me with shining eyes, "you are one lovely dream. Your shoulders are flushed velvet, your cheeks are peaches under cream, your eyes are blue absinth and your mouth a red devil. Come on before I get drunk looking at you." I didn't know whether I liked that or not and turned down the light quickly myself and went to the gate hurriedly. Tom laughed and behaved himself.

Everybody in town was up to the hotel and everybody was nice to me, girls and all. There is a bunch of lovely posy girls in this town and they were all in full flower. Most of the men were college boys home for vacation, and while they are a few years younger than I, I have been friends with them for always and they know how I dance. I didn't even get near enough to the wall to know it was there, though I was conscious of Aunt Bettie and Mrs. Johnson sitting on it at one end of the room, and every time I passed them I flirted with them until I won a smile from them both. I wish I could be sure of hearing Mrs. Johnson tell Aunt Adeline all about it.

And it was well I did come to save Ruth Chester from a dancing death, for she is as light as a feather and sails on the air like thistledown. I felt sorry for Tom for when he danced with me he could see her, and when he danced with her I pointed at him, even over Judge Wade's arm. I verily believe it was from being really rattled that he asked little Pet Buford to dance with him—by mistake as it were. After that if Pet breathed a single strain of music out of his arms I didn't see it. I knew that gone expression on his face and it made me feel so lonesome that I was more gracious to the judge than was exactly safe. He dances just as magnificently as he exists in life, and it is a kind of ceremonial to do it with him. The boys all wore white flannels and most of the men, but the judge was as formally dressed as he would have been in midwinter, and I wondered if Alfred could be half as distinguished to look at. I suppose my eyes must have been telling on me about how grand I thought he was looking because he—well, I was rather relieved when one of the boys took me out of his arms for a good, long, swinging twostep.

And how I did enjoy it all, every single minute of it! My heart beat time to the music as if it would never tire of doing so. Miss Chester and I exchanged little laughs and scraps of conversation in between times, and I fell deeper and deeper in love with her. Every pound I have melted and frozen and starved off me has brought me nearer to her, and I just can't think about how I am going to hurt her in a few days now. I put the thought from me and so let myself swing out into thoughtlessness with one of the boys. And after that I really didn't know with whom I was dancing. I began to get so intoxicated with it all.

I never heard musicians play better or get more of the spirit of dance in their music than those did tonight. They had just given us the most lovely swinging things, one after another, when suddenly they all stopped, and the leader drew his bow across his violin. Never in all my life have I ever heard anything like the call of that waltz from that gypsy's strings. It laughed you a signal, and you felt yourself follow the first strain.

Just then somebody happened to take me from whomever I was with, and I caught step and glided off the universe. The strongest arms that I had felt that evening—or ever—held me, and I didn't have to look up to see who it was. I don't know why I knew, but I did. I wasn't clasped so very close to him or left to float by myself an inch. I was just a part of him like the arms themselves or the hand that mine molded into. And while that wonder music teased and cajoled and mocked and rocked and sobbed and throbbed I laid my cheek against his coat sleeve and gave myself away. I didn't care to whom.

Again that strange sense of some wonderful eternal good came to me, and I found myself humming Billy's little "soul to keep" prayer against the doctor's sleeve to the tune of that magic waltz. I had never danced with him before, of course, but I felt as if I had been doing it always, and I melted in his arms as that baby had wilted to his mother out in the cabin a few hours earlier, and I don't see how such happiness as that could stop. But with a soft, entreating wail the music came to an end, and there the doctor was, smiling down into my face with his whimsical, friendly smile that woke me up all over.

"Somebody has stolen a rose from the Carter garden and brought it to the dance," he said with a laugh that was for me alone.

"No," I flashed back, "a string bean." And with that I danced off again with the judge, while the doctor disappeared through the door, and I heard the chug of his car as it whirled away. He had just stopped in for a second to see the fun, and God had given me that gypsy waltz with him because he knew I needed something like that in my life to keep for always.

This has been a happy night, in which I betrothed myself to Alfred, though he doesn't know it yet. I am going to take it as a sign that life for us is going to be brilliant and gay and full of laughter and love.

I haven't had Billy in my arms today, and I don't know how I shall ever get myself to sleep if I let myself think about it. His sleep place on my breast aches. It is a comfort to think that the great big God understands the womenfolk that he makes even if they don't understand themselves.

* * * * * * * *

Most parties are just bunches of selfish people who go off in the corners and have good times all by themselves, but in Hillsboro, Tenn., it is not that way. Everybody that is not invited helps the hostess get ready and have nice things for the others, and sometimes I think they really have the best time of all.

This morning Aunt Bettie came up my front steps before breakfast with a large basketful of things for my dinner, and I wondered what I would have collected to be served to those people by the time all my neighbors had made their prize contributions. It took Aunt Bettie and Judy a half hour to unpack their things and set them in the refrigerator and on the pantry shelves. One was a plump fruit cake that had been keeping company in a tight box with a sponge soaked in sherry for ever since New Year's. It was ripe, or smelled so. It made me gnaw under my belt.

A little later Judy was exclaiming over a two-year-old ham that had been simmered in port and larded with egg dressing, when Mrs. Johnson came in and began to unpack her basket, which was mostly bottles of things she said she used to "stick" food. The ginger colored barber got the run of them before the dinner was over and got badly stuck, so Judy says. That's what made him make the mistake.

I had planned to have a lot of strange food and had ordered some things up from a caterer in the city, but I telephoned the expressman not to deliver them until the next day, even if they did spoil. How could I use soft shelled crabs when Mrs. Wade had sent me word that she was going to bake some brook trout by a recipe of the judge's grandmother? Mrs. Hampton Buford had let me know about two fat little summer turkeys she was going to stuff with corn pone and green sage, and fillet mignon seemed foolish eating beside them. But when the little bit of a baby pig, roasted whole with an apple in its mouth, looking too frisky and innocent for worlds with his little baked tail curled up in the air, arrived from Mrs. Caruthers Cain I went out into the garden and laughed out loud at the idea of having spent money for lobsters, to be shipped alive and to be served broiled in their own shells.

When I got back in the kitchen things were well under way, everything smelling grand and Aunt Bettie in full swing matching up my dinner guests.

"Nobody in this town could suit me better than Pet Buford for a daughter-in-law, and I believe I'll have all the east rooms done over in blue chintz for her. I think that would be the best thing to set off her blue eyes and corn silk hair," she was saying as she cut orange peel into strips.

"You've planned the refurnishing of that east wing to suit the style of nearly every girl in Hillsboro since Tom put on long trousers, Bettie Pollard, and they are just as they have been for fifteen years since you did over the whole house," said Mrs Johnson as she poured a wineglass half full from one bottle and added a tablespoonful from another.

REVIEW AND SAIL WERE CALLED OFF

Ladies' Day of Quincy Yacht Club, However, Was an Enjoyable Affair

Lunch by Whittemore, and Dancing to Monk's Music

A rainy afternoon was what the clerk of the weather handed out to the Quincy Yacht club Thursday afternoon, which cut out part of the usual Ladies' day program. The schedule called for a review and sail at 3 o'clock, but at that hour the sky was overcast and rain was falling. The morning gave promise of a pleasant day, and about noon there was the sound of distant thunder and telephone reports were that Weymouth and other places about Quincy had been visited by a heavy shower. This however did not prevent a large number taking the special ladies' day car for Houghs Neck which left City Square at 1.40, and every car after that carried down its contingent of the fair sex who were to participate in the festivities of the afternoon.

HARRY S. CRANE, Commodore.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the sky darkened and the rain fell, and from then on until late in the day there was an almost constant rain although it was not what might be called a heavy rain. At the start the wind was from the southwest and quite fresh, and for a time the bay was covered with white caps. This with the rain made it evident that a sail under those conditions was out of the question for to have gone out meant a wetting for the ladies.

As the ships clock in the billiard room struck six bells, indicating 3 o'clock, the time advertised for the review and sail the sky was still overcast and the smoke from passing steam vessels hung low, indicating anything but clearing weather. Shortly after the large pleasure steamer, the Loretta, which had come down from Boston to take out guests was sent back and the review and sail was wisely called off.

The moving picture man from Kincaide's theatre was on hand with his camera ready to take the review, but as this was impossible he took a moving picture of the club house with its moving crowds on the piazzas. He also placed his machine at the end of the float and took the fast launch Naughty Girl as she sped by at a high rate of speed. Pictures were also taken of several other power boats that went out and passed in review of the moving picture machine, so that although the sun refused to shine a series of pictures were obtained which will be thrown on the screen at the theatre in a few days.

At 3 o'clock Monk's orchestra gave a promenade concert in the hall which was thoroughly enjoyed by the large number of ladies who occupied seats on the enclosed upper piazza.

VICE COMMODORE EMERY at head of Reception Committee.

Shortly after 3 o'clock, Commodore Harry S. Crane, seeing that there was no possibility of the weather clearing called off the review and sail and announced that the lunch which was to have been served at 5.30 would be served earlier. Shortly after 4 o'clock Caterer C. C. Whittemore announced this part of the program ready. The lunch was served in an excellent manner and there was not as much pushing and crowding as in some of the former years. Although the threatening weather had doubtless kept many of those intending to praticipate from being present, there was a large attendance nevertheless. It was a good natured crowd and they made the most of the situation and the disappointment in not having a review and sail.

After the lunch the weather bright-

McDEVITT DID NOT ATTEND

But Democrats Have No Other Candidate

Hyde Park Men Withdraw

The Democratic City Committee held a midsummer meeting Thursday evening in the Johnson building. Ward Six was the only part of the city unrepresented. Informal discussion developed over the committee endorsing candidates known to be in the running but endorsements were withheld and probably will be until the man is named for office at the primaries.

David Murray and Philip Coveney, both of Hyde Park advised Secretary Sullivan a few days ago that they were not in the Senatorial race, the former aspiring to another term as representative and the latter not taking an active part this fall.

This puts phase on the question which was entirely unexpected and unless some good representative man, probably the West Quincy dark horse who has been mentioned, comes into the limelight, John J. McDevitt, the suspended Senator will be the only man in the field seeking Democratic honors. Even in the meeting a sentiment against his connection with good Democracy existed.

Mr McDevitt intimated that he would attend the meeting, but did not do so. The impression prevails however that in the fight for vindication the solid supporters of Democracy will repudiate his candidacy.

Jeremiah O'Leary of Sharon who is serving out a term in the house of representatives presented his candidacy for county commissioner. He received a friendly welcome from the committee.

A telegram from J. P. Vahey of Plymouth stated that he could not be present owing to unforseen circumstances. Mr Vahey is one of three known candidates for the district attorneyship of Norfolk and Plymouth counties.

The profession of faith called for did not meet with a ready response in some instances. Michael T. Sullivan when asked if he was a candidate for reelection to the house said that he was not prepared to answer that question just now, but that the committee could rest assured his action would not leave them in the lurch at the last minute and without a candidate. Many intrepreted his attitude as favoring his again being a candidate.

The berth of representative in the Sixth Norfolk district, which is now filled by William J. Leslie, was discussed, and in an effort to fill the ticket in that district a committee consisting of Edward M. Bryan, Peter Colligan and David Roche will call on prospective candidates.

Among those mentioned was Cornelius M. Duggan of Atlantic. He has been a member of the Board of Health, under the administration of William T. Shea. Charles J. McGilvray has not announced his intentions as yet.

Papers were signed and many distributed to the members for circulation. Among those now going the rounds in Quincy are Charles W. Guy for the governor's council, Leo P. Noonan for associate county commissioner, John A. Kiggen of Hyde Park and William Kelly of Quincy for the state committee, and others.

MAYOR'S GALLERY.

A fine picture of ex-Mayor William T. Shea has been added to the group of pictures of ex-Mayors which ornament the walls of the Mayor's office at City Hall. But two pictures are now lacking, those of ex-Mayors Charles M. Bryant and James Thompson. These it is hoped to add to the group soon.

AUTOIST NOT GUILTY

Was Charged With Operating While Intoxicated

There is an old saying that "When doctors disagree who shall decide?" This saying however should be changed to read "when policemen disagree it is up to Judge Avery to decide." His Honor was called upon today to decide the question whether William Cobis of Brockton was intoxicated when the automobile which he was operating banged into the team of David Breen just across the Fore River bridge in North Weymouth last Sunday night.

At the time of the accident Cobis was placed under arrest by officer Nash and sent to the Quincy police station on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Two other men who were with him at the time were also arrested for drunkenness.

The case was called Thursday and at 4 o'clock that afternoon the end not being in sight it was continued until Friday.

At the hearing Thursday officer Nash of Weymouth and officer Thorne of Quincy who was on duty at Quincy Point, and who called the patrol wagon. testified that Cobis was under the influence of liquor. Cobis however testified that he was not under the influence of liquor. He further declared that he was a man who never drank anything in the intoxicating liquor line, and that the strongest thing that he had drank Sunday was ginger ale.

This morning counsel for Cobis placed on the stand Sergt. Larkin who was in charge of the station when Cobis was brought in Sunday night, officer Avery who was the wagon officer, officer Cahill who drove the patrol wagon and officer Broberg who was at the station while Cobis was being booked.

These officers testified that there was no odor of liquor on Cobis when he was brought to the station, and that he did not have the appearance of a man who was intoxicated. Sergt. Larkin also testified that Cobis came up close to him and breathed into his face and he could not detect any odor of liquor. Officers Avery and Broberg also got a whiff of Cobis breath but neither of them could detect any odor of liquor, and further said that the man did not act like an intoxicated person. Officer Broberg however in answer to a question by counsel for Mr. Breen said that he did not see Cobis lungs, which raised a laugh.

Another witness for Cobis testified that Breen smelled of liquor at the time of the accident.

It was nearly 1 o'clock before the evidence and arguments were completed after which the court found all three defendants not guilty and they were discharged.

John D. McKay appeared for Mr. Breen and City Solicitor John W. McAnarney and Frank A. Tirrell for Cobis.

It is understood that the next step will be a civil suit by Breen against Cobis.

President Bowles Gives Out an Interesting Interview

President Bowles of the newly reorganized Fore River Shipbuilding plant in an interview published in the Boston Transcript says in part:

"Mr. Schwab's business relations with shipbuilding affairs in many foreign countries, as well as in the United States, introduces a future for the Fore River works at Quincy which could not well exist under the former Boston owners of the company, whose other business interests did not lie in directions which brought them into intimate touch with shipyard work, and so did not enable them to bring work to the yards.

"In competing for foreign ship construction it should be remembered that American plants can usually get profitable contracts only for war vessels. Mere hulls can be built more cheaply abroad than here. It is when armor, and particularly ordinance, enters into the contract that the American bidders have a fair chance, this being due to the very high prices demanded for ordinance work by foreign makers, especially in England.

"It was because the Bethlehem works could bid far below the English

The trans-Siberian express is late, but the New York Sun's globe trotter can get out and walk.

If it had been realized that the women would not turn out to the polls in Illinois, the men would not have had to bother to shave and black their boots.

While the hopes of a railroad strike proved illusory, the stock market bears still find some comfort in war in Europe and the damage to the crops by drought.

MEXICO'S ANARCHY.

The recurrence in Mexico of more aggravated disorder is what intelligent observers foresaw, and can be predicted indefinitely. Surprise is often expresed that the Mexican "people" do not end an anarchy prohibitive of prosperity, but no surprise is felt by those who know the Mexican people.

Uncle Sam's southernmost neighbors may roughly be divided into three classes. There are first the vast body of agricultural laborers or "peons." They are about as good foundation for democratic institutions as a nation of 10 year old school boys would be.

Then there are the large land owners. These men are amiable, brave as lions, hospitable to a fault. Some power of domination has made them masters, and poured the ripe fruit of Mexico's resources into their indolent laps. But in comprehension of business and government, they are not so very superior to their "peons."

They will put a lot of money into the finest threshing machine produced, and then return to the old fashioned, primitive method of treading out grains under the feet of their colts.

They will take a notion to go to Europe, place mortgages on their plantations, and forget to pay the interest. While they are gone the lands will be sold at foreclosure for a song. When their letter of credit gives out, they can't understand why they are beggars. Probably they became revolutionists.

The third class is the small body of well educated men, who are so far removed from their fellow citizens in thought and purpose as to have no influence.

Would that the strong hand of another Diaz might arise, to mould a people who are but clay in the hands of the potter.

IS CARD PLAYING DECLINING?

A newspaper story reports a smaller demand for playing cards. When the boys stole out of sight to play high low jack in the haymow, there was no loss of popularity. Possibly now, when nearly every one plays, there is not quite the attraction of naughtiness.

Spartans who declined to learn bridge might have been very good. But they have been very lonesome. The craze has followed the neglect of family life, when the men sheepishly slip out to meet choice spirits at club or lodge, any one might know the women would turn to bridge or something.

But bridge has only swayed the circles of society alleged to be the more select. In simpler neighborhoods, pitch, euchre, and other primtive competitions have still held sway.

Are there many families who gather as formerly for a household or neighborhood game? It sometimes seems as if the bridge craze had had the result to train a few experts, and discourage playing by others.

Mastery of the game becomes so complete that one no longer plays simple and bungling games as formerly with dad and the boys, or the "young lady across the way." Such bonehead work can no longer be tolerated. Interest in the game is aroused only on meeting at a select club competitors whom it is some satisfaction to crush.

Possibly cards are thus being specialized like base ball. Unscientific players become discouraged and prefer the moving picture show or the ball game, where they can be amused without being lectured by fretful losers for stupidity. The ordinary person on being invited to play bridge nowadays, feels much as if he were summoned from the bleachers to play league ball.

We Need Some Form of Old Age Pensioning by Law

By JOHN MITCHELL, Chairman Trade Agreement Committee, National Civic Federation

I HAVE no hesitation in saying that a system of old age pensions GRANTED BY LAW would be infinitely better in this country than the present haphazard old age pensions that are dependent upon private generosity or upon the agreements between employers and employees.

American workingmen and workingwomen prefer that their wages should be sufficient to enable them to lay aside enough to provide for their old age. But in the absence of a wage scale that makes this condition possible OLD AGE PENSIONS FROM THE GOVERNMENT WOULD BE OF INESTIMABLE VALUE.

SOME FORM OF OLD AGE PENSIONING BY LAW IS A NECESSITY HERE. THE TRADE LIFE OF THE AMERICAN WORKINGMAN IS THE SHORTEST OF ANY WORKINGMAN. THE INTENSITY AND SPEEDING OF THE PACE SET HERE ARE SUCH THAT MEN WEAR OUT, ARE INJURED OR OTHERWISE INCAPACITATED FOR FURTHER LABOR MUCH MORE QUICKLY THAN ELSEWHERE.

It has been said, of course, that the higher wages here and the consequently better food and living conditions offset this strain by fortifying the worker against it. This DOES NOT NECESSARILY FOLLOW.

We hear a good deal about the pensioning of aged employees by corporations. Such pensions usually come from a fund to which the employees and the corporations have jointly contributed. There is always one great drawback to the actual practical value of old age pensions as a private beneficence—when the man or woman is nearing the age at which the pension should go into effect he or she may be dismissed. Therefore it is a MERE PRETENSE in some cases.

WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Roxbury Couple Celebrate at Houghs Neck

Mr. and Mrs. Moses Degroot of Roxbury observed the 25th anniversary of their marriage at their summer home, 60 Babcock street, Houghs Neck, Thursday evening. About 60 guests were present, many being members of the summer colony.

A wine cabinet was presented to Mr. and Mrs. Degroot, the gift of summer neighbors. While wholly unexpected it was promptly accepted by the happy couple and in their enthusiasm over their new possession they continually thanked one and all many times.

Dancing was enjoyed during the evening, old and young participating. Ice cream, cake and refreshments were served and the party adjourned shortly before midnight. The house was decoarted with japanese lanterns and flowers and gave a very pretty effect.

Mr. and Mrs. Degroot have been making Houghs Neck their summer residence for some years and have gained the friendship and esteem of the permanent as well as the summer residents. They are the parents of two popular young men who make their home with them.

THE ELECTRIC FLATIRON.

Thousands of women are using electric flatirons every week but there is only now and then one who can tell just how the iron acquires its mysterious heat. At the twitch of a switch the iron begins to get hot and it stays at just the right temperature luring the entire time it takes to do the ironing, without any outward sign of fire, flame or heat.

"But, how does it get hot?" asked the visitor as she watched her friend using an electric iron on the back porch.

"Oh," laughed Mrs. C., "it is really very simple."

"Simple!" ejaculated her guest. "Why, I should be afraid to use it without knowing just where the heat came from. Of course I understand it has something to do with electricity but it isn't at all like an electric light."

"Jack has explained it all to me," said Mrs. C., "and you know he works at the General Electric plant. The electricity which flows over the wires is quite invisible. When you turn the switch for an electric lamp the electricity flows into the lamp and through the tiny filament, causing it to get very hot. When this filament is heated to incandesence it gives forth light rays. This flatiron is built on that very same principle. When I turn the little switch the electricity flows down this long flexible cord, which is really two wires covered with silk, to the iron. Concealed in the bottom of the iron is a flat disk of metal. It is rather a 'leaf,' or a punching, over which the electricity must travel to get back to its source. This heating unit, or leaf performs the same purpose as the filament in the electric lamp. In passing through this disk the electricity makes it quite hot. This heat radiates from the disk to the face of the iron. By accurate engineering calculation this metal disk is made just the right size so that iron will remain the same temperature as long as needed."

"But I don't see how the electricity makes the little disk hot," protested the guest.

"That is not so easy to explain," acknowledged Mrs. C. "The disk is really punched into a narrow ribbon of thin metal arranged in the general shape of the face of the iron. This ribbon would be several yards long if it was stretched out to its full length. It is great deal smaller, in proportion, than the wires in the cord. This ribbon is made of a special metal designed purposely to offer resistance to the passage, or flow, of the electric current. The electricity has to force its way over this partial obstruction in its path. In forcing its way past this resistance a portion of the electrical energy is changed into heat energy. It is much the same as the heat produced by rubbing a penny on the carpet. To overcome the friction of the carpet a part of the mechanical energy, represented by the motion of your hand, is changed into heat energy and the penny soon becomes too hot to hold.

"The electricity flows from the lamp socket down one wire in the flexible cord to the iron, thence through the leaf heating unit back up through the other wire on the cord and so on. In traveling through the heating unit this electricity does a certain amount of work, producing heat, and this work is what we actually pay for. The current will work for one hour, heating this iron, for only five cents."

SUMMONED A POSTMAN

But Instead the Fire Department Responded

A newly arrived Swede girl stood on Whitwell street near the City Hospital Thursday afternoon exhibiting a letter to her sweetheart in Sweden which conveyed the news of her safe arrival in Quincy. While trying to locate a box a mischievous boy pointed to the bright red paint of box 223 and told her a nice postal clerk would hurry to the spot on signal and take her letter to the central office.

For various reasons the girl has been called Olga. She did as directed and calmly awaited the nice man's advent. Instead a burly fireman, wearing a rubber helmet and displaying an excited smile as he looked about for the hydrants location, jumped from the auto chemical and gruffly asked her where the fire was.

She handed him the missive and he handed it back to her. Through an interpreter she said that she had chosen the prettiest box since nothing was too good for her sweetheart.

Chief Litchfield was on his way to the Quincy Yacht Club Ladies day and he responded. He arrived to smile benignly on Olga.

SACRED HEART LAWN PARTY

Annual Event a Gala Day for People of Atlantic Parish

The members of the parish of the Sacred Heart, formerly a mission station, and now one of the most prosperous in the Boston diocese will under the direction of their beloved pastor Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe and Rev. Fr. J. F. McNiff, assistant pastor, celebrate their annual lawn party Saturday afternoon and evening.

The affair will be held on the grounds surrounding the church, and a large and sufficient committee have prepared a program which promises to furnish entertainment for old and young. The festivities will commence about two o'clock and continue until about 11.30 P. M.

The church was erected and dedicated in September, 1878, by the late Archbishop Williams. While under the direction of the late Rev. Fr. Francis Frigulietti the membership grew with the ward wherein it is situated. In the early years but one mass sufficed for Sunday and now four masses are celebrated, including a children's mass.

The mission was made a separate parish in July, 1903, and Father Cuffe after 21 faithful years of service as assistant at St. John's church was made pastor. He has zealously guarded the needs of his people and the annual party, the proceeds of which are devoted to church maintenance point out the affection of his parishioners.

Do you suppose Prof. William H. Taft expects to get any of that mountain lion steak?

REVIEW AND SALE

ened up some and although the wind had died down there was still enough water in the channel to allow power boats to get in and out and quite a few of the launches took out parties for a sail about the bay. The Naughty Girl with Tax Collector Sandberg at the wheel took out a party of City Hall clerks, while Mayor Stone took out a party in his power boat. Others followed suit and for a time just before dark the bay was alive with power boats skipping here and there. Darkness however brought them back to the club float for the evening's program which included a dance until 10.30 to the music of Monk's orchestra.

By this time there was a large party of young people at the clubhouse and they had their fill of dancing. The floor was in prime condition and the music inspiring and everybody had a good time, for those who did not care to participate in the dance enjoyed themselves on the enclosure watching the young people.

During the afternoon while the weather man with his rain held sway, several of the yacht owners entertained their parties in the club lockers with refreshments and cards, while from one of the prominent lockers on the lower front a graphaphone enlivened the occasion with all the popular airs.

The special ladies' day car for City Square left Houghs Neck at 11.05 and it contained a happy crowd, for aside from the review and sail, the day had been a success in every way and everybody had made the best of the trying situation for Commodore Crane and the officers.

The affair was in charge of the following House Committee:—Vice Commodore Edgar W. Emery, Commodore Harry S. Crane, Rear Commodore Charles W. Laing, Secretary John O. Hall, Treasurer George S. Morse, William H. Huy, Frank K. Patch, Fred E. Tupper, Andrew F. Burrell, George H. Newcomb, Edgar P. Plummer, and Harry E. Winslow.

They were ably assisted by the following reception committee: H. D. Spear, D. D. Nickerson, F. R. Cowling, James Hector, L. L. Files, H. C. Andrews, George E. Bell, L. H. Matthews, H. DeCoste, Daniel J. Ring, F. O. Fellows, Walter E. Elcock, Joseph H. Elcock, Oscar S. Sandberg, George H. Wilkins, Channing T. Furnald, Myron W. Turner, George L. T. Tupper, W. S. Hardwick, Thos. E. WILL GO OFF AT MIDNIGHT

Battleship Rivadavia Sails on Sunday August 3

Rumors have it that the battleship Rivadavia will Leave the Fore River plant for New York Sunday morning This has led many to believe that it is the coming Sunday. This however is not a fact for the date is Sunday, Aug. 3, when she goes out. It will not be in the day time as many would hope, but she will go out about midnight as the tide at that time is higher.

From Quincy she goes to the Navy Yard at Brooklyn where she will be scraped and have some repairs made, after which she will be given her trial

It is expected that fully one thousand men will sail with the battleship which number includes about 200 of the Argentine officers stationed at the Fore River yards and at the yards of the New York Ship Building Co.

GOOD CONTRACT AT SHIPYARD

BRIEFS

A daughter born to Mr. and Mrs. John D. Thomas at 756 Washington street on Thursday, passed away today.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Joss of Garfield street are receiving congratulations on the birth this morning of a son. The heir has been named James Edward Joss.

Walter Anderson of 112 Cranch street, who is at the Quincy City Hospital recovering from injuries received on the Houghs Neck line Thursday morning, is in a semi conscious condition today.

The Micmac of the Quincy Yacht club, Capt. C. W. Laing, arrived at Augusta, Maine, on the afternoon of Wednesday after a splendid run from Houghs Neck. Aboard her are intimate friends of Rear Commodore Laing who were charmed by the splendid scenery of the Kennebec river.

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Havender, who died Wednesday, was held this afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles E. Sweet, 25 Prospect avenue, Wollaston. Services at the home were conducted by Rev. Frederick E. Steenstra, rector of St. Chrysostom's Episcopal church. The deceased leaves a family. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Maj. Fred E. Jones, with Capt. W. H. Blanchard and Lt. Sydney C. Hardwick of the Hospital corps, leave Sunday for West Barnstable, where they will be stationed during the maneuvers of the Second brigade which goes into camp Sunday. The brigade will pass through Quincy by train Sunday morning. It is composed of the 5th, 8th, and 9th regiments and a regiment of cavalry.

—The government's' paper money laundry idea is said to be a failure. The money does not "come out of the wash well" and neither looks or feels as it did before. So we will have to go back to the old plan of making new money for old which is not particularly expensive, and is in every way satisfactory.

—The liquor men of Michigan are fighting woman suffrage with a vengeance. Why not? While we are not particularly favorable to woman suffrage in all that it might possibly bring in its train, we do believe that with woman suffrage the liquor dealers of this land may well quake in their shoes.—Foxboro Reporter.

SPIPYARD WILL PROSPER

makers on the guns and armor for the Rivadavia that the Argentine contract came to this country; and though the contract has proved an unprofitable one for the Fore River Company, this fact does not contradict the principles just stated.

"Mr. Schwab is in touch with many foreign projects which he is now able, through possession of the Fore River Works, to bid for on a much more favorable basis than ever before; and much of this possible and probable work is of such character that it would almost of necessity be divided between the Fore River Works and the Bethlehem plant.

"One matter of great interest in this direction is the very large contract that Mr. Schwab signed with the Government of China before the revolution. It is expected that the new Government will carry out this contract, which includes a large amount of naval material.

"Here, however, comes in one of the strongest features of Mr. Schwab's ownership of the Fore River Works. Probably Mr. Schwab will himself have to arrange for the financing of the Chinese contract; the point is that he will be able to do it. Through his ability to carry through such an undertaking American bids for foreign naval work will have behind them, or alongside them, some of the financial features which hitherto have given European bidders 'the call' on warship work for several countries.

"Mr. Schwab is both able and willing," said Admiral Bowles, "to finance the building of general cargo vessels for the American coastwise trade, and for a certain foreign trade that is beginning to be opened up to American participation. The trouble with general cargo trade in American vessels is that the people who know how to manage that business profitably seldom or never have the money to finance the building of their own ships.

"A vessel for coastwise trade through the Panama Canal and up the Pacific Coast, for instance, will cost half a million dollars, and few general shipping firms have so much free capital to put into the investment. The profits from such shipping are good. On the Great Lakes practically every vessel of consequence is bonded for about half her cost. The banks deal regularly in ship bonds, and they have proved through a long course of years to be good investments. Boston capital has never looked favorably at such investments, with the result that such a Boston general shipping firm as Crowell & Thurlow had to go away to a more favorable financial atmosphere.

"Under the Boston ownership, the Fore River Company itself financed two ships successfully, but there was never enough capital available for this purpose to work out the possibilities. Mr. Schwab now comes in to make it possible for the men who know how to earn profits with ships to get the ships with which to earn the profits.

"There is a very stimulating outlook for this general cargo, or tramp business," said Admiral Bowles, "that is due to the rising cost of British export coal. England's' supremacy in the foreign shipping trade has been due to the fact that England could always export coal, for practically all the rest of the world, barring this country, has had to import coal. The cargo of English coal always assured a profitable outward voyage; and when the coal was delivered there was other profitable business between foreign ports or from the foreign port back to England.

"American coal has now begun to compete with English coal in foreign markets, and the fact is full of significance for the future of the American foreign trade. The possibility of competing with England is due to the rise in the wages of English coal miners, and the constantly increasing expense of getting the coal out of the deepening pits. Italy, for example, has always been dependent on English coal, yet last year, for the first time, the United States shipped coal to Italy in competition with English bidders, to the West Indies, and even to Argentina.

"This country has hardly begun to develop its soft coal fields, and with the cost of English coal certain to go on rising there seems to be no doubt that we shall soon have for foreign general cargo trade the foundation that has so long made English shipping supreme. There are men in this country who know how to manage a general cargo business to foreign ports so that it will earn good profits. If the building of ships for this trade can be financed—and that is now possible—the American merchant marine may soon begin to resume a part of its old importance in the world's traffic."

PICNIC OF CARMEN.

The outing of the Boston Street Carmen's Union at New Downers Landing opened today with the mechanical forces present. Tomorrow will be uniform day and it is expected that the merry throng will far surpass in numbers todays attendance. SSports including base ball and Gaelic foot ball are scheduled. Members of the union have been sworn in by the Selectmen of Weymouth and they are wearing regular police uniforms. A first class lockup has been arranged on the grounds in charge of Morris Garfink, with the rank of lieutenant. None had been locked up to 2 o'clock.

WILLARD STREET.

Mayor Stone received a letter from the Massachusetts Highway Commission this morning stating that the petition for the acceptance of Willard street as a State highway had been placed on file. Thinking that this meant the killing of the subject the Commission was called for an xplanation. They said that this was simply a matter of form and that the citizens would be given a hearing as announced on Wednesday, July 30, at 3 o'clock.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. VIOLENCE MARKS COPPER STRIKE

Governor Calls Out Troops to Quell Riots In Michigan

PREPARED FOR A LONG SIEGE

Thousands of Rounds of Ammunition and Shrapnel Shells Included In Equipment—Strikers Armed, Despite Union's Order to Avoid Violence—Deputies Stripped of Badges

Calumet, Mich., July 25.—Two troops of cavalry, two companies of artillery and all the infantry companies of the Michigan national guard have been ordered on duty here at once to aid in quelling the disturbance in the coper zone, where 15,000 miners are on strike.

Adjutant General Vandercook, who received orders from Governor Ferris to rush the militia here, expects to have 2400 men in Houghton and Keweenaw counties today.

Vandercook has sent telegrams to all the company commanders of the state militia ordering them to assemble their men and start at once for this district.

The provisions which the quartermaster's department had ordered for the annual encampment of state troops to be held at Ludington next month are on the way here.

Thousands of rounds of ammunition and the two field guns of the Lansing artillery companies, supplied with shrapnel shells, are included in the equipment of the militia. It is planned to keep the men in camp until the trouble is entirely over.

The mines are practically owned in Boston, and to date the strike is being handled by the mine superintendents, but a final adjustment of the difficulties will need the approval of the eastern officials, including Quincy A. Shaw, president of the Calumet, and William A. Paine of the Copper Range.

Disregarding orders of the Western Federation of Miners against violence, many of the 15,000 striking miners of the copper belt created enough disturbances to result in the ordering out of troops.

The chief disturbance that set the troops in motion was an assault on the deputy sheriffs stationed at the mines of the Calumet and Hecla company to protect property.

None of the mines has attempted to operate, but the strikers seemed to object to the presence of the deputies.

About 300 strikers, a few armed with firearms, marched to the No. 2 conglomerate shaft and stripped the deputies of stars. Then then proceeded to the Hecla branch mine and divested the deputies there of their insignia of authority. There were many fights after the stars had been collected, and several persons were severely beaten. A few men were taken to the hospitals.

The strikers then surrounded all the surface plants of the Calumet and Hecla company and forced suspension of auxiliary operations in these plants.

Several mass meetings were held and great enthusiasm was shown when the speakers exhorted the men to remain faithful to the strike orders. Several men were observed to be armed with clubs and some were said to carry knives and revolvers.

Leaders of the Western Federation of Miners have sent out repeated requests to the men to desist from carrying arms or interfering by violence with anyone about the mines.

REGULATION OF DIVORCES

Pennsylvanian Would Have It Placed In Hands of Congress

Washington, July 25.—A constitutional amendment to empower congress to regulate marriage and divorce was proposed in a joint resolution by Representative Edmonds of Pennsylvania. The resolution would amend the constitution to provide:

"Congress shall have the power to establish uniform laws on the subject of marriage and divorce for the United States and to provide penalties for violation thereof."

DESTROYER OF PESTS

Government Puts In a Good Word For the Meadow Lark

Washington, July 25.—Protect and encourage the meadow lark, for its principal diet consists of cotton boll and alfalfa wevils, grasshoppers and predaceous ground beetles, advises the department of agriculture.

While the bird, it is acknowledged, does some damage to sprouting grain, its value as a destroyer of injurious insects is shown to the far greater.

Worcester, Mass., July 25.—Carl F. Johnson was instantly killed in front of his home in Millbury last night by being run down by the limousine of James F. Ray, a mill owner of Franklin.

Boy Killed by Naphtha Fumes

MISS FINLAY WAS SECOND

Made Good Showing in Woman's Race at Put-In-Bay

A dispatch of Thursday to the Globe says a salt water sailor nearly carried off the honors today in the woman's catboat race, the feature of the day's yachting card at Put—In—Bay, O. As it wasit was, Miss Dorothy Finlay of Quincy, sialing under the colors of the Buckeye Lake Yacht Club of Columbus, O, finished a good second and for a time threatened to overcome the lead of Mrs. King, sailing Old Sam of the Toledo Yacht Club.

Many believe only Miss Finlay's unfamiliarity with fresh water conditions as they existed today on Lake Erie, prevented her carrying off first horors, The winners covered the three-mile course in 53m 38s, while Miss Finlay's Fiji 11 finished in 56m 30s, in a field of nine boats. The Detroit Yacht Club's entry, Ethel was third, in 58m 45s.

NEWS ITEMS FROM MILTON

William Doherty and family of Washington and Adams street are spending the summer in New Hampshire. They will return during September.

Robert Corkery of the J. J. Hammers store will commence his vacation August 4 and is planning to take a long and enjoyable auto trip through the New England states.

Nelson Davenport of East Milton leaves next week for Eastport, Me., where he will pass his annual vacation.

John O'Connor of the Mullen grocery is on his two weeks vacation, while Edward Merrigan, another clerk, returned Monday.

John J. Hammers of East Milton will represent Milton at the annual convention of Rexall dealers which will take place in the Copley Plaza, Aug. 18.

John J. Gallagher, a member of the house of representatives for Milton and Canton will be a candidate for reelection and it is said that his papers are now being circulated throughout the district. No other avowed candidates have come forth.

East Milton is now passing through its quietest season of the year and social affairs have been discontinued. The only organized affair of the week was the special trolley party of the Woodsum Class of the First Baptist Church to Nantasket on Wednesday evening. Nearly 100 joined the crowd and enjoyed the several attractions of the summer resort.

W. F. Murray, at present a swimming instructor at the Quincy Shore reservation, has been mentioned as the man to start a swimming class in East Milton in a pool to be built by the town authorities. The suggestion has met with favor, particularly in East Milton. At the Cunningham gymnasium, there is a fine arrangement of shower baths, but no swimming pool has ever been erected in any part of Milton for public uses. Mr. Murray, formerly a member of the fast Milton A. A. football team which sported under the old rules, is well known in Milton, having been a resident there since boyhood.

NECESSARY TO CLOSE DOORS.

There was a large crowd of bargain hunters on hand at 9 o'clock this morning waiting for the doors to open at the great fire sale of the Payson-Mitchell Co., whose store was gutted by fire early in the month. Once the doors were open the store was not long in filling up and the large corps of clerks were kept busy waiting on customers, who were not slow in picking up the genuine bargains.

Finally the crush became so great that it was decided to close the doors. In other words only to allow so many in the store at a time. This was done to facilitate the purchasers as well as the clerks. As fast as the crowd would thin out the doors would be opened and another crowd admitted.

—A Philadelphia church, which is now for sale, by the way, tried the experiment of offering free automobile rides and free pressing of trousers to encourage attendance. No society seems to have hit upon the idea of providing free go-to-meeting clothes for laggard worshippers.

PEACE MISSION PLAN FAVORED

Bryan May Be Sent to Mexico as Chief Mediator

DISCUSSED AT WHITE HOUSE

Annexation of States In Northern Mexico by United States, In Lieu of Cash Payment For Damages, Suggested as Possible Way of Bringing Peace In the Republic

Washington, July 25.—That Secretary of State Bryan may be dispatched to Mexico at the head of a commission seeking to mediate between the warring factions there was the report current at the Capitol, when it became known that Chairmen Flood of the house committee and Bacon of the senate committee on foreign relations had discussed the question of such a peace move with the president.

"I have heard the name of no man mentioned for this commission," declared Bacon, who, nevertheless, exhibited no surprise that the rumor was abroad. He did not deny the further report that a long telegram on the matter had been sent to Bryan following the talk at the White House.

It appears that Flood is urging this method of meeting the crisis beyond the border. Flood himself would not discuss the matter.

A meeting of the senate committee is to be held today or tomorrow to hear the chairman's report of progress in the Mexican trouble.

Cession of a portion of northwestern Mexico to the United States, in satisfaction of the enormous claim for damages to the property of Americans which must finally be presented by this country to Mexico, was suggested by Senator Hitchcock, member of the senate foreign relations committee, as a possibility.

"The Mexican people will be unable to meet our fair claim for damages with cash payment," he said. "It may be that they might agree to give certain territory—Sonora, Chihuahua and the northwestern region—to us in partial satisfaction. Then an American protectorate might be formed for another zone. A buffer state between the United States and Mexico would not be a bad idea.

"I do not think that a commission of mediation sent to Mexico just now could accomplish much good. We shall have to let events take their course. Recognition of two separate states in Mexico would be preferable to continued warfare if such a plan could bring peace."

Ambassador Wilson will meet President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan Saturday. As soon as he has laid before the officials his intimate information of the exact conditions in the southern republic the senate and the house leaders will be called, will have explained to them the plans of the administration and will be asked for the needed support in congress to put these plans into effect.

DEATH LIST REDUCED

Now Believed but Forty-Four Perished n Binghamton Fire

Binghamton, N. Y., July 25.—Several bodies of victims of the fire which destroyed the Binghamton Clothing company's factory have been recovered. The dead are now estimated to be but forty-four. This low estimate is based on the fact that in the confusion following the disaster many names were duplicated in the lists of dead and missing sent out.

Coroner Seymour began his investigation of the disaster late yesterday afternoon. Five other probes are promised. Labor representatives, the state fire marshal and the state factory investigating commission are on the ground and ready to begin an investigation to fix the responsibility for the catastrophe.

A BOSTON GIRL'S BUDGET.

Suffragists and "Antis" Trail Each Other Up and Down the Old Bay State—Their Arguments Help the Average Citizen to Make Up His Mind—Advice Not to Expect a Boston palace for Thirty-Five a Month Still Holds Good.

Twixt "anti" and "pro" the average Bay State voter ought soon to know where he is at on the suffrage question. Trailing the equal suffragists' automobiles the representatives of the association opposed to further extension of the ballot are giving interested audiences their arguments to prove that a great world movement is all to the bad. In charge of this propaganda of protest is Mrs. A. J. George, field secretary, she against whom some of the suffragists are bitter but whom others regard as one of the most efficient aids of their cause.

Giving out "publicity" is Mrs. Henry Preston White of Brookline, who explains that she and her associates are not of the "idle rich who have no need for the ballot but are women who consider equal suffrage a positive menace to the women of the country and to the state at large!" There are those in the suffrage camp who hold that this continued opposition helps wonderfully. It needs evidences of a scrap to get most people's interest and attention.

When art is quiescent arts and crafts are wide awake. Dearlers' galleries along Boylston and Newbury streets are deader than the proverbial Chelsea, innocent of art, but in picturesque Hingham on the south shore of Boston harbor preparations are active for the annual display of handicraft in the last days of July and first of August.

This, in the past few years, has become a widely heralded seasonal event, and to Hingham resort automobile parties from every part of eastern Massachusetts—just as during the Deerfield exhibition the whole middle Connecticut valley is drawn upon to inspect and purchase new assortments of "old blue and white." Hingham's specialties are baskets and toys, made by veteran craftsmen. Other objects are also shown in goodly store—in evidence of the vitality of a movement which fifteen years ago was hailed by many as a passing fad.

For advising New England people not to move into Boston expecting to find safe and comfortable living quarters at a reasonable price the writer of these lines was editorially "called down" not long ago by a leading Boston newspaper. The answer to the statements about housing conditions was that there are plenty of safe and commodious houses and apartments for those who will take the trouble to find them out.

Perhaps. Comes now however, the fire prevention committee of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and of the Massachusetts State Fire Prevention Association to say that the flimsy wooden structures in the jerry-built nearer suburbs are a constant peril to their inhabitants and that they are so shabbily put together as to become uninhabitable in a very few years.

Yet these are often the only kind of habitation available to the newcomer whose means are moderate. Rents in the more desirable suburbs have become prohibitive except to persons of large income. The talk of the town as well as personal experience indicates that Boston, once rather a safe and comfortable old town to live in, is becoming one of the most expensive, perilous and uncomfortable of American municipalities.

ASSESSORS OUTING.

Assessors Warren W. Adams and Wellington W. Mitchell, of the Quincy Board attended the annual outing Thursday of the Massachusetts Assessors association at Marblehead. Shortly after dinner the assessors were addressed by Senator Lombard Williams of Dedham, Chairman of the Senate Committee on Taxation and also by William Trefry, State Tax Commissioner, both of whom gave interesting talks on the subject of taxation. In addition to these two addresses there were brief remarks by several of the association on the question.

VESSEL BADLY BATTERED

Schooner Which Rammed Steamer Reaches Boston In Safety

Boston, July 25.—The five-masted schooner Gardiner G. Deering, her bows smashed to splinters and with powerful steam pumps working to keep her from filling, arrived in the harbor last night.

The Deering was towed in by the tug Orion and the revenue cutter Gresham acted as convoy. A large piece of canvas, that had been nailed over the shattered bow at the risk of First Mate Humphrey's life, kept out some of the water, but the steam pumps working at full speed were able only to keep the water in the hold down to four feet.

Until yesterday noon the officers of the Sloterdyk feared they had sent a big schooner with all hands to the bottom. On board the shattered sailing vessel, Captain Nash and his tired crew felt certain that the steamer with which they collided had gone to the bottom off Nantucket with her entire crew.

The Deering is owned by Gardiner G. Deering of Bath, Me., and her cargo consisted of 36,000 railroad ties.

LAMAR IS INDICTED

Impersonating an Officer of Government Charged Against Him

New York, July 25.—The indictment of David Lamar, the Wall street operator, on the charge of impersonating an officer of the government for purposes of fraud, was announced by United States District Attorney Marshall.

The indictment charges Lamar with impersonating Congressman Palmer. Both the late J. P. Morgan and the present J. P. Morgan, together with Louis C. Ledyard and nine others, composing the partnership of J. P. Morgan & Co., are mentioned as persons whom Lamar is accused of having attempted to defraud.

The indictment was the outgrowth of Lamar's testimony as a witness before the senate lobby investigating committee in the inquiry of the "Union Pacific scandal."

SLAIN AND THROWN FROM OCEAN LINER

Opinion of Skipper Who Finds Girl's Headless Body

Boston, July 25.—The girl whose headless body was picked up by the crew of the Gloucester fishing schooner Jennie H. Gilbert east of the Georges fishing banks was murdered, according to the opinion of Captain White, the skipper.

White believes she was slain on a transatlantic liner and cast overboard. She was between 16 and 19 years of age, he thinks, of delicate build. He believes the body was in the water not over a few days—a week at most.

The body was found floating on the surface of the water, and was given burial at sea by White and one of his crew, but there was nothing on the body or the clothing to indicate the identity of the dead woman.

Miss Eager, Book Fraud Victim, Was Known For Her Charities

Boston, July 25.—Miss Catherine M. Eager, aged 55, the first person to call attention of District Attorney Pelletier to the de luxe book swindle last winter, after being fleeced out of $1800, was found dead on the floor in the dining room of her apartments at the Hotel Nightingale, Roxbury.

Medical Examiner Leary pronounced death due to natural causes. He said she had probably been dead since Sunday.

Miss Eager, who was wealthy, was well known in the Roxbury district for her numerous charities. She left no relatives.

FIGHT AGAINST PARCEL POST

Congressmen Plan to Resist Attack by Railroads

WIDESPREAD APPEAL SENT OUT

Expansion Depends Upon Present Administrative Clause, Which Farmers Are Urged to Insist Upon Being Retained—Means Beginning of the End of Express Companies

Washington, July 25.—Following Postmaster General Burleson's announcement of his proposed change in the size of the parcel post package limit from eleven to twenty pounds, postoffice department officials have declared that the department is not going to stop at a package limit of twenty pounds, but will go on to one hundred pounds as soon as it can take care of the business.

Now that the railroads have taken a hand in the fight on the postoffice department because of Postmaster General Burleson's order extending the parcel post weight limit and reducing the rates, and a general warfare is looked for, members of the house have taken an appeal to the people to "Save the parcel post." Letters have been sent by Representative Lewis of Maryland to heads of farmers' granges in a dozen states, and this argument is made:

"Should the administrative powers clause in the parcel post law be stricken out, the vital force of the parcel post will be killed, it cannot be expanded and we will have lost the work of forty years. Letters and telegrams should go from every leading farmer to the senator, to his congressman and to the postmaster general, demanding that the law be let alone and the service of the parcel post extended.

"Moments count and the quicker and harder the farmers strike now the less likely it will be that we shall have another fight. We must save the parcel post."

Lewis is the father of the parcel post. Commenting on the partial reconstruction of the parcel post service within the 150-mile zones to become operative Aug. 15, he says it means the beginning of the end of the express companies in America. He said the parcel post will gradually absorb the small retail package business of the express companies until the latter's margin of profit is wiped out.

Thirty percent of the express companies' gross revenues, according to Lewis, comes from the transportation of packages weighing between one and nineteen pounds. Lewis added that the express companies, in their briefs filed with the interstate commerce commission, which the latter rejected, protesting against lowering their rates, contended that 4 percent of their gross revenue is all the net profit they make.

With parcel post rates averaging from one-half to two-thirds lower than the express rates within 150-mile distances, Lewis feels confident that the government will easily absorb more than $6,750,000 of the express companies' gross business, which is $168,000,000.

Lewis added that the big surplus held in reserve by the express companies is more than sufficient to pay off dollar for dollar the amount originally invested in express stocks and bonds, and that, therefore, the stockholders and bondholders will not suffer a loss.

Tubes For Parcel Post Mail

Second Assistant Postmaster General Stewart, who is chairman of the commission, stated that if the government purchased the pneumatic service, it would enlarge and extend the system so as to meet the needs of the parcel post and the general requirements of the postoffice department.

Superintendent of Chicago Schools Puts Blame on Politicians

Chicago, July 25.—Mrs. Ella F. Young, Chicago's $10,000 woman superintendent of schools, has resigned.

The reasons assigned by her are that she has been made the victim of a political intrigue by members of the school board, and that under these circumstances the efficiency of the schools might be impaired by her retention of the office.

Mrs. Young gave these reasons in a talk with the newspaper men, but she did not mention them in her formal letter of resignation addressed to Peter Reinberg, president of the board.

PATERSON STRIKE PROVES A FAILURE

Silk Workers Will Return on Best Terms Obtainable

Paterson, N. J., July 25.—The I. W. W. leaders of the silk strikers admit that their fight against the manufacturers is lost. They advise the strikers to go back to work on the best terms they can obtain.

The dyers, dyers' helpers and the finishers, in another meeting, voted to go back to work. The only persons who decided to keep on with their battle are about 2500 ribbon weavers, who alone remain out of about 23,000 persons who struck more than twenty-two weeks ago.

Only about 800 persons attended the I. W. W. meeting in the strikers' headquarters, where admission of defeat was made.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Well, I think he is really interested now from the way he danced most of his time with her down at the hotel the other night, and I have hopes I never had before. Now, Molly, do put him between you and her, sort of cornered, so he can't even see Ruth Chester. She is too old for him." And Tom's mother looked at me over the orange peel as to a confederate.

"Humph, I'd like to see you or Molly or any woman 'corner' Tom Pollard," said Mrs. Johnson with a wry smile as she tasted the concoction in the wineglass.

"I have put him at the end of the table because he is my kinsman and the only host I've got at present. Aunt Bettie," I said regretfully. I always take every chance to rub in Tom's and my relationship on Aunt Bettie, so she won't notice our flirtation.

"I'd put John Moore at the head of the table if I were you, Molly Carter, because he's about the only man you've invited that has got any sense left since you and that Chester girl took to visiting Hillsboro. He's a host of steadiness in himself, and the way he ignores all you women who would run after him if he would let you shows what he is. He has my full confidence," and as she delivered herself of this judgment of Dr. John, Mrs Johnson drove in all the corks tight and began to pound spice.

"He's not out of the widower woods yet, Caroline," said Aunt Bettie with her most speculative smile. "I have about decided on him for Ruth since the judge has taken to following Molly about as bad as Billy Moore does. But don't you all say a word, for John's mighty timid, and I don't believe, in spite of all these years, he's had a single notion yet. If he had had he'd have tried a set-to with you, Molly, like all the rest of the shy birds in town. He doesn't see a woman as anything but a patient at the end of a spoon, and mighty kind and gentle he does the dosing of them too. Just the other day—dearie me, Judy, what has boiled over now?" And in the excitement that ensued I escaped to the garden.

Yes, Aunt Bettie is right about Dr. John; he doesn't see a woman and there is no way to make him. What she had said about it made me realize that he had always been like that, and I told myself that there was no reason in the world why my heart should beat in my slippers on that account. Still I don't see why Ruth Chester should have her head literally thrown against that stone wall and I wish Aunt Bettie wouldn't. It seemed like a desecration even to try to matchmake him, and it made me hot with indignation all over. I dug so fiercely at the roots of my phlox with a trowel I had picked up that they groaned so loud I could almost hear them. I felt as if I must operate on something. And it was in this mood that Alfred's letter found me.

It had a surprise in it and I sat back on the grass and read it with my heart beating like a triphammer. He had sailed the day he had posted it and he was due to arrive in New York almost as soon as it did, just any hour now I calculated in a flash. And "from New York immediately to Hillsboro" he had written in words that fairly sung themselves off the paper. I was frightened—so frightened that the letter shook in my hands, and with only the thought of being sure that I might be alone for a few minutes with it, I fled to the garret.

LEAF NINTH.

When the Telegram Came.

SURELY no woman ever in all the world read such a letter as that, and no wonder my breath almost failed me. It was a love letter in which the cold paper was transubstantiated into a heart that beat against mine, and I bowed my head over it as I wet it with tears. I knew then that I had taken his coming back lightly; had fussed over it and been silly proud of it, while not really caring at all. All that awful melting away of my fatness seemed just a lack of confidence in his love for me. He wouldn't have minded if I weighed 500, I felt sure. He loved me—really, really, really—and I had sat and weighed him with a lot of men who were nothing more than amused by my flightiness or taken with my beauty and who wouldn't have known such love if it were shown to them through a telescope.

I reached into a trunk that stood right beside me and took out a box that I hadn't looked into for years. His letters were all there and his photographs that were as handsome as the young god of love himself. I could hardly see them through my tears, but I knew that they were dim in places with being cried over when I had put them away years ago after Aunt Adeline decided that I was to be married. I kissed the poor little girl cry spots, and with that a perfect flood of tears rose to my eyes, but they didn't fall, for there, right in front of me, stood a more woe stricken human being than I could possibly be, if I judged by appearances.

"Molly, Molly," gulped Billy, "I am so sick I'm going to die here on the floor," and he sank into my arms.

"Oh, Billy, what is the matter?" I gasped and gave him a little terrified shake.

"Mamie Johnson did it—poked her finger down her throat and mine, too," he wailed against my breast. "We was full of things folks gived us to eat and couldn't eat no more. She said if we did that with our fingers it would all come up and we would have room for some more then. She did it, and I'm going to die dead—dead!"

"No, no, lover; you'll be all right in a second. Stay quiet here in your Molly's lap and you will be well in just a few minutes," I said with a smile I hid in his yellow mop as I kissed the drake tail kiss spot. "Where's Mamie?" I thought to ask of little Billy with the greatest apprehension.

"In the garden eating cupcake Judy baked hot for both of us. She didn't frow up as much as I did—or maybe more," he answered, snuggling close and much comforted.

"Don't ever, ever do that again, Billy," I said, giving him both a hug and a shake. "It's piggy to eat more than you can hold and then still want more. What would your father say?"

"Doc ain't no good, and I don't care what he says," answered Billy with spirit. "He don't play no more, and he don't laugh no more, and he don't eat no more hardly too. I ain't a-going to live in that house with him more'n two days longer. I want to come over and sleep in your bed with blue ribbons on the posts and have you play with me, Molly."

"Don't say that, lover, ever again," I said as I bent over him. "Your father is the best man in the world, and you must never, never think of leaving him."

"I bet I will when I get big enough to kill a bear," answered Billy decidedly. "Say, do you reckon Mamie saved even a little piece of that cake? I 'spect I had better go see." And he slipped out of my arms and was gone before I could hold him.

It is a lonely house across the garden with the big and the tiny man in it all by themselves. And tears, from another corner of my heart entirely, rose to my eyes at the thought, but they, too, never fell, for I heard Mrs. Johnson calling, and I had to run down quick and see what new delicacy had arrived for my party.

Uncle Thomas Pollard had sent me a quart bottle of his private stock with the message to put the mint to soak just one hour and twenty minutes before the men came. I made room for it beside the case of champagne on the cellar shelf and wondered how they would stand it all. We don't have champagne often in Hillsboro, and when we do nobody seems to want to cut down on the Juleps, consequently—well, nothing ever really happens! However, it must have been the champagne that made Tom act as he did. He was never like that before.

Somehow I didn't enjoy dressing tonight for my dinner as I did for the dance, and when I was through I stood before the mirror and looked at myself a long time. I was very tall and slim and—well, I suppose I might say regal in that amethyst crape with the soft rose point, but I looked to myself about the eyes as I had been doing for years when I put on my Sunday clothes to go to church with Mr. Carter. He was always in a hurry, and I didn't care about looking at myself in the mirror anyway. Nobody else ever looked at me and what was the use? And tonight that Rene triumph made me feel no different from one of Miss Hettie Primm's conceptions that I had been wearing for ages with indifference and total lack of style. I shrugged my shoulder almost out of the dress with what I thought was sadness, though it felt a trifle like temper, too, and went on down into the garden to see if any of my flowers had a cheer up message for me.

But it was a bored garden I stepped into just as the last purple flush of day was being drunk down by the night. The tall white lilies laid their heads over on my breast and went to sleep before I had said a word to them, and the nasturtiums snarled around my feet until they got my slippers stained with green. Only Billy's bachelor's button stood up stiff and sturdy, slightly flushed with imbibing the night dew, and tipped me an impertinent wink. I felt cheered at the sight of them and bent down to gather a bunch of them to wear, even if they did swear at my amethyst draperies, when an amused smile that was done out loud came from the path just behind me.

"Don't gather them all tonight, Mrs Peaches," said Dr. John teasingly as he stooped beside me. "Leave a few for—for the others." I waked up in a half second and so did all those prying flowers, I felt sure.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

POTATOES AND MEAT.

MANY simple dishes for breakfast, luncheon or tea may be made by combining a little meat with vegetables, preferably potatoes. This gives a rich flavor to the potatoes and provides nourishing food, which will aid in reducing the amount of the butcher's bill.

Some recipes along this line are suggested here:

Highly Seasoned Fare.

Scalloped Ham and Potatoes.—Take a baking dish, grease it and sprinkle a few drops of onion juice over the bottom of it. Lay hot sliced boiled potatoes in the dish and on top of them put a layer of minced cold boiled ham. Over all pour a gill of tomato sauce and bake until hot all through.

Potatoes and Frankfurters.—Take good sized potatoes, peel and with an apple corer cut a hole through center. Have ready an equal number of frankfurter sausages and draw one through each hole in the potatoes. Place in a dripping pan and lay a strip of bacon over each potato. Pepper lightly and bake until the potatoes are done. Baste often with the bacon frylngs and a little hot water.

Dainty Combinations.

Potatoes and Chicken.—Make a mixture as you would for potato croquettes, except that you omit the parsley. Shape the mixture into small nests and fill them with creamed chicken. Cover with the potato mixture and roll into croquette shapes. Dip first in crumbs, then egg and crumbs again and fry in deep fat, draining on brown paper.

Potatoes and Eggs.—Mash potatoes, form into the shape of eggs, cut in halves and scoop out the centers for filling. Take any cold meat except ham and put through a meat grinder. Mix with breadcrumbs, a little onion, celery, one-half cupful of crumbs, one-half cupful of meat, one egg, butter, salt and pepper to taste. Fry in a little butter and fill the lower half of the egg with the mixture. Cover with the top half, molding the potato carefully to make it look like a hard boiled egg. Garnish them with parsley.

QUINCY SHIPS FOR PANAMA

To Be Ready for Delivery in Two Months

The Atlantic and Pacific

Yesterday by request the Daily Ledger withheld the name of the contractors for the new ships to be built by the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation. But it is the new Emery Steamship Company, recently organized which will build and operate the two steamers which will be named Atlantic and Pacific, and will be ready for delivery in about 10 months. They will be under the management of John S. Emery Company, Inc., and will hail from Boston. They will be the nucleus of a fleet of cargo steamers which may be operated between Boston and the Panama Canal.

The new boats will be built to Lloyds' highest classification, and will be equipped to carry cargo anywhere in the world. They will be especially fitted, however, for trade through the Panama Canal.

The steamers will be the largest ever constructed of their type. They will be 388 feet long, 54.4 breadth of beam, 31.8 feet depth of hold, with a dead-weight carrying capacity of about 8900 tons of cargo on a draft of 24 feet 6 inches. The engines will be located aft and will be of the triple expansion type, with cylinders 25, 41 and 68 inches with a 48-inch stroke. Each will have three Scotch boilers.

The steamers will have a five-foot collular bottom for water ballast. The hulls will be divided into three cargo holds, each 90 feet long, with two hatchways for each hold. To facilitate loading and discharging each steamer will have 12 five-ton and one 25-ton derricks, operated by nine double drum winches on platforms well above the deck.

It is the intention of the company to increase the fleet. The contract is one of the most important recently awarded.

GRANITE FIRM DISSOLVED.

The well known granite firm of Long & Saunders at South Quincy has been dissolved by the retirement of William L. Saunders. The business will be continued by Charles W. Long. Mr. Saunders is the owner of a valuable quarry at Freeport, Me., to which he will hereafter give his entire attention. This quarry is one of the very few monumental quarries in Maine. The quarry has been operated for some years but not on an extensive scale. Mr. Saunders however now intends to develop the quarry and will probably later open an office in Boston.

HIGHEST TIDE NEEDED

To Float the Rivadavia Out To Sea

Therefore Sails at Midnight

One of the most spectacular events connected with the Fore River Shipbuilding Corporation will be the taking of the dreadnought Rivadavia through the draw of the Fore River bridge Sunday night Aug. 3. The channel buoys will be lighted, several tugs will be fore and aft, and it is estimated that over 1000 people will be on hand to see Capt. Joseph Kemp go through the narrow opening and then negotiate the right angle channel at Sheppard's point.

The noon tide is 28 feet but at midnight 18 inches additional make it more inviting to the company officials. The boat draws 27 feet and propellers which will be churning the water at a moderate speed will probably draw her down some.

The boat will be taken to the Brooklyn Navy Yard where it will be drydocked and painted. Fully 1000 men, including officers of the Argentine Commission will be aboard.

CLAN MacGREGOR AND DOCTORS

Attend Funeral Services of Dr. Roderick Mc Lennan

The funeral of Dr. Roderick McLennan, who died Tuesday, was held at his home, 28 Federal avenue, Friday afternoon. Members of the medical profession who have been associated with him during his 26 years of service in this city attended. Representatives were also present from the Quincy City Hospital, Board of Trustees, Massachusetts Medical Society and the South Norfolk Medical Association.

Nearly 100 members of Clan McGregor, Order of Scottish Clans, attended with Chief Angus Martin at their head. Dr. McLennan was for many years their lodge physician and an active member in the society.

Rev. James A. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, conducted the religious and clan services. The body was taken to Forest Hills for cremation and the ashes will be placed in the family lot in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

Dr. McLennan, during his residence here, gained many friends. He possessed that sterling characteristic, honesty, above all others. Nearly 19 years ago he survived a particularly severe attack of heart trouble and did not enjoy good health after that.

LARCENY OF FURNACES

That Is The Complaint Against Max Kegle

Max Kegle was arrested last night by the police on warrants charging him with assaulting Henry Clayman and with the larceny of two furnaces from Clayman. According to the story told the police by Clayman he bought two old furnaces at a school building in Randolph but at that time had too much of a load to take them. He said however that he would come later for them. It is alleged that Kegle overheard the conversation and later in the day visited the school building telling the party that he had been sent after the furnaces by his brother. They were given to him and he carted them to Quincy where he sold them to L. Grossman & Son for $9.

When Clayman went for his goods the following day he learned what had transpired and coming to Quincy he went to see Kegle to see what he had to say. It is then alleged that Kegle during the argument assaulted him. The cases were continued.

QUIRK—LONG.

Miss Mary Quirk of Quincy, formerly of Weymouth, and James D. Long of North Weymouth were united in marriage Tuesday at 5.30 o'clock at the parochial residence, by the Rev. Fr. Coan. The best man was Henry De Coste of North Weymouth, a friend of the groom, and Miss Nellie Fitzgerald of East Weymouth, a niece of the bride, was bridesmaid.

The bride's dress was white embroidered net over white satin; she wore a picture hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid's dress was of pink with hat to match, and she carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Many beautiful presents were received by the newly married couple. They will be at home after September 1 at their newly furnished home, 843 Broad street, East Weymouth.

The election of Howard Elliott as president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad is somewhat of local interest, from the fact that he was a classmate of Hon. Albert E. Avery, judge of the district court, at Harvard in 1881.

CITY TAX RATES

Larger In About Half Those Reporting

Four Have Same Rates

Already thirteen cities have announced their tax rates and only one is less than $19.00. Seven are $20.00 or over and one of these, Marlboro, is $21.90.

Not all are increases as Woburn and Haverhill are smaller than in 1912.

There are four that have the same rate as in 1912.

Contrary to reports only six are larger as will be seen by the list below:

	1913.	1912.
Everett	$21.00	$19.70
Melrose	20.40	20.40
Somerville	19.80	18.80

Fitchburg	20.00	—
Taunton	20.00	19.80

The 1913 tax rate of Quincy is not expected until the middle of August, and will probably be larger.

For comparison all the rates since Quincy became a city are given, and the Mayor that year:

40th WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. John Wood Were Married in Scotland

Mr. and Mrs. John Wood of Presidents avenue celebrated the fortieth anniversary of their wedding on Tuesday evening. They were married in Aberdeen, Scotland July 22, 1873, by the Rev. Dr. Hunter of the Free church of Scotland. Ten years later they came to this country going to Vinal Haven, Maine, where they stayed but one year coming to Quincy where they have resided ever since.

Thirteen children were born of the marriage but only three daughters survive, all of whom with their husbands and children joined in the celebration Tuesday evening. They are Mr. and Mrs. William Marshall and their three boys, Mr. and Mrs. Robert D. Smith with their boy and three girls, and Mr. and Mrs. George Gordon and daughter, Esther.

There were also present Mrs. Christina Smith, keeper of the Adams house, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles, late of Barre, Vt.

Mrs. A. C. Smith of Wollaston sent flowers, forty white carnations, with best wishes for many more happy days.

In behalf of the family William Marshall presented Mr. and Mrs. Wood with six beautiful pieces of cut glass Mr. Marshall in his speech referred to the many years of happy married life the couple had enjoyed. Their lives had been full of good works and as pure as the flowers which adorned the home that evening. He hoped that they would still have many more years and mellow into the ripeness of a full life beautiful and peaceful as their past had been.

During the evening a musical program was given in which Robert D. Smith gave selections on the violin.

Refreshments were served and all together a very enjoyable evening was spent.

CARMEN'S UNION PICNIC.

A crowd of about 2,000 members of the Boston Carmen's Union and their friends attended the first days outing of the union at New Downer Landing on Friday. The day was given up to sports of various kinds and in the afternoon the union men were addressed by Senator Francis J. Horgan, who is credited with pushing through the 9-in-11 hour bill. Today fully 3,000 are expected to attend the outing. It is planned by the union to hold these outings annually.

TAX RATE LIMIT

Shall It Be Increased by City Council

Wait for the Rate of 1913

It is probable that a special meeting of the City Council will be held about the middle of August. There are several matters which must be cleaned up, and Mayor Stone is planning to have all of them included in the call for the meeting. First, it is necessary to have a special meeting to designate polling places for the caucuses and to call the caucuses. Then again, it is necessary that the list of election officers be sent to the Council so that they may be confirmed in season to act at the caucuses. It is probable that it will be necessary to draw jurors for the September term of the Superior court about that time.

The most important matter, however, which must be attended to is the public hearing on the matter of fixing the amount which the city may raise for current expenses in 1914. As previously stated, under the old law, cities were only allowed to raise $12 per $1,000, based on the valuation of the previous year, plus what receipts the Council was able to get hold of Under the new law, however, cities may after a public hearing increase that amount. This is an important question and should be given all the publicity possible before the public hearing that citizens may be fully informed and that they may attend the hearing and discuss the question understandingly. The more money raised for current expenses of course means the more that must be raised by taxation, and the more that must be raised means a corresponding raise in the tax rate.

It is a far too important question to be passed over lightly and citizens should give the matter careful study.

BIG FIRE SALE.

It took several clerks from the Boston wholesale houses to assist the regular force at Payson & Mitchell's on Friday, especially in the evening. The fire sale certainly has the people coming, and in a few days all the best bargains will disappear. A big new "Ad" in the Ledger today.

Haiti has sold her navy, and we understand that she took the money and bought a new uniform for her army.

Summer weather encourages the loafing habit especially on pleasant evenings and the wall around Bethany church seems to be the camping ground for our tired citizens. Recently nearly fifty men were counted lined up on the wall enjoying peanuts and fruit and indulging in remarks about the passersby much to the annoyance of women.

We do not know what the fall will bring but it seems as though we never knew of so many vacant houses and tenements in our city as at the present time and the present condition existed all through the spring. House after house displays the "To Let" or "For Sale" sign and still we hear much talk of the searcity of houses in Quincy. Has the burden of high valuation and high tax rate increased the burden of the landlord so that he has had to raise the rent until it is beyond the wage earners purse or do the tenents require so much that they are on the hunt for a $4 house which the philanthropic landlord ought to rent for $20 and be glad of the chance?

Whatever the cause the fact remains that most of the better class houses are un-occupied at the time.

UNFIT OFFICE WORKERS.

A representative of a publishing company tells about testing applicants for a typewriter's position. He examined 75 girls to find one who was competent. Perhaps other employers are not so severe, yet most office managers find difficulty in hiring good help.

Are the schools mushy? Or are the young people stupid?

High school teachers in many places complain bitterly of unprepared pupils. While they are shoved ahead into algebra, Latin, or physics, what they need is often a stiff review in arithmetic and penmanship.

Office workers are not good for much unless they acquire accuracy and thoroughness. But in the happy days of school life, there are so many dances that must be attended that it comes pretty hard to dig that tough old interest example out to the last partial payment. The anti-climax of all this fun comes when the young folks go up against the man who hires the help.

COMMITTEES AT SQUANTUM

Improvement Assoc on Discusses Many Needs

A live campaign to secure betterment in Squantum was started at the regular meeting of the Squantum Improvement association this week at the Vacation House. Fifty members were present and a score of speakers advocated asking the Quincy City Council for much needed improvements. Among the immediate steps to be taken is a campaign for the acceptance of at least one street, the buying of a site for a school house, and better fire protection.

C. E. Carlson in his report as chairman of the street railway committee said that he had been over the plans for a turnout on Hancock street to eliminate the practice now in force of compelling passengers to ride backwards from Neponset car barn and that he hoped in the near future to see some decided improvement made and a turnout built.

Chairman W. N. Kenyon of the mosquito committee told of the work that had been done. He showed interesting plans of the State Board of Health of Connecticut which proposes to drain all the marsh land of the state bordering on Long Island sound. There are 22,000 acres to drain and it is estimated that the work can be done for $178,000. Mr. Kenyon said that this was a work which the state and City of Quincy could well be considering as a permanent means of getting rid of the mosquito problem.

Edward Eagar spoke in vigorous denunciation of the laxity of the Quincy City Council in not seeing Squantum's needs. He said that certain parties in Quincy had no hesitancy in coming forward and asking the city to build a public pier at a cost of $100,000 and he said that this would be one of the matters pushed in the next city council. He said that Squantum had received 20 street lights as its total share of municipal improvements.

H. W. Orr spoke interestingly of Squantum's needs of a school building. He said it was time that Squantum started its campaign for a school house. Mr. Callahan and Mr. Eagar spoke in favor of added fire protection and Mr. Kenyon advocated another campaign for street acceptance.

President Herbert A. Smith appointed the following new committees:

Fire protection, Perley Bostwick, chairman, Frank Anderson and Warren Fifield.

Street committee, J. H. Loughan, chairman, T. F. Callahan, John Mardon, J. H. Foster and James Hagan.

Refuse Committee, Dr. Rund, Mr. Lawrence and Mr. Bond.

School committee, John Holmes, chairman, Hiram A. Morse, Peter Olson, Joseph Uppling and Charles E. Watts.

Moon Island committee, John R. Nelson, chairman, W. N. Kenyon, Edward Eagar, C. E. Carlson, T. F. Callahan, Hiram A. Morse, William A. Reed, Mr. Brooks of Atlantic, Gustave Wunderlich, Herbert A. Smith.

It was voted to have a Dutch supper next Wednesday night at the Vacation house. The affair is in the hands of following committee:—Edward Eagar, chairman, Charles Bostwick, James Foster, Joseph Uppling, Harleigh Schultz, John Mardon, Charles E. Watts, James Allen, Charles Singleton, Edward Carlson.

BUILDING PERMITS.

Inspector of Buildings Warren S. Parker has issued the following building permits this week:

Louis Grossman, alteration, Water street.

William B. White, alteration, Union street.

Eva Haslet, dwelling, Greenleaf street.

Eva Bowen, alteration, Wendell street.

Luigi Tangherlini, alteration, Intervale street.

E. J. Coan, auto house, Babcock street.

John E. Gurndy, stable, Charles street.

TOO MUCH SMOKE.

The Central Station auto chemical responded on a still alarm at 8.15 last night for a fire in the dump near the plant of the Quincy Coal Co., on Penn street extension. The smoke from the burning rubbish had become so thick that it was offensive to the neighborhood and the department was asked to put the fire out. It required about an hours hard work.

OPEN REGATTA TODAY.

The annual open and interclub race under the auspices of the Squantum Yacht club is being held off the club house at the Quincy Shore reservation this afternoon.

About 40 members of the Swedish Lutheran church were entertained at the Squantum home of Rev. and Mrs. John Ackstrand of Worcester on Thursday.

The cutting down of a number of the Elm trees and the trimming of many others along Hancock street and about the First church yard has been quite an improvement. The trees were rather too thick to be attractive, and those that have been cut down are the ones which have been ruined by the Elm tree beetle or some other insect.

The funeral of Mrs. Almira D. Wellington of Wollaston was held yesterday from the home, 232 Belmont street Services were conducted by Rev. F. W. Pratt, a former pastor of the Wollaston Unitarian church. The body was taken to the Massachusetts crematory at Forest Hills cemetery for cremation. Mrs. Wellington is survived by her husband, Walter J. Wellington, and daughter, Mrs. Cora Barbour.

The members of the Board of Managers of the Woodward Fund and Property went on a tour of inspection Friday afternoon. It was the annual visit of the board of inspection of property upon which the fund holds mortgages.

The continued case of Helen Peterson for assault on Lena Houlahan at Quincy was called and the case placed on file on payment of $4.80 costs.

The continued case of Emily Pennington for violation of the rules of the Board of Health was called and she was defaulted. When the case was heard July 17 Mrs. Pennington was given until this morning to remove the hens which the Board of Health had ordered removed, the understanding being if she complied with the order of the Board of Healht the case would be placed on file. It was reported that the order had not been complied with thus the default.

SUMMER OUTING.

Plans for the annual summer outing of the Granite City club at the Villa Napoli at Nantasket next Wednesday evening have been completed and from returns made to the committee the attendance will doubtless be large. It is planned to leave the club rooms in automobiles at 6.30 and after a delightful ride through the South Shore to reach the Villa Napoli soon after 7.30 where a special dinner will be served. The menu is one that can not fail to please. After dinner many of the party will doubtless take in the sights at Paragon Park and the Palm Garden.

WOMAN WOULD BE MISSED.

Struck the other afternoon by the vast preponderance—there were at least thirty to one—of women over men at a fine concert, I was set wondering what would happen if all women determined to stand by each suddenly determined to stand by each other and withdraw from charitable functions, church services, theatres, concerts picture shows and so on until they got the vote. It is very certain the arts would be poorly supported. philanthropy would be in a sad way, and, indeed, most things would come to a standstill if women were not energetic, kindly disposed and possessed of a love of the arts. One only realizes how much they do and think and influence on trying to imagine at least one month of life in London alone in which women took absolutely no part. (Ladies' Pictorial.)

—Milford, N. H., like Quincy, Mass, says the Barre, Vt. Times, appears to be alarmed unduly over Barre's proposed part in the annual convention of the Retail Monument Dealers' association, to be held in Boston next month. The members of that association, being probably all users of Barre granite, are interested in knowing more about the source of the stock, and, therefore, they cannot be blamed for wishing to come to Barre. If they wish to visit the other granite centers, all well and good—Barre is willing and will stand on its own feet.

Women of Future Will Not Be Slaves to Fashion

By JEAN FINOT,
Celebrated French Writer and Artist

THE WOMAN OF THE FUTURE WILL NOT BE A SLAVE TO FASHION, AND THIS WILL DO MUCH TO ENHANCE HER BEAUTY. SHE WILL AT LEAST KNOW THAT THE NATURAL, WHICH IDENTIFIES ITSELF WITH THE TRUE, IS THE BASIS OF BEAUTY, WHILE FOOLISH FASHION USUALLY DESTROYS THE TRUE AND THE NATURAL.

The history of fashion during the century has either been the compression or the exaggeration of the prominent parts of woman's form. In short, it has been an awful caricature of what woman would look like under more normal conditions.

Woman must be really beautiful if she has been able to resist the assaults of fashion during the ages, for NOT ONLY DOES IT RENDER HER UGLY, BUT IT INJURES HER HEALTH. Beginning with the hats which weary her head and disturb her brain; passing over the pins, corsets and gowns, storehouses of microbes and dust and ending with the method of covering her feet, everything conspires against her respiration and her digestion.

THE WOMAN OF TODAY IS ANXIOUS TO EXPRESS HER INDIVIDUALITY IN HER NATURE AND MENTALITY AND WILL SOON DESIRE TO EXPRESS HERSELF IN HER COSTUMES.

The individual woman will want personal costumes instead of fresh fashions that INJURE HER BODY AND THEREFORE HER MIND. She will demand clothes that EXPRESS HARMONY with her body, her coloring and soul. That women still cling to the RIDICULOUS IN DRESS is not so surprising when we remember that a few centuries ago men suffered themselves to be held in by waists and stays and tight knee breeches. They wore large hats, much lace, long chains and other accessories that were considered a necessary part of fashion.

It is said that the striped barber pole originated in those good old days when every barber was supposed to be a surgeon. In days of old, when knights were bold, cuts, contusions, bruises and wounds were not at all infrequent. Then it was part of the barber's business to dress wounds. The striped pole served to guide the unfortunate one to the nearest barber-surgeon. Whether or not this skill in surgery helped when the razor slipped is not stated in history.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

STANDING OF POLICE LEAGUE

Lowell Is First and Metropolitan Police Second

The Quincy police base ball team occupies fourth place in the Massachusetts Police league and their victory over Newton on Wednesday through real good ball playing points to new life and enthusiasm.

The league this season is not working out as at first expected. Somerville is playing seldom, due to conditions over which the officers have no control, but they promise to fill the dates in the near future if it is agreeable to the other teams.

The standing at present gives the Lowell boys first place, with the Metropolitan police second, Newton third, and Quincy fourth. Revere and Everett although they have not officially withdrawn from the league are forfeiting their games.

George Fallon, the local mound artist, leads the Quincy team in the percentages with a mark of .666. Henry Thorne is at the same figure, but he has played in two games while Fallon was in five. Riley and Doran have home runs to their credit.

It is amusing to notice that the stout men, Farrell and Hebert have been twice hit by the ball. Curtin has had a similar experience, but it was not due to his girth.

Quincy has beaten Everett, Newton Revere twice and Chelsea. Cambridge and Everett have forfeited a game apiece and it is a question to whether or not Somerville forfeited when they did not fill a named date after postponing their June 17th game. Quincy has lost to Newton, and the Metropolitan Park police.

The remaining home dates are:
Aug. 19 Somerville at Quincy.
Sept. 2 Metropolitans at Quincy.

The averages are as follows:

	G	AB	R	H	Ave.
Fallon	5	18	13	12	.666
Thorne	2	6	1	4	.666
Riley	6	29	12	17	.586

ALREADY AN IMPROVEMENT

Work at Coddington Street Not Yet Complete

The lot on the corner of Coddington and Washington streets recently occupied by the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Co., office has been leveled off, but it has not been decided as yet just how the corner will be finished.

Commissioner Tupper said this morning that Mr. Olmstead the landscape artist was at work on a plan for the corner and that he was waiting for his report before completing the job. The granolithic blocks for the sidewalks on the new boundary line are nearly all laid and the street railway company has erected a line of iron posts along the outer edge of the sidewalk for its wires.

Commissioner Tupper plans to have all of the telephone and electric light wires at this corner placed under ground which will remove some of the big unsightly poles. The corner when completed will be a great improvement and as some of it will be thrown into Coddington street it will give a good wide entrance into that street in direct line from Temple street.

LOSS OF $250,000.

According to the estimates made of the loss at the fire at the Fertilizer Co. at North Weymouth on Tuesday it will figure out about $250,000. The loss on the plant is figured at 90 per cent of the insurance of $186.000 while the loss on the stock with insurance totaling $150,000, is about fifty per cent.

There is of course more or less salvage but this is hard to figure upon for it is not yet in condition that it can be scrutinized. The insurance on the plant is placed with a large number of companies throughout the country, something like 45 companies being interested. The total insurance as stated above is $186,000.

DISCOVERY OF AMERICAN

Area of Surgical Operations Can Be Cut Off From the Brain

London, July 26.—Great interest was taken in the meeting of the British Medical association at Brighton when Sir Berkley Moynihan, professor of clinical surgery in the University of Leeds, described the discovery by the American surgeon, George W. Crile of Cleveland, of a method of anaesthesia, whereby the area of operation could be shut off from the brain for several days if necessary.

Moynihan pointed out that surgeons were apt to delude themselves with the idea that because the patient was unconscious no damage to nerve centres was possible, which was, he said, a mistake. Under the new process barriers were placed on all the nerve centres, completely isolating the field of operation.

The Daily Express, commenting editorially, considers that the discovery is perhaps one of the greatest in modern surgery.

WILSON "STANDS PAT"

Ambassador Defends Position He Has Taken In Mexico

New York, July 26.—Pausing here for a half-day on his hurried Mexico-to-Washington trip, in response to a summons from President Wilson, Henry L. Wilson, American ambassador to Mexico, announced his emphatic opposition to several plans under consideration by the state department for bringing about peace in the Mexican republic.

Wilson was reticent when questioned as to his policies on American intervention and recognition of Mexico by the United States.

"I have been blamed for a good deal," Wilson commented as he discussed his administration in Mexico City. On everything he has done he "stands pat," however, he said, and expressed the belief he would be sent back to Mexico.

ROUMANIA PLANS TO OCCUPY SOFIA

Greece and Servia Reject Proposal For Armistice

London, July 26.—Greece and Servia have both definitely rejected the Roumanian proposal for the conclusion of a provisional armistice during the conference at Nish. The two governments say they can only consent to the cessation of hostilities after the signature by Bulgaria of an armistice and of the peace preliminaries.

Greece and Servia have both been throwing every obstacle in the way of an armistice, while pushing their attacks in the direction of Sofia.

It was reported that Roumania had warned Servia and Greece that if they continue their advance, the Roumanian army will be ordered to occupy Sofia first, and this is their answer.

NOT KILLED BY BURGLAR

New Developments In Death of Brooklyn Police Officer

New York, July 26.—Investigation of the death of James E. Cahill, a Brooklyn policeman, found stabbed and shot in St. Matthew's churchyard, brought out two new theories, neither of which agreed with the original belief that he had been murdered by a burglar.

An official report to the police department intimated that Cahill had committed suicide. On the other hand, the dead man's relatives declare their belief that he had been murdered by a brother officer of the police department.

PASSENGERS GIVEN A SEVERE FRIGHT

Steamers Persian and Millinocket Collide In Dense Fog

Boston, July 26.—The steamer Persian of the Merchants and Miners' line docked in Boston after a collision with the freighter Millinocket, in Pollock Rip slue. The Millinocket was so badly stove in that just as she reached Vineyard Haven her stern touched bottom, and she was beached. The collision took place in a dense fog.

When the crash occurred the Persian's fifty-one pasengers, most of whom were in their bunks, were awakened, and they rushed on deck, greatly frightened.

The Persian was not under way when the collision came, but was drifting in the fog. The Millinocket side-swiped the Persian's bow. The Millinocket was stove in, and the Persian's stem was badly battered, doing about $10,000 damage.

The Persian's wireless for help was answered by five ships. The steamer Howard escorted her in.

Official List Shows Gain In Number of Boston City Employes

Boston, July 26.—There were just 14,516 persons in the employ of the city of Boston April 30, according to the 1913 list of officials and employes of the city, which has just been issued.

The list shows that up to April 30 852 persons had been added to the city's payrolls since the beginning of Mayor Fitzgerald's present administration. The increase was distributed over most of the departments, that in the school department being the greatest.

There was a substantial decrease in the number of employes in the public works department, the largest branch of the city's service.

SOCCER LEAGUE PROSPECTS

Quincy May Not Be Represented This Year

Quincy, or the Fore Rivers, will probably have no team this year in the Boston District soccer league which is now being organized for another season, although it is barely possible that new material may develop to take the place of men that are going with other teams in the league.

John Hendry, right back, and James Harrison, centre forward, will both be in the Brockton lineup this year. Boyd, left half, leaves next week for Scotland, and plans to remain there for a year or more. This takes three good men out of the Quincy line. Strings are now being pulled by other managers to secure Sharples, the youngest goal playing big soccer, and while he has not signed up he will probably join a squad which promises to be faster than the Quincy team during the coming season.

The local team has won the Williamson cup twice, the last game being played against Beverly on the Locust street grounds. The victory came this way, after a rather rough last period, 2 to 1.

Beverly this year will play independent soccer, having officially withdrawn from all places. This leaves several much slower teams than Fore River and Beverly in the race. Brockton may quicken up with Hendry and Harrison in the lineup.

HUNT MOTHER AND CHILDREN

Mrs. Boswick and Two Little Ones Elude the Police

ARE IN FLIGHT FROM ATLANTA

Man In the Case, Alleged to Have Kidnapped Son and Daughter of Wealthy Cotton Manufacturer, Arrested at Boston as Fugitive From Justice—Held In $1000

Boston, July 26.—After a chase of more than 1500 miles from Atlanta to Boston, John D. Mattiford, 50 years old, was arrested by Inspectors Dorsey and O'Neil of police headquarters, charged with being a fugitive from justice.

Mattiford is charged by the Atlanta police with kidnapping John A. Boswick, Jr., aged 5, and Dorothy E. Boswick, 9, children of John A. Boswick, a wealthy cotton goods manufacturer of Atlanta.

He was taken before Judge Creed in the police court, pleaded not guilty, and was held in $1000 bail to await the arrival of the Atlanta police. The Boston police are also looking for Mrs. Boswick and Mrs. Annie L. Jeter, the mother of Mrs. Boswick, who is also charged with kidnapping. Both Mrs. Boswick and Mrs. Jeter have eluded the police, taking the two children with them.

For the past three weeks Dorsey and O'Neil have been searching for Mattiford. He had been traced all over New England, but had escaped.

For several weeks Mattiford and Mrs. Boswick were registered at the Clarendon hotel in this city under the name of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Martin.

When the police called at the hotel the clerk informed them that the couple had left the previous day. Mattiford was traced to Portland, but he received word and jumped back to Boston. He obtained a position with the Otis Elevator company, but left the day before the police arrived to arrest him.

Furnished with a photograph and an excellent description of the man the two inspectors traversed the South End.

Yesterday they saw Mattiford walking down Columbus avenue alone. Dorsey approached him, spoke his name and Mattiford turned. He was immediately placed under arrest.

ON THE LAST LEG

Mears' Round-the-World Trip In Record Time Is Virtually Won

Yokohama, July 26.—John H. Mears, The New York Evening Sun's representative, is on the Canadian Pacific railway's steamship Empress of Russia, which left here for Victoria, B. C.

Mears' race against the record for a globe circling trip held by Andre Jaeger-Schmidt is all but won. The chief anxiety of the racer was the problem of getting to Yokohama in time to catch the Pacific's fastest ship. The ship left two hours behind her usual sailing hour, but this trifling delay will make no difference in the final result, since it can easily be made up.

The total time for Mears' record journey as planned is 35 days 21 hours 35 minutes. The present record, held by Andre Jaeger-Schmidt, is 39 days 19 hours 43 minutes.

CHICAGO WOMEN AROUSED

Mass Meeting to Protest Against Resignation of Mrs. Young

Chicago, July 26.—Plans for a mass meeting of women to protest against the resignation of Mrs. Ella F. Young as superintendent of Chicago's public schools were set on foot as soon as it became generally known that Mrs. Young had decided to give up the position.

That Mrs. Young should have been influenced to present her resignation by the conduct of members of the board of education unfriendly to her personally aroused the indignation of many prominent women.

Washington, July 26.—Despite senatorial criticism of the proposed reduction in parcel post rates and the increase in the size of the packages, Postmaster General Burleson announced he would issue the final orders at once putting the changes in effect Aug. 15.

The announcement came after the wisdom of making the changes had been subjected to a searching review before the senate postoffice committee in the presence of the postmaster general.

LIGHTS STRUNG IN ABUNDANCE

Soldiers Are Fortifying Calumet Plant Against Strikers

THE CENTER OF DISTURBANCE

Union Sympathizers Drive Off Deputy Sheriffs at Other Mines—Officials of Calumet and Hecla Do Not Appear to Be Disturbed—Wage Increase Is Under Consideration

Calumet, Mich., July 26.—Militia company electricians stringing wires last night all about the plant of the Calumet and Hecla Mining company marked the begining of precautions to protect the shops and shafts from striking operatives. Sixty candle power lamps were suspended at six-foot distances along the wires.

Officers of the three militia companies now here are unanimous in the belief that the storm centre of the great copper mining strike, in which 15,000 men are out, will remain in and near Calumet.

Disorders occurred spasmodically in the outlying districts of the mining country yesterday.

A call for troops came from the south range when union sympathizers drove away the sheriff's deputies at the Baltic, Tri-Mountain and other mines, but militia commanders did not think the situation was serious enough to require the presence of state soldiers.

Governor Ferris will not withdraw the militia which is protecting the mines from any further outbreak of the strikers until order is restored.

Officials Not Worrying

Boston, July 26.—Despite the alarming developments yesterday at Calumet, where several persons have been injured in rioting, the officials of the Calumet and Hecla company at its Boston headquarters did not appear to be disturbed.

They would not discuss conditions in the mining region, where James McNaughton, second vice president and director and general manager of the mines, is in charge of the situation.

Should the strike prove serious the loss that would ensue would fall mainly upon Bostonians and New Englanders, who have always controlled the mines.

On May 1 of last year, the employes of the company were given a 10 percent increase in pay. Further increases and concessions are understood to be now under consideration.

Conditions at the mines, the officials declare, are already far in advance of those prevailing in similar properties. They declare the directors have given much thought to the problem of the workmen, and that McNaughton has been instructed to conduct negotiations with the men according to a fair and liberal policy.

The company maintains a large hotel and a stone clubhouse for employes, the latter having bathrooms, bowling alleys and other conveniences. The changing house for the miners, where they take off their working clothes, is equipped with hot and cold water, bathtubs and lockers.

The Calumet and Hecla public library, having 40,000 volumes, ranks third in point of circulation in the state of Michigan, with periodicals and newspapers in a score of languages. There is a combination branch library and clubhouse at Lake Linden for employes of the stamp mill and smelters.

The company maintains a hospital for employes solely, with complete surgical and laboratory apparatus. Nearly a dozen physicians on the hospital staff are at the call of the employes and their families.

The company owns 1200 dwellings, furnished to employes at an average rental of 6 percent on actual cost, plus cost of maintenance, and upward of 1200 dwellings are owned by employes on land leased from the company at low yearly rentals.

There are eight schoolhouses on the lands of the Calumet and Hecla, most of which were built by the company, including a manual training school and a high school building at Calumet.

There are more than thirty churches of a dozen differet denominations. All of these sites are donated by the company and in most cases substantial aid has been given in their erection and maintenance, entirely regardless of creed.

An aid fund for employes, instituted in 1877 and managed by directors chosen by the workmen, pays sick benefits, large sums having been distributed since the formation of the fund, every dollar going to the sick and their families in case of death from sickness.

Roosevelt May Visit Australia

New York, July 26.—Lawrence Abbott declares that Colonel Roosevelt's admirers in Australia are trying to complete arrangements for a visit. So far, he says, no definite arrangements have been made.

Cancer Cure Comes High

Berlin, July 26.—It costs $65,000 for one gram of Dr. Otto Hahn's cancer cure, mesotherium, that quantity being enough for two patients. Dresden philanthropists raised the money.

JAMES M. CLANCY

Has Had Hands Full Since Taking Charge of Sing Sing

The new warden of the Sing Sing (N. Y.) prison has been only about two weeks on the job, yet he has had more thrilling experiences than usually fall to the lot of the chief executive of that institution in a long term of years. First there was a disastrous fire, destroying three shops and the prison lumber yard, then the 250 convicts who had been thrown out of work mutinied, and next day fire visited the clothing shop. Warden Clancy is wondering what will happen next.

BAD MEN AT AUBURN

Sixty Are Taken Off Hands of Warden of Sing Sing Prison

Auburn, N. Y., July 26.—Sixty convicts, comprising the first section of a transfer of reputed "bad men" from Sing Sing prison, arrived here last night.

All the Auburn guards, day and night men, were on hand and lined the way from the train across to the prison gates. The convicts were worn out and were hoarse because of their conduct en route.

At nearly all stations where the train stopped the men made noisy demonstrations, calling for fair treatment and begging for tobacco.

FOURTEEN YEARS FOR AUTO DRIVER

Killed Man While Going Faster Than Allowed by Law

Chicago, July 26.—The first automobilist to be found guilty of a killing in Cook county as a result of running down a person while operating a car was given fourteen years in the Illinois penitentiary.

Fred Hrodek was convicted and his penalty fixed at that term by a jury in Judge Cooper's court. Patrick J. Condon was the victim for whose death Hrodek was held accountable.

"If the defendant was driving the automobile at a faster rate than that specified in the statutes, then the jurors can find the defendant guilty, though the killing may have been accidental," said the judge in his charge to the jury.

Hrodek contended the accident was unavoidable.

CHINESE REVOLT SPREADS

Seven Provinces Have Declared Against the Pekin Government

Canton, July 26.—Seven of the southern Chinese provinces, with a population of 150,000,000, have come to an agreement for joint action against Provisional President Yuan Shi Kai and the Pekin government, and beyond these the troops under General Lung, in the province of Kwangsi, sympathize with the movement.

A force of 10,000 regular troops, chiefly composed of Hakka hillmen, left here yesterday by way of the North river to fight the northern army. Other armies are being organized among the peasants and hillmen. There are 100 mountain guns in the arsenal here and machine guns are being manufactured.

WRECKED GIRL'S LIFE

Stenographer Fatally Shoots Married Man on Street In New Orleans

New Orleans, July 26.—George Riehl, a jeweler, was fatally shot by Miss August A. Edwards, a stenographer, on the street here. Riehl died on the way to a hospital.

At the police station a note, written by Miss Edwards, was found in her handbag, which stated that Riehl had ruined her life and that she intended to kill him and destroy herself. Riehl was married and had three children.

Fatal Elevator Accident

Boston, July 26.—John Walsh, 14, was instantly killed on an elevator at 55 Stanhope street when he stuck his head over the edge and was caught between the descending counterweight and the platform of the lift.

Boy Burns Baby Sister

Greensburg, Pa., July 26.—Mabel Powers, 4 months old, was burned to death when her brother Charles, 4 years old, built a fire under a baby carriage.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"I was just gathering them for place bouquets for—for the girls," I said stupidly as I moved over a little nearer to him. Why it is that the minute that man comes near me I get warm and comfortable and stupid, and as young as Billy and bubbly and sad and happy and cross, is more than I can say, but I do.

I never possibly know how to answer any remark that he may happen to make unless it is something that makes me lose my temper. His next remark was the usual spark.

"Better give them the run of the garden—alone, Mrs. Molly. No show for 'em unless you do," he said laughingly, "or the buttons either," he added under his breath so I could just hear it. I wish Mrs. Johnson could have heard how soft his voice lingered over that little half sentence. She was so experienced she could have told me if it meant—but, of course, he isn't like other men!

There are lots of questions I'm going to ask Alfred after I'm married to him—Mr. Carter didn't know anything about anything and I never cared to ask him, but I wonder how you know when—

"Oh, you Molly!" came a hail in Tom's voice from the gate, just as I was making up my mind to try to think up something to wither the doctor with, and he and Ruth came up the front walk to meet us. I wondered why I was having a party in my house when being alone in my garden with just a neighbor was so much more fun, but I had to begin to enjoy myself right off, for in a few minutes all the rest came.

I don't think I ever saw my house look so lovely before. Mrs. Johnson had put all the flowers out of hers and Mrs. Cain's garden all over everything, and the table was a mass of soft pink roses that were shedding perfume and nodding at one another in their most society manner. There is no glimmer in the world like that which comes from really old polished silver and rosewood and mahogany, and one's great-great-grandmother's hand woven linen feels like oriental silk across one's knees.

Suddenly I felt very stately and granddamey and responsible as I looked at them all across the roses and sparkling glasses. They were lovely women, all of them, and could such men be found anywhere else in the world? When I left them all to go out into the big universe to meet the distinctions that I knew my husband would have for me, would I sit at salt with people who loved me like this? I saw Pet Buford say something to Tom about me that I know was lovely from the way he smiled at me, and the judge's eyes were a full cup for any woman to have offered her. Then in a flash all the love fragrance seemed to go to my head—Tom's mixing of that julep had been skillful, too—and tears rose to my eyes, and there I might have been crying at my own party if I hadn't felt a strong warm hand laid on mine as it rested on my lap, and Dr. John's kind voice teased into my ears, "Steady, Mrs. Peaches, there's the loving cup to come yet," he whispered. I hated him, but held on to his thumb tight for half a minute. He didn't know what the matter really was, but he understood what I needed. He always does.

And after that everybody had a good time, the ginger barber and Judy as much as anybody, and I could see Aunt Bettie and Mrs. Johnson peeping in the pantry door, having the time of their lives too.

That dinner was going like an airship on a high wind, when something happened to tangle its tail feathers and I can hardly write it for trembling yet. It was a simple little blue telegram, but it might have been nitroglycerin on a tear for the way it acted. It was for me, but the ginger barber handed it to Tom, and he opened it and, looking at me over his full—after many times emptied—glass, he solemnly read it out loud. It said:

Landed this noon. Have I your permission to come to Hillsboro immediately? Answer. ALFRED.

It was dreadful. Nobody said a word and Tom laid the telegram right down in his plate, where it immediately began to soak up the dressing of his salad. He was so white and shaky that Pet looked at him in amazement, and then I am sure she had the good sense to find his hand under the cloth and hold it, for his shoulder hovered against hers and the color came back to his face as he smiled down at her.

I don't believe I'll ever really get the courage to look at Tom again until he marries Pet, which he'll do now, I feel sure.

And as for the judge and Ruth Chester, I was glad they were sitting beside each other, for I could avoid that side of the table with my eyes until I had steadied myself a few seconds at least. The surprise made the others I had been dining seem statues from the stone age, and only Mr. Graves' fork failed to hang fire. His appetite is as strong as his nerves, and Delia Hawes looked at his composure with the relief plain in her eyes.

Henrietta's smile in the judge's direction was doubtful. But they were not all my lovers, and why that awful silence?

I couldn't say a word, and I am sure I don't know what I would have done if it hadn't been for the doctor. He leaned forward, and his deep eyes came out in their wonderful way and seemed to collect every pair of eyes at the table, even the most astounded, as he raised his glass.

We all held our breaths and waited for him to speak.

"No wonder we are all stricken dumb at Mrs. Carter's telegram," he said in his deep voice that commands everybody and everything, even the terrors of birth and death. "The whole town will be paralyzed at the news that its most distinguished citizen is only going to give them two days to get ready to receive him. I can see the panic the brass band will have now getting the brass shined up, and I want to be the one to tell Mayor Pollard myself, so as to suggest to him to have at least a two hour speech of welcome to hand out at the train. We'll make it one 'hot time' for him when he lands in the old town, and here's to him, God bless him! Every glass high!" They all drank, and I suppose it helped them. I wish I could have drained a quart, but I couldn't swallow a sip, though I did a good stunt of pretending.

The rest of this evening has paid me off for every sin I have ever committed or am ever going to commit. Tom took Pet home early, and I hope they walked in the moonlight for hours. Tom is the kind of man that any pretty girl who is loving enough in the moonlight could comfort for anything. I'm not at all worried about him, but—

The hour I sat on my front steps and talked to Judge Wade must have brought gray hairs to my head if it was daylight and I could see them. Ruth Chester had said goodby with the loveliest haunted look in her great dark eyes, and I felt as if I had killed something that was alive and that I hadn't killed it enough. Dr. John had been called from his coffee to a patient and had gone with just a friendly word of good night, and the others had at last left the judge and me alone—also in the moonlight, which I wished in my heart somebody would put out.

"Every glass high!"

They say among the lawyers that it is a good thing that Benton Wade is on the bench, for it is no use to try a case against him when he has the handling of a jury. He just looks them in the face and tells them how to vote. Tonight he looked me in the face and told me how to marry, and I'm not sure yet that I won't do as he says. Of course I'm in love with Alfred, but if he wants me he had better get me away quick before the judge makes all his arrangements. A woman loves to be courted with poems and flowers and deference, but she's mighty apt to marry the man who says, "Don't argue, but put on your bonnet and come with me." The fact that it was too late to get into the clerk's office saved me to night, but in two days—

Oh, I'm crying, crying in my heart, which is worse than in my eyes, as I sit and look across my garden, where the cold moon is hanging low over the tall trees behind the doctor's house and the light in his room is burning warm and bright. They are right—he doesn't care if I am going away forever with Alfred. His quick toast to him and the lovely warm look he poured over poor frightened me at his side as he drank his champagne told me that once and for all. Still, we have been so close together over his baby and I have grown so dependent on him for so many things that it cuts into me like a hot knife that he shouldn't care if he lost me—even for a neighbor. I shouldn't mind not having any husband if I could always live close by him and Billy like this, and if I married Judge Wade I could at least have him for a family physician. No—I don't like that! Of course I'm going with Alfred, now that an accident has made me announce the fact to the whole town before he even knows it himself, but wherever I go that light in the room with that lonely man is going to burn in my heart. Hope it will throw a glow over Alfred!

Vol. 28 No. 173 QUINCY MASS., MONDAY EVENING JULY 28, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

FIRST OF THE QUINCY CUP RACES

One This Morning and Another This Afternoon Off Marblehead

Winner of Race Not known When Ledger Went to Press

The first race for the Quincy Yacht Club challenge cup was sailed on Marblehead this morning starting at 11 o'clock. It is the intention of the committee to hold two races each day until one of the yachts has won three races.

At the start the wind was light from the southwest. At 2.30 the yachts had not finished but from the club house it looked as though the Harpoon had a slight lead. It will be after 3 o'clock unless the wind freshens before the race is finished.

The present holder of the trophy is the Boston Yacht club whose representative, the Ellen, won the series last year, off Quincy. In these races the Harpoon, the defending yacht, won several of the races but had to give up the first two to the Ellen the second boat in on account of the Harpoon's sail being too large.

QUINCY CHALLENGE CUP.

The cup is being defended this year by the new Ellen of Charles P. Curtis while the challenging yachts are the Harpoon, Charles F. Adams, 2d, of the Quincy yacht club; Tern, Herbert M. Sears of the Eastern club; Chance, Cornelius A. Wood of the Corinthian club; and Cima, Guy Lowell of the Manchester club.

The Harpoon which represents the Quincy club was built this year from designs of John R. Purdon. Her frame is of oak and her planking of Spanish Cedar. More than usual interest is centered in these races this year as all of the yachts are candidates for the honor of meeting the Germans for the President Wilson and Governor Foss cups.

Watch the Daily Ledger bulletins for result of the races.

HARPOON GETS THERE

Takes First Place in Sonder Class at Marblehead

The Harpoon of Charlie Adams, the challenger for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge cup, won the special race for sonder boats off Marblehead Saturday afternoon, outsailing her nearest competitor by over a minute. The race was very close in this class from the start to finish. Four of the yachts that are to compete for the Quincy Cup participated in the race which added zest to the race, and this class above all others was closely watched, although the Ellen of Charles P. Curtis, the defending boat, was missing.

The other challenging yachts in the race were the Tern of the Eastern club, Chance of the Corinthian club, and Cima of the Manchester club.

The Tern finished third in the race, the Chance fourth, and the Cima fifth, showing that it was a close race between the challenging yachts, seconds only separating the last three boats, the Sprig which managed to secure second place being two minutes in the lead of the Tern.

PLAYGROUNDS ARE POPULAR

Supervised Sports Are Attracting Boys and Girls

The athletic events for the playgrounds this week are the 75 yard dash and running high jump for the boys and the 50 yard dash and peanut race for the girls. These events will be contested at Ward Three tomorrow afternoon.

The standing of the Ward Two baseball league is as follows: Senator and Athletics are tied for first place with 2 victories and no defeats, while the Naps and Red Sox are tied with 1 victory and 1 defeat each.

The Ward Three boys defeated the Quincy Points on Friday afternoon at Ward Three by the score of 7 to 3. A return game will be played at Ward Two some time this week. Russ Bates says that there will be different stories to tell after this battle.

The Ward Three playground still continues to be the record holder in point of attendance for last week the South Quincyites hung up the good total of 1,573; of whom 856 were boys aend 707 girls. This was for only five days as one-half day was lost on account of rain.

Ward Four fell away short of their previous weeks total, due no doubt to the rainy half-day and to a church picnic being held. The attendance during the week was 437 boys and 326 girls.

Ward Two had a good week, the boys attendance being exceptionally heavy on account of the baseball league having been formed. 682 boys and 621 girls carried the total up to 1303.

The total attendance for the three playgrounds was 3,639 for five days of operation.

NEW NAME FOR MAYOR

James Harry Slade Suggested by Democrats

Although state issues are receiving the voters attention the mayoralty kettle is boiling merrily. The latest candidate proposed by representative Democrats is James Harry Slade, a prominent resident of Ward One and a former resident of Ward Two. Mr. Slade is an expert accountant and has important business connections in Boston. He is a prominent club man of the city and was renowned a few years ago for his athletic prowess.

ATLANTIC LAWN PARTY

Annual Event of Sacred Heart Church

Crowds Were In Attendance

Atlantic and Wollaston members of the parish of the Sacred Heart and lifelong friends of Rev. Fr. J. P. Cuffe, its pastor, attended the annual summer festival "en masse" Saturday evening. The afternoon was devoted principally to the entertainment of the children and a series of sports were run off. The real big event happened in the evening when the grounds surrounding the church were thronged with a happy and jovial crowd of pleasure seekers.

Tents and booths were set up in convenient nooks and corners, and Japanese lanterns, colored lights, flags and bunting were strung everywhere. From one angle the stretch of canvas looked as though some of the militia companies had pitched camp there overnight and from another angle a bewildering sight of light and color dazzled the eye.

Among those present during the evening was Rev. Fr. William J. Keenan of St. Mary's church, who is acting assistant to Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy pending the return of Rev. Fr. Henry T. Grady from Europe. Rev. Fr. J. F. McNiff, the curate of the parish was present and actively directed the affair. All parts of the city were represented.

The attractions were in charge of the following:

THOMAS CARROLL DEAD.

Thomas Carroll, for many years one of the biggest teaming contractors south of Boston, died Sunday at his home on Carroll lane after a long illness. Of late years he has conducted a smaller business.

Mr. Carroll has been a resident of Quincy for many years. In the early days of the quarries Mr. Carroll practically did all of the teaming. He also became interested in the paving industry and furnished blocks for municipalities all over the state.

He was the father of William Carroll of the Central fire station and it can be truly said that more men left his employ to become members of the department than any other contractor in the city.

He is survived by a family consisting of Mrs. Frank Genereau, Miss Margaret Carroll, Miss Helen Carroll, William Carroll and Ambrose Carroll.

ON FOUR COMPLAINTS.

A telephone call was received at police station Sunday stating that a row was in progress at 101 Sumner street and Inspector Goodhue and Officer Reiley were sent in the patrol wagon. The place is one of which William Smith is the alleged proprietor. When the police entered they found men seated about a table drinking whiskey and on the table was a bottle of whiskey, while on the floor at Smith's foot was a jug containing whiskey.

Smith was placed under arrest for assaulting John Sockolut and Nikichia, Hurkecuk, and Smasik Burcouski wre put under arrest for drunkenness. The liquor was seized and Inspector Goodhue applied for warrants against Smith for drunkenness, for violation of the liquor law, for assault and for keeping a disorderly house. He was represented by counsel in court and the cases went over until Friday. The other two men arrested for drunkenness were fined $10 each.

ANOTHER DROWNING

Missing Man Thought to be in Wendell's Quarry

The finding of the card of Paul E. Dovell in clothing on the bank of the Wendell ledge this morning points to the second drowning in Echo lake this season. The clothing was discovered by boys who were gathering firewood. An examination of the clothing by Officer Fallon revealed the card.

Officer Cahill called at his home and learned that he had left the house this morning about 4.30 o'clock. He has been employed by the J. F. Sheppard & Sons as a driver of an ice team, and did not report for duty this morning.

Dovell has been employed by the Sheppard company for about 12 years. He was a man of temperate habits. His absence was all the more striking this morning because the drivers had planned a strike and had selected him as the spokesman. When he did not appear it was generally remarked about by the men.

Dovell is married and lives at 32 Elm street. He is the father of a family of five, the youngest being a 14 year old girl.

Officers Cahill and Curtin are at the quarry grappling for the body. It is possible that they will recover it if he was drowned.

The Bulgars are suffering from having too bulgy heads.

It must seem pretty dull to Ambassador Wilson to get up into a country where they don't have a new president every few weeks.

The reason for cutting out the muffler is not so much that it helps you get up the hills, as that it notifies the spectators to see how easily your machine climbs.

Several Congressmen have been going down in submarines. As it would of course be impossible to fill their places, it is hoped for the sake of an anxious country that these statesmen will be very careful.

The public officials who don't go on the lecture platform may feel that the government should have all their time and it may be that they can't get an audience.

A Chicago professor is travelling to Boston by trolley. Probably treatment with witch hazel would feel comforting on some portions of his anatomy.

Mr. Bryan says his farm is only an expense to him. Many others also have found that the telephone is not a good implement to raise corn with.

Judging by the lobby investigation, the voters of Maine can be greatly enlightened as to their duty by the judicious use of a little whiskey.

When you go on a vacation, a freshly pressed suit and a new straw hat goes a long way in making strangers believe you are a personage of importance.

Those pestiferous Mexicans are behaving so abominably, that it's high time to send down a force of tug boats to chastise them severely.

There are still some fastidious people who would rather keep their whiskers clean than enjoy the sweet taste of green corn eaten off the cob.

Shocking revelations are expected of the politicians who put the money in their own pocket instead of using it honestly as they agreed to buy voters with.

The Powers never prevented massacres in Turkey, but now that their bondholders can't collect interest in Mexico, it is necessary for the United States to intervene.

The character of the summer resort news indicates that the metropolitan editors have been studying journalism with the Bingville Blatter.

The home of Charles Scribner, the publisher, has been broken into by burglars. Had they broken into the office they might have captured some poetry.

It is believed that the railroads should all put in steel cars so that the engineers could run past the danger signals.

Anyway by going to the Capitol instead of seeing the Congressmen at home, President Wilson is saving the White House carpets considerably.

MEN'S SUMMER CLOTHING.

A society woman from another city remarked in the hearing of the writer the other day, that it is too bad that men can't have more comfortable summer clothes. She noted that while women have their open work and low necks, the men are sweltering in wool coats and starched collars.

"Of course," she continued, "a gentleman does not expect to remove his coat."

When Uncle Reuben used to drive to church of a summer's day, ten to one he had on a black alpaca coat that flopped in the breeze. He might have constituted a bulgy and uncouth figure. But the coat was comfortable and appropriate.

The majority of business men feel that it pays to cultivate finished neatness and correct style. Freshly creased trousers and smoothly pressed coat give them self confidence. Thus clad they approach the most formidable captain of industry without fear. A suit of linen or alpaca would soon be reduced to a shapelessness which they fear would seem untidy and rustic.

Whether or not it pays to carry neatness and style to the point of discomfort is doubtful. But it is with regret that the writer heard the dictum of his society friend quoted above that the gentleman might not remove his coat.

It is one thing to appear in a soiled shirt, with trousers supported by dirty suspenders, apparently ready to fall off, with unmentionable consequences. It is another to work in a clean waist with trousers neatly belted. If the women object, let them devise something better than the "shirt waist man."

Meanwhile these embarrassments to not trouble the great army of field and factory workers, whose trade does not compel them to pass themselves off for something better than reality. Dressing to fit the weather rather than to gain caste, they are the only true philosophers.

RESIGNATION OF PASTOR

Rev. John E. Lillback Has Been a Force Here

After a six year pastorate, Rev. John E. Lillback, pastor of the Finnish Congregational church, has submitted his resignation to the board of trustees. It becomes effective within three months. He leaves Quincy to become pastor of the Finnish Congregational church at Mt. Vernon, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Since coming to Quincy Rev. Mr. Lillback has been tireless in his efforts to aid his countrymen in assimilating the civilization of this country. Through schools, lectures and special classes he has developed law abiding and respectful citizens. Several times Examiner Fay of the naturalization bureau has held a special examination in the church and at his last visit admitted over 20 Finns to citizenship.

Mr. Lillback has been a force in the community, which previous to his arrival, eagerly accepted the shallow teachings of Socialistic leaders. He has been instrumental in the healthy growth of the Finnish Total Abstinence Society which now occupies its own spacious quarters.

Many feel that Quincy loses a powerful factor in its foreign growth by his resignation, and one that cannot be easily filled.

Under the rules of the Finnish church, the people of the parish do not have any say about the matter when a pastor resigns, for the minute he submits his resignation it becomes in force without any action on the part of the parish.

Since Sunday Rev. Mr. Lillback has been beseiged by the people of the church to become a candidate for re-election, but up to the present time he has steadily refused to again become a candidate for the pastorate of the church. He will sever his pastorate with the church the first of November.

HOOKED UP MAN'S BODY

Gruesome Find of Fisherman Falls Back Into Sea

The body of a man was hauled from the waters of Quincy bay, off Pig Rock beacon, Sunday afternoon, by A. J. Shaw of South Medford, a guest of Charles Nason of Central avenue, Houghs Neck. Before he could secure the body the hook on his fishing line tore through the clothing and the body slipped back.

The gruesome find was made while Mr. Shaw was fishing. Shortly before he had tossed a sculpin overboard and the strong tug gave him the impression that he had gathered another sculpin. Enough of the body came out of the water for him to see a white shirt and black trousers.

Not having another hook he put for shore and called the police station. A searching party was organized today. As far as is known there are no Quincy men missing. Yachtsmen believe it is the body of one of the two men who olst their lives off the Graves a few weeks ago when their boat overtured.

Up to 1 o'clock Chief Burrell and Officer Corbett who are dragging Quincy Bay between Pig Rocks and Princes head for the body which A. J. Shaw pulled part way out of the water on Sunday on his fish line, had met with no success. Owing to the difficulty in locating the exact spot where the body was pulled up and from the fact that the Sunday night tides doubtless moved the body from its first position but little hopes are entertained of recovering it.

DISTRICT COURT.

William H. Tully was arraigned for assault at Braintree. Case continued until Friday.

Dennis Whalan was fined $10 for drunkenness at Randolph. Nikichia Murkecuk and Smasik Burcouski were fined $10 each and Puocop Shitok $15 for drunkenness at Quincy.

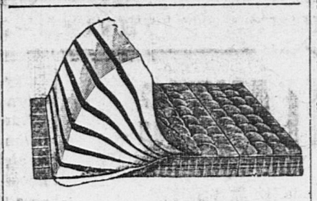

William Smith was arraigned on four complaints, viz. drunkenness, assault, keeping and exposing liquor for sale, and keeping a disorderly house at Quincy. Cases continued until Friday.

WEYMOUTH FIRE SMOULDERS.

The fire at the Fertilizer works at Weymouth early last week continues to baffle the firemen who are still on duty. Most of those watching it smouldering are employees of the yard. Just now the nitre is prey to the flames and the noxious fumes have been the cause of several collapses. Saturday two men employed by a Boston Wrecking Co. were removed to a Boston hospital in a serious condition. Manufacturing is practically at a stand still. The lighter in the channel which sank shortly after the fire and rolled over will be raised this week.

TREES CENTURY OLD.

It is said that the elm trees being cut down on Hancock street were set out in 1802 as the town in the September of that year voted to have trees set out along Hancock street and about the church yard.

READVILLE SHOPS

The New York, New Haven and Hartford has just completed at Readville, an extension to its locomotive repair shop there. This new addition, which is 200 feet long by 150 feet wide, is designed as a boiler repair shop and has cost $200,000. It will be opened August 1. Heretofore the boiler repair work has been done chiefly at New Haven, but hereafter all of it will be done at Readville.

The Readville shops are the largest on the New Haven system and all of the heavy repair work is done there, save on the electrical equipment, for which a new shop was recently built near New York City. With the new addition the Readville shops will be as complete as those possessed by any railroad in the country. These great shops now furnish employment to 2,500 men. The railroad owns upwards of 175 acres at Readville, and other improvements are contemplated, one of them the erection of a freight car shop.

Separate Business From Politics

By THOMAS R. MARSHALL, Vice President

THE sooner all the great interests close their headquarters in Washington, cease the practice of maintaining representatives at the capital, the sooner will it be possible to get business down to a basis that will enable every man in trade to CONDUCT HIS AFFAIRS WITH A MINIMUM OF ANXIETY, yet with a maximum of profit.

IF THEY WILL ONLY FIGURE OUT HOW MUCH MONEY THEY ARE SPENDING IN FINANCING CAMPAIGNS, HOW MUCH THEY ARE PUTTING INTO ORGANIZATION AND HOW MUCH THE WASHINGTON BUREAUS COST, AND IF THEY WILL ONLY THEN SIT DOWN LIKE SENSIBLE MEN AND COMPUTE THE AMOUNT OF WORRY AND HOW THEY ARE SHORTENING THEIR LIVES BY THIS CONTINUOUS TURMOIL THEY WILL AGREE WITH ME THAT THEY WILL BE FAR BETTER OFF IF THEY WILL TAKE THEIR BUSINESS OUT OF POLITICS.

You cannot count in dollars and cents the element of WEAR AND TEAR UPON THE HUMAN FRAME AND MIND in the worry that comes over election results.

Middle Class Greatest Menace

By Dr. CHARLES STELZLE of New York, Chairman of the World's Christian Citizenship Conference

IN the last analysis the greatest menace to our institutions today is not the labor agitator nor the trust magnate.

THE GREATEST MENACE TO SOCIETY IS THE SMUG, SELF SATISFIED MIDDLE CLASS, THE STANDPATTER, THE PEOPLE WHO ARE IN FAIRLY COMFORTABLE CIRCUMSTANCES, WHO DO NOT WISH TO BE DISTURBED, WHO ARE QUITE SATISFIED WITH THINGS AS THEY ARE AND WHO DO NOT WANT ANY KIND OF A CHANGE IF IT MEANS THAT THEY ARE TO BE MADE TO FACE SOME REAL SOCIAL PROBLEM.

These are the people who say, "Peace, peace, when there is no peace." This is the group which would have the minister preach the SIMPLE GOSPEL. They would rather have him preach about the social conditions of the ancient Israelites, the Jesubites and the Hittites than to talk about the social life of the BROOKLYNITES, THE CHICAGOITES AND THE PITTSBURGHITES.

REAR END CRASH

Several Hurt on Houghs Neck Line

None However Are Serious

Rumors were rife about City Square shortly after 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon when it was reported that two cars had come together in a rear end collision on Sea street near the corner of Palmer street, and that scores of passengers had been injured. The first intimation of the accident was received at the police station at 4.20 when a call came for the ambulance and physicians. The ambulance was immediately sent to the scene and it made rapid time on the run. A hurry call was also sent out for physicians and Dr. John H. Ash, Dr. Fred B. Jones and Dr. George M. Sheahan were soon on the scene.

On the arrival of the ambulance and physicians it was found that although two cars had come together that no one was seriously injured. Several however complained of cuts and bruises and they were attended by the physicians and sent home. The most serious case was that of Mrs. A. A. Blunt of 8 Washington place, Braintree, and her two children, Gertrude aged 5 years, and David, aged 3 years. Mrs. Blunt suffered from a nervous shock, coupled with worry about her two children. The girl had a cut over the left eye and on the head by flying glass and the boy had a slight cut on his nose. They were taken to their home in the police ambulance after receiving first aid treatment.

Others who claimed to be more or less injured by flying glass and bruises were:

Henry McGee of School street.

Miss Helen Shields of 40 Copeland street.

Miss Delia Donnelly of 25 River street, Roxbury.

Miss Sarah McGrath of 9 Central street, Houghs Neck.

Charles Echardt of Babcock street, Houghs Neck.

Louis Gasper of Babcock street, Houghs Neck.

Charles Gormley, motorman of the second car.

The accident was due to the motorman of the second car being unable to stop his car. Three well loaded cars left City Square at 4.10 for Houghs Neck. The first car was in charge of Conductor Sullivan and Motorman Mattie, the second in charge of Conductor Romaine and Motorman Charles Gormley.

The first car stopped at the corner of Palmer street to let off passengers. At that time the second car was 100 feet behind. However it failed to stop in time to prevent striking the car standing in front, although when it was seen that an accident was probable, the motorman exerted his entire strength on the brakes.

The front seat of the second car and the rear seat of the first car were crowded with passengers. Many of these saw that an accident was unavoidable and braced themselves to receive the shock. The two cars came together with a bang smashing both the rear end of the first car and the front end of the second car. The crash was of sufficient strength to smash the glass in the ends and to send the passengers in the cars who had no warning of the accident from their seats.

The utmost confusion reigned for a few minutes and the cries of the women and children gave the impression that scores had been injured.

Someone rushed into a nearby house and called the police station and reported the accident, and Lieut. Hanlon who was on the desk immediately dispatched the ambulance and sent out the emergency call for doctors.

Supt. Gammons of the street railway was also notified and was soon on the scene. The report that many had been injured soon reached City Square and there was a rush to the scene. By the time they arrived however those who claimed to be injured had been attended, and the cars which were not seriously damaged had gone on. The third car was so far in the rear of the first two cars that it did not figure in the accident.

The only theory as to the cause of the accident is that the motorman of the second car must have misjudged the distance he was behind the first car and did not start early enough to apply the brakes, or that finding he was too near the first car he lost his head. It is very fortunate that the grade was an up one or it must have been more serious.

GAME CALLED OFF.

The managers of the South and West Quincy teams who had agreed to play a series of three games, commencing Saturday, to determine the runner up to the championship of the city decided practically at the last moment to call the game off. The poor financial outlook is said to have been the main reason.

DR. JOSEPH F. BURNS.

Dr. Joseph F. Burns, a retired physician, died Saturday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. H. A. Clemens, 38 River street, Braintree. Prayers were said at the home by Rev. Harry Grimes of the First Congregational Church of Braintree and the body was sent to Bryant's Pond, Me., for burial.

SUNDAY ALARM.

The rapidity with which a grass fire on Parker street spread alarmed several of the residents Sunday afternoon and they pulled box 41, giving the department an unnecessary run. The auto was the first to arrive and the squad quickly extinguished the fire with a chemical stream.

SQUANTUM OPEN RACE

Large Fleet of Yachts Participate

Ladies Day and Sports

The Squantum Yacht club house presented a gay scene Saturday afternoon when the club held a double event, namely its annual ladies' day event and its annual open race under the auspices of the M. Y. R. A. and Interclub races. Ladies' day brought out a large party of the fair sex, while the open races brought out a large fleet of racers. It was the only race of any event scheduled for the day and all of the flyers were out after the cash prizes which aggregated nearly $100.

There was a puffy southwest breeze which foretold of several lively scraps between the yachts, and the course was a triangular one, giving the yachts a reach, a run and a beat.

While the race was in progress several of the yachts that did not participate in the racing events were busy taking out parties of ladies for a sail in the harbor and near the float there was a series of water sports. These included an under water swim, 100 yard swim, riding the barrel and rowing race.

The sports came near ending in a drowning for one man. Frank Dunn while swimming in the 100 yard dash was seized with the cramps and had gone down twice before other swimmers reached his side and pulled him on board a power boat on which was E. L. Barnes of the house committee.

There was also an exhibition in speeding by the fast power boat of Joseph McIntyre, the Premier III.

In addition to the yachts which took out sailing parties the committee had provided a large launch so that all who desired were given a sail in the bay and had an opportunity to view the race at close range.

The winners in the several water events were as follows:—

Under-water swim, won by Laurie Bean, Ralph Kemp second.

100-yard swim, won by Reginald Gay, L. W. Arthur, second, Laurie Bean third, and Ralph Knapp fourth.

Riding the barrel, won by Laurie Bean.

Rowing race won by Laurie Bean, A. J. Wilkinson second, and Reginald Gay third.

The clubhouse and float were prettily decorated with flags for the occasion and an orchestra gave a concert on the piazza during the afternoon and also played for the dancing of the evening. Light refreshments were served during the afternoon, and all visiting yachtsmen were made welcome.

The affair was in charge of the house committee composed of W I. Hartley, Commodore E. F. Drew, G. W. Sargent, W. I. William and L. E. Barnes.

ICE STRIKE WAS THREATENED.

There were rumors about City Square on Sunday that this morning would see a strike of the drivers of the ice wagons. This morning however the ice teams went on as usual, and it is thought that the trouble is over. Just what the men wanted is not known but it is understood that they wanted shorter hours and more pay.

From what could be learned, the strike was directed at the two firms who are now paying the highest wages to the drivers, namely the Meadow Brook Ice Co., and J. F. Sheppard & Sons.

As far as could be learned this morning the only man who did not show up for work was the one man who was the committee to see the drivers of the several ice firms to get them to strike.

FIRE NEAR POWDER HOUSE.

The West Quincy apparatus was called out on a still alarm Saturday afternoon for a woods fire off Wasson avenue and Willard street, near the locality of the powder houses where are stored large quantities of blasting powder, fuses and dynamite. The firemen worked with a will and succeeded in getting the best of the fire before it could reach this building, which although made of granite was a dangerous place for fire.

ASSAULT AT ROCKLAND.

The police of Braintree, Weymouth and Quincy spent a good part of the night searching for an East Boston Italian who seriously stabbed a fellow countryman at Rockland early in the evening. When last seen he was headed in the direction of Quincy. He is about 5 feet 4 inches tall, rather stout and wore a blue suit. He was a tailor by trade and worked at 243 Washington street, Boston. The name given the police is Michael Celosa.

Rev. Paul H. Drake of Wollaston, spoke on Socialism and its relation to public ownership from the steps of the store of G. B. Bates on Saville street, Sunday night. Nearly 200 gathered.

Better Times After a Change in Food

"Pick Up"

Grape--Nuts

FOOD

Thousands who know the personal value of clear-thinking and vigorous action, make Grape-Nuts a part of their regular diet.

"There's a Reason"

SICK DOCTOR.

Proper Food Put Him Right.

The food experience of a physician in his own case when worn and weak from sickness and when needing nourishment the worst way is valuable:

"An attack of grip so severe it came near making an end of me left my stomach in such condition I could not retain any ordinary food. I knew, of course, that I must have food nourishment or I could never recover.

"I began to take four teaspoonfuls of Grape-Nuts and cream three times a day and for 2 weeks this was almost my only food; it tasted so delicious that I enjoyed it immensely and my stomach handled it perfectly from the first mouthful. It was so nourishing I was quickly built back to normal health and strength.

"Grape-Nuts has great value as food to sustain life during serious attacks in which the stomach is so deranged it cannot digest and assimilate other foods.

"I am convinced that Grape-Nuts more widely used by physicians will save many lives that are otherwise lost from lack of nourishment." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

SEVENTH FATAL TO ORIENTS

Roger Wolcotts Won Five to Four

Other Base Ball Games

Scoring four runs in the seventh inning through the loose ball of their opponents, the Roger Wolcotts of Dorchester defeated the Orients at the Ward Three playground Saturday afternoon, 5 to 4. Their first run, in the first innings, was due to timely hitting. The Orients scored two in the fourth and fifth.

Cremins banged out a swell two base hit in the seventh, which went for a homer through the poor judgment of Thayer, the visitors utility man, who exhibited a very limited knowledge of base ball. Gorman of the Station Outing was then substituted and scored a run.

In the seventh, a pretty single placed a man on base, closely followed by a Texas leaguer. With a man on second and third, an infield hit to Bob Mitchell resulted in a high throw to the plate, the man scoring. Cremins misjudged a long drive to left field and two men scored. Markham failed to handle Bradleys snap across to third and the winning run was secured.

The visitors displayed good base ball ability, shutting down on the Orients when things were dangerous, and the Orients returned the compliment through fine base ball playing. With the exception of the seventh innings, the Orients played the game in the manner for which they are noted.

Ciardi and Sullivan were responsible for choking off more scoring in the seventh by pulling a fast double play with two on the bases. Faulkner's line drive to Bobbie Mitchell in the sixth was handled in a sensational style.

Both pitchers were hit fairly hard at times, Sullivan being tapped for extra bases three times. He left his opponents safe at threatening times however. Bradley again demonstrated that he can bat as well as pitch and secured two pretty singles at opportune moments.

Smith of South Quincy umpired and his decisions were not questioned at any time. It was remarked after the game that he is the first man to go through a full game without having a protest of some kind registered. The score:

MAKARIAS WIN AGAIN

Shut Out Fore River Apprentices at the Park

Charlie Ganzel's Makarias easily defeated Joe Larkins Fore River Apprentices at Merrymount Park, Saturday afternoon, 4 to 0. The game while showing several innings in which no score was made by either team was nevertheless rather slow.

Williamson was bumped for eight hits, while Ed. Jenkins, who has graduated to a box artist from first base was touched only for four singles. Williamson got the big end of the strike outs, fanning seven against six for big Ed.

Both short stops were busy covering second. Cahill made six putouts and Mattie Nicols, five. This is the second defeat administered to the Apprentices by the Makarias. The score:

NOT FOR FOSS.

The Foss boom, according to John R. Richards, president of the city committee, will not get much Republican support in Quincy. In a statement given out Sunday Mr. Richards is quoted as saying, "I don't find any real Republicans shouting for Foss. Councilman Richards is counted as one of the sturdiest of the G. O. P. in the city and his statement probably forecast the vote Foss would probably receive should he contest with Benton for the nomination.

FOURTH OF JULY BILLS.

The Fourth of July Executive Committee are very anxious that all persons having bills against the association should forward them at once. As far as known all bills have been received and approved but it is thought possibly there may be some others out. The committee also desire to state that the contribution of the Syrian club was $35 and not the small amount stated.

BURNS VESTMENTS AND PRAYER BOOK

Episcopal Minister Quits, Claiming Church Neglects Poor

Charlottesville, Va., July 28.—Because he believes the Episcopal church caters to the rich and discriminates against the poor and needy, Rev. Charles S. Davidson, whose differences with his vestry in the Church of the Holy Apostles at Flatbush, N. Y., gave him widespread notoriety in 1900, took leave of the Episcopal ministry in a most dramatic manner by burning his vestments and prayer book at the gate of Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson.

In a lengthy statement given the press he renounced the Episcopal church as the haven of aristocracy, saying it is "powerful financially and socially, stupid intellectually, and spiritually dead," and proclaimed himself henceforth a preacher for all the people.

PRAISES BOSTON STREETS

The Best Anderson Saw on His Hike From Portland to Washington

Washington, July 28.—B. H. Anderson of Butler, Pa., pays a very graceful tribute to Boston's streets. After tramping from Portland, Me., with his mule "Jasper," Anderson arrived at the White House and relieved himself of a very generous compliment for the highways of Boston.

"They may talk about Boston's streets being old cowpaths and poke fun about their narrowness, but I found them in better condition than any streets I have met in my hike to Washington," said Anderson.

BOSTON GEAR TEAM WIN

Give the Colonials a Surprise at the Start

The Boston Gear Works erased out a 10 to 8 victory over the Colonials at the Ward Four playground Saturday afternoon. Smith, of the winners, was bumped for seven hits, while the losers got nine. McPherson passed 10 men, while Smith had better control. Several costly errors netted the Gear men the winning tallies.

The Colonials have not won since they took the Fourth of July purse from the Orients on the holiday. A week ago they lost to the Roger Wolcotts in the last innings. They will combine ability and knowledge against the Redmen at Ward Four on Saturday afternoon. The score by innings:

Boston Gear	4	0	1	2	0	3	0	0	0	—10
Colonials	0	3	0	0	2	0	2	0	1	— 8

Batteries—Smith and Buckley; McPherson and Thomas.

ATLANTIC A. A. VICTORY

Only One to Spare in 23 Run Game

The Atlantic A. A. beat the Chestnut Hill team by a score of 12 to 11 at the Ward Six playground Saturday afternoon. The visitors nearly tied the score in the last inning, but the winners handled the ball in ship shape fashion and spoiled their prospects. John Duffy allowed but four hits, the others reaching base on the errors of his team mates. Donnell contributed two spectacular catches of foul balls and McNally covered first in dashing style.

In the Atlantic lineup were Chassion Johnson, Duffy brothers, Pitts, Curtin, Creedon, McNally, O'Connell. The visiting team consisted of Healy, Kilby, Wolf, Healy, Gleason, Taylor, Hamlin, Ericson and Martin.

In class F the Yarita was the winner, and in class B the Lomara the only boat to enter had a walkover. The breeze was fresh from the southeast and single reefs were necessary.

AMERICAN SHOT BY FEDERALS

Immigration Inspector Victim of Mexican Squad in Juarez

HE WAS ON OFFICIAL BUSINESS

Starts to Run After Being Arrested, Fearing He Would Be Slain as Spy, When He Is Felled—Washington Demands Arrest and Punishment of the Men Who Shot Him

Washington, July 28.—With the shooting of Charles B. Dixon, a United States imigration inspector, by Mexicans in Juarez, the Mexican situation is rapidly approaching an acute crisis.

The reports from El Paso of the shooting of Dixon show that he was the victim of the famous "ley de fuge." He was taken while investigating a "white slave" case and was taken prisoner by federal troops. He is in the El Paso hospital.

Henry L. Wilson, the United States ambassador to Mexico, has submitted a long written report on the situation to Secretary Bryan, with whom he has had two long conferences. He is reported to have urged the recognition of the Huerta government.

The American consul at Juarez has been ordered to make a full report as soon as possible. Dixon's own story, reported from El Paso, is that he had gone to Juarez upon orders from headquarters to investigate a "white slave" case involving a negro fugitive from justice who had taken refuge in the Mexican town.

He found the negro in the main street of Juarez and was talking with him when a lieutenant and four soldiers arrested him and started to march him off at the point of their bayonets.

They promised to take him to the commandant's office, but instead marched him off to the hills. He broke away and ran, fearing he would be shot as a spy. The soldiers let him run and then fired. One bullet hit his foot, the other passed through his body. He may not recover.

"It looks like a serious case," Bryan admitted when informed of the shooting. "We will do whatever is necessary."

Strong representations, the most drastic in phraseology that have been made since the present American administration came into power, were made to the Huerta government yesterday.

The United States government demanded not only the prompt arrest, court martial and punishment of the Mexican federal soldiers who shot Dixon, but the immediate release of Charles Bissell and Bernard McDonald, mining managers, imprisoned by federal soldiers at Chihuahua City and said to be threatened with execution.

So serious were these incidents regarded in official circles that they overshadowed largely the theoretical considerations of policy which the visit of Ambassador Wilson had brought to a climax.

The ambassador himself was so exercised over the developments in Mexico that he dictated two strong telegrams, one to the embassy at Mexico City and the other to the American consul at Juarez, and while Bryan slightly modified their tone, they were approved and promptly dispatched.

Wilson declined to discuss the affair, but he will probably explain his views on such happenings when he meets President Wilson this afternoon for a general examination of conditions in Mexico.

LEE LEFT NO WILL

Seventeen Persons Seeking Share of Publisher's $200,000 Estate

Chicago, July 28.—Seventeen Lees who believe they may prove relationship to William H. Lee, a publisher who died leaving an estate valued at $200,000, have communicated with Public Administrator Bishop, who has been searching for relatives of the decedent, who left no will. Thus far none has been able to prove relationship.

On his deathbed Lee made frantic attempts to talk, but was unable to do so, his tongue being paralyzed.

Under the law the estate will revert to the state unless some relative appears to claim it within twenty years.

He will be second ranking legal officer of the country and the government's representative before the supreme court of the United States.

OBSERVING BOY.

One can see and hear amusing things at a popular beach resort says the Hull Beacon even on a cold, "off night," when the band is not there and the sands of the sea are deserted, even by the tide. I was told of this episode which happened at or near Nantasket the other night.

The beach was almost deserted. This made all the more prominent a stylish young woman, very much hobbled as to skirt, who minced conspicuously up and down the sands. The small boy of a family party could not help hearing comments on the garb.

Later on this party was on the car for Quincy and during one of the long waits at the sidings, the lad was jumping up and down from the seat or runningboard by way of exercise. At one place, the conformation of the ground made the step a peculiarly high one. Climbing up, the boy said, amid breathless silence—and of course overheard, even by the spooning couple on a front seat:

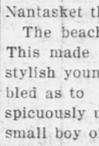

"Gee, I'll bet SHE couldn't get up here."

And everybody seemed to think they understood.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

BLACKMAILING BY WHOLESALE

Drives Italian Business Men of New York From City

EXTORTIONS BY BLACK HAND

They Have Reached Such a Point That Old Custom of "Lining Up" Crooks at Police Headquarters Is Re-established—Fifteen Men Out of Thirty Held For Carrying Weapons

New York, July 28.—In the re-establishment Sunday for the first time in years of the "line-up" of crooks at police headquarters, when thirty suspicious characters were arraigned for the benefit of 100 assembled detectives, it became known that the various Italian colonies in the city have been in a state of terror for several months because of the bands of lawless and desperate "Black Hand" men who have been blackmailing their law abiding countrymen.

Acting on instructions from Chief Dougherty of the detective bureau, all the Italian detectives in the city and many policemen of the same nationality in civilian clothes searched the Italian districts for two days in search of persons who have been under suspicion by their neighbors and the police.

As a result of the search thirty men were paraded for the benefit of the Italian detectives at headquarters. Of this number fifteen were held for violation of the Sullivan law, they having in their possesion when arrested revolvers and other dangerous weapons.

It was after hundreds of complaints began to pour into headquarters and after the board of aldermen had voted favorably on the report of the Curran police investigating committee calling for the re-establishing of the Italian squad and the "line up" at headquarters that the police acted.

These reports, brought to headquarters through secret channels, the complainants being afraid to be seen conferring with the police, were that the many Italian colonies in the city were practically in the hands of lawless men who were nothing more than bandits. So bold had they become that many business men closed up their places and went back to Italy.

One of the last men to sell out his profitable fish establishment here and go back to Europe said he had been paying the Black Hand $75 a week, and he was quite willing to pay that amount, but a month ago the leader of the band told him he must have $1000 to assist a friend who was in trouble. Then the fish dealer decided he could make no profit and pay the tribute. He sold out, notified the police, and went back to Italy.

Yesterday the round-up began, and when they were paraded for the assembled detectives to view thirty of the most vicious Italian criminals were present. While the police have no evidence on which to hold some of these men, it is understood they will continue bringing them into headquarters until they find some employment or leave the city.

MATTIFORD FREED

Southerner Had Been Held at Boston on Kidnapping Charge

Boston, July 28.—John D. Mattiford, arrested here as a fugitive from Atlanta, where he was reported to be under indictment for kidnapping two children of John A. Barwick, head of the Exposition cotton mills, was restored to his freedom after a telegram from Chief of Police Beavers of Atlanta announced that he would not send any officer to Boston to take the prisoner back.

Chief Inspector McGarr was surprised to learn that the Atlanta authorities should so suddenly change their attitude.

The complaint was that Mattiford had kidnapped the 5-year-old son and 9-year-old daughter of the mill president. It was said that Mrs. Barwick, mother of the children, had been living with them at a hotel in Boston, and that Mattiford had an apartment there also.

HYDROPLANE SINKS

Aviator Rescues Passenger From Rigging at Bottom of Bay

Providence, July 28.—Ten thousand people lining the shore of Narragansett bay saw Jack McGee, a local aviator, and a passenger, effect a sensational escape from death when the hydroplane they were riding dropped fifty feet through the air and shot twenty feet more to the bottom of the bay last night.

Both owe their life to McGee's coolness, who tore his passenger loose from the rigging of the wrecked hydroplane and both shot to the surface, where motor boats picked them up, neither being any worse for the plunge. A broken propeller chain was the cause of McGee's mishap.

Philadelphian Wins Long Swim

STRIKE MEDIATORS

This Board Is Trying to Settle Labor Troubles on Railroads

Photos © by American Press Association.

The United States government is doing its best to prevent the threatened strike of over 100,000 employees of forty-three railroads east of the Mississippi river. The new board of arbitration, consisting of W. L. Chambers, chairman (top); M. A. Knapp (middle) and G. W. W. Hanger, has been sitting in New York city for some time hearing both sides of the case, with good prospects of an early adjustment of the disputed matters.

TO PREVENT STRIKE

Railroad Managers Waive Requests of Their Own For the Present

New York, July 28.—Facing a direct threat of an immediate strike of 100,000 trainmen and conductors, the managers of the railroads of the east waived their own demands for arbitration and agreed that only the demands of their employes should be submitted at this time to the United States board of mediation.

The arbitration of the men's demands will commence Aug. 15. The award will be made on or before Sept. 1, and it will take effect Oct. 1. The award, under the law, can be made retroactive.

SYLVIA PANKHURST AGAIN LOCKED UP

Arrested as Mob Was About to Rush Premier Asquith's Home

London, July 28.—Sylvia Pankhurst, the militant suffragette, who was out on license under the "cat and mouse law," was the leader of a suffragette demonstration Sunday which surpassed all previous Sunday affairs of the sort.

During rioting which followed, Miss Pankhurst was re-arrested as she headed a mob about to rush Premier Asquith's home in Downing street, and taken to Holloway jail.

"On to Downing street," was the watchword sounded by Miss Pankhurst, and but for vigorous work by the mobilized police, who arrested Miss Pankhurst and twenty men and women supporters, there would have been window smashing, and perhaps worse damage at the premier's house.

PENSIONS FOR WOMEN

Ten Granted Out of Fifteen Cases Before Court In Seattle

THE Melting of Molly

LEAF TENTH.

Dashed!

I DO believe God gave that wise angel charge concerning me lest I get dashed, but I just got dashed anyway, and it's my own fault, not the angel's. I have suffered this day until I want to lay my face down against the hem of his garment and wait in the dust for him to pick me up. I shall never be able to do it myself, and how he's going to do it I can't see, but he will.

That dinner party last night was bad enough, but today's been worse. I didn't sleep until long after daylight and then Judy came in before 8 o'clock with a letter for me that looked like a state document. I felt in my trembly bones that it was some sort of summons affair from Judge Wade, and it was. I looked into the first paragraph and then decided that I had better get up and dress and have a cup of coffee and a single egg before I tried to read it.

Incidental to my bath and dressing, I weighed and found that I had lost all four of those last surplus pounds and two more in three days. Those two extra pounds might be construed to prove love, but exactly on whom I was utterly unprepared to say. I did not even enjoy the thinness, but took a kind of already married look in my glass and tried to slip the egg past my bored lips and get myself to chew it down. It was work, and then I took up the judge's letter, which also was work and more of it.

He started in at the beginning of everything—that is, at the beginning of the tuberculosis girl, and I cried over the pages of her as if she had been my own sister. At the tenth page we buried her and took up Alfred, and I must say I saw a new Alfred in the judge's bouquet strewn appreciation of him, but I didn't want him as bad as I had the day before when I read his own new and old letters and cried over his old photographs. I suppose that was the result of some of what the judge manages the juries with. He'd be apt to use it on a woman and she wouldn't find out about it until it was too late to be anything but mad. Still, when he began on me at page 16 I felt a little better, though I didn't know myself any better than I did Alfred when I got to page 20.

What I am is just a poor, foolish woman, who has a lot more heart than she can manage with the amount of brains she got with it at birth. I'm not any star in a rose colored sky, and I don't want to inspire anybody. It's too much of a job. I want to be a healthy, happy woman and a wife to a man who can inspire himself and manage me. I want to marry a thin man and have from five to ten thin children, and when I get to be thirty I want my husband to want me to be as fat as Aunt Bettie, but not let me. An inspiration couldn't be fat, and I'm always in danger from hot muffins and chicken gravy. However, if I should undertake to be all the things Judge Wade said in that letter he wanted me to be to him, I should soon be skin and bones from mental and physical exercise. Still, he does live in Hillsboro, and I won't let myself know how my heart aches at the thought of leaving my home and other things. It's up in my throat and I seem always to be swallowing it, the last few days.

All the men who write me letters seem to get themselves wound up into a skyrocket and then let themselves explode in the last paragraph, and it always upsets my nerves. I was just about to begin to cry again over the last words of the judge when the only bright spot in the day so far suddenly happened. Pet Buford blew in with the pinkest cheeks and the brightest eyes I had seen since I looked in the mirror the night of the dance. She was in an awful hurry.

"Molly, dear," she said, with her words literally falling over themselves, "Tom says you'll give us some of your dinner leftovers to take for lunch in the auto, for we are going way out to Wayne county to see some awfully fine tobacco he has heard is there. I don't want to ask mother, for she won't let me go, and his mother, if he asked her, will begin to talk about us. Tom said come to you and you would understand and fix it quick. He said kiss you for him and tell you he said 'Come on in, the water's fine.' Isn't he a joke?" And we kissed and laughed and packed a basket, and kissed and laughed again for goodby. I felt amused and happy for a few minutes and also deserted. It's a very good thing for a woman's conceit to find out how many of her lovers are just make believes. I may have needed Tom's defection.

Anyway, I don't know when I ever was so glad to see anybody as I was when Mrs. Johnson came in the front door. A woman who has proved to her own satisfaction that marriage is a failure is at times a great tonic to other women. I needed a tonic badly this morning, and I got it.

"Well, from all my long experience, Molly," she said as she seated herself and began to hem a dish towel with long, steady stabs, "husbands are just stick candy in different jars. They may look a little different, but they all taste alike and you soon get tired of them. In two months you won't know the difference in being married to Al Bennett and Mr. Carter and you'll have to go on living with him maybe fifty years. Luck doesn't strike twice in the same place and you can't count on losing two husbands. Al's father was Mr. Johnson's first cousin and had more crochets and worse. He had silent spells that lasted a week and family prayers three times a day, though he got drunk twice a year for a month at a time. Al looks very much like him."

"Mrs. Johnson," I said after a minute's silence, while I had decided whether or not I had better tell her all about it (if a woman's in love with her husband you can't trust her to keep a secret, but I decided to try Mrs. Johnson), "I really am not engaged exactly to Alfred Bennett, though I suppose he thinks so by now if he has got the answer to that telegram. But—but something has made me—made me think about Judge Wade—that is, he—what do you think of him, Mrs. Johnson?" I concluded in the most pitifully perplexed tone of voice.

"All alike, Molly; all as much alike as peas in a pod; all except John Moore, who's the only exception in all the male tribe I ever met. His marrying once was just accidental and must be forgiven him. She fell in love with him while he was treating her for typhoid, when his back was turned, as it were, and it was God's own kindness in him that made him marry her when he found out how it was with the poor thing. There's not a woman in this town who could marry, that wouldn't marry him at the drop of his hat; but, thank goodness, that hat will never drop and I'll have one sensible man to comfort and doctor me down into my old age. Now, just look at that! Mr Johnson's come home here in the middle of the morning and I'll have to get that old paper I hunted out of his desk for him last night. I wonder how he came to forget it?" It's funny how Mrs. Johnson always knows what Mr. Johnson wants before he knows himself and gets it before he asks for it!

As she went out the gate the postman came in, and at the sight of another letter my heart again slunk off into my slippers and my brain seemed about to back up in a corner and refuse to work. In a flash it came to me that men oughtn't to write letters to women very much—they really don't plow deep enough; they just irritate the top soil. I took this missive from Alfred, counted all the fifteen pages, put it out of sight under a book, looked out the window and saw the ginger barber coming dejectedly around to the side gate from the kitchen—I knew the scene he had had with Judy about the bottle encounters of the night before—saw Mr. Johnson shooed off down the street by Mrs. Johnson; saw the doctor's car go chucking hurriedly in the garage, and then my spirit turned itself to the wall and refused to be comforted. I tried my best, but failed to respond to my own remonstrances with myself, and tears were slowly gathering in a cloud of gloom when a blue gingham, rompers clad sunbeam burst into the room.

"Git your nightgown and your toothbresh quick, Molly, if you want to pack 'em in my trunk!" he exclaimed, with his eyes dancing and a curl standing straight up on the top of his head, as it has a habit of doing when he is most excited. "You can't take nothing but them 'cause I'm going to put in a rope to tie the whale with when I ketch him, and it'll take up all the rest of the room. Get 'em quick!"

"Yes, lover, I'll get them for you. But tell Molly where it is you are going to sail off with her in that trunk of yours?" I asked, dropping into the game as I have always done with him, no matter what game of my own pressed when he called.

"On the ocean where the boats go 'cross and run right over a whale. Don't you remember you showed me them pictures of spout whales in a book, Molly? Doc says they comes right up by the ship and you can hear 'em shoot water. And maybe a iceberg, too. Which do you want to ketch most, Molly, a iceberg or a whale?" His eager eyes demanded instant decision on my part of the nature of capture I preferred. My mind quickly reverted to those two ponderous and intense epistles I had got within the hour, and I lay back in my chair and laughed until I felt almost merry.

"The iceberg, Billy, every time," I said at last. "I just can't manage whales, especially if they are ardent, which word means hot. I like icebergs or I think I should if I could catch one."

"I don't believe you could, Molly, but maybe Doc will let you put a rope and a long hook in his trunk to try with if your clothes go into mine. His is a heap the biggest anyway and Nurse Tilly said he oughter put my things in his, but I cried and then he went upstairs and got out that little one for me. Come see 'em!"

"What do you mean, Billy?" I asked, while a sudden fear shot all over me like lightning. "You're just playing go away, aren't you?"

"No, I ain't playing, Molly!" he exclaimed excitedly. "Me and you and doc is a-going across the ocean for a long, long time away from here. Doc

"Me and you and Doc is a-going across the ocean."

ast me about it this morning, and I told him all right and you could come with us if you was good. He said couldn't I go without you if you was busy and couldn't come and I told him you would put things down and come if I said so. Won't you, Molly? It won't be no fun without you and you'd cry all by yourself with me gone." His little face was all drawn up with anxiety and sympathy at my lonely estate with him out of it, and a cry rose up from my heart with a kind of primitive savagery at what I felt was coming down upon me.

SQUANTUM BAZAAR.

One of the most enjoyable events ever held in Squantum was the bazaar Saturday night at Callahan's Oval under the auspices of the Squantum Women's club. Over 400 people attended and there was not a dull moment from the time the affair opened at 4 p. m. to midnight when the "Home Sweet Home" waltz was played.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Callahan very kindly donated the use of their beautiful grove and their home to the Women's Club. The grounds were prettily decorated and the large reception hall and living room of the Callahan home made an ideal place for dancing which was enjoyed from 8 o'clock to midnight.

There were a number of handsomely decorated tables where fancy goods, all the handiwork of clever Squantum housewives, were sold. At the apron table Mrs. Helen McGowan and Mrs. James Loughan sold dainty and serviceable aprons. The fancy work table was in charge of Mrs. Hiram A. Morse assisted by Mrs. E. H. Kokerda and Mrs. Edward Eagar. Household wares were sold by Mrs. William Donovan. Mrs. George Hersey and Mrs. Robert Bell.

The headquarters for the children as well as grown-ups was at the grab bag table in charge of Mrs. Frank Anderson. The ice cream and tonic was in charge of Mrs. Charles Watts, Mrs. Russeault and Mrs. S. H. Adams. Dolls were sold by Mrs. Louise Holt. The flower table was in charge of Mrs. Carl Nelson. Mrs. Joseph Hogan had charge of the candy table assisted by Miss Lillian Foster.

There was an entertainment at 7.30 consisting of a cornet duet by Charles Bostwick and Mr. Dawson; a Hebrew monologue by Mr. Curley and a duet, violin and cello—by Miss Bertha and Miss Louise Rund. The accompanist was Mrs. Ethel Bostwick.

There was dancing from 8 o'clock to midnight in charge of Mrs. Herbert A. Smith, Mrs. Ethel Bostwick and Miss Margaret Allen. Mrs. James Foster was in general charge of the sale of tickets.

The entire affair was a tremendous success and reflected great credit upon the popularity of the Women's Club and their enthusiastic work in behalf of the clubhouse building fund. It was estimated that between $150 and $200 would be the net profits of the affair. Mrs. William A. Reed, president of the women's club under whose general supervision the affair was held is being warmly complimented for the great success of the bazaar.

PREVENTS GREAT DISASTER

Towerman Ditches Special Train to Avert Collision With Express

Chicago, July 28.—Scores of lives were saved when a towerman in Burnham, Ills., threw the Ohio River special on the Pennsylvania railroad into a derail and averted its collision with a through Wabash train from St. Louis.

The train took the ditch at a high rate of speed. The locomotive was overturned, but, aside from minor injuries suffered by the fireman, no one was hurt.

It is reported that the block signal calling on the Pennsylvania train to stop was set and that when the special whizzed by the towerman took the only possible course to avert a collision.

John Wilson, the engineer, disputed the towerman's statement that the block signal was set against his train.

A moment after the Pennsylvania train hit the derailer the Wabash train clicked across the frogs at the track intersection less than 1000 feet away.

TURKS' AWFUL REVENGE

Wholesale Massacre of Christians In Villages Spared by Bulgarians

Constantinople, July 28.—Trustworthy reports of appalling massacres and devastation by Turkish irregular troops come from districts in Thrace which the Turks are reoccupying. The country about Malgara, according to the reports, has been converted into a human slaughter house.

The Bulgarians pillaged and burned the Moslem villages and massacred their inhabitants, and now the Turks are wreaking dreadful vengeance on the Christian villages which the Bulgarians had spared.

Malgara and eighteen villages in the neighborhood were devastated and the inhabitants who made their escape are pouring into the larger towns or fleeing across the frontier.

The Turkish government has been unable to restrain the men, who were inflamed by the stories of Bulgarian savagery upon Mussulmans.

TRACKS BLOCKED.

A broken wheel on an outward bound freight train blocked the outer rail near the Quincy Adams station for an hour about 8 o'clock Sunday morning. DOWNER LANDING FIRE.

The rustic theatre at New Downer Landing was destroyed by fire shortly after midnight Sunday morning. There was a large crowd at the grove Saturday at the outing of the Boston carmen and it is thought some rubbish including cigar stubs may have caused the fire. The wind was in a direction that carried the sparks away from the surrounding buildings. The building however was destroyed the loss being estimated at $500. The new auto chemical made the run from Weymouth Landing in remarkably quick time and was the first piece of apparatus to arrive on the scene.

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 174 QUINCY MASS. TUESDAY EVENING JULY 29, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

THE HARPOON HAS WITHDRAWN

Sail Area Was Approved and When Too Late Was Disapproved

First of Quincy Cup Races Won by the Ellen

Although the morning papers intimated that Mr. Adams had procured a new set of sails for the Harpoon and that he might enter in the future races off Marblehead for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup Mr. Adams settled all such rumors this morning when he informed Secretary Hall that he had withdrawn the Harpoon from the series of races.

Mr. Adams ordered a set of sails some time ago for the Harpoon and these have arrived at Marblehead, but Mr. Adams informed Secretary Hall this morning that there was not time enough to bend them on to participate in todays races and that he therefore felt compelled to withdraw from the series.

Ex-Commodore Henry M. Faxon the representative of the Quincy Yacht club at the series will not be in attendance at the future races, and the power tender which the Quincy Yacht club had sent to Marblehead for the use of Mr. Adams has been summoned home by telegraph.

As far as actively participating in the races this year is concerned, therefore, the Quincy yacht club is out of it. If a series of races is held next year as is probable steps will be taken to see to it that the measurer does not make any more mistakes of the same character which he has for the past two years.

Owing to an error by Prof. Edwards who measured the yachts challenging for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup, the Harpoon challenger for the Quincy Yacht club did not participate in Monday's race for the cup, and it is very doubtful if she does compete this season.

The performance this year in regard to measurement of the sails of the Harpoon was a repetition of last year, which lost two races to the Harpoon. A year ago the measurer discovered after two races had been sailed that the Harpoon's sails were too large and the first two races were given to the Ellen.

This year skipper Adams thought to avoid a repetition of last year's affair and Prof. Everett of Technology measured his sails ten days ago and pronounced them to be all right. As he is the official measurer, it was supposed that the sail of the Harpoon came within the required size. Sunday morning however Prof. Everett telephoned Mr. Adams at the Glades that he found that he had made a mistake in his figures and that the sail of the Harpoon was about 30 square feet too large.

It was too late then to have the sail cut down or a new set of sails made for Monday's race, and as the Harpoon would be handicapped by not entering that race Mr. Adams telegraphed Secretary Hall that he would be obliged to withdraw from this season's races. For this reason the Harpoon did not enter the race Monday although a telephone message from one of the yacht clubs at Marblehead Monday afternoon announced that she was racing and was leading the fleet.

It is extremely doubtful if the Harpoon enters any of the races as Mr. Adams is naturally somewhat put out by the error made by the measurer. It seems rather strange that this

STRUCK BY AUTOMOBILE

Results in Runaway But No Serious Damage

Washington street was the scene of considerable excitement Monday afternoon when the horse driven by John Fallon, Jr., 711 Washington street, bolted after the carriage had been struck by an automobile operated by Willard E. Gallagher, 24 Manomet avenue, Kenberma, Nantasket. The accident occurred at Elm street and the horse was not brought under control until Canal street had been passed.

Gallagher, who was operating the machine, attempted to pass through a narrow space and his rear wheel swiped the forward carriage wheel. The impact nearly threw Fallon out and the horse bolted.

Washington street was crowded with autos and teams but the horse went through them without a second accident. Fallon held onto the reins and gained the upper hand after a struggle. The wheels collapsed shortly after the horse was brought under control.

PROBABLY NOT A SUICIDE

Police Believe Paul E. Dovell Has Disappeared

The police scout the theory that Paul E. Dovell, whose clothing was found on the bank of Wendell's quarry Monday, committed suicide. His shoes and underwear were not in the bundle of clothing discovered by boys. Acting on the assumption that Dovell is perpetrating a hoax the waters will not be dragged for a few days.

Mrs. Dovell told the police Monday that she had not seen her husband since he left for his work early. She is unable to say whether or not other clothing is missing from the home. She has made a thorough search.

Several addresses have been furnished and the authorities will be notified in those places in case the man left the city.

Nearly 16 years have elapsed since Dovell disappeared the last time. This was shortly after his marriage. At that time he was away for a few weeks and returned of his own volition. Monday morning, besides his wife, he left a family of five children, the youngest 14 months. They live at 32 Elm street.

Rev. Adolph B. Wrenn of the Roslindale Lutheran church who recently purchased the Joseph B. Tucker cottage on Rock Island road is occupying the same.

Col. Henry L. Kincaide a Guest of Honor

Members of the South American tour of the Boston Chamber of Commerce will be given an "al fresco" reception at Nantasket on Thursday afternoon and evening by the business men of Boston. The tourists, having traveled 16,000 miles, will take another little voyage, leaving for Nantasket on the 1:20 boat and be on exhibition for the rest of the afternoon. All members of the Chamber of Commerce are invited to go down and meet the returned trade pioneers.

At 6 o'clock there will be a shore dinner, with Acting Pres. J. Randolph Coolidge Jr. presiding. Speeches will be delivered by Col. Henry L. Kincaide of Quincy ex-Mayor James Logan of Worcester and Thomas F. Anderson.

GOING TO NOVA SCOTIA.

Several local ball players will leave for Yarmouth where they will play during the month of August. The team will be managed by Joseph Ford who has been directing the fortunes of the Deweys of Weymouth this season. The trip is in the nature of a vacation for all. In the party will be Gillis, "Lefty" Ford, Lester Andrews and Stevens of Atlantic. Russell Bates has signed with Halifax for the balance of the season. He will fill the short stop position.

In accordance with our usual custom and to allow our clerks to attend the annual outing we shall

It is the general feeling among the Sunday school children that they are being very kind to the teachers in going with them on the annual picnic.

No matter by what devious ways the impecunious youth may take his best girl walking, they always seem to come out in front of some soda fountain.

People are advised not to look at the thermometer in hot weather. And let the neighbors brag about their weather records unchallenged.

It appears that the Wilson girls know how to make over their own dresses, but with these big state dinners to cook in the hot kitchen, probably they can't do much sewing now.

From the character of the stuff the magazines print in summer nowadays the old time love story seems to be rejected as heavy literature.

Lonely farmers that are bothered with tramps can get rid of them easily by hanging out a notice, "Harvest hands wanted."

The summer hotel piazzas are discussing such intellectual and highbrow subjects as why Mamie prefers Billy to Bobby.

The small boy's estimate of the religious state of the churches is obtained by comparing the quality and quantity of lemonade served at the Sunday school picnics.

The Boston Chamber of Commerce appreciate what Col. Kincaide and the other tourists did to put Boston on the map of South America, and will give them a reception at Nantasket on Thursday. Even if not on the grand scale of the rival governments of South America, it will touch these gentlemen near the heart. It is much to be appreciated at home. The trip is one that will doubtless go down in the annals of history.

THE TAX LIMIT.

There was a time, some years ago, when it did seem unreasonable to expect the city government to be supported on a $12 per $1,000 limit. It was not attempted, hence the big municipal debt today.

Now the time has come when the $12 limit is all the taxpayers can stand and at the same time an effort should be made to reduce the city debt and interest.

Some will say the $12 limit is not large enough, and their criticism would be the same on a $20 limit after a few years.

But the increasing valuation has increased very rapidly the amount which can be raised for current expenses without increasing the $12 limit.

Twelve years ago under the $12 limit, Quincy could raise by taxation but $242,324.27, but this year it can raise $422,637.43, an increase of nearly 75 per cent. The population during these 12 years has not increased 75 per cent. The cencus of 1910 showed an increase of 36 per cent in population. Next year the $12 limit would give nearly $450,000.00.

A candid study of these figures will show a very rapid increase year by year in the amount that could be raised under the $12 limit, and it will be more marked the next few years:

Year	Limit
1901	$242,324.27
1902	253,932.45
1903	265,308.61
1904	275,316.83
1905	284,976.94
1906	301,387.33
1907	314,759.16
1908	323,040.00
1909	339,393.00
1910	375,695.00
1911	387,834.00
1912	413,110.93
1913	422,637.43

The tax rate is already so large that it has become a burden. If there could be a halt now for a few years in new loans, Quincy would be in a position to have improvement on the pay-as-you-go policy instead of the burdensome debt and interest which require over $6 of the tax rate.

TELEPHONE NEEDED.

The Park Commissioners should consider the needs of a telephone at the public bathhouse. Perhaps the Telephone Company could be induced to put in a public telephone on a guarantee.

Of course it has not been necessary, and may not be in the years to come, but, people have been snatched from apparent death through proper medical assistance.

Thousands have patronized the bath since it was opened. A few have been taken from the water exhausted. None have been drowned. What an effort it now is to summon medical assistance and the pulmotor which is at the police station in case of a serious accident. Both ensure resuscitation if a spark of life is latent.

A long run must be taken before a phone is reached. Perhaps in excitement ofthe minute the messenger of mercy would go direct to the homes of Quincy Point physicians and find them both out. Someone might forget to send in an emergency call from there and it would be travel on to a public phone. It might even then be too late.

The telephone company balks at the cost of extension. The electric light submits they must bear their proportionate cost of the erection of poles now carrying electric cones. The commissioners take the matter under advisement.

In the meantime the presence of a wide awake man on shore must be taken as a prevention against accidents. He alone guards children, women and men.

Workingman Is Entitled to Share In Profits He Helps to Create

By GEORGE W. PERKINS, Former Partner of the Late J. Pierpont Morgan

SOME very wealthy men who today complain that labor is demanding more and more are THEMSELVES TO BLAME FOR IT.

They made great fortunes and then endowed many institutions of learning. The laboring men studied, and where they formerly struck for wage increases they are today DEMANDING A SHARE IN THE PROFITS of the large corporations they work for. It is a higher rate of intelligence at work, and, this being so, no arbitrary dollar and cent increase will ever prove satisfactory.

WE MUST ADOPT A PROFIT SHARING SYSTEM IN CONNECTION WITH WAGES TO GIVE THE WORKER HIS FAIR SHARE. I DO NOT MEAN BONUSES OR ANYTHING THAT SMACKS OF GRATUITIES OR PHILANTHROPIES WHEN I SAY PROFIT SHARING. I MEAN GENUINE PROFIT SHARING BY WHICH EMPLOYEES BECOME PART OWNERS; BY WHICH A CONCERN MAKES A STATEMENT OF ITS TRANSACTIONS ANNUALLY, SHOWING ITS PROFITS OR LOSSES AND ALL OTHER FACTORS ENTERING INTO THE SUCCESS OR FAILURE OF ITS BUSINESS.

I believe in real, genuine profit sharing by which EMPLOYEES BECOME PARTNERS, by which a given concern makes a complete statements of its transactions annually, showing its profits or losses, its output and all other factors entering into the success or failure of its business, and in this way permits labor and the public to know what the business is doing.

Wherever possible the SURPLUS SHOULD BE DISTRIBUTED in the form of a security of some kind that is connected with the business in question, with the understanding that the security is to be retained by the employee for a fixed but reasonable length of time. This places the worker in the position of being AN ACTUAL PARTNER.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Asa A. Pope Observed His Birthday

Asa A. Pope, Grand Army Veteran and a prominent member of the Washington M. French Hose Association, Ramblers and other organizations, as well as being famous as a maker of clam chowders, had a birthday Monday, his 75th, and Monday evening he entertained many of those prominent in the organizations mentioned above informally at his home on Elm street.

The Grand Army was represented by Jim Maxim, Jim Pierce, Billy Bird, Warren Dunbar, and others of the afternoon Grand Army hall contingent; the W. M. French Hose Association by President Fred H. French, Historian Parker and secretary Curtis; while the Ramblers were represented by President Frank C. Packard and members of the executive committee, and last but not least Galen Vinton Bowditch, the veteran of many wars, during which no blood was shed and others.

As noted above, an air of entire informality characterized the gathering from early until late. There was plenty in the smoke line, while salads of various kinds furnished food for the inner man. Had it not been so near the annual outing of the W. M. French Hose Association, when clam chowder will be one of the principal numbers on the program, Asa and Billy Bird might have got their heads together and brewed a chowder, but as noted above salads were substituted.

Asa received the hearty congratulations of the party, who wished him all kinds of future success, and that he might be spared to them for many years. Of course there was the telling of stories of things in Quincy of years gone by, and as the many changes that had served to transform the old town into a modern city, were gone over, an eye was occasionally dim and wet as the name of some one of their associates who had been called from them was recalled.

"But why mourn for the lost," one of the party said, "we are all travelling along the same road and our time is not far off. Let us forget the past and think only of the present" and so it was that a scene of jollity then held sway.

Galen had to leave early to see that the morning editions of the Boston papers had enough copy to fill up with, but he was prevailed upon before he left to render one of those touching and soul stirring songs for which he is well known.

After Galen had gone card tables were brought forth and for an hour or more the old vets indulged in the usual pastime of "High, Low Jack," and "Seven up." As they took their departure Asa was again congratulated on having arrived at the age of discretion and wished a prosperous year to come.

AUTOISTS FINED.

Fred C. Hald of Brookline and Joel M. Hunter of Boston were arraigned in court this morning for reckless driving at Milton. The evidence showed that both automobiles came down Randolph avenue Sunday afternoon, side by side going at a rate of speed estimated at 50 miles an hour. When part way down the avenue Hunter lost control of his machine and it banged into a pole striking in the centre of the radiator and bending the front axle almost double. Hunter also suffered a fracture of the ribs. Hald did not stop but drove on past until held up by a park officer and brought back to where the smashed machine was. The court fined Hald $50 and Hunter $25. Both took an appeal.

FUNERAL OF THOMAS CARROLL.

The funeral of Thomas Carroll, a well-known teaming contractor, was held this morning from the home of his sister, Mrs. V. M. Ross, 75 Smith street. Among those who attended was a delegation of firemen from the Central station. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrateed at St. Mary's church by Rev. Fr. William J. Duffy, acting pastor. The musical portion of the mass was the Gregorian chant by the regular choir, under the direction of Miss Frances Cronin, organist. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. There was a profusion of floral tributes.

The rain Monday afternoon did a great amount of good to vegetation and while it cooled off the air for the time being the evening was hot and sultry and the humidity today is very oppressive. There was a heavy fog in the early morning but at 10 o'clock the fog had lifted and the sun came out good and hot.

WHAT, WHEN AND HOW TO EAT

Man Has Advanced Along All Lines Except In Science of Eating.

By EUGENE CHRISTIAN, F. S. D.

[Copyright, 1913, by American Press Association.]

MAN begins his struggle with the food question a few hours after his birth and continues until a few hours before his death. It is the one thing that engages most of his attention. It is, after all, the dominant thing in life.

He could live as his anthropoidal ancestors did—entirely without clothes or houses—but food he must have. He is in active contact with the food question about one-eighth of his entire life.

If any intelligent man should take three lessons a day from a competent teacher in any of the arts or sciences for thirty, forty or fifty years he would no doubt be master of his chosen profession, especially if his teacher could not err—always taught him the truth.

Man eats three meals a day, or about 1,095 meals during the year. Every meal is or should be a lesson, a sort of clinic, and Nature, his great teacher, never makes a mistake. Every symptom she gives to him is a truthful one. She speaks in a language that never deceives him, and yet at the close of a life, after eating three meals a day for forty, fifty, sixty or seventy years, the average man acknowledges defeat and declares that he knows nothing about feeding his body, and even if he does not acknowledge defeat disease is his accuser.

Disease Is Not Normal.

The natural man is a healthy man. It is disease that has to be "caught," and most people chase it for years before Mother Nature will permit them to possess it.

Nature's laws are so simple, especially that of nutrition, that most people have entirely overlooked them.

The human body is composed of fifteen well defined chemical elements. A normal body weighing 150 pounds contains these elements in about the following proportions:

	Pounds.	Ounces.	Grains.
Oxygen	97	12	..
Carbon	20	..	..
Hydrogen	14	10	..
Nitrogen	2	14	..
Calcium	2	..	..
Phosphorus	1	12	190
Sulphur	..	3	270
Sodium	..	2	196
Chlorine	..	2	250
Fluorine	..	2	215
Potassium	..	..	290
Magnesium	..	..	340
Iron	..	..	180
Silicon	..	..	116
Manganese	..	..	90

Man could subsist indefinitely upon as few as six different articles of food, and, taken in certain proportions, he could with them keep his diet thoroughly balanced at all seasons of the year.

Perfect Health Is Natural.

If these natural foods were prepared in a simple way and the taste trained to accept them they would appeal to the highest sense of hunger and eating would be far more enjoyable and the human body would give back the natural result, which is perfect health, but most everything man does to his food injures it.

I have before me a bill of fare sent by the proprietor of one of the large eastern hotels in order to show me his elaborate offering to the public. It is in booklet form and contains sixteen pages. There are fewer than half a dozen things on this entire menu that are really good food. About half of the things, however, were originally good, but they have been roasted, toasted, oiled, boiled, mixed, fixed, soured, sweetened, chopped, mashed, hashed, canned and fermented until they are a veritable olla podrida of dietic confusion.

Food, air and exercise are equally important. In fact, all forms of inanimate life are governed largely by these laws. The roots of plants and trees take in nutrition from the soil, while the leaves and buds take in oxygen from the air and throw off carbon dioxide the same as the human lungs, and the more the plant or tree is cultivated, exposed to the sunshine and blown about by the wind the more it will grow and the higher it will develop.

Curative Feeding.

Man has drifted along for many thousand years without giving any scientific attention whatever to his eating. He has selected his food and drink largely according to his appetite, and this has very often become warped and perverted by bad habits. As an illustration, from the standpoint of the scientist, all stimulating and sedative articles, such as liquor, beer, tea, coffee tobacco and many drugs, are things that tear down instead of build up human tissue. Hence, from a scientific view point, the man who takes these things is acting as foolishly as the architect who would put one crew of men to constructing a building and another smaller crew to tearing it down.

We have, however, a great deal of disease to contend with caused by man's bad habits and in order to deal with this subject scientificnily it brings us directly into the question of curative feeding—that is, selecting, combining and proportioning food so as to remove the causes of disease. This subject, however, will be discussed more thoroughly in the latter part of this series. What I desire now is to point out the results of man's bad habits or lack of attention and obedience to the fundamental laws above named.

Nearly all animals on this globe except man live under normal conditions about eight times their respective periods of maturity. A horse, dog or cow that will obtain its growth in four years will live under ordinary conditions about thirty-two years. This rule applies especially to all anthropoidal and quadruped specimens.

Life Needlessly Shortened.

Man matures or gets his growth at about twenty-four years. Measured, therefore, by the scale governing the lives of all other animals, he ought to live eight times twenty-four, or about 200 years; but, reckoning from the age of six, which takes him out of the infant class, man dies at a fraction over thirty-eight years of age, which is about one-fifth his natural period of life, while if we calculate from his birth his period of existence in all civilized countries is brought down to less than thirty-two years.

Man drinks the same water, lives under the same sunshine as his brother animals, but differs from them mainly in his food, air and exercise, the three fundamental laws above referred to. It is fair to assume that man is no exception to the general laws governing all other animals—that is to say, if he did not commit some very grave errors he would live his normal period of years, as perhaps did his ancient ancestors.

Man has greatly increased the productivity of labor by invention and the productivity of the soil by the science of agriculture. He has almost conquered the air and carried the transportation of intelligence (talking through the air) to its limit, but he has forgotten himself. In fact, just to the extent that he has progressed in all the other sciences he has retrogressed in the science of preserving his own health.

Where Science Has Failed.

Man is entitled by inheritance to live 200 years. Science therefore can boast only when it has carried him beyond this period. If he had given as much attention to the science of health as he has to that of mechanics and the accumulation of wealth there is every reason to believe that he could have doubled his present period of life or perhaps brought it up to or beyond the 200 year mark.

The difference between youth and age is, in fact, only a chemical difference. The differences between the stiff and flexible cartilage, the hard and soft artery, the normal and irritated nerve, the rich hemoglobin (red) and thin blood, the black and white hair, are only chemical differences. They represent deposits, things taken into the body which in some way the body could not cast out.

If man had studied his construction and maintenance and made of them a true science these chemical differences could have been known and their causes removed, and man would perhaps today be in possession of his birthright of 200 years. If he had carried the science of physiological chemistry and food chemistry to the same degree of development that he has carried industrial chemistry no doubt he would be able to prolong his life even beyond the 200 year mark.

Vegetable Diet Ideal.

But his eating has been haphazard. The most important thing in life has been guessed at. Is it any wonder, therefore, that he is sick, weak, has gas fermentation, nervousness, indigestion, constipation, insomnia, backache, headache, gout, rheumatism, is too fat or too thin? Is it any wonder he is only 51 per cent efficient and lives only an average of thirty-eight years when he guesses at the material that makes his blood, bone and brain? All of this has changed hunger into appetite and health into disease.

All the chemical elements composing the human body can be found in the vegetable world in their best and purest form. It requires, therefore, but little knowledge to enable man to select his food from articles that will supply all these elements in approximately the right proportions, but to this important matter man gives practically no thought.

It is the boast of many a housewife who has a good cook that she does not know what is coming on her table. Feeding the family, therefore, is a system of thoughtless guesswork. Building the temple divine, the heritage of a million years of evolution, making the blood that feeds the little engine in our breast that pumps over twenty tons of blood above its own level every day, is left to mere chance, is left to the judgment of one who knows absolutely nothing about the chemistry or needs of the body or the chemistry of the material that builds up that wonderful structure.

Little Care Selecting Food.

No intelligent mother would give her child or husband medicine compounded by a druggist that knew nothing whatever about the chemistry and action of drugs, yet she is putting a prescription of food upon her table three times a day without any knowledge whatever of the chemistry of food or the nutritive demands of her family.

These are a few of the things that justify thoughtful people in the conclusion that the period of human life is only about one-fifth of what it should be. These are also some of the things that justify the calculation that about 90 per cent of all disease originates in the stomach and that incorrect eating is one of the principal causes of man's shortened period of life.

WELL KNOWN IN BRAINTREE

George E. Williams Passed Away on Monday

George E. Williams, 105 Middle street, Braintree, passed away Monday morning at a hospital in Stoneham, where he recently went for relief from anaemia. He was a native of Boston and came to Braintree from East Weymouth with his wife and little daughter Ethel about eighteen years ago. The daughter is now Mrs. Franklin K. Patch.

Mr. Williams will be greatly missed in Braintree where he has a large number of friends. He has been vice president of the Cochato club and also chairman of its house committee from its beginning and he contributed heavily to the club's activities. From his own finances he contributed largely on many occasions and the annual ball was his delight. Very costly decorations of the hall were his contribution and he provided dainty souvenirs for the ladies.

Besides the Cochato club Mr. Williams and his family were active in all the social affairs of All Souls' church. He remembered all the young people who visited his home on the Fourth of July with fireworks and his list of Christmas gifts was almost endless, remembering the gate crossing tender and all who needed his assistance.

Mr. Williams was New England manager for the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Co., with offices at 111 Devonshire street, Boston, a position he has held a score or more years.

It is to be regretted that a man so young, only forty-eight, who did so much good with his large yearly income should be taken away.

His estate on Middle street, corner of River street, consisting of about one acre of land, a costly house and garage and extra fine lawn, was the most attractive in Braintree.

The Cochato club is very unfortunate in its lose this year of its president, George O. Wales and Vice President George E. Williams, for both gentlemen gace freely of their money and time and cared not for publicity or honor.

Mrs. William's funeral will take place Thursday afternoon at 2.15 o'clock at his home.

Homing Pigeons Make a Quick Trip Back to Quincy

An interesting feature of a fishing trip in Boston harbor on Saturday, was the liberating of four young homing pigeons from the deck of the steamer Satellite when four miles northeast of The Graves. These birds, the property of John Minihan, the well known fireman of the Furnace Brook parkway, West Quincy, were taken on board the steamer by Irving L. Badger and attracted much attention. As the time drew near for starting them on their flight, all thoughts of lines and fish were forgotten and the birds became the centre of attraction; on the stroke of twelve they were taken from their box and tossed skyward; rising to a great height over the upturned faces on the steamer, they made one graceful circle and immediately set out in the direction of Quincy. As this was their first long flight, their arrival was eagerly watched by Mr. Minihan and his friends; all arrived safely, none the worse for their long aerial trip over sea and land. A still longer flight is being planned for the future.

SQUANTUM PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert A. Smith of Wedgewood street, left this week for a two weeks trip to New York, Niagara Falls, the Thousand Islands and Montreal.

Miss Georgiana Parker of New Britain, Ct., is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Reed.

Miss Phyllis Bostwick left last week for New York where she expects soon to take up her theatrical work.

contemplating a trip through Northern New York in the near future.

Arthur P. Russell of Wollaston, and family will start for their camp in Quebec in the 50 h. p. Kissel on August 9. The camp is situated on Lake Edwards, one of the beauty spots of that region. Mr. Russell is planning to make the trip in relays.

John Sutherland, with Alexander Pompeo of the Central Garage as chauffeur, motored one day last week from Quincy to Lake Sunapee, N. H., a distance of about 150 miles. Mr. Sutherland left Quincy about seven o'clock and joined his family who are staying at the lake about 2 o'clock. They will remain there a month. Mr. Sutherland is proprietor of the Quincy Oil Co.

All the way from Tampa, Florida, in a Ford car, is the distance ex-mayor S. E. Wing and party of that city has travelled. He is visiting relatives in Wollaston and expects to start his return journey next week. The car shows but slight signs of wear and Mr. Wing speaks impressively of the beauties of the trip.

Temple A. Winsloe and Miss McQuade of the Wollaston Centre garage, left Monday morning for a trip to Peaks Island in Portland harbor, Maine, about 138 miles. They were planning to reach there Monday night, but word has not been received of their arrival.

Thomas and Howard Bishop of South Quincy, granite manufacturers, returned a few days ago from a Rambler trip through the White Mountains clicking off many miles. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bishop left today for Connecticut and New York.

Please keep the Daily Ledger posted on your long trips, especially your one-day runs. Did anyone make a better record last Sunday? Long trips will be a feature of the Daily Ledger every Monday.

Napoleon B. Furnald, one of the oldest residents of Quincy, is active despite his years, and Sunday he sat in his front yard and ticked off the number of autos passing on Washington street between the hours of 10 A. M. and 4 P. M. His comptometer registered 1022 machines in that time, an average of over 170 per hour.

In the younger days of Mr. Furnald no motor vehicles were perfected to the point of convenience although in different parts of the state several inventors had conceived the idea of putting a stationary steam engine on wheels, a theory which did not work out too well in practice.

According to Mr. Furnald who observes the increasing traffic day after day, travel is becoming heavier and heavier. Machines of all makes pass and of course, with few exceptions are obliged to go through City Square. Aside from the horse driven pleasure vehicles this contribution to the traffic of the city is astonishing.

Despite the heavy travel on Washington street but one officer is stationed in City Square Sunday to safeguard the public and they meander about with no thoughts of impending danger in many cases. Crosswalks are good to look at but are not for use according to some people, and a movement is afoot to increase the number of officers during the evening hour on Sundays and holidays.

SEARCH WAS UNSUCCESSFUL

No Trace of Body Reported in Quincy Bay

The Quincy police officers dragged the waters of Quincy bay, off Pig Rock beacon, Monday, for the body of the man brought to the surface by A. G. Shaw of Medford, but their efforts were unsuccessful.

Considerable doubt has been expressed in some circles over the reported find. Men who have had experience with bodies brought to the surface in this manner claim that once they are dislodged from the resting place they will come to the surface unless weighted, provided the body has been in the water for a considerable time.

Although the police express no doubt as to the veracity of Shaw's report they will probably invite him to join a searching party so he can point out the approximate spot where he made the gruesome find. While no yachtsmen are missing several of the victims who met death in the recent catastrophe on the Alberta a few weeks ago have not been brought to the surface.

GET TOGETHER PULL TOGETHER

Views of New Jersey Granite Dealer on Quincy Day

I have just read, with a great deal of interest, an article stating that the Manufacturers of Barre are trying to "put one over" Quincy in planning to run a special train to Barre on "QUINCY DAY."

If this is true, it really does seem too bad. But if the manufacturers of both Barre and Quincy are the broad-minded men they are looked upon to be, they will "get together" and "pull together" for the best interest of all concerned, and avoid having any conflict of this kind.

The meeting in Boston August 19-21 is to be the National "Retail" Monument Dealers' convention. A convention of the customers and prospective customers, of every manufacturer in both Barre and Quincy, and it would seem that the manufacturers ought to consider the retail dealers in the matter, and cater to their interests as far as possible, and I feel quite sure that it would be the sentiment of every retail dealer in attendance at the convention to "vote down" any plan of the manufacturers to hold both receptions on the same day.

The retail dealers are coming to this convention for the good they can get out of it. Many of them are coming many miles—some doubtless coming east for the first time for many years, if not for the first time in their lives. Nine-tenths of them, in all probability, are looking forward with keen interest to the pleasure of visiting both Barre and Quincy, and if they find the manufacturers have so arranged matters as to make them choose between the hospitality of the two places, I believe it is going to react on the manufacturers and have a tendency to do them more harm than good.

As the convention is held in Boston, it would be the most natural thing in the world to visit Quincy first. Then why not let August 22 stand as "Quincy Day," and let the Barre manufacturers arrange to have their special train leave Boston late Friday night, reaching Barre Saturday morning. Or better yet, arrange for the special train to leave Boston early on Saturday morning, and take this most beautiful ride by day-light.

Let the Milford and Concord manufacturers work with the Barre Association if they wish, and have the special run up to Milford and then stop at Concord. Reach Barre Saturday night, and after a good rest on Sunday the retailers would be in good shape to appreciate all that Barre could do for them on Monday, and furthermore the whole week would be ahead for those who had time to stay longer.

In this way the retail dealers need not be divided, and the manufacturers in both places will most surely reap the benefit of a larger and more enthusiastic delegation.

Advertiser's Aim Is Satisfaction

By HOLLAND.

ONE of the biggest retail merchants in the world, with stores in two of America's largest cities, and who naturally is one of the largest advertisers in the world, insists that his advertisement writers confine themselves to strict truth, and any promise made by one of his clerks is considered to have been made personally by the head of the firm.

A woman bought a fine tablecloth, and after she had it home there was a slight imperfection found. It was nothing to affect the wear of the tablecloth, but she took it back, explaining that she had paid a high price for the article and that she had intended it for her "best." She was somewhat apologetic for returning a purchase with such a slight imperfection.

"You are a stranger in this city?" asked the floorwalker and the woman nodded. "I thought so," he said. "You do not understand our system. Had you kept that tablecloth you would have done yourself and us an injustice. When you buy here you must be satisfied. If you are dissatisfied for any reason you are not fair to us unless you tell us and give us a chance to satisfy you."

That spirit is behind big advertisers everywhere. It is another reason for doing business with advertisers.

She Learned to Keep a Bank Account

By OSCAR COX

"My dear," said Robert Read, "what is this nonsense about your joining the suffragists?"

"Why, it's no nonsense at all, Bob. I've joined."

"Will you kindly tell me your object?"

"Well, you see, there are lots of women who own property, and they are interested in making the laws that govern that property. They should have a voice in electing the right officials."

"But you have no property?"

"Haven't I a husband who has? And mayn't he die and leave it to me?"

Mr. Read found this argument too much for him. He thought awhile.

"What you have said," he remarked later, reminds me that, I being liable to die before you do, you will need some knowledge of taking care of property. I think I had better give you some instructions in that direction, else a vote will do you no good, for you won't know enough to use it."

"No fear of that. However, I am ready to be instructed."

"I shall begin with teaching you to keep a bank account. Ever since I went away and left orders with the bank to honor your checks and you forged my name I have felt that you should know more about such matters."

"That was very stupid, wasn't it?"

"I should say so."

A few days later the husband gave his wife a check book, a pass book and a check for a hundred dollars, explaining what each book was for, and told her that she was to deposit the check in the bank. He also told her how to enter each deposit in her check book and subtract each check from her total deposits so that her balance would be always before her. He wrote "For deposit" on the check and told her to sign her name under it, explaining that the words were to indicate the purpose for which it was indorsed and that it was not to be paid to any one. Then he made out her deposit ticket for her, put it with the check in the pass book, and the lesson was ended.

A few days later he came home and found his wife in tears.

"What is it, sweetheart?" he asked anxiously.

"I dare not tell you!" she moaned.

"Anything happen to the children?"

"No."

"Don't keep me in suspense."

"I've lost the hundred dollars you gave me for the bank."

"Why, I didn't understand that you were going to draw it."

"I didn't put it in."

"Oh, well, if you've only lost the check it doesn't matter."

"I haven't lost it." Fresh tears started.

"Well, what became of it?"

"I was cleaning out my desk and burning the old papers in it. I threw a lot of things into a wastebasket and dumped them into the kitchen range. The check and the little book it was in are all burned up."

She sobbed as though her heart would break.

Her husband looked at her pityingly, a smile of hopelessness on his lips. She thought the check was destructible, like a bank bill.

He kissed away her tears, explained how he would give her another check in place of the one she had burned and gave her another lesson on the subject. She was sure she understood him perfectly. The lessons were continued for many months, and Mr. Read became convinced that his wife had learned all about banking. At any rate, she made deposits and drew checks as well as anybody.

Then one day when Mr. Read went into the bank he was called in to the office of the cashier, who gave an "ahem" and said:

"Your wife, who has an account with us, needs some explanation of banking methods."

"What's she been doing?"

"Nothing of any importance; nothing wrong. It is simply a matter of ignorance of banking. We notified her a few days ago that her account was overdrawn, and she sent us her check on our own bank to cover the deficiency."

"Humph!" grunted Mr. Read. "How much is it?"

"Two hundred and forty dollars."

Mr. Read drew a check for the amount and when he went home in the evening kissed his wife as usual and began reading the evening paper.

"Anything new in town today, dear?" asked Mrs. Read.

"Yes; it is reported that a new banking law has passed congress."

"Indeed! What are its main features?"

"It will make paying an overdraft with a check of the person overdrawing, drawn on the bank where the overdraft has occurred, illegal. You can't do that any more."

"Isn't it fortunate that I paid up before the law was passed?"

"Very. If you're tired of the trouble of keeping your account suppose you put yours in with mine."

"I think I will. You know I only did it to learn how, and, now that I have learned, I don't need to bother with it any more."

"Just so. Let's go down to dinner."

"Bob," she said a few days later, "I've been thinking that if you should die before me how nice it will be now that I've learned business and will be able to take care of my own affairs."

"You won't need another husband, will you?"

She looked at him reproachfully.

NEW RULES AT COURT

Special Session for Juveniles and Family Affairs

Timothy J. Carey, agent for the State Board of Charity, whose district since his appointment to the board several years ago has been in the western part of the state, has been transferred to the district which includes Quincy, of which Mr. Davis of Fall River has been the agent for a number of years.

Mr. Carey's new district comprises all of Norfolk County, Hingham, Hull Scituate, Norwell, Rockland, Abington, Hanover, Whitman, Brockton, Somerville, Framingham, Ashland, Wayland, Sudbury, Holliston and Hopkinton.

With the appointment of an agent of the State board whose home is in Quincy, Judge Avery of the District court announced this morning that hereafter a juvenile session of the court which has been held every other Tuesday in the forenoon would hereafter be held every second and fourth Thursday in the afternoon. It is also the intention of the court at these sessions to hear all cases of neglected children, non support cases, and all domestic relation cases in addition to the regular juvenile cases. The idea is to remove all such cases from the regular criminal court in order that there may be the least publicity possible given them.

Heretofore it has been the custom to hear neglected children and non-support cases during the criminal session and for this reason more or less publicity has been given to family disturbances. Under the new order of things however this will be done away with.

Another matter to which the court called attention is the juvenile cases. Hereafter it has been the custom when a complaint is made against a juvenile for a minor offense to summon him into the court. Hereafter any and all complaints against juveniles will be referred to the probation officer for investigation and if possible will be settled without bringing the juveniles into court, and thus establishing a record against them. Judge Avery believes that there are many juvenile cases which the probation officers will be able to settle outside of the courts by a conference with the parties concerned.

These new rules will go into effect immediately.

DAN CRAWFORD.

The coming of Dan Crawford to the General Conference at Northfield cannot pass unmentioned. For twenty-three years he has been hidden in the wilds of central Africa. He is the author of "Thinking Black," the most thrilling book in African missionary literature. Unknown in England he held his audience spell-bound with his tales of Bantu life and forced recognition by his sheer force, originality and personal magnetism. He comes to America for the first and last time, as he returns to Africa from here, never to leave his beloved black men. His wife was the first white woman to enter the Garengauze country of Africa, and followed with him in the footsteps of David Livingstone to Ilala, where he performed the funeral service under the tree where the great man's heart was buried.

HARPOON WITHDRAWN

same measurer should make the same mistake two years in succession and both times on the Harpoon.

If the other skippers racing for the trophy had been as sportsmanlike as is Mr. Adams they would have called Monday's race off. Owing to lack of wind, the afternoon race was called off, and rumor has it that Mr. Adams may have ordered a new set of sails, and that he will enter the races today.

The wind for the race Monday morning was very light and the race went to the defending yacht Ellen. The race was to have started at 10.30 but lack of wind postponed the start until 11 o'clock.

With the first race windward and leeward, the boats were sent four and one half miles up the wind with a run back to the starting line off Marblehead Rock.

The Ellen turned at 11:53:38, leading the Cima by 1m and 32s, the Chance was 3m and 24s astern of the Cima, while the Tern was 3m and 41s, farther astern.

The official turning times and elapsed times for the four and one-half miles beat to windward were:

	Turn	El time
	h m s	h m s
Ellen	11:53:38	1:13:38
Cima	11:55:10	1:15:10
Chance	11:58:34	1:18:34
Tern	12:02:15	1:22:15

Running before the light breeze with booms way off to port and spinnakers set to starboard, there was too much distance for any of the four boats to overhaul the one ahead in four and one half miles, yet the Cima and Chance, picked up considerable time on the leader, the Ellen, and all dropped the Tern. The Ellen finished with a lead of 46 seconds on the Cima, with the Chance only 2m 25s behind.

The elapsed times for the run were:

	m s
Chance	52:55
Cima	53:54
Ellen	54:40
Tern	57:18

Thus the Chance gained a minute and 45 seconds and the Cima 46 seconds on the Ellen. Bringing up a better breeze, they both outran the Tern, which was behind them, by three to four minutes.

After waiting until 3.15 P. M. the second race was called off, just before the rain began, thus saving the sonder boats wet sails.

The elapsed time of Monday morning's race was:

Name, owner and club	h m s
Ellen, C. P. Curtis, Jr., Boston	2:08:18
Cima, Guy Lowell, Manchester	2:09:04
Chance, C. A. Wood, Corinthian	2:11:29
Tern, H. M. Sears, Eastern	2:19:33

The race scheduled for this morning is over a triangular course.

WILLARD STREET HEARING

A meeting of the directors of the Quincy Board of Trade was called for Monday evening to take action relative to the hearing before the State Highway commission Wednesday on the matter of acceptance by the Commission of Willard street. Although the matter is an important one, and one in which many citizens are interested, the directors of the Board of Trade neglected to attend the meeting and none was held. The hearing however will not go by default, as Mayor Stone, City Solicitor McAnarney and a number of prominent citizens from Ward Four will attend the hearing and do their best to have the street accepted.

COLLECTORS UNAUTHORIZED.

From the pulpit of St. John's church on Sunday, Rev. Fr. Coan warned his parishioneds that unauthorized collectors were soliciting funds in different parts of the diocese. The collectors are representing themselves as members of religious orders and in some cases claim to be ordained priests. Father Coan stated that if a letter from Cardinal O'Connell, Bishop Anderson or himself could not be shown they were imposters. He stated that whenever duly authorized collectors would visit the parish in aid of a fund for church purposes he would publish the fact at all masses.

FAIL TO AGREE AS TO MEXICO

President Expected to Demand Resignation of Ambassador

LATTER IN FAVOR OF HUERTA

Chief Executive Feels There Is Really No Crisis as Yet and Is Strongly Opposed to Provisional President's Regime—New Movement on Foot to Bring Peace

Washington, July 29.—Following a conference of more than an hour between President Wilson, Secretary Bryan and Ambassador Wilson, it became plainly evident that the president and ambassador had so seriously disagreed upon the course to be pursued by the United States in the Mexican situation that the president will demand the resignation of the ambassador immediately.

In addition to yesterday's disagreement, it is broadly intimated that the president was plain in his disapproval of the freedom with which the ambassador has talked, both during his trip to and stay in Washington.

The president stands firmly opposed to intervention in any manner at present, feeling that there really is no crisis as yet. He also is strongly disinclined to recognize the Huerta government, founded, as he declares, upon assassination.

Ambassador Wilson in public interviews and, it is believed, in conference with the president, has almost openly urged recognition of Huerta.

The inadvisability from a diplomatic standpoint of maintaining in Mexico City a representative who would not be sympathetic with the purposes of the Wilson administration in Washington is said to have practically convinced the president that the embassy in Mexico City had better be conducted for the present by Nelson O'Shaughnessy, its first secretary, reputed here as efficient and experienced. The appointment of a new ambassador would be contingent upon the establishment of a satisfactory government at Mexico City.

While the chief officers of the American government were debating the facts of the situation it became known that a movement was on foot which might eventually spare the United States the necessity of offering mediation or any other kind of interference in Mexican affairs, upon which the national pride of Mexico is sensitive.

The plan contemplates a repetition of the process by which Diaz abdicated in favor of a provisional president acceptable to both factions in the revolt against him. Prominent Mexicans of influence are interested in the idea and have informed Bryan that if the American government would refrain from any policy of mediation, at least for the present, they felt confident of bringing about an understanding between the warring forces looking toward a peaceful solution of political difficulties.

That the revolution in the north, led by Governor Carranza, has informally been sounded on the proposition also became known, as well as the fact that certain men already have been mentioned for the provisional presidency who would be acceptable, not only to the Huerta administration, but to the constitutionalists as well.

SCALLOPS BY THE BILLIONS

Bed Hundreds of Miles Long Found by Bureau of Fisheries

Washington, July 29.—An important economic discovery, in the shape of an inexhaustible bed of giant scallops off the Atlantic coast, has just been made by the United States bureau of fisheries. Dr. Smith, commissioner of fisheries, reported the valuable find to Secretary Redfield.

The bed of big edible bivalves is said to extend all the way from Block island, off Rhode Island, to the Virginia capes, and appears to be thirty miles or more in width. The discovery was made by two of the scientific assistants in the bureau who have just completed in the fish commission's vessel, Grampus, a trip from the New England coast to Norfolk.

Every time the vessel's dredge was put down, the experts reported, it brought up from one to three bushels of scallops.

BULGARS DEFEATED BY GREEK TROOPS

Retrace Route by Which They Invaded Macedonia

London, July 29.—The Balkan peace conference is expected to open at Bucharest next Wednesday, but meantime serious fighting continues.

The Greeks refused Bulgaria's request for even a three days' truce and, after heavy fighting, with great difficulty have got through Kresna Pass, inflicting a defeat on the Bulgarians at Simekle, capturing three siege guns and driving the Bulgarians back on Djuma.

The Greeks claim they annihilated the whole left of the Bulgarian army and forced the Bulgarians back along the Struma valley by which they successfully invaded Macedonia, right up to Djuma, on the Bulgarian frontier.

Skips Over to California While His Divorce Suit Is Pending

Reno, Nev., July 29.—Jesse R. Grant, whose divorce proceeding at Goldfield against his wife created a sensation, has disappeared from the haunts which for several months have known this distinguished stranger, and has quietly slipped away into the distant hills of the Masonic mining district to remain away from public attention during the time allowed by law for Elizabeth C. Grant, the defendant, to answer to his complaint.

Grant is remaining out of sight, but can easily be reached by his attorney over the state line in Reno county, Cal., where he says he is looking over some mines.

DEMAND NEW SCHEDULES

Holyoke Carmen Vote to Strike For Nine-In-Eleven-Hour Day

Holyoke, Mass., July 29.—A vote of 221 to 7 in favor of a strike if necessary, was taken last night by the Holyoke Street Railway Employes' union.

The action follows that of other street car railway men's unions from Worcester to the western border of the state to have the companies which were operated or controlled by the New England Securities company, the holding company for the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad interests, grant demands that the new nine-in-eleven-hour law be applied to their working schedule.

Incendiary Keeps Firemen Busy

Somerville, Mass., July 29.—Three incendiary fires in Somerville last night kept the fire department on the jump while the police are making every effort to find the responsible parties.

TESTIFIES AT OWN REQUEST

Lodge Tells Committee He Never Heard of Mulhall

DENIES BOSTON CONFERENCE

Lobbyist Persists In Asserting That He Met Senator and Chairman Hatfield During Campaign of 1910 and Received $1000 For His Services—Thought Foss a "Yearling"

Washington, July 29.—Senator Lodge took the stand in the Mulhall inquiry at his own request to deny the statement in one of the Mulhall letters that Mulhall had conferred with Chairman Hatfield of the Republican state committee and Lodge in the campaign of 1910. One letter had asserted also that Lodge had praised Mulhall's work in Massachusetts.

"I don't remember ever having seen the man or heard his name until he appeared here as a witness," said Lodge. "I meet hundreds of persons and it would be impossible for me to say that I never met him, but I never had any conference with him or praised his work. The year 1910 was an election year in Massachusetts, but I rarely went to state headquarters, as I had an office of my own in Boston. I have made inquiries of Mr. Hatfield and of my secretary who was in charge of my headquarters and am informed that they never saw him."

Senator Walsh inquired as to Alfred E. Cox of Malden, and Lodge replied that Cox had been his friend for thirty years.

"The name of Cox appears to be most prominently connected with Mulhall's activities in Massachusetts," suggested Walsh.

"I don't know about that," replied Lodge; "Cox was not a member of the committee in 1910."

"Do you know anything about the activities of the National Association of Manufacturers in Massachusetts?" inquired Senator Overman.

"There certainly were none in my behalf, and I know of none in Massachusetts," responded Lodge.

Walsh here read extracts from the letters of Mulhall commenting upon the results in the Massachusetts election, which already have been published. One expressed the opinion of Mulhall that one of the most important results might be "the effect on Senator Lodge."

"He may very well have written that," commented Lodge smilingly.

The senator smiled again when Mulhall's conclusion that Governor Foss "would die a yearling" was quoted from the letter, but said nothing.

Mulhall himself then broke into the proceedings. Walsh was reading a letter from Cox to Mulhall, and Mulhall inquired of the senator if he knew George T. Coppins of the Walworth Manufacturing company of Boston.

"I know the Walworth Manufacturing company," replied the senator; and before he could proceed further Mulhall went on vigorously:

"I don't want to appear to be trying to complicate you, senator, but I had a meeting with you and Hatfield in your office in Boston. Hatfield will not deny that he knew me. The correspondence will show that I furnished him with lists. I knew Cox for three years and was paid $1000 for my work in Massachusetts. I was in Hatfield's office almost every day for three or four weeks. The correspondence will show this and Hatfield won't deny it."

The committee expressed no further curiosity as to Lodge's alleged relations with Mulhall, and the senator withdrew.

CHICAGO "ARSON TRUST"

Public Fire Insurance Adjuster Among Alleged Members Indicted

Chicago, July 29.—Twelve indictments against alleged members of the "arson trust" were returned by the July grand jury in the criminal court.

Joseph Fish, head of the firm of Joseph Fish & Co., public fire insurance adjusters, was named in true bills which charged arson, burning to defraud, conspiracy to obstruct public justice, and accessory after the fact.

TWENTY-FIVE ARRESTS

Follow Discovery of Body of Woman With Her Throat Cut

Dallas, July 29.—With her throat cut, the body of Miss Florence Brown, 27 years old, was found in the washroom of a local real estate office, and within two hours twenty-five young men had been arrested on suspicion.

The arrests were made in a general police round-up, the police holding persons whom they could not readily identify.

Alpine Climbers Drop to Death

St. Maurice, Switz., July 29.—Three climbers dropped from a high peak of the Dent-du-Midi. No trace of them could be found by searchers 3500 feet below.

Fall Kills French Aviator

Toulouz, France, July 29.—M. Chambenois, an aviator, was killed near Hacterive when a hydro-aeroplane he was driving fell.

SILK WORKERS LOST $5,300,000 IN WAGES

Paterson Strike Declared Off, but Many Are Out of Work

Paterson, N. J., July 29.—The silk strike is over, but not all the strikers who left the mills twenty-one weeks ago were able to find work yesterday. The manufacturers said they had all the hands they could use until they received orders withheld pending the settlement of the labor troubles.

The central strike committee of the Industrial Workers of the World was delegated to make official declaration of the end of the strike today. It is estimated the strike cost the employes $5,300,000 in lost wages.

LIFE RAFTS UNSAFE

Steamboat Inspector Makes Startling Assertion at Hearing

Boston, July 29.—Life rafts on sea-going ships that carry Bostonians to ports along the New England coast contain parts too light and are dangerous, according to John A. Sloan, chief of supervisors of the fifth district of steamboat inspection.

This, and the declaration that life guns intended to cast lines a distance of 1500 feet to sinking ships fall short by 500 feet, was the bombshell that was dropped yesterday at a hearing before Assistant Secretary Sweet, Inspector General Uhler and Solicitor Thurman.

The hearing was conducted as an investigation into the office of the inspection service, which covers nearly the entire New England coast.

DEMANDS MORE THAN PROMISES

Government Still Inclined to Prosecute the New Haven

ELLIOTT WILL ASK FOR DELAY

Wants Opportunity Given Road to "Make Good" Under New Management and Policies—Indictment a Year Ago of Doubtful Utility—Department of Justice on New Tack

New York, July 29.—In spite of the generally expressed satisfaction of New England with the changes in management and policies of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad management and policies, the investigation of the road's affairs by the department of justice will be continued, and unless more assurance than mere promises can be given, a blanket indictment of the New Haven road for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law will be brought.

President Elliott of the New Haven will ask the department to suspend action, however, until an opportunity has been given the road to "make good" under its new management and policies. As an earnest of what is to come, orders were issued yesterday for the abandonment of all work on the new hotel at Bar Harbor, to be erected by the Maine Central at a cost of about $1,000,000.

President Mellen of the New Haven, President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk and Chairman Smithers of the Grand Trunk were all indicted a year ago by the federal grand jury in New York for violation of the Sherman anti-trust law for an alleged monopolistic agreement between the New Haven and Grand Trunk roads. That indictment is of doubtful utility.

The department of justice, however, is proceeding along other lines in its investigation. A suit to dissolve the New Haven-Boston and Maine merger was instituted in 1908, under President Roosevelt's regime, but President Taft stopped action on this when the lower courts had refused to disolve the Union Pacific-Southern Pacific merger.

Since then the supreme court has reversed that decision, and some of the critics of the New Haven have claimed that the department of justice should now proceed against the New Haven on the ground that the Roosevelt bill did not include the steamship lines, that a partnership agreement has been made with the Boston and Albany which eliminated competition and that the New Haven has since acquired the Rutland railroad, all forming a combination in restraint of trade.

Attorney General McReynolds' comment upon Mellen's resignation was: "I hope Mr. Mellen's resignation indicates a desire on the part of the road to come more closely within the law than it has."

This is as far as the attorney general has expressed himself, but the investigation received an impetus from the interstate commerce commission's opinion on the New England case. That body pointed out that there were certain matters not within the scope of its inquiry, but which might be taken up by the department of justice.

The department is convinced that the new management must "make good" and give something more than the new president's assurance that it will obey the laws. For this reason the investigation is being continued.

KING MAY VISIT AMERICA

George V. Expected to Make Calls at Washington and New York

London, July 29.—A report from Australia that King George and Queen Mary were to lay the foundation stone of the Australian commonwealth parliament house at Canberra next year is discredited by The Pall Mall Gazette, which says Canada is to be the next British dominion visited by their majesties, and adds:

"They take it for granted that while so near the United States they will cross the border, and it is thought probable they may pay a brief visit to Washington and perhaps to New York."

FORCED INTO BANKRUPTCY

Receiver Named For Wild West and Great Far East Shows

Trenton, N. J., July 29.—An involuntary petition in bankruptcy was filed in the United States court against Buffalo Bill's Wild West and Pawnee Bill's Great Far East shows.

The concern is a New Jersey corporation with its principal office in this city. Samuel D. Oliphant was named referee and he appointed D. C. Cook receiver.

Cook will go to Denver, file ancillary proceedings and take possession of the entire aggregation, which is now in that city.

United States Team Wins Back the Davis Tennis Cup

Wimbledon, Eng., July 29.—The United States team captured the Dwight F. Davis international lawn tennis trophy from England when Maurice E. McLoughlin defeated Charles P. Dixon in the singles match, thus gaining the three matches out of the series of five necessary to carry off the cup.

McLoughlin won in straight sets, 6—6, 6—3, 6—2.

The United States lost the cup to England in 1903. Australasia took it away from England in 1907 and held it until 1912, when it was won again by England.

"Messiah" In Panama Preparing For End of the World

Panama, July 29.—Word has arrived here from Penonome, a town in the interior of the republic, that Segundo Sanchez, a native of that section, has proclaimed himself the Messiah.

He has predicted the destruction of the world by a deluge in a short time, and some of his eighty adherents are engaged in building an ark, while others are busy collecting, in pairs, animals of all species, found in their region.

His followers also have armed themselves, and in view of this fact, the Panama government is taking steps to avert possible trouble by them.

THREATS OF VIOLENCE

Shooting of Soldier Causes Closing of Saloons to Militia

Wareham, Mass., July 29.—As the result of alleged threats to do violence to Michael J. Murphy, the Sandwich police officer who shot and seriously wounded Edward H. Harrington, a Ninth regiment man, Murphy has been relieved from duty and the saloons of Sandwich closed to men wearing uniforms.

This action came after a conference between the Massachusetts militia officers and the town officials of Sandwich. Previously a warrant for the arrest of Murphy had been issued and he was released on $500 bonds for his appearance in court on Aug. 5.

According to witnesses the shooting of Harrington followed the smashing of one of the Sandwich street lamps.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

Without waiting to take him with me or think or do anything but feel deadly, savage anger, I hurried across the garden and into Dr. Moore's office, where he was just laying off his gloves and dust coat.

"What do you mean, John Moore, by daring—daring to think you can go and take Billy away from me?" I demanded, looking at him with what must have been such fear and madness in my face that he was startled as he came close to the table against which I leaned. His face had grown white and quiet at my attack, and he waited to answer for a long, horrible minute that pulled me apart like one of those inquisition machines they used to torture women with when they didn't know any better modern way to do it.

"I didn't know Bill would tell you so soon, Mrs. Molly," he said at last gently, looking past me out of the window into the garden. "I was coming over just as soon as I got back from this call to talk with you about it, even if it did seem to intrude Bill's and my affairs into a day that—that ought to be all yours to be—be happy in. But Bill, you see, is no respecter of—of other people's happy days if he wants them in his."

"Billy's happy days are mine, and mine are his, and he has the heart not to leave me out even if you would have him!" I exclaimed, a sob gathering in my heart at the thought that my little lover hadn't even taken in a situation that would separate him from me across an ocean.

"Bill is too young to understand when he is—is being bereaved, Molly," he said, and still he didn't look at me. "I have been appointed a delegate to represent the State Medical association at the centennial congress in London the middle of next month, and somehow I feel a bit pulled lately, and I thought I would take the little chap and have—have a 'wanderjahr.' You won't need him now, Mrs. Peaches, and I couldn't go without him, could I?" The sadness in his voice would have killed me if I hadn't let it madden me instead.

"Won't need Billy any more?" I exclaimed, with a rage that made my voice literally scorch past my lips. "Was there ever a minute in his life that I haven't needed Billy? How dare you say such a thing to me? You are cruel, cruel, and I have always known it—cold and cruel like all other men who don't care how they wring the life blood out of women's hearts and are willing to use their children to do it with. Even the law doesn't help us poor helpless creatures, and you can take our children and go with them to the ends of the earth and leave us suffering. I have gone on and believed that you were not like what the women say all men are and that you cared whether you hurt people or not, but now I see that you are just the same, and you'll take my baby away if you want to, and I can do nothing to prevent it—nothing in the wide world. I am completely and absolutely helpless. You coward, you!"

When that awful word, the worst word that a woman can use to a man, left my lips a flame shot up into his eyes that I thought would burn me up, but in a half second it was extinguished by the strangest thing in the world—for the situation—a perfect flood of mirth. He sat down in his chair and shook all over, with his head in his hands, until I saw tears creep through his fingers. I had calmed down so suddenly that I was about to begin to cry in good earnest when he wiped his eyes and said, with a low laugh in his throat:

"The case is yours, Molly, settled out of court, and the 'possession nine points of the law clause' works in some cases for a woman against a man. Generally speaking anyway, the pup belongs to the man who can whistle him down, and you can whistle Bill from me any day. I'm just his father, and what I think or want doesn't matter. You had better take him and keep him."

"I intend to," I answered haughtily, uncertain as to whether I had better give in and be agreeable or stay prepared to cry in case there was further argument. But suddenly a strange diffidence came into his eyes, and he looked away from me as he said in queer hesitating words:

"You see, Mrs. Molly, I thought from now on your life wouldn't have exactly a place for Bill. Have you considered that you have trained him to demand you all the time and all of you? How would you manage Bill—and—and other claims?"

LEAF ELEVENTH.

A Heart of Gold.

IF there is a contagious thing in this world it is embarrassment. I never felt anything worse in all my life than the shame that swept over me in a great hot wave when that look came into his eyes and made me realize just exactly what I had been saying to him about what, and how I had said it. I stood perfectly still, shook all over like a leaf and wondered if I would ever be able to raise my eyes from the ground. A dizzy, nauseated feeling for myself rose up in me against myself, and I was just about to turn on my heels and leave him, I hoped forever, when he came over and laid his hand on my shoulder.

"Molly," he said in a voice that might have come down from heaven on dove wings, "you can't for a moment feel or think that I don't realize and appreciate what you have been to the motherless little chap, and for life I am yours at command, as he is. I really thought it would be a relief to you to have him taken away from you for just a little while right now, and I still think it is best, but not unless you consent. You shall have him back whenever you are ready for him, and at all times both he and I are at your service to the whole of our kingdoms. Just think the matter over, won't you, and decide what you want me to do?"

Something in me died forever, I think, when he spoke to me like that. He's not like other men, and there aren't any other men on earth but him! All the rest are just bugs or bats or something worse. And I'm not anything myself. There's no excuse for my living, and I wish I wasn't so healthy and likely to go on doing it. It was all over, and there was nothing left for me to live for, and before I could stop myself I buried my face in my hands.

"Billy asked me to go with him on this awful whale hunt!" I sobbed out to comfort myself with the thought that somebody did care for me, regardless of just how I was further embarrassing and complicating myself in the affairs of the two men I had thought I owned and was now finding out that I had to give up. I wish I had been looking at him, for I felt him start, but he said in his big friendly voice that is so much—and never enough for me—

"Well, why not you and Al come along and make it a family party, if that is what suits Bill, the boss?"

If men would just buy good, sharp kitchen knives and cut out women's hearts in a businesslike way it would be so much kinder of them. Why do they prefer to use dull weapons that mash the life out slowly? Everything is at an end for me tonight, and that blow did it. It was a horrible cruel thing for him to say to me! I know now that I have been in love with John Moore for longer than my honor lets me admit and that I'll never love anybody else, and that also I have offered myself to him served up in every known enticement and have to be refused at least twice a day for a year. A widow can't say she didn't understand what she was doing, even to herself, but—my humiliation is complete, and the only thing that can make me ever hold up my head is to puzzle him by—by happily marrying Alfred Bennett—and quick!

Of course he must suspect how I feel about him, for two people couldn't both be so ignorant as not to see such an enormous thing as my love for him is, and I was the blind one. But he must never, never know that I ever realized it, for he is so good that it would distress him. I must go on in my foolish way with him until I can get away. I'll tell him I'm sorry I was so indignant tonight and say that I think it will be fine for him to take my Billy away from me with him. I must smile at the idea of having my very soul amputated, insist that it is the only thing to do and pack up the little soul in a steamer trunk with the smile. Just smile, that is all. Life demands smiles from a woman, even if she must crush their perfume from her own heart, and she generally has them ready.

Oh, Molly, Molly! Is it for this you came into the world—twice to give yourself without love? What difference does it make that your arms are strong and white if they can't clasp him to the softness and fragrance of your breast? Why are your eyes blue pools of love if they are not for his questioning, and what are your rose lips for if they quench not his thirst?

Yes, I know God is very tender with a woman, and I think he understands, so if she crept very close to him and caught at his sleeve to steady herself he would be kind to her until she could go on along her own steep way. Please, God, never let him find out, for it would hurt him to have hurt me!

Some days are like the miracle flowers that open in the garden from plants you didn't expect to bloom at all. I might have been born, lived and died without having this one come into my life, and, now that I have had it, I don't know how to write it except in the crimson of blood, the blue of flame, the gold of glory, and a tinge of light green would well express the part I have played. But it is all over at last and—

Ruth Chester was the unfolding of the first hour petal, until I got a glimpse of a heart of gold that I feel dumb with worship to think of. She's God's own good woman, and he made her in one of his holy hours. I wish I could have borne her, so she me, and the tenderness of her arms was a sacrament. We two women just stood aside with life's artifices and concealments and let our own hearts do the talking.

She said she had come because she felt that if she talked with me I might be better able to understand Alfred when he came and that she had seen that the judge was very determined, and she thoroughly recognized his force of character. We stopped there while I gave her the document to read. I suppose it was dishonorable, but I needed her protection from it. I'm glad she had the strength of mind to walk with a head high in the air to Judy's range and burn it up. Anything might have happened if she hadn't. And even now I feel that only my marriage vows will close up the case for the judge, even yet he may—But when Ruth had got done with Alfred she had wiped Judge Wade's appreciation of him completely off my mind and destroyed it in tender words that burned us both worse than Judy's fire burned the letter. She did me an awfully good service.

"And so you see, you lovely woman you, do you not, that God has made you for him as a tribute to his greatness and it is given to you to fulfill a destiny?" She was so beautiful as she said it that I had to turn my eyes away, but I felt as I did when those awful "let not man put asunder"—from Mr. Carter—words were spoken over me by Mr. Raines, the Methodist minister. It made me wild, and before I knew it I had poured out the whole truth to her in a perfect cataract of words. The truth always acts on women as some hitherto untried drug, and you can never tell what the reaction is going to be. In this case I was stricken dumb and found it hard to see.

Day Is Advertised Better Than Night

By HOLLAND.

THE day is a more popular time than night. Most of the work of the world is done while the sun shines, and only that which can't be done at other hours is performed while darkness reigns.

The day is the more popular and the more fully utilized because it is better advertised. The sun is the great publicity agent. It forces all to see and to remember. If it were possible to advertise any product of man as well as sunlight is advertised that particular product would drive all competitors from the field. Any breakfast food, baking powder, brand of shoes, style of furniture, cough drop, patent medicine, or what not, if it were only as well known as daylight, would have a monopoly of trade that would defy all rivals.

Such successful advertising of the works of man is not possible, but it can be followed at a distance. Successful manufacturers and merchants do follow it, and as a result the best advertised articles are the most widely sold. This is due to the fact that advertising makes the name of an article known, and it also insures its quality. Goods must be of superior merit to make it profitable to advertise them.

ADVERTISING MEANS RELIABILITY.

LORENZO WOOD PASSES AWAY

Was Foreman in the Douglass Shoe Factory

Lorenzo Wood, a well known resident of Quincy, passed away this morning at his home 130 Upland road, after an illness of some duration. Mr. Wood came to Quincy from Brockton fifteen or twenty years ago. Although having been employed in Brockton most of the time since then, he has always made his home in Quincy. For years he has been foreman of one of the departments at the Douglass shoe manufactory at Brockton, where he was highly respected by all.

Some years ago seeing the need of a first class restaurant in Quincy he with the late F. A. Skinner opened a restaurant on Granite street. Mr. Skinner soon retired from the firm which was carried on for some months by Mr. Wood who later gave it up and returned to the employ of the Douglass Shoe Co.

He was a very quiet unassuming man and was what the world calls a fine fellow in every way.

He leaves a widow and one married daughter. His widow is Mrs. S. I. Wood who has conducted a millinery establishment in the Adams building for many years and his daughter is the wife of Cecil Blanchard formerly of Quincy but who now resides in New Jersey.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wood have long been prominent in the Bethany church circles.

Andrew Stewart, superintendent of gypsy and brown tail moth extermination, reports that the city's condition is better than ever, and that the work of the past few years has resulted in minimizing the danger from the pests. Parasites are being used in some places and have been of value.

The Italian that was riding it would not talk about his ownership but said he had recently purchased it. He was then taken to the police station. The police are conducting an investigation.

FLETCHER NOT SATISFIED

Ousts Public Service Commission Established by Vermont Solons

St. Albans, Vt., July 29.—Pursuing his campaign for lower telephone rates, Governor Fletcher removed Charles D. Watson, chairman of the public service commission, and demanded the resignation of Commissioner Warner. The third member of the commission, G. H. Babbitt, resigned recently.

The commission was established by the last legislature and its membership was selected by the governor. The trouble began when the executive called upon the commissioners to investigate the many complaints which he said he had received regarding the service and the rates of both the independent companies and those allied with the New England Telephone company.

The commission has not reported on the matter, and Fletcher appointed H. F. Graham and J. H. Cook a special commission to conduct an independent inquiry into the telephone situation throughout the state.

Following the removal of Watson the governor named Robert C. Bacon chairman of a new commission.

EXIT TRANSPARENT GOWN

Philadelphia Woman Rushed to Court and Given Due Warning

Philadelphia, July 29.—Short-lived indeed was the fashion of the "transparent gown" in Philadelphia. The attractive young woman who ventured on the street with Philadelphia's first dress of this latest design will be looking through prison bars if she does it again, according to Magistrate Tracey.

Policeman Walsh was pounding his beat when he beheld a woman coming toward him, bedecked in the flimsy outfit. Walsh rushed toward her, threw his coat around her shoulders and escorted her to the station house.

"I washed my petticoat, judge," she explained when she was arraigned. "While it was drying I thought I would take a walk. I didn't think my dress would shock anybody."

Tracey discharged the woman after threatening to send her to jail if she did it again.

THE QUINCY DAILY LEDGER

LARGEST GUARANTEED CIRCULATION IN THE CITY

Vol. 28 No. 175 QUINCY MASS., WEDNESDAY EVENING JULY 30, 1913 PRICE TWO CENTS

GROCERS DAY OUTING

Quincy Largely Represented on the Trip

Newport Will Be Visited

Today is "Grocers' day," and the members of the Old Colony Grocers and Provision Dealers association are holding their twenty-first annual outing.

Although Wednesdays during the summer months are always quiet days in Quincy from the fact that the business houses in general close at noon for the remainder of the day, today is even more quiet from the fact most of the grocery and provision houses in City Square are closed for the day. The butter stores are also closed and things about City Square are very quiet.

The all-day closing did not apply to all of the stores for most of the dry goods stores, the jewelry stores, and gentlemen's furnishing stores were open this morning as usual although they closed at noon or 1 o'clock as usual.

The special train which took the excursionists reached Quincy at 8.18 and consisted of nine coaches. There was quite a crowd from Quincy taking the train. For the past few years Quincy has taken but little part in the grocers' outing, but today over fifty ladies and gentlemen boarded the train at the Quincy station. Another good crowd was added at Quincy Adams. The great bulk of the party however took the train from stations south of Quincy where more interest is taken in the grocers association than in Quincy.

The special train made stops at Braintree, South Braintree, South Weymouth, North Abington, Abington, Whitman, East Bridgewater and Bridgewater and arrived at the wharf in Fall River at 10 o'clock.

Arriving at Fall River the steamer Warwick was boarded for a delightful sail to Newport. In connection with the visit to Newport it might be mentioned that todays excursion is the last that will be held to this famous resort. The railroad stopped running excursions to Newport some time ago and it is now announced that under the law no excursion boats are allowed to land at Newport, the only boats to make landing being the regular boats.

At Newport the party will find plenty to amuse during the time intervening between their arrival and dinner, in the way of merry-go-rounds roller coasters, dancing, etc. For the dinner no special arrangements were made, the party being given the choice of the regular dinner or a dinner a la carte.

Ample opportunity was also had for a ride over the beautiful shore drive of 9 miles which affords an opportunity to view many of the beauti-

HOW TAXES GROW

State Assessments of $202,486.74

Increase of Over $22,000.00

Warrents for the State etax, including the Metropolitan water, sewer, parks, state highway and Charles River basin assessment as well as the county tax and a new tax for the bureau of statistics of labor have been received by the assessors the grand total being $202,486.74 or an increase of $22,552.12 over last year. This in itself means an increase of about 60 cents in the tax rate with a valuation based at $37,000.00.

To this must also be added the payment on the refunding loan amounting to $15,000 this year. This item will add at last 40 cents more to the rate so that it will be seen from the present outlook that the tax rate this year will be all of $1 higher than it was last year, without figuring current expenses.

It will be seen by the following table of the state tax, etc, for 1913, that every item shows an increase over last year with the exception of the State highway tax which is the same as last year. Then, as noted above, this year for the first time, the city gets an assessment for the maintenance of the bureau of statistics, which department is establishing the uniform system of accounting in the cities and towns of the commonwealth.

The following tables give the state, county and other assessments in comparison with those of the years of 1912 and 1911:

GEN. HUMIDITY SUPREME TODAY

Heavy Thunder Shower at Midnight Not Cooling

The oppressive hot and muggy afternoon and evening Tuesday ended as was anticipated by many in a heavy thunder shower about midnight. The afternoon was unusually oppressive, for there seemed to be hardly a breath of air stirring and as night fall came and the sun sank out of sight the heat seemed to grow worse instead of better. There was hardly a breath of air stirring although now and then there seemed to be a little breeze.

A little after 10 o'clock the sky darkened and there was the sound of distant thunder and flashes of lightning but the rain kept off until near midnight. Then there were heavy peals of thunder accompanied by sharp and vivid flashes of lightning which sent a shock of terror among the timid ones. The shower was the heaviest about midnight when there was one sharp flash of lightning that was fierce.

Thirty of more passengers and George Troupe received slight shocks when an electric bolt struck the wires in City Square and passed through his car. The vivid flash of lightning, accompanied by the heavy roll of thunder frightened nearly 20 more that were standing in the Square. Troupe had just shut off his controller when the bolt came. Perley Seagers, the conductor, who was standing against the rear controller was shocked. The car rounded the loop but the lead wires burnt out opposite Saville street and it was towed to the barn.

About this time the rain began to fall and it came down heavy for a few minutes and then stopped. Fortunately the storm centre was far removed from Quincy and all that Quincy people got of the storm was the edge. That was sufficient however for most people. The air seemed to cool a little after the shower although it was sultry all night.

There was quite a heavy fog early this morning but soon after 7 o'clock the bright sun came out and burnt it off. While the thermometer is not as high as it has been some days this summer, the humidity is very high and therefore there is much suffering from the heat.

Shortly after the severe thundering and lightning at midnight an autoist telephoned the Central Station that a tree at Beale and Hancock street had been struck and was on fire. An investigation showed that worn insulation on the wires was contributing an electric display.

GRANITE CITY OUTING TONIGHT

Will Make Trip to Nantasket by Automobile

The annual summer outing of the Granite City club takes place tonight, the objective point being the Villa Napoli at Nantasket beach. As now planned the party will leave the club rooms in automobiles at 6.30 for a ride through some of the picturesque parts of the South Shore. The party is expected to arrive at the Villa Napoli about 7.30 at which time a special dinner will be served.

The affair will be entirely informal and there will be no speaking of any kind, for the Granite City club is not a speaking club. They can be depended upon however to do ample justice to the menu that will be set before them.

EXCURSIONIST WITH GROCERS DROWNED

Edwin Sanborn Fell Overboard from the Steamer Warwick

All Attempts at Rescue Were Unsuccessful

Edwin Sanborn one of the Quincy party on the Grocers' excursion today was drowned this morning off Sandy Point, in Narraganset Bay.

The steamer Warwick with the party on board left Fall River for a sail to Newport on time and the accident took place about 11.45. According to eye witnesses to the accident Sanborn attempted to climb up the ladder from the lower deck to the second deck. When part way up he lost his balance and fell overboard.

In an instant the cry "Man Overboard," resounded through the ship. As soon as possible the steamer was put about and boats lowered to go to the rescue. At this time Sanborn was swimming about and it looked as though he would be able to remain above water until resceud. Several small fishing boats in the vicinity also went to the rescue and boats were also lowered from one of the torpedo boats in the Bay.

Before any of the rescuers were able to reach him however he sank out of sight in the presence of the nearly 1000 passengers on the Warwick. The water at this point is said to be 120 feet deep and although the boats cruised about the spot where he had been seen to go down for some time the search was finally given up.

The accident delayed the arrival of the Grocers at Newport until 1 o'clock and just as soon as a landing was made, Henry P. Kittredge who was with the party telephoned the police to notify the boys parents. Particulars of the accident were also telephoned to the Ledger by Mr. Kittredge

The unfortunate lad was about 20 years of age and was formerly employed on the street railway but of late had been in the employ of G. W. and C. W. Nightingale as a driver of one of their teams.

He went on the excursion today in company with Frank Swanson who was with him at the time of the accident.

He was a son of George Sanborn and resided with his parents on Water street.

The accident has cast a gloom over what promised to be one of the most successful trips the grocers have ever held.

ESCAPED FROM ASYLUM.

Three inmates escaped Monday from the Pierce asylum, West Roxbury, but it did not become known until after midnight Tuesday. Two are now at large and police stations all over the vicinity have been furnished with a description of the missing men.

One of the trio, Thomas F. O'Donnell of 5 Grant street, Wollaston, was captured by the Brighton police. He was returned immediately to the institution.

The couple they are now searching for are said to be armed. They are John A. Kerns of 574 Dorchester avenue, South Boston, and Patrick S. Barry of 23 Austin street, Charlestown. All were seen headed in another direction, theer is every possibility er direction and there is every possibility that they might work this way

Kerns is described as being five feet, nine inches tall, wearing a red moustache, and 44 years old. Barry is described as 31 years old, five feet five inches tall, and weighing only 112 pounds. He is dark complexioned.

It is always too early to rip but never too late to mend.

Secretary Garrison evidently believes that we should trust in God and keep our powder to ourselves.

Why are no animal dances named for the donkey? Perhaps it is because that animal is noted more for stupidity than viciousness.

William Rockefeller's complete recovery is the first notification given that Pujo investigating committee has adjourned.

The power of suggestion is again demonstrated by the split in the Rochester, Pa., council, caused by the divided skirt.

The Rev. John Thompson, of Chicago classes David and Solomon among the undesirables; unfortunately, it is too late to get the opinion of those departed worthies regarding the Rev. John.

Mayor Edwin H. Moulton of Haverhill at the open meeting of the Haverhill Board of Trade Tuesday evening, during which municipal finances were discussed for two hours, declared that unless a new policy was inaugurated by the Municipal Council next year, by which more bonds would be retired than are issued each year, Haverhill would soon be bankrupt.

The meeting was called by the directors of the Board of Trade to talk over the new law governing municipal finances, as a public hearing will be held Thursday evening, Aug. 7, at which the Council will hear citizens on the limit to be established in raising money by taxation for current expenses.

What is true of Haverhill applies with equal force to Quincy and other cities. Too much of our tax rate goes for the payment of maturing debt and interest. By the present policy Quincy has to pay twice for improvements; once when the bonds mature, and again in interest, some of the loans being for ten years and others for thirty years. An effort should be made at the beginning of the year to keep the new loans inside the maturing loans, and thus reduce the debt and interest each year.

In his inaugural address Mayor Stone told us that the maturing debt of 1913 would be as follows:

Municipal	$162,676.46
Water	57,500.00
Sewer	29,000.00
Parks	2,000.00
Streets improvement	7,300.00
Refunding	15,000.00
Total	$273,476.46

To put the city in a better financial condition the City Council of 1913 should limit the new municipal loans inside of $162,676.46, say $150,000.00, or even $125,000.00.

IF WELL TRAINED.

Traveler, of the Herald comments as follows: Little Jane Arnold of Quincy had been to Franklin Park to see the animals in the Zoo. When she returned to her home she was tired and just a little cross and did in a most unwilling spirit some little duties given her by her mother.

"Don't you think?" asked the patient mother, "that if the monkeys and bears at the Zoo can learn to obey so well, a little girl like you, who knows so much more than they, should obey more quickly than the animals?"

"Of course," came the ready answer from Jane. "If I'd been as well trained as they have."

PAPERS FILED FOR SENATOR

Louis F. R. Langelier Receiving Hearty Support

Ex-Representative Louis F. R. Langelier of this city filed papers with City Clerk Crane today as candidate for the Republican nomination for Senator from the First Norfolk district. Mr. Langelier also has papers in circulation in every town in the district and is receiving hearty support.

LOUIS F. R. LANGELIER

Mr. Langelier was a candidate last year at the caucuses for the nomination but was defeated by Roger Wolcott. He accepted his defeat good naturedly however and did all possible to further the election of the party candidate, who was defeated in another of those three cornered fights in which a Progressive party candidate polled just enough votes to defeat the Republican nominee and elect a Democrat. This year however Mr. Langelier is out to win and is making a hustle for the nomination all over the district.

MARRIED IN CALIFORNIA.

The Evening News of Vallejo, Cal., July 14th., reports the marriage of Harry McIntosh formerly of Quincy, Mass., to Miss Jesusita Coronado of Vallejo, Cal. Mr. McIntosh was born in West Quincy, and has a host of friends who well remember him in that section. He went west about three years ago and connected himself in business with Mr. Coronado, father of the bride. The happy couple received many substantial gifts and after an impromptu reception left on a honeymoon trip for a few weeks, and upon their return will reside in Vallejo, Cal.

RECEPTION TO GRANITE MEN

How Barre Answers the Claim of Quincy

Relative to the much discussed question as to who shall entertain the visiting granite dealers delegates on Aug. 22, Quincy or Barre, Vt. the Barre manufacturers association in a recent issue of the Barre Times gives its version of the affair. The manufacturers claim in their statement that Barre manufacturers have been working on the celebration for four months and that Quincy did not wake up until after all arrangements had been made for Barre day, Aug. 22. In the statement issued by the Barre manufacturers they state:

"On July 17 a communication was received from Quincy, suggesting that they would like to have Friday in which to entertain the dealers and asked how that would suit the Barre people. The communication was laid before the committee from the above-named organizations and Quincy was advised that arrangements had already been completed and invitations issued for Friday as Barre day.

"The committee regretted the fact that Quincy had not completed its arrangements and presented its requests sooner, as they would have been disposed to help out Quincy even though they were somewhat behind time.

"From articles published in the Quincy papers, it appears that some Quincy people are somewhat peeved to think that Barre would not wait till they had waked to the fact that there was really to be a convention in Boston; but Barre is too busy getting out monuments for dead ones to seriously consider the criticism of its smaller competitors, and if Barre has erected a Barre granite monument in Quincy, whose fault is it?

"It appears that a Quincy representative was in Barre recently and heard of the preparations which a real live granite center was making to entertain the granite dealers, and in order to stimulate Quincy to emulate the largest granite center in the world, the following appeared soon after in a Quincy paper:

"Mr. Miller informs us that the Barre Manufacturers and the Quarrymen's associations have appointed committees to raise funds and make arrangements for a special vestibule train to run from Boston to Barre after the convention, which will be free to all dealers who will go. They expect the city council to appropriate $500 towards the entertainment. Every manufacturer will keep open house. They propose to decorate their main street beyond anything ever attempted there before, and so impress on the dealers' minds the hospitality of Barre, that when these dealers want to buy a monument they will think of no place but Barre. They are also preparing some splendid specimens of memorial art to show at the Boston exhibition.

"'We are informed by Mr. Miller that the Quincy manufacturers are awakening to their opportunity. He only got his plans made of the Arena floor space one day before he left for Barre, and had only time to see six manufacturers, but they took eight spaces in the exhibition hall, and six pages of advertising in the souvenir program.

"'That is fine, but he says they will have to go some to keep up with their competitor in Barre. The manufacturers will not have such a chance to show their goods to the dealers of the country at large for the next twenty-five years. Space has already been sold in Missouri, South Carolina, Rhode Island, Vermont, Massachusetts and other states.'

"Here we have pictured to us. Barre, Vermont, alive to its opportunities, energetic and hospitable and over here, Quincy, just awakening. But then, this is not the first time that Barre enterprise has been used as an example to others, and we are pleased to have another demonstration of 'We lead; others follow.'

"Yes. Friday, Aug. 22, will be 'Barre day,' and indications are that it will be 'some' day. Barre manufacturers, quarry owners and business men are all co-operating and the key of the city will be delivered to the N. R. M. D. A. on the above date. Details of all arrangements will be published later."

☞George W. Jones never advertises a "sale," but goods worth every cent one pays for them—dependable and clean. The good old store has served the people of Quincy for 43 years.

EMERY'S WIDOW WINS

Will Which Cut Off Children With Dollar Each Is Sustained

Boston, July 30.—Mary E. B. Emery of Portsmouth, N. H., wins in the fight for the estate of her husband, Judge Samuel W. Emery, by the decision that the deceased was of Boston, not Portsmouth, N. H., made by Chief Justice Rugg of the supreme court. She was left the $50,000 estate by will. She was his second wife, the first having divorced him.

Emery, by will, cut off with a dollar each his three children by his first wife, Samuel W. Emery, Mabel H. Emery Weeks and Marguerite Emery. These three children appealed to the supreme court from the allowance by Judge Grant of the Suffolk probate court of their father's will. They claimed fraud and misrepresentation. They attacked the right of jurisdiction of the Suffolk probate court, claiming their father's domicile was Portsmouth, N. H.

AGAIN PLANS ESCAPE

Steel Spike and Tomato Can Cover Found in Pomeroy's Cell

Boston, July 30.—With the discovery of a steel spike and the top of a tomato can cover in the cell of Jesse Pomeroy, the notorious criminal serving a life sentence in Charlestown state prison, officials of the institution believe that the prisoner was preparing for another escape.

Pomeroy has made twelve attempts to escape from the prison, but only once in all of his thirty-six years' confinement has he been able to get outside of his cell, and that was on the morning of Dec. 30 last, when he drilled three bars in his cell door and was captured by Officer Brassil while roaming about the prison corridor.

While it was the belief of the prison officials at the time that Pomeroy used a powerful drill and other tools to escape from the cell, none were ever found.

MRS. RAMSEY LOSES FORTUNE IN GEMS

String of Pearls Valued at $60,000 Among the Loot

Narragansett Pier, R. I., July 30.—The collection of jewels of Mrs. Charles C. Rumsey, who was Miss Mary Harriman, daughter of the late E. H. Harriman, has been stolen. The gems are worth $75,000, one piece alone, a string of pearls, being valued at $60,000.

The robbery is one of great mystery because none of the servants have left and no one in the neighborhood has been suspected.

Mrs. Rumsey put the gems in a bureau drawer in her bedroom. When she opened the drawer to don some of the jewels she discovered they were missing.

Private detectives and police officials have been called into the case.

MORE CONVICTS SHIFTED

Second Batch of "Bad Men" Taken From Sing Sing to Auburn

Ossining, N. Y., July 30.—Sixty-five of the Sing Sing "bad men," who have been prominent in the mutiny that still holds the big prison in a state of terror, were taken, heavily shackled, to Auburn prison.

The prisoners were chained to each other two and two, ankle and wrist. With their free hands they waved their caps at the photographers and laughed and chatted as if in the best of spirits. In the cars they were chained to the seats.

With the removal of this second batch of unruly prisoners, Warden Clancy believes the convict insubordination has been devitalized. All in the second squad were second termers and most of them, the warden believes, were leaders in the recent disturbances.

GARDENER SAYS HE'S A MARQUIS

Claims He Is Rightful Heir to Waterford Title.

KNOWN AS GEORGE TOOTH.

Begins Suit In London to Establish His Claim to the Marquisate and Big Estates of the Head of the Well Known Beresford Family—His Birth Concealed.

According to dispatches from London, the courts there may have to decide whether or not George Tooth, a London jobbing gardener, is the son of a cook or of the fifth Marchioness of Waterford.

The first step in what may prove to be a sensational fight was taken recently in the chancery court. It concerned the technical point of procedure referring to the perpetuation of evidence taken before an examiner which would be uninteresting to the general reader, but behind these technical preliminaries lies a romantic story, the truth of which will require much disentangling.

Tooth's claim to the marquisate of Waterford and the big family estates of the head of the well known Beresford family is briefly this:

The fifth Marchioness of Waterford, who died on April 4, 1873, was first married to Captain (the Hon.) John Vivian, but she eloped to Paris with the fifth Marquis of Waterford, who married her after Captain Vivian had secured a divorce at the registrar's office at St. George's, Hanover square, on Aug. 9, 1872. On March 29, 1873, the marchioness at Chesham place bore a child. It was reported to have been stillborn, but Tooth declares that the child was born alive and is himself. He suggests that the existence of the child was concealed because the Waterford family objected to the marchioness.

Tooth's Strange Story.

"The death of the marchioness," says Tooth, "was registered at Somerset House, but the death certificate lacks the signature of any doctor. At 9 o'clock in the evening of the day I was born I was taken to my first foster mother, Mrs. Duncan, now dead, who lived in Seymour place, Fulham. My mother's maid, Priscilla Kynaston, and the doctor took me there. I have gathered this information from Mrs. Duncan's daughter, who is now Mrs. Godfrey Thorntogeath and who was my foster mother after the death of her mother.

"I remained in the care of the Duncans until I was about sixteen years old, my father, the Marquis of Waterford, paying them 2 guineas per month. As often as not, especially as I grew older, he visited the house personally on the 8th of every month and refused to hand over the money until he saw that I was alive and well. Mrs. Duncan called me George Tooth, but my father always called me George. I went to his house on Charles street, off Pall Mall, about a dozen times, and always before he said goodby he would pull out some money, £5 or £10 generally, saying: 'Here is some money for you. If you want more let me know.' I used to write him and address him as 'Dear Father,' and he wrote to me as 'Dear George.' His last letter to me was in 1895 shortly before he shot himself."

A Workhouse Child.

There is another side to the story, of course. Georgina Tooth, a single woman, who was a cook in the service of the marchioness when she was Mrs. Vivian, became the mother of a child in the Holborn workhouse infirmary on Jan. 25, 1872. She died there on Feb. 3 of the same year. Mrs. Vivian caused the child, who was named John Tooth, to be taken to the Franciscan monastery at Porto Bellord for a few days. Then a maid placed him in the care of a Mrs. Jones, whose address is unknown.

It is asserted that the child was afterward placed in care of the Duncans and is the present claimant, George Tooth. The various dates given by some people are disputed by others, and the usual contradictory statements are made. Efforts to find a record of the birth of John Tooth on Jan. 25, 1872, have hitherto failed.

The sixth Marquis of Waterford was the son of the fifth marquis by his second marriage. He was drowned in 1811. His son, a boy of twelve, is the present marquis.

About a year ago Tooth created a sensation by appearing in Fleet street in a frock coat and silk hat carrying sandwich boards, on which was inscribed: "I am the sixth Marquis of Waterford. I do this to forward my case and obtain justice."

Gets $1,000,000—on Paper.

The will of George Boehringer of Gloucester City, N. J., admitted to probate recently, named Henry Meyer as executor and sole legatee. The estate consists of packages of worthless paper. Years ago Boehringer read in a newspaper of a man who became wealthy almost overnight through the sudden appreciation of stocks and bonds which he owned and which had been considered worthless. From that time on he purchased worthless stocks and bonds, and the face value of the accumulation is said to be about $1,000,000.

Novelist, Lecturer and Sociologist of France

I HAVE NOTICED THAT WHEN A MAN AND WOMAN ARE WALKING TOGETHER IN THE STREETS OF AMERICAN CITIES THE WOMAN APPEARS TO BE LEADING THE MAN. SHE IS GUIDING HIM OR DIRECTING AND INSTIGATING HIS MOVEMENTS. WHERE SHE GOES HE GOES.

It is different in Europe, where man is the guiding spirit. I am also struck by the health and vigor of your women.

Knowing very little personally of family life in this country except what I have read and heard, I am not in a position to assert that women rule the household. I simply use my eyes when in the street. I say that, compared with man, woman LOOKS STRONG AND MASTERFUL, not necessarily tyrannical nor even unpleasantly autocratic. What I mean to convey is that she is UNCONSCIOUSLY THE LEADING SPIRIT IN YOUR COSMOGONY, AND MAN, WITHOUT KNOWING IT, IS HER WILLING AND SUBMISSIVE AGENT. Like a child he follows her, and she leads him to his destiny.

It may be that the influence of the American woman is all for your good, but it may be otherwise. I do not know. I wasn't in America long enough to have practical experience of domestic conditions, but it is permissible to form an opinion on what one reads if certain visual points lend a sort of corrobration to what is printed and spoken.

ful private residences with which Newport abounds.

At 5.15 the boat will leave the wharf for a sail in Narraganset Bay affording a fine view of the torpedo station and naval academy, and is due to arrive back in Fall River at 7 o'clock tonight where the special train will be found in waiting to take the party home. The train will arrive in Quincy shortly before 9 o'clock.

The committee in charge of the outing includes O. A. Bridgham of South Braintree, A. W. Ames of Rockland, Everett Loud of East Weymouth, J. A. Radcliff of Rockland, W. H. Sims of Braintree and H. W. Mansfield of South Braintree.

WHY HE WONDERED.

A certain Irish police inspector was reviewing a police station, the sergdant of which was a very bad speller. Looking through the books, he came upon an entry, "Found a pig wondering on the public road."

"Sergeant," said he, "what was the pig wondering at?"

"I don't know, sir," said the bewildered man.

"Well," said the inspector grimly, "I do. He must have been wondering why I promoted you!"

ADVERTISE IN THE LEDGER.

William Perkins was fined $5.65 costs for failure to have a light on the rear of his carriage at Holbrook.

Patrick Maloy was fined $10 for drunkenness at Quincy.

Martin Kane, who has a record for arrests for drunkenness as long as the moral law, was arrested again on Tuesday and later admited to bail. He failed to report this morning however and was defaulted.

The continued cases of Andy Carlberg for giving short ice weight were heard. He was allowed to plead nolo and the cases were placed on file on payment of $5 costs.

CHOWDER DINNER.

Over 100 attended the clam chowder dinner given by the Quincy Women's Riverside Club at the Town River Yacht Club today. The members served a most sumptuous repast. The rooms were decorated with flags and flowers and the affair was under the direction of Mrs. Ella A. Hayden. After the dinner an entertainment was given, among those on the program being Miss Putty Egan of North Weymouth and Miss Irene Pitts of Quincy Point.

CHOIR GIVE LAWN PARTY

On Park Front of United Presbyterian Church

Nearly 500 members and friends of the United Presbyterian church gathered on the triangular park at School and Quincy streets Tuesday evening at the lawn party given under the auspices of the choir. Lanterns were strung about the grounds and tents were occupied by the ladies who sold plain and fancy articles and refreshments.

The evening was just right and a large crowd gathered and enjoyed the games which were in charge of the amusement committee. The most popular of the games was the throwing of bean bags through the bean board.

The booths were decorated as follows: Candy booth in red and white, waitresses dressed as colonials; ice cream booth, in white and tinsel with artifical snow and icicles, waitresses in Grecian costume; tea and cake booth in red, white, and blue, waitresses in white with jackets and cap; tonic booth in green.

Hector Gillis of Clan McGregor, a piper, entertained for a long period and proved to be the feature of the evening.

The committee was in charge of Henry Patterson, general chairman. The following headed the different tables:

Entertainment— Marion Russell, Graham Patterson and Thomas Melrose.

Decoration—Mrs. Hugh McLeod, Mrs. Charles Campbell and Mrs. Duncan MacKellar.

Ice cream and tonic—Edna McDonald, Annie Russell, Daniel McLeod and George Orr.

Candy—Mary Melrose and Jeannie Russell.

Owing to the good evening and skilful salesladies and salesmen everything for sale was disposed of before the night was over even to the peanuts which were carried around in baskets by Little Miss Muffet and Bo-Peep.

—In New York during the past year over twelve hundred fires were traced to careless smokers and over sixteen hundred to carelessness with matches. The carelessness in these cases is apparently so slight and the results are so disastrous, sometimes fatal, that systematic public education on the danger arising from this one source is particularly timely in the day's important issue of prevention as an exact science.—Baltimore American.

Putting the O' In Mexico

When government is reeling,
And people are aflame,
And half the population is a mob,
And factions are appealing
For backers of their game,
And those who are not robbed are out to rob,
Oh, what a joyful feeling
To hear old Sam proclaim,
"O'Shaughnessy is going on the job!"

These Anglo-Saxon fellows
May do as diplomats
When tea at four o'clock is on the hob;
Their bowdydos and hellos
And lifting of their hats
May satisfy a French or Russian mob,
But down among the yellows,
To end the country's spats,
O'Shaughnessy is going on the job!

If greaser or if gringo
Has treason in his head
A Smith or Jones may only stand and sob
And talk the Spanish lingo
As if hidalgo bred
And twiddle with the seals upon his fob,
But none of that, be jingo,
When beef and cabbage fed
O'Shaughnessy is there upon the job!

D'ye ever know a creature
Who had a name like that
Who acted like a shilly-shally slob?
The Irish fighting feature
Sticks out beneath his hat,
Or why should he be born an O, begob?
So, Mexicans, come meet your
New style of Democrat.
O'Shaughnessy is ready for the job!

TO URGE DENMARK TO HAVE FARM BOYS' CAMPS.

Leading Cattle Expert Approves Work In North Dakota.

That North Dakota must follow the example of Denmark in abandoning the one crop plan in favor of the dairying industry and similar industries, while Denmark can well follow the lead of North Dakota and the United States generally in the education of its young farmers in agricultural high schools, farm boys' encampments and similar institutions, was the declaration of Lars Frederiksen, the leading cattle expert of the Danish kingdom, who is in the United States to study agricultural conditions.

Mr. Frederiksen is the special representative of the United Agricultural societies of Jutland. He visited the farm boys' encampment, which was held at Valley City, N. D., by the North Dakota Better Farming association in connection with the Valley City Chautauqua, and was much impressed with the work that was being done. The fact that 112 boys, directly off the farms were brought together from several counties and given a ten day outing in which there was mixed a liberal amount of instruction appealed to him as one of the best ways of training the future farmer.

Upon his return to Denmark, Mr. Frederiksen said, he would begin at once efforts to organize similar encampments throughout the country. In no nation has the idea of agricultural education been carried forward to the extent that it has in America, Mr. Frederiksen said.

North Dakota and other northwestern states are today facing the same problem which Denmark faced and solved thirty years ago, the visitor told the boys attending the camp. Denmark depended upon one crop until the fertility was gone from the soil and the people were forced to seek new ways of earning a living on the farms. The dairy cow solved the problem, and today the little kingdom of Denmark supplies the United Kingdom with butter and Germany, to a large extent, with beef.

Conditions are far better for dairying in the northwestern states than in Denmark, he declared.

DANGER SEEN IN GENIUSES.

Educational Expert Says Brilliant Children Make Worst Criminals.

Children of exceptional mental brilliancy are even greater dangers to society than those defective or abnormally stupid. This is the conclusion of Dr. Maxmillian P. E. Grossemann of the United States bureau of education in a report just made public.

The educational expert based his statment on the comprehensive study made in the schools of the United States.

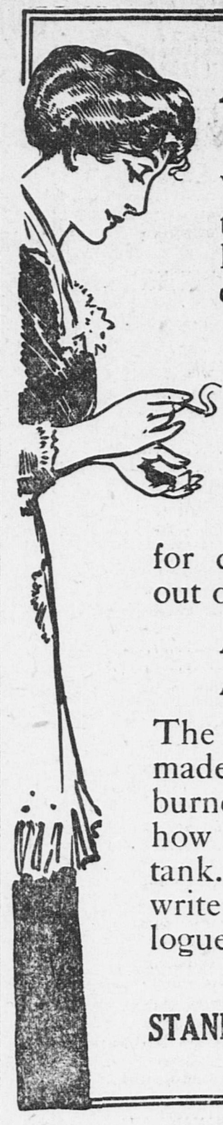

"It is often the exceptionally bright child or even the genius whom we find on the wrong side," said Dr. Grossemann. "The stupid and weakminded criminal is not so dangerous as the clever and intellectual criminal."

As a remedy for the uplift of misguided juveniles the scientist advocates united effort on the part of educators, medical men, social workers, charity organizations, welfare societies, juvenile courts and other agencies.

He declares in his report that all separate organizations are doing commendable work in this connection, but that joint action is necessary. He also advocates the passage of legislation giving the community the right to direct the educational training of every child.

New Way of Treating Wood.

A special treatment of native woods for use in the better grades of furniture has been tried with success in Germany. Freshly cut birch, oak, elm or spruce is buried in earth mixed with lime and other materials and left for from three to five months. A remarkably fine color is imparted to the wood thus treated, so that it can be used without painting or staining, and after such treatment it has practically no tendency to shrink or swell.

Printer's Ink to Make You Think

By HOLLAND.

MILLIONS of dollars are spent in this country every year to promote thinking. You are induced to think on all sorts of subjects at a vast expenditure of money. Some concerns want you to think about clothes, others want you to study the question of breakfast foods, while others want you to investigate the care of the teeth and think what sort of paste, powder or liquid wash is best for preserving them.

Advertising is the method by which these men are inducing you to think. They know that if you begin to think you will insist on the best, and each advertiser knows that his goods possess real merit. He knows it would not pay him to advertise something that would not stand the hard test of actual use.

If you will do the thinking the aim of the advertiser has been achieved, for you will in time try his goods. That is all he wants—just a trial. He will then depend on the goods to make a favorable impression. Advertising merely interests—makes you think.

THERE IS FOOD FOR THOUGHT IN OUR ADVERTISING COLUMNS.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NO CUP RACES YESTERDAY

Possible the Fog May Be Too Heavy Today

The heavy fog which hung over Marblehead all day Tuesday prevented the races for the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup from being held. During the morning the fog was very thick, so much so that it was hardly possible to see a boat length ahead and the morning race was called off.

It was hoped that the fog would lift in time for the afternoon race, but soon after 1 o'clock the fog seemed to shut down thicker than ever and all racing for the day was off.

The race for this morning will therefore, if held, be over a triangular course. The fog was rather thick at 9 o'clock this morning and the fog horns sounding down the bay could be plainly heard. The sun however may burn off the fog and if so a race will be started. Only one of the four races scheduled has been sailed.

MAINE CENTRAL TIED UP

Suffers Heavily From Cloudburst In Green Mountain State

St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 30.—Tremendous damage followed in the wake of an electrical storm and cloudburst which swept over this district. It will be days before the Maine Central railroad will be able to enter St. Johnsbury, so serious were the washouts along the lines.

Estimates of the damage run to large figures. In some places the washouts on the road are eighty feet in length and many feet deep.

The Maine Central is conveying its passengers to points east by automobile a mile and a half from this city, the nearest place the trains can stop on that road.

FATHER AND SON JAILED

Beat Girl With an Iron Rod to Break Up Her Courtship

Jersey City, July 30.—The method of a Spartan parent in the correction of his daughter, Bertha Nicholson, to break up her courtship by beating her with an iron rod and breaking his thumb because he punched her so hard on the head, met with the severe disapproval of Police Justice O'Brien.

He sentenced the girl's father, George Nicholson, a fruit merchant and native of Sparta, Greece, to one year's imprisonment and gave a similar sentence to the girl's brother, Stephen, who also beat her with an iron rod.

HUERTA ALONE BLOCKS PEACE

His Resignation Would Bring Order Out of Chaos

TERRIFIC ECONOMIC PRESSURE

Dominant Factors In Mexican Financial World Demand Reforms—President Wilson Not Inclined to Wait Long Before Taking a Hand—Mexicans In Paris See Fall of Huerta

Washington, July 30.—President Wilson's Mexican policy will not be made public just at present. He has decided on the attitude to be assumed there. But, because of reports reaching him of a well organized effort of leading Mexicans personally to reconcile the Huerta and Carranza elements, official announcement of the scope of the plan is withheld.

The economic pressure in Mexico is so terrific that President Wilson believes it will of itself force a settlement of the internal warfare. The national industries are at a standstill. Exchange is at prohibitive rates. Merchants generally are bankrupt.

The great French financiers, who are the dominant factors in the Mexican financial world, are demanding reforms. And they can themselves force Huerta to make such concessions that all organized revolutionary movements will fall of their own weight.

Huerta can bring order out of chaos almost immediately by resigning his present post and seeing that one of Mexico's big men, any one of proven executive ability, is named as his successor. But the price of permanent peace in Mexico is the permanent retirement of Huerta and his chief lieutenants.

Leading Mexicans and the agents of the European financiers in Mexico City are endeavoring to persuade Huerta to withdraw. They have sent word here that they are hopeful of success.

There are more well known Mexicans in Washington today than ever before. They are here to tell President Wilson all they know of conditions in Mexico. They have made it plain that, as a final resort, American mediation might succeed in Mexico. But they want the executive to give them time to try to reconcile their own differences before outside interference is tried.

How long President Wilson will wait before trying his hand personally in the attempt at settlement is unknown. He, it is understood, does not want to wait very long. And if reports should reach him at any time indicating that the reported attempts in progress in Mexico City are not being carried out in good faith, he will personally act.

Huerta "On His Last Legs"

Paris, July 30.—The Mexican constitutionalist committee here professs to have received a private cablegram from Mexico City, saying the Huerta regime would surely fall within fifteen days.

Miguel D. Lambardo gave out the information and he said the sender of the cablegram was in a position to know whereof he spoke. The Paris Mexicans believe Huerta is "on his last legs."

"Huerta is the Mexican 'Czoigosz,'" said Lombardo. He added the local committee had made every effort to prevent the government obtaining a new loan from Paris bankers, and said that apparently their efforts were successful.

"The appointment of De La Barra as ambassador to France is Huerta's last card in a play for European financial support," he said, "and it will surely fail."

MASSON'S PERFORMANCE

Efficiency of Aeroplane as Engine of War Is Established

Washington, July 30.—Army and navy circles here have been exceedingly impressed by the performance of Didier Masson, the aviator, fighting with the Mexican rebels, who sank the federal gunboat Tampico by dropping bombs upon it.

Masson's successes have been unprecedented. He has established the terrible efficiency of an aeroplane as an engine of war.

His record includes naval and field warfare, for he has won land battles by dropping demoralizing and destructive bombs among the federal forces.

Masson is a French aviator. After many fiascos, during which his monoplane was regarded as a standing joke, he first demonstrated the utility of air craft in war on June 19 at the battle of Oritz.

WARD TWO BOYS LEAGUE

Senators Defeated by Red Sox Eight to Seven

At Ward Two Tuesday morning the Red Sox defeated the Senators in one of the hottest ball games of the season by the score of 8 to 7. This is the first game that the Senators have lost since the league started and the defeat puts them tie with the Red Sox for first place.

The features of the game were two fine catches made by Dinsmore of the Red Sox in the sixth inning. Dinsmore plays left field and three men were on the bases when Capt. J. Moynihan of the Senators came to bat. The captain was mad clear through for he had struck out the other two times at bat and he was determined to knock the cover off the ball. He let two bad ones go by and then took a mighty swing at the next ball. It cleared the short stops head by about ten feet and looked good for an easy home run but little Dinny was right on the job and with a fine leap in the air he speared the ball with one hand and then threw the ball to second for an easy double play.

His other star play came an instant later when Reis of East Weymouth hit a high fly back of second base. Dinsmore came tearing in and managed to get the ball just at his shoe top and fell and rolled over two or three times. He was roundly cheered by his team mates when he came in to the bench for he undoubtedly saved the game for his side.

Russell Bates who has been acting as director at Ward Two playground left for Halifax in the afternoon where he is to play short-stop on the local team. The boys were all sorry to see "Russ," go for he has been very popular with the youngsters at the Point. His successor has not yet been selected.

DAYS RUN OF 222 MILES

Clark Boys Averaged Over 81 Miles for Ten Days

It was expected that the publication of long day runs by automobile yesterday would bring out several others.

Everett and Wendell Clark of Pleasant street write:

"Regarding long one day auto trips we wish to state that Saturday morning at 4.45 we left South Ryegate, Vt. for Quincy via White Mountains in our Ford touring car, arriving in Quincy Saturday evening at 7:00; making a day's trip of 222 miles stopping only for dinner and gasoline, thus ending a 10 day trip of 815 miles."

OVERCOME BY HEAT.

Fred Sanborn, custodian of mail pouches from the time they arrive at the Quincy station until they are delivered at the Post Office was overcome with the heat Tuesday afternoon and was taken to his home on Whitwell street. He immediately responded to medical treatment and reported for duty this morning at 6.30 as though he was in the pink of condition. Fred has had more or less ill luck during the past two years. Early last spring while driving for the German Seltzer Co. a bottle of carbonated water exploded and a piece of flying glass entered his eye. After months of treatment at a Boston hospital the eye was removed.

SAYS HE NEVER SAW MULHALL

Underwood Applies Short and Ugly Word to Lobbyist

HE MAKES SWORN STATEMENT

Calls Mulhall Harsh Names and Objects to His Attacks Upon Public Men—Star Witness Says Congressman Will Find Part of His Statement a "Vicious Lie"

Washington, July 30.—Shaking his finger accusingly at M. M. Mulhall, Oscar W. Underwood, house leader, told the senate lobby investigating committee the self-confessed N. A. M. lobbyist was a liar and a blackmailer.

Underwood was angered at Mulhall's "confessions" concerning alleged conferences he had with the Alabama member. He interrupted the committee's proceedings in a dramatic appeal.

"Is that Mulhall?" he demanded ,indicating the lobbyist. "Well, I never saw him before.

"I tell you it isn't right to let a man like this attack public men, particularly when he is blackmailing the men he worked for. That man was never in my committee room."

"You say blackmail, Mr. Underwood?" queried Senator Reed. "That means a demand for money."

"Well," said Underwood, "I don't want merely to make a statement. I want to be put under oath. I sent my janitor here to deny Mulhall's statements and he was sent back."

"Other subordinates have denied Mulhall's statements, too," retorted Reed, "but afterward saw receipts for money paid them."

In his sworn statement, Underwood verbally lashed Mulhall, repeatedly accusing him of telling untruths and of "four-flushing."

"This letter itself manifestly shows he is lying," he asserted, referring to one in which Underwood's name was mentioned. "I don't know Mr. Emery and John Kirby, Jr., and I positively never talked to either of them on labor matters. His whole statement is made out of whole cloth. He states there was an issue about making Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania chairman of the labor committee. There was no such issue.

"This man was merely trying to make these people believe he was doing something to earn his money. I'd know that man's face if I had seen it. It's an unusual one."

Senator Walsh read a letter from J. A. Emery to Mulhall enclosing two checks for $25 to be given to Harry Neal and Harry Thornton, janitors.

"How about these?" he asked.

"Did the janitors get the money?" Underwood demanded, meaningly.

Mulhall, replying, insisted he paid Underwood's janitor regularly for two years. "I know when I produce other witnesses Mr. Uunderwood will admit part of his statement is a vicious lie," the lobbyist continued.

Mulhall told the senate lobby committee that an one time he proposed an investigation of his activities as a lobbyist for the National Association of Manufacturers to ex-Chairman Wilson of the labor committee, Speaker Clark and Republican Leader Mann, and was rejected his proposal.

MEXICANS IN REVOLT

Rebels Fighting Federals In Northern Mountains

© 1913, by American Press Association.

This is the kind of warfare that is being carried on just across the border of the United States. Many bullets from the rifles of both sides of the fray fall on American soil and sometimes hit American citizens. It is to keep the belligerents on their own ground that Uncle Sam is maintaining a small army along the Mexican boundary.

CALLS WIFE FROM WORK

Engineer Probably Fatally Shoots Her and Then Kills Himself

North Providence, R. I., July 30.—Calling his wife out of the Allendale mills where she was employed, Elmer Baker, an Olneyville engineer, drew a revolver and after firing five shots at her, reloaded the weapon and put two bullets in his left breast.

He died in ten minutes, and his wife was taken to a hospital with two bullets in her abdomen. She is not expected to live.

Baker, who was 35 years old, had been separated from his wife for a week, and it is believed he tried to kill her because she would not return to live with him.

DEMANDS PROBE OF "BANK CONSPIRACY"

Henry Believes That Charges of McAdoo Are True

Washington, July 30.—A demand that Secretary McAdoo be summoned before the house committee on banking and currency to explain his statement that a bank conspiracy in New York has depressed the price of 2 percent bonds is contained in a statement issued by Representative Henry, chairman of the house rules committee.

Henry also demands that the head of every great bank in New York "shall be sent for immediately and placed upon the witness stand and grilled most thoroughly, that the American people may know the exact facts about this controversy."

Henry says that he believes the charges of McAdoo are true.

REFUSED TO QUIT JAIL

Militant Suffragette Removed and Landed In Infirmary

London, July 30.—A curious scene was witnessed in the West End of London last night. The authorities of Holloway jail desired to liberate, under the "cat and mouse" act, a suffragette hunger striker, Mrs. Mary Wyan.

The woman refused to leave the prison, however, unless she was unconditionally liberated, whereupon she was sent in a taxicab in charge of wardresses to a nursing home.

Arriving there, she resolutely refused to enter the home and sat outside from afternoon until midnight, surrounded by a small crowd of sympathizers and curious onlookers.

Finding their efforts unavailing, the police brought an ambulance to the nursing home at midnight and removed Mrs. Wyan to a public infirmary.

Girl In Trance Ten Days Says She Paid a Visit to Heaven

Uniontown, Pa., July 30.—Tales of being to heaven, having crossed the River Jordan and talked with Christ, were told by Luella Cameron, 15, daughter of Ellis Cameron, a wealthy coke man, who was awakened from a trance of ten days by Rev. Israel Hess, a Menonite divine.

"I did not want to return to earth," said the girl, "but I talked with the Lord, and He told me to go back."

Loomfixers on Strike

New Bedford, Mass., July 30.—Sixty loomfixers and changers-over struck at the Whitman mill because of the hiring of a new man in the position of "second hand."

Strike of "Five-Cent" Barbers

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

Copyright, 1912, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"Oh, dear heart," she exclaimed as she reached out and drew me into her lovely, gracious arms, "then the privilege is all the more wonderful for you, as you make some sacrifice to complete his life. Having suffered this, you will be all the greater woman to understand him. I accept my own sorrow at his hands willingly, as it gives me the larger sympathy for his work, though he will no longer need my personal encouragement as he has for years. In the light of his love this lesser feeling for Dr. Moore will soon pass away, and the accord between you will be complete." This was more than I could stand, and, feeling less than a worm, I turned my face into her breast and walled. Now, who would have thought that girl could dance as she did?

By this time I was in such a solution of grief that I would soon have had to be sopped up with a sponge if Pet hadn't run in bubbling over like a lovely white linen clad glass of Rhine wine and seltzer. Happiness has a habit of not even acknowledging the presence of grief, and Pet didn't seem to see our red noses, crushed draperies and generally damp atmosphere.

"Molly," she said with a deliciously young giggle, "Tom says for you to send him $10 to spend getting the brass band half drunk before 6 o'clock train, on which your Mr. Bennett comes. He has spent $5 paying the negroes to polish up their instruments and clean up the uniforms, and it cost him twenty-five to bail the cornetist out of jail for roost robbing, and it takes a whole gallon of whisky to get any spirit into the drummer. He says tell you that as this is your shindig you ought at least to pay the piper. Hurry up, he's waiting for me, and here's the kiss he told me to put on our left ear!"

"I suppose you delivered that kiss straight from where he gave it to you, Pettie, dear?" I had the spirit to say as I went over to the desk for my pocketbook.

"Why, Molly, you know me better than that!" she exclaimed from behind a perfect rose cloud of blushes.

"I know Tom better than I do you." I answered as she fled with the ten in her hand. I looked at Ruth Chester, and we both laughed. It is true that a broader sympathy is one of the by-products of sorrow, and a week ago I might have resented Pet to a marked degree instead of giving her the $10 and a blessing.

"I'm going quick, Molly, with that laugh between us," Ruth said as she rose and took me into her arms again for just half a second, and before I could stop her she was gone.

She met Billy tolling up the front step with a long piece of rusty iron gaspipe, which took off an inch of paint as it bumped against the edge of the porch. She bent down and kissed the back of his neck, which theft was almost more than I could stand and apparently more than Billy was prepared to accept.

"Go away, girl," he said in his rudest manner. "Don't you see I'm busy?"

I met him in the front hall just in time to prevent a hopeless scar on my hardwood floor. He was hot, perspiring and panting, but full of triumph.

"I found it, Molly, I found it!" he exclaimed as he let the heavy pipe drop almost on the bare pink toes. "You can git a hammer and pound the end sharp and bend it so no whale we ketch can get away for nothing. You and Doc kin put it in your trunk 'cause it's too long for mine, and I can carry Doc's shirts and things in mine. Git the hammer quick and I'll help you fix it!" The pain in my breast was almost more than I could bear.

"Lover," I said as I knelt down by him in the dim old hall and put my arms around him as if to shield him from some blow I couldn't help being aimed at him, "you wouldn't mind much, would you, if just this time your Molly couldn't go with you? Your father is going to take good care of you and—and maybe bring you back to me some day."

"Why, Molly," he said, flaring his astonished blue eyes at me, "'tain't me to be took care of! I ain't a-going to leave you here, for maybe a bear to come out of a circus and eat you up, with me and Doc gone, 'Sides, Doc ain't no good and maybe wouldn't help me hold the rope tight to keep the whale from gitting away. He don't know how to do like I tell him like you do."

"Try him, lover, and maybe he will—will learn to"— I couldn't help the tears that came to stop my words.

"Now, you see, Molly, how you'd cry with that kiss spot gone," he said, with an amused, manly, little tenderness in his voice that I had never heard before, and he cuddled his lips against mine in almost the only voluntary kiss he had given me since I had got him into his ridiculous little trousers under his blouses. "You can have most a hundred kisses every night if you don't say no more about not a-going and fix that whale hook for me quick," he coaxed against my cheek.

Oh, little lover, little lover; you didn't know what you were saying with your baby wisdom and your rust grimy little paddle burned the sleep place on my breast like a terrible white heat from which I was powerless to defend myself. You are mine, you are, you are! You are soul of my soul and heart of my heart and spirit of my spirit and—and you ought to have been flesh of my flesh.

I don't know how I managed to answer Mrs. Johnson's call from my front gate, but I sometimes think that women have a torture proof clause in their constitutions.

She and Aunt Bettie had just come up the street from Aunt Bettie's house, and the Pollard cook was following them with a large basket in which were packed the things Aunt Bettie was contributing to the entertainment of the distinguished citizen. Mr. Johnson is Alfred's nearest kinsman in Hillsboro, and, of course, he is to be their guest while he is in town.

"He'll be feeding his eyes on Molly, so he'll not even know he's eating my Washington almond pudding with Thomas' old port in it," teased Aunt Bettie, with a laugh, as I went across the street with them.

"There's going to be a regular epidemic of love in Hillsboro, I do believe," she continued in her usual strain of sentimental speculation. "I saw Mr. Graves talking to Delia Hawes in front of the store an hour ago as I came out from looking at the blue chintz to match Pet for the west wing, and they were both so absorbed they didn't even see me. That was what might have been called a conflagration dinner you gave the other night, Molly, in more ways than one. I wish a spark had set off Benton Wade and Henrietta too. Maybe it did, but is just taking fire slowly."

I think it would be a good thing just to let Aunt Bettie blindfold every unmarried person in this town and marry them to the first person they touch hands with. It would be fun for her and then we could have peace and apparently as much happiness as we are going to have anyway. Mrs. Johnson seemed to be in somewhat the same state of mind as I found myself.

"Humph," she said as we went up the front steps, "I'll be glad when you are married and settled, Molly Carter so the rest of this town can quiet down into peace once more, and I sincerely hope every woman under fifty in Hillsboro who is already married will stay in that state until she reaches that age. But I do believe if the law married widows from grave number one to altar number two they would get into trouble and fuss along the road. But come on in, both of you, and help me get this marriage feast ready, if I must. The day is going by on greased wheels, and I can't let Mr. Johnson's crotchets be neglected, Al Bennett or no Al Bennett."

And from then on for hours and hours I was strapped to a fortune wheel that turned and turned, minute after minute, as it ground spice and sugar and bridal meats and me relentlessly into a great suffering pulp. Could I ever in all my life have hungered for food and been able to get it past the lump in my throat that grew larger with the seconds? And if Alfred's pudding tasted of the salt of dead sea fruit this evening it was from my surreptitious tears that dripped into it.

It was late, very late, before Mrs. Johnson realized it and shooed me home to get ready to go to the train along with the brass band and all the other welcomes.

I hurried all I could, but for long minutes I stood in front of my mirror and questioned myself. Could this slow, pale, dead eyed, slim, drooping girl be the rollicking child of a Molly who had looked out of that mirror at me one short week ago? Where were the wings on her heels, the glint in her curls, the laugh on her mouth and the devil in her eyes?

PROSECUTION OF NEW HAVEN

Being Pushed by Gregory, Who Is Probing Boston End

IN CONFERENCE WITH BRANDEIS

Latter Will Aid Wilson Administration "Trust Buster," Who Says All Alleged Violations of Law Will Be Included In Government's Case Against the Railroad

Boston, July 30.—Louis D. Brandeis will play an important part in the government prosecution of the New Haven. He was yesterday closeted with T. W. Gregory, President Wilson's "trust buster," and the man who wrung a $2,000,000 fine from the Standard Oil in Texas, in charge of the New Haven investigation.

The latter declared that the federal investigation would have been instituted regardless of the finding of the interstate commerce commission, and indicated that President Wilson was determined that the monopolistic career of the New Haven should be stopped almost from the time he took office.

Gregory would not admit that his meeting with Brandeis had been specially arranged, but stated that they had talked the New Haven situation over.

Associated with Gregory is Assistant Attorney General Adkins and a corps of special agents, stenographers and assistants. They are quartered at the Hotel Bellevue.

Gregory stated that all the alleged infringements of law by the New Haven would be the subject of the investigation now under way, and that all violations would be included in the government's case against the road.

"Since I left New York I have heard nothing of President Elliott's intended visit to Attorney General McReynolds, nor have I heard that he was going to ask the government to halt its investigation. We have been working in New York two months. We came to Boston because of the greater facilities with which we can gather information existing in Boston.

"We have all the information of the interstate commerce commission's hearing on the New Haven situation. We have all the information in the suit instituted by Attorney General Bonaparte while Roosevelt was president. I have seen United States District Attorney French and had interviews with him regarding that suit."

The position of Gregory is similar to that occupied by Kellogg under the last administration. He is President Wilson's "trust buster," and, unlike Kellogg, has scored a real victory against the Standard Oil company. Not only did the Standard Oil company have to pay a $2,000,000 fine in Texas, but the company was outlawed and its property sold.

HAYNES GETS FREEDOM

Slayer of Policeman Pardoned by Maine Governor and Council

Augusta, Me., July 30.—The governor and council last night pardoned Samuel D. Haynes, who is serving a life sentence for the murder of James L. Robbins, a Rockland policeman, in 1879. Seven previous efforts were made for the pardon.

Haynes had been arrested for larceny and had been put in the police station at Rockland in charge of Robbins. While the policeman was in a stooping posture Haynes hit him over the head and escaped. Robbins died after a few days. Haynes was recaptured later.

Petitions for his pardon contended that he did not intend to kill Robbins, but merely to stun him, and that he should have been convicted of manslaughter only.

GRETNA GREEN TO CLOSE

New Haven Not a Haven For Eloping Couples After Tomorrow

New Haven, July 30.—In face of a storm of protest from aldermen and justices of the peace, who made a customary "good thing" out of snap marriages performed for eager New Yorkers, the state secretary announced that after Aug. 1 all intendants must take out their licenses five days before the ceremony is performed.

For years it has been customary for elopers to cross the line from New York, be married the same afternoon, and return at once. New Haven has been particularly favored with this patronage.

MORAL—NEVER DO IT.

Mrs. Christian Kabb, of Hartlan Hollow, Conn., a farming village, told her children to take their father's old felt boots outdoors and burn them up. She was doing her spring cleaning, and could not bear the sight of them.

The children did as directed and the high wind blew a spark from the bonfire into a dry meadow nearby, igniting the grass. A calf grazing in the lot caught fire, ran into the barn and set some hay ablaze. In a jiffy the building was in flames. The barn, with six head of stock, was destroyed, also a tobacco warehouse. The fire spread to woodland and burned over fifty acres before villagers conquered it.

SOUTH QUINCY BOYS PROTEST

Say Ward Three Playground Is Not Healthy

The South Quincy boys who come to the Y. M.C.A.on Wednesdays for their weekly swim are preparing to make an attack on City Hall this afternoon with a petition on the Board of Health protesting against the conditions that exist in and about the Ward Three playground. It is a well known fact that much of the waste water, that has become rusty by contact with the iron used in the polishing mills runs into the brook and the stream at all times resembles a brook of running rusty water. In addition to this the boys claim that out buildings have an outlet into the brook and that the sanitary condition of things at the playground is not what it should be and they want it remedied.

It is claimed that the Board of Health promised to remedy the condition but have not done so.

The boys have selected a rather bad hour in which to make their invasion of the Board of Health office for Chairman Teasdale will be at the hearing in Boston and Dr. Jones is with the brigade in camp at Barnstable. The petition will therefore have to be presented to the clerk in charge of the office.

NOT A SUCCESS.

On a southern plantation the dairy hands were accustomed to do the milking, squatting down in a primitive fashion, until the owner introduced milking stools.

But the first experience with the innovation was not a success. The negro who sallied forth with the stool returned bruised and battered, and with an empty pail.

"I done my best, sah," he explained "Dat stool looked all right to me, but the cow she won't sit on it!"

SAILING OF THE RIVADAVIA

Crowd Expected Although Time Is Midnight

Mayor Stone has ordered a telephone put at the Quincy end of the Quincy Point bridge. It would be very convenient many times to communicate with the draw tender at the Quincy Point bridge but heretofore this has been impossible. For this reason the Mayor has ordered a telephone connected.

Preparations are being made to handle the crowd which it is expected will be on hand Sunday night to see the Rivadavia pass through the draw. The battleship is so long that it is going to be quite a task getting her through. In weight she is ten times as heavy as the bridge abutments and if for any reason the vessel should strike the bridge it can be readily seen what will happen to the bridge.

The Weymouth department will have two officers on duty at the Weymouth end of the bridge and Chief Burrell will have a squad of officers on duty at the Quincy end of the bridge to keep the crowds back, and it is probable that no people will be allowed on the bridge while the battleship is passing through.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. French and children are expected home this week from their vacation in Maine.

For an hour or two this morning the team of a builder stood in front of the Greenleaf building with eight small children in it. The horse was not tied, and the children were standing up, dancing, etc. They took a big chance in these days of automobiles.

Accident Due to His Own Carelessness

Big Party on the Outing

News was broken to Mrs. George Sanborn, mother of Edwin Sanborn who was drowned off Sandy Point Wednesday, by the Police department. Mrs. Sanborn who is an invaild was prostrated by the receipt of the news and refused to be consoled.

From eye witnesses of the accident and from those on the grocers trip, the the drowning was evidently due to the young man's own carelessness. According to the evidence the young man was not climbing a ladder from the main deck to the upper deck but was trying to shin up the stanchion.

It is said that he had tried the same trick several times before and had not only been warned by an officer on the boat but had twice been prevented form shinning up the post by members of the party. This time however he climbed up outo the rail and started up the post. When about half way up he was seen to suddenly reel backward and before a hand could be lifted to aid him he was floundering in the water.

It was near the stern of the boat where he fell, and the first that many of the party knew of the accident was when the boat stopped and began to slowly turn around. Looking back they then saw that someone had fallen overboard. It is said that the vessel had gone some distance before it stopped and had turned round and in the meantime the young man was seen to be swimming about. A boat was lowered but before it could reach him he had sank out of sight.

The accident had been seen by one of the torpedo boats some distance away and a boat from this vessel immediately put out, but they also arrived too late to do any good. The boats cruised about the spot for sometime but the body did not rise.

The accident delayed the arrival of the boat at Newport nearly an hour, and after arriving dinner was the first thing. After dinner the party of 980 separated, each going and doing what their taste dictated.

Later they gathered on the wharf and the steamer was boarded for a sail up the bay, Fall River being reached shortly after 7 o'clock. The special train left for home at 7.20 and arrived at 9.50 o'clock.

Aside from the accident which for a time cast a gloom over the party the outing was a success in every way.

Messrs. Nightingale for whom the young man worked, speak highly of him. He had been at work for them about three months and covered the route through Weymouth where he was well liked. He leaves besides his parents two brothers and two sisters.

The Daily Ledger appreciates very much the thoughtfulness of Henry P. Kittredge and John J. Fallon in notifying this office promptly of the accident. The editor desires to thank them publicly. Any time that a citizen of Quincy goes to expense in forwarding news like this he will be promptly reimbursed and thanked.

GRANITE CITY OUTING

Club Men Almost Lost In a Fog

Dinner at Villa Napoli

About thirty-five members of the Granite City club participated Wednesday evening in the annual summer outing and automobile run to Nantasket. It was nearly 7 o'clock before the automobiles containing the party got away, and as no attempt was made to break speed records, Nantasket was reached in half an hour.

It was the intention to have taken a ride through the South Shore but the lateness in starting coupled wih the fact that most of the party were as hungry as bears, the trip was cut short. Then again soon after leaving Quincy the cars ran into a fog bank which did not augur well for a pleasure ride.

The fog remained with them all the evening until the return home and it was not until Hingham was reached

MAYORALTY CANDIDATES

James L. Edwards and Herbert S. Barker Suggested

Two new Mayoralty candidates were sprung on the unsuspecting public Wednesday night, and from the outside it looks as though there would be no lack of timber seeking the Republican nomination. The two gentlemen mentioned Wednesday evening were James L. Edwards of Hancock court, a well-known attorney, and ex-Councilman Herbert S. Barker of Presidents Hill, a widely known and constant worker for the success of the Republican candidates for office.

In addition to these two gentlemen it is well-known that ex-Assessor Charles H. Johnson has announced his candidacy for the nomination. As for Mayor Stone, nothing has been heard definitely, although the general impression seems to be that he will not be a candidate for the nomination this year.

It is morally certain that John L. Miller will again become the Progressive standard bearer for the office of Mayor and there is a persistent rumor that ex-Mayor William T. Shea will be a citizen's candidate.

PRIVATE WAY.

In accordance with the provisions of the Revised Laws Mayor Stone has caused to be posted on the Woodward Institute property near the walk at the southerly end a notice that the property is a private way and forbidding its use. This is done in order that a title to the way may not be obtained by the public, which it would do under the law but for a similar notice being posted from time to time.

WILLARD STREET HEARING

Petitioners Put Up Good Argument

Mayor Stone in Favor

The hearing before the Highway Commission Wednesday afternoon was well attended, and the petitioner's side of the case was presented in an able manner. There was no opposition to the plan to accept Willard street although the commissioners did not give them much encouragement that the street would be accepted this year.

The plan of the petitioners is to have Willard street accepted from East Milton way through to Brockton. The commissioners tried to point out that they were now constructing a parallel road between these two points, but every point made in opposition to the plan by the chairman of the commission was met by the petitioners who had the best of the argument all the way through.

The hearing lasted a little over an hour, and although a large number spoke in favor of the petition every one confined himself strictly to the proposition, and spoke briefly and right to the point.

Those from Quincy who attended and spoke were Mayor Stone, Commissioner Tupper, City Engineer Sargent, President Whiton and Councilmen Gilliatt, Sandberg and Little of the City Council; secretary Hall, W. H. Teasdale and A. L. Whitman of the Board of Trade; James H. Elcock, Peter T. Fallon, W. F. Lakin, Phillip Garrity, A. W. Loud and John Evans of the Ward Four Improvement Association and representatives from the City of Brockton, the towns of Braintree and Randolph.

Mr. Powers of the Brockton street department said that many of the shoe firms of that city were now transporting their product to Boston by motor cars and that the proposed highway would make a more direct as well as a shorter route than that used at present. It was also argued that the route from Mattapan which the chairman of the board spoke of was five miles away. Also that the travel from places south of Quincy through Quincy Square often congested City Square.

PHIPPS STREET FIRE.

The alarm from Box 31, at 4.35 Wednesday afternoon, was for a slight fire among some old clothing in the attic of the Daniel Baxter house on Phipps street. Previous to the alarm the Central station apparatus had been summoned by a telephone call and the auto chemical had nearly reached the scene when the alarm sounded. The blaze was confined to the attic and the damage was trifling. Just how the fire started no one seems to know. It was claimed that no one had been in the attic at the time and the only way it can be accounted for is possibly the igniting of matches in some of the clothing.

The east wind makes Quincy temperature just right today.

GRANITE TARIFF DEBATE

New Bill Proposes Big Reduction

Injury to Quincy Business

New England granite was vigorously defended by the New England Senators on Wednesday in the Senate at Washington says the Boston Advertiser. Granite, in the tariff bill, has been cut from 50 p. c. to 25 p. c. ad valorem on dressed and from 10c to 3c on undressed.

Senator Page of Vermont said that the cut of 70 p. c. is altogether too much. Senators Lodge, Gallinger, Dillingham and Weeks participated in the debate. Senator Lodge pointed out that there is the keenest kind of competition in the granite industry and that it is controlled by men of modest means, and he declared that a duty such as the Democrats propose is too low.

Senator Gallinger tempted the Dem-

LEARNING TO SWIM.

This is the season of drowning accidents. The deaths from this cause may exceed the fatalities of football or the deadly July 4 twenty or a hundred times. Commissions and legislators discuss the former evils. But agitation on the drowning question is confined to occasional newspaper editorials.

It seems to take death in the mass to arouse popular interest. Death on the installment plan, in isolated and separate cases, though more frequent, attracts less attention.

The danger of death in the water is not from the occasional horrors like the Titanic disaster. It is in ten thousand summer resorts and a million bathing haunts, where young people flirt with the elemental treachery of water.

The summer time scatters people far from their accustomed scenes. It brings into resorts that have water sports a host of persons who know no more about boats than about an aeroplane. Having learned to swim a few strokes, they swim beyond their depth. They paddle out in a canoe, which they regard as a conservative craft, worthy of the confidence one would place in a heavily ballasted row boat.

Steering a sail boat is usually the next exploit. As it floats at the wharf it looks as secure as a ferry boat. But feel what a titanic leverage a stiff breeze will have on your spreading sail. Against it you have merely the fluid pressure of the water on the keel and sides. The innumerable overturns record how, in the language of an old salt, "Them that know nothin' fear nothin'."

It seems almost useless to preach caution to people who are temperamentally sanguine. But the father who, at home or in summer haunts, can teach his young folks how to swim, very considerably increases the chance that he will have the continued joy of their companionship.

MARRIAGE.

No encouragement should be given to elopements. They are too often the precursors of unhappy unions that end in the divorce court. They are undertaken by very young, irresponsible persons and are frequently due to impulses of the hastiest and most trivial nature. A thing as serious as marriage should be undertaken only after the most careful and deliberate reflection and should be surrounded with all proper dignity. My views about marriage have been criticised as interfering with true love and the spirit of romance. But I cannot feel that to be the case. True love implies a desire for the well being of the beloved. No man who loves a woman is going to ask her to marry him if he understands that their union may result in death or lifelong invalidism for her. But it will take a certain amount of education and regulation to bring home this understanding to everybody. Why should we do less to safeguard the business of begetting life than we do for all sorts of vastly less important business? For these enterprises we require licenses or reputable financial backing. But if any man wants to get married he goes to the county clerk's office wholly unknown there or unvouched for as to character, responsibility or anything else. With him goes a similarly unknown, unvouched for woman. No matter what their mental, moral or physical condition, they get their license and are married.—Walter Taylor Summer.

BACKYARD FARM.

"This is the sort of weather," said Mr. Candless, "that makes me want to be a farmer." Mrs. Candless smiled.

"It would be nice, wouldn't it?" she said. "We wouldn't have to buy 5 cents' worth of milk from the Browns every day, and eggs are 40 cents, we'd be getting them free."

"Sure we would," responded Mr. Candless appreciatively," and think of the garden we'd have—"

"Why not have a garden here?" interrupted Mrs. Candless. "We have the whole back yard, and you remember the Davises had a fine one last year."

"I'll do it," said Mr. Candless with enthusiasm. "We'll have tomatoes—"

"And lettuce," said Mrs. Candless.

"And beans and potatoes—"

"And pumpkins."

"And peas and asparagus," finished Mrs. Candless. "You'd better start it in time."

That night Mr. Candless appeared bearing a palpably new hoe, spade and rake, painted of blade, white of handle and bearing stickers indicating whence they came. Also his pockets bulged with packets of seed.

"I'm not going to the office tomorrow," he said. "I'm going to make a garden. Be sure to set the clock at 6."

The faithful clock did its best, but it was nearly 9 o'clock before Mr. Candless arose. It was 10 when he had finished breakfast.

He put on his oldest clothes, took the new hoe and rake and spade and the packets of seed and went out to look over the garden-to-be.

On looking over it there appeared a great quantity of it, and the hoe and rake and spade looked awfully inadequate to the job of converting it into a garden.

He rolled up his sleeves and seizing the hoe, began breaking off weeds. After a few strokes he leaned on the hoe. He was jarred from heels to head.

He chopped down half a dozen more weeds, threw down the new hoe and went into the house.

"Tired, dear?" asked Mrs. Candless. "Did you finish it?" Mr. Candless looked at her suspiciously, scraped his feet against the coal scuttle and took up a book.

After dinner he went forth again and reviewed what he had done. It was easier to see what he had not done.

He took a step toward the new hoe, looked at his blistered hands and returned to the house.

"I must go to the office," he said. "There's something there I have to do."

Mrs. Candless saw him depart. Then she went to the telephone and called up Mrs. Davis.

"You remember the man that made your garden last year?" she asked. O, he's there now? Well, dear, please tell him I want to see him just as soon as he gets through, will you. What? Why, certainly I am. My garden will make yours look ashamed this year."

HONORARY PALL BEARER.

Quincy branch, No. 61, United Irish Land League, was represented at the funeral of John J. O'Callahan on Wednesday by Peter McConarty, who was one of the honorary pall bearers. The late Mr. O'Callahan was a frequent visitor to the leagues headquarters in Cahill's hall when the prospects of Home Rule were not as bright as at present. Many of the members readily recall his easy speech and charming personality. The local branch which is the oldest in the country have inscribed resolutions on his untimely death on their records.

MONKS—NEILOW.

George Henry Monks, driver of Hose 8 of Newton, and Miss Mary Agnes Neilow of Quincy, were married Wednesday evening at the parochial residence of St. John's parish by Rev. Fr. John J. Coan, pastor. Patrick Casey, a friend of the groom was the best man and Miss Annie Neilow, a sister of the bride, was her attendant.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Tanner, Carruth street, which was largely attended by relatives and friends. The couple left in the evening on a trip, and will reside at Newton.

The bride is a Connecticut girl and has lived in Quincy about a year. The groom is one of the most popular members of the Newton fire department. Mr. and Mrs. Monks were the recipients of many costly wedding gifts.

MAY BE WORK OF A RAFFLES

Two Robberies at Narragansett Pier Net $225,000 Loot

DETECTIVES ARE IN THE DARK

Matching Wits With Expert Thieves Who Take Gems From Under Very Noses of Owners—Several Men Are Thought to Be Working Together Under Skilful Leader

Narragansett Pier, R. I., July 31.—Following a $75,000 jewelry robbery at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Rumsey and a $150,000 robbery at Shore Acres, the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hanan, the police are working on the theory the robberies are the work of a society "Raffles" at the head of an organized band.

The best detective genius available is matching wits with the expert crooks who took the gems almost from under the noses of the owners during the last week-end at the summer colony. Thus far no tangible clue has been found.

Rival agencies with international reputations as thief getters, engaged by Mrs. Rumsey and Mrs. Hanan, have brought all their resources into play. Every pier on Narragansett bay is being watched in the belief that the thieves, operating as gentlemen, are still sauntering about the fashionable hotels looking for an opportunity to leave town without exciting suspicion.

Mrs. Hanan's jewels were taken from her room during the absence of not more than twenty minutes of a maid. The gems lost by Mrs. Rumsey were removed from her sleeping room while she was absent.

It is believed the old gang which profited so greatly here in the summer of 1911 is again at work, and the police realize that if this is the case they are pitted against expert cunning.

Attention is again turned toward the reported "fence" in Boston, long believed to be patronized by these thieves, which has never been located. It is not expected the members of the gang, if, as supposed, several men are working together, will attempt to dispose of their booty for the present.

Among the many rumors current, following the announcement of the known facts regarding the robberies, was one to the effect that Mrs. Rumsey had lost a second necklace not before mentioned. This was said to be made of 216 pearls and valued at $40,000. Inquiry at the Rumsey cottage brought the response that the latest report would not be either confirmed or denied. "There is absolutely nothing to be said," said Rumsey.

The report is one of the more definite ones incidental to vague rumors that other summer residents besides the Rumseys and Hanans have been robbed.

Although the Hanans at first denied the reports of a robbery at their home, Mrs. Hanan admits they have been visited by thieves. Hanan is seriously ill and is still in ignorance of what has occurred. An unwillingness to disturb him impelled his wife to withhold the facts until this time. Her estimate of a $150,000 loss exceeds the estimates of early reports, these having been placed at $60,000 to $100,000.

Rumsey is a son-in-law of the late E. H. Harriman.

FOSS NAMES LABOR BOARD

Belated Nominations Are at Once Confirmed by Council

Boston, July 31.—Hereafter the laws regarding ventilation, sanitation and hours of employment of women and children in this commonwealth will be administered by Chairman Lowell and his associates on the new state board of labor.

Following a storm of criticism over his delay in naming the members of this board, the governor sent to the council yesterday the necessary five nominations. All of them were immediately confirmed under suspension of the rules.

The state board of labor and industries was created by the legislature of 1912. March 1, 1913, was set as the date when the membership of the board should be settled upon by the governor and council. The law also specified that the board should begin its work by June 1.

The governor sent these names to the council: James A. Lowell for the five-year term, James W. Crook for the four-year term, Channing Smith for the three-year term, William Acton for the two-year term and Mrs. Davis R. Dewey for the one-year term.

ARMISTICE IN BALKANS

Five Days Allowed For Discussion of Peace Negotiations

London, July 31.—A five days' armistice was agreed to at a peace conference in Bucharest between the delegates of Servia, Greece, Montenegro and Bulgaria.

Hitherto Greece and Servia have rejected all proposals for a provisional armistice. The two governments said they could only consent to the cessation of hostilities after the signature of peace preliminaries. Servia and Greece stated that they did not consider it advisable to agree to an armistice unless these terms are conceded by Bulgaria:

1. The Macedonian territories up to the River Struma.

2. The coast line up to a point situated north of Kapava, the towns of Serres, Drama, etc., being included in the hinterland.

3. Advantages of various kinds, such as a war indemnity, guarantees for the Greek population living in Bulgarian territories, etc.

The money loss in the war thus far is estimated at $1,329,000,000. The total casualties are figured at 348,000.

BETRAYED BY HIS FONDNESS FOR PETS

Noisy Wolf Leads to Capture of an Escaped Convict

Verona, N. J., July 31.—A taste for pets resulted in the arrest here of Charles Austin, a negro, who, according to information from Raleigh, escaped from a North Carolina prison, where he was serving a thirty-year sentence for murder.

Austin is being held for extradition. For the past two years he has been employed as a chauffeur for Dr. Whitehorne, a physician for the Essex county penitentiary. Some time ago Austin obtained a wolf, which he kept as a "watch dog," but its howls disturbed the neighborhood and Austin was compelled to get rid of it.

The incident attracted attention, however, and his record was looked up. He was identified by a scar on his head.

Boston, July 31.—Felix J. Woodward and his wife Jessie must pay to Morris Samuel, doing a money-lending business as the Chelsea Investment company, the sum of $2830, although they have paid him during the past year and a half $2175 on notes aggregating $2170.

Woodward and his wife brought a bill in equity in the supreme judicial court here to compel Samuel to cancel the note and mortgage on furniture which they had given, but the master to whom the case was referred decides there is no help for them.

Convert Back Yards of the City Into Children's Playgrounds

By Dr. MYRON T. SCUDDER,
Director of the Playground and Recreation Association of America

THE play movement is being wonderfully organized, and nothing is plainer than that the people of this country are at heart in sympathy with play.

But in our cities the COST OF RECREATION SPACE IS ALMOST PROHIBITIVE.

WHAT I WOULD URGE IS A BIG COMMUNITY BACK YARD IN EACH BLOCK OF DWELLING HOUSES, OR, RATHER, A SERIES OF THREE OR MORE BACK YARDS OPENING INTO EACH OTHER. THIS YARD SHOULD BE UNDER THE SUPERVISION OF A TRAINED PLAY INSTRUCTOR.

In spite of the great development of apartment and tenement houses in large cities there is still a large area which is occupied by dwelling houses.

Behind each of these dwelling houses is a BACK YARD THAT OCCUPIES FROM ONE-HALF TO ONE-THIRD OF THE AREA OF THE ENTIRE LOT. On Monday—if that be the family wash day—it is used to dry the clothes in. During the other six days of the week it stands idle. Just remember the high value of real estate and you get an idea of the great waste represented by these back yards.

One great advantage of this back yard playground is that DAY IN AND DAY OUT THE CHILDREN GET THEIR OUTDOOR RECREATION. The inclemency of the weather never keeps them cooped up indoors, as often happens to children whose only playground is the street.

HEARINGS ON TAX LIMIT

They Prove to be Farces Wherever Held

It would appear that the Legislature of 1913 made an unwise law when it provided for midsummer hearings in cities on the tax limit.

Lynn made one attempt and very few citizens attended. This week a crowd was out, but see what the Lynn Item says:

After the hearing closed members of the council admitted that both hearings had been absolute farces, as far as results are concerned, and that nothing had been brought out which would assist the council in establishing a tax limit for current expenses. One of the farcial phases of the hearing was the offer of a representative of certain interests to loan the city $5000 at two per cent for 20 years, with which to buy 1,000,000 feet of waterfront property owned by the Blood trustees and others, claiming that since the land was only assessed for this amount, it ought to be bought for the same, and the city would benefit by buying it. His offer was not accepted.

Sharp criticism of the present board of Lynn assessors, based upon alleged partiality favoring friends and former or present city officials, and a general protest against a higher tax rate, were among the interesting features of the hearing.

The speakers showed no greater tendency than at the previous hearing to stick to their subject, and nearly everything on the city books was considered except the question of a tax limit. But few spoke on the tax limit, but the tax rate proved a fertile subject.

That the object for which the hearing was called was confused in the minds of many was shown by questions which were asked ranging from "Do I understand that Lynn wishes to increase its borrowing power" to "Does the city wish to raise its tax rate for the sake of more permanent improvements."

Everybody was given full and free rights of speech. Nearly 15 minutes of the three muggy hours the hearing was in session were given at one time to a rabid socialistic speech by a well known agitator, who again protested that he was not a loafer, but that he thought all corporations should be taxed to the limit and thus let the small owner off with his present burden.

Nearly every speaker either called the present assessors crooked in so many words or referred to them as "old fogies," "dead ones," "incompetents" and negligent. Charges that large corporations were allowed to quote false figures were made, and one question was asked many times, "Why are not the assessors here to answer these charges?"

Even the members of the Municipal Council came in for a scoring. It was frequently said that "we need big men at the head of our city. We do not want $2500 men, but men who can handle the affairs with intelligence and discretion."

SURPRISE AT SQUANTUM.

When Squantum awakens from slumber it is not surprised to find that unusual things have occurred during the night. Early risers were not surprised therefore, when a small building set in the fountain square and bearing the sign "Moon Island Annex" met their gaze Wednesday morning.

Since the formation of the Squantum Improvement Association some effort has been made by the members who suffered directly from the odors floating across from Moon Island, to have the peninsular made habitable and the organization has gone on record several times in this respect.

Whether or not the building was placed by those favoring the movement or not is not known, but its location brought home the question of whether or not Squantumites will tolerate Moon Island. They removed the annex and expect forthwith to remove the station.

that they ran out of the fog. The air was cool however, after an oppressively hot day and the ride was thoroughly enjoyed in spite of the fog.

The headquarters of the party at Nantasket was the Villa Napoli where at 8 o'clock a special dinner was served. The menu included chowder, lobster, chicken, and the usual fixings such as radishes, olives, bread, ice cream and coffee. During the dinner music was furnished by the musical troupe connected with the Villa.

It was after 9 o'clock before the dinner was over. Then the automobiles were again taken and a call made at Paragon Park where the Palm Garden was the objective point. The party saw the cabaret show from vantage points and freely joined in the applause that was given the several numbers on the long program.

The cabaret show over, the signal was given for home and the party started homeward in a thick fog that made it impossible to see many feet ahead. Nothing happened to mar the pleasure of the evening, and Quincy was reached safe and sound at 11.30.

Owing to the fact that many of the club members are away for the summer months the party was not as large as it otherwise would have been.

BARBEAU FOUND GUILTY

Fined $75 On Which He Paid $50 Today

The final chapter in the mysterious death of David Fazrean at the house of Victor Barbeau at 62 Cleverly court June 28, was enacted in court this morning when Barbeau was fined $75 for keeping a disorderly house.

The police were called to the house of Barbeau early on the morning of June 28, by the report that a man had been found dead on the piazza. The man was David Fazrean, who it later appeared died from natural causes. As the result of what the police learned about the place at that time Inspector Goodhue had Barbeau in court for keeping a disorderly house. The case with the exception of one witness was heard at that time and then continued when the court found Barbeau guilty and imposed a fine of $75. He paid $50 of his fine and was given until Oct. 1, to pay the balance.

Give Your Neighbor an Equal Chance

By HOLLAND.

IF you have been buying goods of a mail order house you doubtless think it has been to your advantage to do so. You have believed that you were saving money or were getting better goods. Let us see if this is true.

Have you tried to do business with your local merchant—your neighbor—on the terms that the mail order house exacts? No? Then suppose you try it.

Just go into the store, plank down your cash and tell what you want. You might even tell the merchant that you will wait a few days for the goods. See if your local merchant can't serve you better and as cheaply as the mail order house.

The local merchant usually extends credit for two, four or six months. The mail order house demands cash in advance. It uses your money as working capital. It loses nothing in interest, nothing in bad debts or on slow paying customers. Try this cash in advance plan on the local merchant—the man you know—and see if he can't make it to your advantage to

SPEND YOUR MONEY WHERE YOU MAKE IT.

HOT DAYS ARE NOT NUMEROUS

But Five Ninety Degree Days in Month of July

Although the past two days have been oppressively hot on account of the humidity, the month of July has been a good one. There have been many days when the weather was hot, but fortunately the nights have been cool which has alleviated the heat of the day somewhat.

The highest point the mercury reached at noon during the month was 95 degrees which occurred on July 2, and but on five days only during the month has the temperature at noon been over 90, for the most part the temperature at noon ranging from 83 to 89 degrees.

The lowest noon temperature during the month was 72 degrees on July 18, although there have been four days during the month when the noon temperature was in the seventies. The highest noon temperature in July 1912 was 100, and the lowest noon temperature in July 1912 was 69 degrees.

The warmest day in August, 1912, was 90 degrees which occurred on Aug. 14, and this was the only day during the month when the temperature at noon reached the 90 mark.

HARDLY A SQUARE DEAL

No Inducement to Trade With the Merchants

Some of the merchants who paid big money to enter the Library contest are indignant at the raw deal which has been given them. Under the latest announcement they claim there is now no inducement to trade at their stores.

For example, the expenditure of $3 for a pair of trousers at Remicks, or $3 for groceries at Foy's or $3 for a chair at Shaw's, will entitle the purchaser to only thirty votes at each store, but the expenditure of $3 for subscription to the paper booming the contest will net 5,000 votes, and possibly a bonus of 10,000 votes additional ocrats with slight increases, but all amendments were voted down by the Democrats assisted by many Progressive Republican Senators from the West, who seem to want to get even with New England. Senator Weeks produced the famous Quincy Memorial, showing how the granite cutters in the times of the Wilson bill in 1894 had walked the streets in vain for work.

Purchasers at the stores therefore put little ice in securing the prizes offered. Yet this is a merchants' contest and not a newspaper contest, the alleged object being to stimulate trade.

Senator Simmons called this an old "gag" but afterwards withdrew the term. Simmons said that the granite industry could stand even being on the free list, declaring that the importations of the commodity show that foreign competition is an immaterial factor in the industry.

Senator Lodge said Scotch granite is not so much feared as granite from Canada.

The Metropolitan sewer assessment upon Quincy this year, as per warrant received by the Assessors is $29,948.08, against $29,994.04 in 1912, and $29,264.37 in 1911.

CRITICISM OF SCHOOLS UNJUST, SAY EXPERTS.

System Immeasurably Ahead of That In Vogue In Former Times.

Current criticisms of the public school are discussed in a report just issued by the United States bureau of education. Among other things, the contention that the "three R's" are neglected in the modern school is answered with the emphatic statement that "the three R's are better taught today than they were fifty or sixty years ago."

"We frequently hear that there are 'too many subjects,' 'too many fads and frills,' and hence neglect of the R's," says the report. "The critics who utter this sort of criticism seldom agree on exactly what the fads and frills are, but they invariably look back to a golden past when the so called 'fundamentals'—reading, writing and arithmetic—were taught in such a way as never to be forgotten. As a matter of fact, the system of today is immeasurably ahead of the school system of the past. The growth has been steady. Whatever may be said against the enrichment of the course of study, its 'fads and frills,' the contention that the essentials, so called, have suffered in comparison with the past falls flat."

In discussing current criticism generally, the report finds that much of the criticism of the public schools of today is due to a marked change in the purpose of public education. "The charge of a curriculum 'behind the times' and the demand for vocational subjects represent no mere call for different school subjects as such, but a complete transformation in the idea of what the public school should do.

"Those who criticise the bookish curriculum of the public school, whether elementary or high school, are really striving for what they conceive to be the changed purpose of education—to reach all the children of all the people with the kind of training that will make them not merely intelligent in respect to things that are in books, but will equip them directly for the kind of life, economic and social, which they will lead when they leave school—while those who oppose the innovations do so because they do not concede this broader though apparently more specialized purpose."

GOLDEN AGE FOR FARM HANDS

Mells Offers Eligible Sisters and Buggy Rides as Luros.

Ray Mells, a farmer of Dorset, a small town near Andover, O., simply can't keep help this summer, yet he offers inducements that really ought to bring him an army of husky youths. Here are a few of the inducements Mells offers to lure some good, strong, willing farm hands his way.

Each man may have a horse and buggy on Sunday or in the evenings.

The quitting time every evening is 6 o'clock, with nothing to do on Sunday but rig up in Sunday best and go to meeting, after which a good dinner will be waiting.

Wages that will compare with the best paid anywhere in the locality, with the most considerate treatment during working hours.

"In addition to all this," says Mells, "I have two good looking eligible sisters and have offered to let the boys get busy and win them if they can. There's the horse and buggy for their use every Sunday."

The harvesting of the crops in Mells' neighborhood has been greatly delayed owing to the shortage of help. All other farmers in the vicinity have experienced the same trouble as Mells.

PUBLIC LIBRARY NOTES.

The Thomas Crane Public Library has published a list of books on boats and boating, this week. The list includes, besides technical books on the subject, books of Voyages, Travels, Adventure and appended is a selected list of Sea stories. Of course, in a list of this size it would be impossible to include all books on the subject, but the card catalogue in the main library has listed many more books under the same, and allied subject headings. Copies of this list may be had, as heretofore, at the main library under the large bulletin board, and at the branches.

Secretary of State Bryan is at present such a prominent national figure that the Library calls attention to a book published in 1900, which contains an interesting biography of this man. The book is entitled "Men and issues of 1900" and its call no. is 68.50. The biography may be found on page 581, with a portrait of Bryan taken at that time.

On Friday, June 26, the children of West Quincy enjoyed the first story-hour given in the West Quincy Reading Room. For this pleasure they are indebted to Miss Irene Hibbard, of the Central Library.

Miss Hibbard was most fortunate in her selections, which included fairy tales, an "history story," poetry and several humorous sketches. These last were, perhaps, the most enthusiastically applauded, and the story-teller obligingly responded to an encore.

The absorbed attention of the listeners was a very spontaneous tribute to the story-teller's powers, for little ripples of laughter were quickly suppressed in the eager desire to hear every word.

This first audience has shown an interest and appreciation, that it will be a delight to gratify in making the story-hour a regular feature of the Reading Room administration.

VIOLET CLUB OUTING.

The Violet Club of Quincy Point held an enjoyable trolley party to Nantasket on Wednesday evening. It was attended by 91 young men and women. Leaving Quincy about 8 o'clock they arrived at the beach without incident and after sporting through Paragon Park and its spacious dance hall the party returned. The affair was highly successful.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure local treatment pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. FOYS WIN IN THE TWELFTH

Had Shaw's Clerks As Their Rivals Yesterday

With both teams tied at six in the ninth innings, the game at South Quincy, Wednesday between the R. E. Foy Water street store and the W. G. Shaw clerks was decided in the 12th inning by Caddy, the Foy pitcher who singled, stole second and scored on the wild throw to second.

The game was interesting from the outset. Both teams were on edge and played good ball at all times. Free from poor plays and the frequent errors of judgment usual to store teams that play weekly the game went on until darkness threatened to end the contest.

The win strengthens the claim of the Water street store that their combination is faster and superior to the clerks teams throughout the city and R. E. Foy, Jr., is prepared to make good anr accept any challenge made.

The score:

CIMA WINS A RACE

But Ellen Also Wins for Second Time

In Quincy Cup Series

The Ellen, defender of the Quincy Yacht Club Challenge Cup, won the morning race Wednesday giving her two legs in the trophy; while the Cima representing the Manchester club secured the afternoon race.

This means that if the Ellen wins one of the two races today that she will hold the coveted trophy for another year. After the race this morning under the rules all boats which have not won a race will be eliminated from further races.

Wednesday morning's race was over a triangular course, two legs of which were in a nice southwesterly breeze. The wind flattened out on the last leg however and it was a drifting match to the home mark. The afternoon race was a windward and leeward race and the breeze was anywhere from the southeast to southwest, so that the contest was anything but a good test for the four boats that competed. When the yachts were drawn up to the line for the afternoon race there was hardly a breath of air but by the time the starting gun had sounded a nice little breeze had sprung up.

The elapsed time of the two races was:

WEDNESDAY MORNING.

Ellen	2:29:44
Cima	2:39:15
Tern	2:38:27
Chance	Time not taken

WEDNESDAY AFTERNOON.

Cima	2:20:58

QUINCY POLICE VICTORY

Defeat Chelsea and Move Up In Standing

The Quincy Police defeated Chelsea at Chelsea on Wednesday in the Police league and jumped into third place, nosing out the Newton aggregation. The game was called in the seventh innings with the score 7 to 6.

The feature of the game was the pitching of Fallon who secured 12 strikeouts and allowed but eight hits. He passed five men, while Barden the losing pitcher passed none.

The third inning was the lucky one for Quincy when six runs were scored in good base ball fashion. Each team is credited with six errors apiece and some were responsible for runs.

Action was started after the game whereby the pick of the league will form an all star team and invade the state of New York on a base ball tour.

On the Quincy team were: Fallon, Duane, Whelon, Hebert, Farrell, Canavan, Delorey, Curtin, and Doran.

The score by innings:

Quincy	0 0 6 0 1 0 0—7
Chelsea	2 0 1 2 1 0 0—6

Runs made by Canavan, Duane, Farrell, Whelan, Delorey (2), Hebert, Porter (3), Isbester (2) Keaton. Two Base Hits—Fallon, Farrell, Whelan, Porter. Base on balls—by B. Fallon, 5. Struck Out—by Fallon 12: by Barden 6. Hit by Pitched Ball—Hebert. Umpire Hickey.

"FOSS IS GUNNING FOR BIGGER GAME"

Not After Renomination, According to Candidate Bird

Boston, July 31.—Charles S. Bird, Progressive candidate for governor, pitched into Governor Foss in his first speech of the campaign at the outing of Cambridge Progressives held in Lexington park.

He issued a challenge to Foss to contest with him for the Progressive nomination for governor. He said the governor was fooling all of the political parties, that he had no intention of being a candidate and was "gunning for bigger game."

The Progressive candidate said that within a few weeks it had been proposed to him that he stand as the "merger" candidate of both the Republican and the Bull Moose parties, but that he had flatly turned down the offer.

Piers of Fitchburg's New Bridge Are Said to Be Crumbling

Fitchburg, Mass., July 31.—The new Harvard street bridge over the Nashua river, for which the city has just paid $94,000, is to be officially examined today, following the report that several of its concrete piers are crumbling.

The street commissioners will make a formal examination of the bridge, and especially of the parts which are declared to exhibit signs of crumbling. If the investigation bears out the statements of citizens who have already viewed the weak places, the commissioners say they will at once lay the matter before the city solicitor, who can take it up with the builders.

ANCIENT EGGS RELEASED

Declared Fit For Food, Although In Cold Storage 3½ Years

Trenton, N. J., July 31.—The state board of health has released ten tons of cold storage eggs, worth $4000, which had been held by the government for the last 3½ years in a warehouse in Jersey City.

Doctors and reporters had eaten cake, custards and ice cream made from the eggs and not one of those daring persons had died, so the board decided the eggs were fit for other stomachs. They were owned by a Boston firm.

DISAGREE AS TO AUTHORITY

Tangle Over Auditing Middlesex County Accounts

$40,000 JAIL DEFALCATION

Leads Commission to Ask Governor For Opinions From Bay State Attorney General—Controller, Prison Commission and Sheriff Each Deny Responsibility For Conditions

Boston, July 31.—The state commission on economy and efficiency suggests that Governor Foss secure from the attorney general opinions as to the responsibility of various officials over the auditing of the Middlesex county accounts.

The commission, which has been investigating the recent defalcation of nearly $40,000 there, says in its report to the governor that the manufacturing or industrial department of the house of correction in Cambridge has been so inadequately supervised and controlled that a larger defalcation might readily have occurred without detection.

The commission believes it to be the duty of the controller of county accounts to examine accounts in the manufacturing and industrial department of houses of correction.

The commission says there is no such examination, owing to the opinion of the controller that he has no authority to make such an examination.

The commission says that the prison commission contends that it has not made such an examination because of the view that the controller had the right.

The commission says that the county commissioners say they have no responsibility in the matter.

The sheriff says the matter is up to the controller

Speaking about the defalcation the report says:

"The shortage should have been dislosed the first year in which receipts of the institution were misappropriated. The failure to audit, therefore, is partly responsible for the continuation in the misappropriation of funds.

"The bond of the sheriff contains four county officials or employes, as sureties, thus tending to place the sheriff under a sense of obligation to persons with whom he has official relations."

"The responsibility for the recent defalcation of nearly $40,000 from the receipts of the Middlesex county jail workship lies between the prison commissioners and the controller of county accounts," said Levi S. Gould, chairman of the board of county commissioners of Middlesex county, last night, when commenting on the report.

BOTH PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Caminetti and Diggs Arraigned on "White Slave" Charge

San Francisco, July 31.—Maury Diggs and Drew Caminetti, both men of social prominence, pleaded not guilty before Judge Van Fleet in the United States district court to violation of the Mann act.

The charges are, first, that Diggs and Caminetti conspired to violate the act by transporting Martha Warrington and Lola Norris from Sacramento, Cal., to Reno, Nev., and, second, that they did so in violation of the act.

Van Fleet set Aug. 5 as the date for trying Diggs on the second charge. In addition, Diggs is charged jointly with Charles B. Harris, his attorney, with conspiracy to suborn perjury in preparing his defense.

AT ODDS WITH DUCHESS

Queen Puts Ban on Low Gowns at the Coming Fife Wedding

London, July 31.—The antipathy of Queen Mary to low-cut afternoon toilettes has been the cause of some friction between her and the Duchess of Fife regarding the latter's wedding arrangements.

The queen will permit Princess Mary to be a bridesmaid only on condition that none of the bridesmaids wears a frock cut lower than one inch in the neck in front.

The Duchess of Fife resents such restrictions and has appealed to her mother and to Dowager Queen Alexandra, but Queen Mary refuses to alter her attitude.

Fish was soon released on bonds of $100,000.

OBEY UNCLE SAM'S DEMAND

Americans Held as Prisoners in Mexico Are Released

HUERTA'S TIME NEARLY UP

Desperation Over Lack of Funds and Dissatisfaction of His Soldiers Will Lead Him to Resign—Ambassador Would Bolster Up Government Until After Fall Election

Washington, July 31.—Charge d'Affaires O'Shaughnessy at Mexico City notified the state department of the release of the three Americans imprisoned at Chihuahua: Bernard McDonald, mining engineer; Charles Biesel and the latter's chauffeur.

Rumors emanating from the state department are to the effect that the resignation of Victoriano Huerta as president of Mexico will be forthcoming within the next few days. Francisco de la Barra, former ambassador to the United States, is picked as his probable successor.

Huerta, it is believed, is desperate through lack of funds and the disaffection of his soldiers and all his hopes of recognition from the American government have vanished. He is willing to resign rather than see his government go to pieces with possible assassination as the end of his stormy career.

If he resigns, no man will be more acceptable to the United States than de la Barra, who has held the confidence of Washington ever since he represented his nation at this capital.

Secretary of State Bryan may be forced to forego the resumption of his Chautauqua tour this week because the senate committee on foreign relations may desire his presence on Saturday.

The recommendation that this country recognize the Huerta government in Mexico was made to the senate foreign relations committee by Henry L. Wilson, ambassador to Mexico. Wilson was before the committee more than three hours.

Ambassador Wilson's conference with members of the senate committee on foreign relations resulted in a stronger support for his plan to recognize the Huerta government in Mexico than he has received at any time since reaching Washington.

Many members of the senate committee expressed the opinion that serious consideration should be given his recommendations for a guarded and restricted recognition of Huerta, designed to bolster up the present government until the elections of Oct. 26.

Two principal points of difference have been developed between Ambassador Wilson and the administration.

These relate to the present control of Huerta over Mexican affairs and to the conditions that would result from the downfall of the Huerta government. The ambassador said the Huerta government dominated affairs throughout the republic.

The president, it is understood, has information which shows the constitutionalist strength to be greatly in excess of the estimates of the ambassador.

Felix Diaz a Candidate

San Diego, Cal., July 31.—Felix Diaz will be a candidate for president of Mexico at the October elections; Huerta is debarred by the constitution from becoming a candidate.

This is what Diaz himself said before leaving for Los Angeles on his way to Japan. He denied emphatically that his mission would interfere with his candidacy, or that it is to make concessions to the Japanese government whereby Japanese could colonize on the western coast of Mexico. He said its sole purpose was to thank the mikado for Japanese participation in the Mexican centenary in 1910 and to arrange better trade relations.

JAIL TERM AND FINE

Penalty For Operating Auto While Under Influence of Liquor

Pawtucket, R. I., July 31.—Frederick P. Kenny, superintendent of the Blackstone Valley Gas and Electric Light company, was fined $100 and given ten days in jail by Judge Tuck for operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He appealed on both the fine and jail sentence and furnished $500 bonds.

Kenny was arrested after he had run his machine into a pole, reducing it to a junk pile. He pleaded not guilty when arraigned, but did not put in any defense when placed on trial.

Block of Ice Falls on Girl

Worcester, Mass., July 31.—Celia Castleman, aged 10, stood too near the end of an ice wagon and a 150-pound block of ice fell on her. Her name is on the dangerous list at the city hospital.

New Hampshire Autoist Killed

Portsmouth, N. H., July 31.—Losing control of a touring car W. T. Meloon of Newcastle, N. H., was thrown into a creek and received injuries from which he died.

R. F. DEL VALLE

He Has Made a Private Report on Conditions In Mexico

© 1913, by American Press Association.

It is believed in Washington that the attitude of the administration toward Mexico is based upon reports which are the result of secret investigations made by confidential representatives of the United States government. One of these agents was Reginaldo Francisco Del Valle, who reported direct to the secretary of state. Since that report was received it has been noticed that both President Wilson and Mr. Bryan have appeared to be stronger in their determination to not recognize the Huerta regime.

UP TO OLD TRICKS

Castro Reported to Be Again Leading Revolt In Venezuela

Willemstad, Curacao, July 31.—It is rumored here that former President Cipriano Castro has landed in Venezuela. Rumors also have reached here that the town of Coro, state of Falcon, has been occupied by Castro's partisans and that General Jurago, governor of Falcon, has been taken prisoner by them.

A number of Castro's followers, including two of his nephews, clandestinely embarked here yesterday for Coro.

The political situation in Venezuela has become critical. Scores of important personages have been imprisoned.

CHARGE OF PERJURY IS CONTEMPLATED

Watson Said to Be Behind Move Against Mulhall

Washington, July 31.—A grand jury investigation with a view to having M. M. Mulhall, lobbyist of the National Association of Manufacturers, indicted on a charge of perjury is contemplated. Former Representative Watson of Indiana, concerning whom Mulhall made sensational disclosures before the Overman committee, is said to be the instigator of the proceedings.

Mulhall yesterday testified before the Overman lobbby committee that the brewers paid all expenses in Maine during the resubmission campaign there. The National Association of Manufacturers paid his salary.

Mulhall supported S. D. Kimball for congress in Representative McGillicuddy's district.

THE Melting of Molly

By MARIA THOMPSON DAVIESS

LEAF TWELFTH.

Melted.

SLOWLY at last I lifted the blue muslin twenty-three inch waist shroud and let it slip over my head and fall slimly around me. I had fastened the neck button and was fumbling the next one into the buttonhole when I suddenly heard laughing, excited voices coming up the side street that ran just under my west window. Something told me that Alfred had come on the 5 o'clock down train instead of the 6 o'clock up, and I fairly reeled to the window and peeped through the shutters.

They were all in a laughing group around him, with Tom as master of ceremonies, and Ruth Chester was looking up into his face with an expression I am glad I can never forget. It killed all my regrets on the score of his future.

It took two good looks to take him all in and then I must have missed some of him, for all in all he was so large that he stretched your eyes to behold him. He's grown seven feet tall, I don't know how many pounds he weighs, and I don't want anybody ever to tell me.

I had never thought enough about evolution to know whether I believed in it and woman's suffrage, but I do now. I know that millions of years ago a great big distinguished hippopotamus stepped out of the woods and frightened one of my foremothers so that she turned tail and fled through a thicket that almost tore her limb from limb right into the arms of her own mate. That's what I did. I caught that blue satin belt together with one hand and ran through my garden right over a bed of savage tiger lilies and flung myself into John Moore's office, slammed the door and backed up against it.

"He's come!" I gasped. "And I'm frightened to death, with nobody but you to run to. Hide me, quick! He's fat, and I hate him!" I was that deadly cold you can get when fear runs into your very marrow and congeals the blood in your arteries. "Quick, quick!" I panted.

He must have been as pale as I was, and for an eternity of a second he looked at me, then suddenly heaven shone from his eyes and he opened his arms to me with just one word.

"Here?"

I went.

He held me gently for a half second, and then with a sob which I felt rather than heard, he crushed me to him and stopped my breath with his lips on mine. I understood things then that I never had before, and I felt that wise guardian man angel take his fingers from mine and leave me safe at last. I raised my hand and pressed it against John's wet lashes until he could let me speak, and I was melted into his very breast itself.

"Molly," he said when enough tenderness had come back into his arms to let me breathe, "you have almost killed me!"

"You!" I exclaimed, crowding still closer, or at least trying to. "It's not you, it's I that am killed, and you did it! I know you don't really want me, but I can't help that. I'd rather you'd do the suffering with me than to do it myself away from you. I'm so hungry and thirsty for you that—that I can't diet any longer!" I put the case the strongest way I knew how and got a swooning, maddening, luscious result.

"Want you, Molly?" he almost sobbed, and I felt his heart pounding hard next to my shoulder.

"Yes, want me!" I answered, with more spirit than breath left in me. "I refuse to believe you are as stupid as I am, and anybody with even an ordinary amount of brains must have seen how hard I was fighting for you. I feel sure I left no stone unturned. Some of them I can already think back and see myself tugging at and it makes me hot all over. I'm foolish and always was, so I'm to be excused for acting that awful way, but you are to blame for letting me do it. I'm going to be your punishment for life for not having been stern and stopped me. You had better stop me some now anyway, for if I go on loving you as I have been for the last few minutes it will make you uncomfortable."

"Peaches," he said after he had hushed me with another broken dose of love as large as he thought I could stand—i could have stood more!—"I am never going to tell you how long I have loved you, but that day you came to me all in a flutter with Al Bennett's letter in your hand it is going to take you a lifetime to settle for. You were mine—and Bill's! How could you—but women don't understand!" I felt him shudder in my arms as I held him close. I was repaid for all those tiresome exercises I had taken by the strength to crush him against my breast almost as hard as he crushed me. Our combined strength was terrific, dangerous to life and ribs, but—heavenly!

"Don't women know, John?" I managed to ask softly in memory of a like question he had put to me across that bread and jam with the rose a-listening from the dark.

What brought me to consciousness was his fumbling with the buttons at the waist of that blue muslin relict of a sentiment. I had fastened but one, and the lace had got caught on his sleeve buttons.

"Please don't button me into his possession," I laughed under his chin. "I'm still scared to death of him, and you haven't hid me yet!"

"Molly," he asked, this time with a heaven laugh, "where could you be more effectually hid from Al Bennett than in my arms?"

I spent ten minutes telling Billy what a hippopotamus really looks like as I put him to bed, but later, much as I should have liked to, I couldn't consume that horrible dinner that I had helped prepare at the Johnsons' in the shelter of John's arms, and I had to face Alfred. Ruth Chester was there, and she faced him too.

A man that can't be happy with a woman who is willing to "fulfill his destiny" doesn't deserve to be.

Then we came over here, and John had the most beautiful time persuading Aunt Adeline how a good man like Mr Carter would want his young widow to be taken care of by being married to a safe friend of his instead of being flighty and having folks wondering whom she would marry.

"You know yourself how hard a time a beautiful young widow has, Mrs. Henderson," he said in the tone of voice that always makes his patients glad to take his worst doses. He got his blessing and me—with a warning.

A lovely night wind is blowing across my garden and bringing me congratulations from all my flower family. Flowers are a part of love and the wooing of it, and they understand. I am waiting for the light to go out behind the tall trees over which the moon is stealthily sinking. He promised me to put it out right away, and I'm watching the glow that marks the place where my own two men creatures are going to rest, with my heart in full song.

He needs rest, he is so very tired and worn. He confessed it as I stood on the step above him tonight after he had taken his own good night from me out on the porch. When he explained to me how his agony over me for all these months had kept him walking the floor night after night, not knowing that I was waiting for the light to go out, I gave myself a sweetness that I am going to say a prayer for the last thing before I sleep. I took his head in my arms and pressed his cheek down against Billy's sleep place on my breast over my heart and put my lips to that drake tail kiss spot that has tempted me for I won't say how long. Then I fled, and so did he.

I had about decided to burn this book, because I shan't need it any longer, for he says he and Billy and I are going to play so much golf and tennis that I shall keep as thin as he wants me to be without any more melting or freezing or starving, but perhaps he would like to read the little red devil. Do you suppose he would?

THE END.

BRIEFS

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Guy of Rose Lawn, have gone on a trip to one of the old historic islands.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mosman of Walker street are spending two weeks with relatives in Saginaw, Michigan.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret McLeod, widow of Alex McLeod, who died in her 78th year Tuesday, was held this afternoon from the home of her nephew, Brockton avenue, Germanton. Services were conducted by Rev. J. A. Matheson, pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Burial was in Mt. Wollaston cemetery.

WATCH PARTIES.

Watch parties to see the Rivadavia pass through the Fore River bridge Sunday night, are being planned by many young people. They will be conducted along the lines of a New Years party. In this instance there will be no welcome extended, only a farewell to the iron monster of the Latin republic. Power point offers a fine opportunity to sightseers. The public will probably be excluded from the bridge.

LIGHT TRAVEL AT MIDNIGHT

But There Are a Few Passengers on Late Train

The total of passengers on the midnight train, according to the official figures, shows that the extra service secured for Quincy through the efforts of the Board of Trade has not been as much a necessity as it appeared to be. This of course may be due to the light travel of summer. Yet several are accommodated.

The last week of the trial month is gradually passing. Night after night from four to eight have left the train at the Quincy station, and throughout the three full weeks of service the average is very small. Saturday nights the patronage materially increases.

ASK BOARD TO ACT QUICKLY

Want Better Sanitary Condition at Playground

Thirty-five boys, with martial tread invaded the precincts of City Hall Wednesday afternoon, and filed into the office of the Board of Health, where Ernest Wallace, the Willard school athlete, presented a petition asking for improved sanitary conditions at the Ward Three playground. The explanation accompanying the presentation was short, and upon the assurance of the clerk that it would be submitted to the board, the boys filed out.

A few days ago cesspools and surface water flooded the playgrounds in the swing corner, and made it so disagreeable that none used the spot for a few days. The light rains have not improved the playground, and the boys took this means of officially notifying the Board of Health.

When the conditions became unbearable the boys framed the petition. It was freely circulated and bears the names of boys prominent in grammar school circles. The petition sets forth the grievances, and asks that the board act quickly in the matter.

Chairman Teasdale of the Board of Health states that the Board of Health has done all that it can to relieve the situation at the Ward Three playground, and further said that the situation had been exaggerated. The records of the Board of Health show that the vaults and cesspools backing up against the playground were thoroughly cleaned out July 21 and that early in the month that the Board by vote recommended to the Commissioner that a sewer be built on Gilbert street to take care of these two houses. To do this will necessitate the laying of about 700 feet of pipe to connect with the present sewer.

As far as the brook goes there is very little water in the brook at the present time and the discoloration comes from the iron used in the granite polishing mills. This discoloring is nothing but iron and is not unhealthy although it perhaps does not look quite as nice as clear water, but the only way to stop this is to shut down the two or three polishing mills which would be impossible.

Chairman Teasdale however said that the Inspector of the Board would make an inspection of the playgrounds and the things complained of, and that of course the Board of Health would do what it could, but that the only way to permanently remedy the conditions was by building a sewer on Gilbert street.

DISTRICT COURT.

Leon Owen was fined $10, and Charles McCarthy, $10 for drunkenness at Weymouth.

William J. McNaught of Weymouth was arraigned for drunkenness. He was also under default for failure to pay a fine of $15 imposed in 1911. The result of today's arraignment therefore was that he was called upon to pay the old fine of $15 and a fine of $10 on the new case. As he did not have the $25 his address for the next few weeks will probably be Dedham.

Theodore Raymond was fined $10 for assault on John C. Rich at Weymouth.

The continued case of Victor Barbeau for keeping a disorderly house at Quincy was heard and he was fined $75.

James Galbraith was fined $10 for assault at Weymouth.

Daniel F. Leary was fined $10 for assault at Milton.

The Boston Retail Provision Dealers Association held a largely attended outing at New Downer Landing on Wednesday. One of the features of the day was the ball game between the Proprietors and Clerks the former winning by a score of 12 to 2.

A Man Cannot Get a Wrong Thing in a Store Where They Are All Right

Any man who has so far hesitated about buying his Summer needfuls, and who has the smallest care for a cool, neat, comfortable appearance, should come here and see how much value he can get for his money.

Nowadays most men of sense prefer to be sure of things of full value than to be doubtful about merchandise on which somebody decides to say that there is a "saving" of "a fourth," "a third" or "a half."

Also they prefer to deal with a store where they are always sure of getting 100 per cent value for their money as against the store where there is one chance of getting something for almost nothing and ninety-nine chances of getting taken in.

For these men of sense we are ready to-day with the good things for men to wear and they are rightly priced—not too low priced to disgust any man.
